CZAR PROPOSES TO TAKE CHURCH FROM BUREAUCRATIC RESTRICTIONS AND PRESENT SECULAR AUTHORITY

An Extraordinary Church Council Has Been Called by Nicholas.

First of Its Kind Since Patriarchate of Nikon in 1654.

Apostolic Control of Greek Church Likely to be Restored.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 22.—The invitation of Emperor Nicholas to the Metropolitan Antonius, president of the holy synod, to convene an extraordinary church council to consider reforms in the organization of the national church, the first conference of the kind since the patriarchate of Nikon in 1654, and the emperor's determination to call it, may signify the restoration of apostolic control of the Russian Greek church and the downfall of the secular authority and bureaucratic restrictions brought about by the late procurator.

The discussion of the desirability of changes in the church government of Russia was originally begun in a special meeting of the committee of ministers and department presidents of the council of state. But his majesty decided that this particular question ought not to be continued by a special committee, but should be decided exclusively by a holy synod. Therefore the resolution written in the emperor's own hand was: "Erase the question from the list of the council and submit it to the consideration of the holy synod."

In accordance with the emperor's wishes, the holy synod last March prepared a report concerning church reform, which was submitted to the czar.

This report recites the reforms which are first necessary in the local councils of the bishops of the various church districts. According to this plan the patriarch or metropolitan should be the controlling head of the council of bishops and should be responsible for them, while they in turn accept responsibility for the districts from which they are appointed, and this council of bishops should be the basic form of church rule.

According to this report the holy synod proposes: "To have the synod consist of permanent members, together with the members invited by turn from among the prelates of the Russian church and to have it headed by a patriarch for the county giving to him all the canonical rights of a local metropolitan; to call in Moscow, by order of your imperial majesty, a local council of all the parochial bishops of the orthodox church in Russia or of their representatives for the discussion of the following questions:

"The division of Russia into church districts to be governed by metropolitans; the re-examination of the legislation of the existing organizations of parochial government, and their reforms in accordance with the basis of general councils; the introduction of better order in the parishes with regard to moral conditions, the better administration of churches and places of religious instructions; the reform of ecclesiastical schools; the re-examination of laws under which the church acquires property; the parochial assemblies of the clergy; the granting to the higher representatives of the church hierarchy of the right to take part in the council of state and the committee of ministers in all cases which concern the interests of the church and granting to the priests the right to take part in the city and village councils."

Emperor Nicholas returned this report March 31, with the following comment:

"I deem it impossible to accomplish at the present restless time such an important work as the calling of a local council. Conformable to the ancient examples of the orthodox emperors, I propose at a propitious time to set this great work in motion and to call council of the church of all the Russias for the purpose of a canonical discussion of the objects of faith and of the church rules."

Awaiting this "propitious time" which reports now say will be in the autumn, the then chief procurator, M. Pobedonossteff, sent a communication to the holy synod setting forth the matter in more detail and expressing by implication his well known antagonistic views. This recalls the fact that when the venerable procurator found he could not command a majority of the synod, much less a church council, he retired. His aide, Stabler, tried to create the impression that the procurator himself favored the council. But the procurator was really so chagrined that it was reported he would resign. This he actually did Oct. 31, being succeeded by Prince Alexis Obevensky, Nov. 21.

ONE KILLED, SEVERAL HURT IN COLLISION.

Kent, Ohio, Jan. 22.—Conductor E. C. Griffin of Cleveland, was killed, Brakeman P. J. Hawkins of Cleveland was seriously injured about the head and had several fingers torn off, and Engineer Waltrous, of Newcastle, Pa., had his head badly cut in a rear end collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railway here early yesterday. The cause of the accident was the ommission to send back a flag from a train which had stopped. The injured men were caught in the caboose, which was demolished.

ALLEGED MURDERERS ARRESTED

Omaha, Jan. 22.—Jack O'Hern, Roy Nelson, Roy Angus and Joe Warren are under arrest and the last three have confessed to participation in the murder of Nels Lausten and the robbery of his saloon early yesterday morning. O'Hern, who is charged by the others with the shooting of Lausten, has not confessed. The men were arrested for other crimes than the Lausten murder, but in the "sweatbox" Angus gave the clue which led to the confessions. All are local men

SIX BODIES OF VICTIMS OF GREAT AVALANCHE FOUND

Awful Snowslide at Alta, Utah, Caused the Death of Men While Asleep.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 22.—The last of the six bodies buried by the snow slide at Alta Friday night was recovered yesterday. Since communication with the mining camp has been restored, it has been learned that the avalanche came about midnight. It swept about a mile before it struck the boarding house and saloon in which the men were sleeping. Both buildings were wrecked and the former was completely hidden from view. Three of the five men sleeping in the saloon managed to crawl from under the debris and snow and attired only in their night clothing, worked for hours in an effort to reach their companions. Their feet were badly frozen. At 7 o'clock Saturday morning fifty men were at work seeking the bodies but not until noon was the first corpse recovered. The work of rescue continued without cessation until Sunday.

The men who lost their lives in the boarding house are:

ALBERT BENNETT.
JOHN CLAIBORNE.
JOHN ERICKSON.
JOHN GRAY.

Those killed in the saloon were:

JERRY MURPHY.
WILLIAM POWELL.

The three men who escaped from the wreck and worked so heroically are Ross Armhurst, John Baker and J. Lee.

SUDDEN CHANGES IN TEMPERATURE WORK GREAT HAVOC WITH WIRES

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The lowest temperature today in St. Paul was 9 deg. below zero, according to the report of the local weather bureau, a drop of 12 deg. since yesterday and a drop of 34 deg. since Saturday. The coldest weather yesterday was at Prince Albert, Canada, where the mercury ranged from 18 to 28 deg. below zero. Appearances indicate that the crest of the cold wave will reach St. Paul tonight when it is due to warm up some. The entire east from the Mississippi valley is basking in almost summer atmosphere, according to reports received here and a heavy rain is falling in the Mississippi valley as far north as Grand Haven, Mich. Temperatures from 64 at Pittsburg to 60 at Buffalo and higher farther east are the rule. The extreme cold in the Northwest and the warm temperature farther south have worked havoc with telegraph wires. No communication has been established between Chicago and other Eastern points and the St. Paul office of the Associated Press up to 10:15 this morning owing to broken wires incident to climatic changes. The cold wave is gradually moving eastward and according to the weather office unusual conditions will prevail there before long.

NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM

One of Most Important Markets for American Products.

Washington, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Netherlands and Belgium, although among the smallest of the European countries, rank next to the United Kingdom, Germany and France in their importance as markets for products of the United States. The United Kingdom is the largest European purchaser of American commodities, Germany next in rank, then France, then Netherlands, and then Belgium. The total exports from the United States to Netherlands amounted in the fiscal year 1905 to $73,000,000, and our imports from Netherlands to practically $22,000,000; our exports to Belgium in the same year were $38,500,000, and our total imports therefrom practically $26,000,000, giving us a total of $160,000,000 of trade with these two small countries, whose combined area is less than that of the state of Ohio, and whose combined population is but 12,000,000.

The total exports from the United States to these countries, as shown by the reports of the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, were, in 1905, $111,500,000, against $56,000,000 in 1895, and $45,000,000 in 1885. Our imports from the two countries in 1905 were practically $18,000,000, against $25,000,000 in 1895, and $14,000,000 in 1885. The growth, both in our exports to and imports from, these two countries during the last decade has been larger than that of the preceding decade.

These figures of trade with Netherlands and Belgium are the official statements of our exports to and imports from those countries as supplied to the bureau of statistics from the various custom houses of the United States, and are based by those custom houses upon the statements supplied to them by the exporters and importers engaged in that commerce. Nevertheless, there is no reason to believe that in some praticulars, especially in the matter of exports, the figures supplied by exporters to the custom houses, and thence to the bureau of statistics are somewhat misleading. Netherlands and Belgium are great gateways through which large quantities of merchandise pass to countries lying farther east, including Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary and parts of France. While care is exercised by the customs authorities and by the bureau of statistics to obtain accurate statements of the final destination of goods leaving the ports of the United States, or of those entering its ports, it is not improbable that considerable quantities of merchandise shipped to the ports of Netherlands and Belgium, and stated as exports to those countries do, in fact, pass through those countries and on into those above named—Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Switzerland and Eastern France—and that no inconsiderable quantities of goods from those countries arriving at the ports of Netherlands and Belgium and shipped thence to the United States, are credited to the countries at whose ports they are placed on shipboard.

FATAL GAS EXPLOSION.

Richmond, Ind., Jan. 22.—Mrs. John W. Cook is dead and four persons are injured as the result of an explosion of gas at the Cook home, three miles east of this city. The injured are the three children of Mrs. Cook, Frank, aged 17; Bessie, aged 14; Carl, aged 8 and Mrs. Della Burgoyne, a guest, of New Paris, O. The house was almost completely wrecked and Mrs. Cook was pinioned under a hot stove. Mrs. Burgoyne and two younger children were blown through a window.

BOLD ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 22.—A bold attempt to rob the Commercial bank was discovered yesterday. Robbers had started work to reach the vault by drilling through an 11-foot wall from the basement. They evidently intended to reach the vault late Saturday night but appear to have been frightened away before they succeeded in reaching the vault.

FALLS WITH HIS AIRSHIP

Charles Hamilton, Aeronaut, Drops 300 Feet at Ormond, Fla.

Rendered Unconscious, But Fortunately Escapes With His Life.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 22.—Charles Hamilton, an aeronaut, dropped 300 feet with his airship yesterday, and escaped fatal injury by the narrowest of margins. Hamilton, when his airship dropped, was pitched forward upon the board walk. He struck heavily and lost consciousness. Later, it was found no bones were broken. Young Hamilton hails from Houston, Tex.

"COME IN, WATER'S FINE."

Twenty-Five Men Go in Bathing at Coney Island.

New York, Jan. 22.—Coney Island came back to life yesterday. The mild weather caused a crowd, estimated at about 15,000, to flock to the place. The cry of "Come on in, the water's fine," was heard for the first time in several months and 25 men stripped and took a dip in the chilly brine.

INQUEST INTO WEST HOTEL FIRE BEGINS.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—(Special to the Herald.)—The inquest in the cases of the eleven victim of the West hotel fire, Minneapolis, began at the county morgue this morning.

A dozen or more witnesses were summoned to testify. Coroner Kistler announced before the opening that the probing would be most thorough.

BRICKLAYERS ELECT OFFICERS AND ADJOURN.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual convention of the Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' International union adjourned yesterday morning at 4 o'clock after an all night session. Detroit, Mich., was chosen as the next convention city. The following officers were re-elected: President, William J. Bowen of New York; first vice president, Thomas R. Preece; second vice president, George T. Thornton of Boston; third vice president, Edward J. Branden of San Francisco; fourth vice president, Thomas Izzard of Toronto; secretary, William Dobson of North Adams, Mass.; treasurer, Patrick Murray of Albany, N. Y.

TILLMAN TO SPEAK.

New York, Jan. 22.—United States Senator Benjamin R. Tillman, of South Carolina, is to be the principal speaker for the Democratic club at its first monthly dinner on Tuesday evening of next week. The occasion, it is said, will mark the opening of the state fight.

MAY COMPROMISE SUITS.

San Francisco, Jan. 22.—The two injunction suits in the fight for a better terminus by the Western Pacific, which was to have come up for hearing before United States Judge Morrow today, have been postponed for a week and it is rumored that negotiations are pending between the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific for a compromise.

SEVERE STORM IN CHICAGO TIES UP ALL TRAFFIC IN MOST COMPLETE MANNER KNOWN FOR MANY YEARS

The Surface and Elevated Roads Are the Greatest Sufferers.

Many Passengers Compelled to Remain All Night at Depots.

Wires Down and Outside Communication Greatly Restricted.

Chicago, Ja. 22.—A severe storm of alternating rain, sleet nad snow, which commenced just before midnight last night, caused one of the worst tieups this city has known in many years. This morning but few telegraph wires were working out of the city in any direction, there being no communication whatever with the East. The only direction in which telegraph service was at all adequate was in the direction of Milwaukee.

Inside the city, telephone communication was badly crippled, the electric lines of street cars were almost out of commission, it sometimes requiring an hour to move a car the distance of one square. The elevated roads were still greater sufferers. Many passengers on the Aurora line and Chicago electric line were compelled to remain all night in depots, when the road ceased operations on account of the storm.

Large commission brokerage houses, which ordinarily use from twenty to thirty wires leading to all parts of the country, were unable this morning to send a message in any direction, and were without advices regarding the situation in other parts of the country. A few cable dispatches from Liverpool were handled early in the day, but with this bare exception an absolute dearth of information regarding conditions of crops prevailed. The long distance telephone service outside of this business district was very badly crippled.

The weather bureau managed to receive some information before the conditions reached the worst stage. It was announced that the storm was moving slowly eastward with the center just north of Indianapolis. It was predicted that the area of low barometer would slowly move eastward although precipitation might be expected in this section for another twenty-four hours. If this forecast is verified it will make forty-eight hours of rain, sleet and snowfall without cessation.

The railroads, although in much better condition to contend against sleet and snow than the electric lines, were at times during the day in desperate straits. On some of the lines running east from Chicago hundreds of miles of wires in the aggregate were down and the dispatchers were having a most anxious time in moving trains. The result was that practically all trains due in Chicago from the East were from two to five hours late today and there was little prospect for immediate improvement in the situation.

Great trouble was experienced this morning by people who use the electric lines in the outlying sections of the city to reach their places of employment. The lines were with few exceptions out of business and it was impossible to reach any place except on foot. The great steel mills in South Chicago were barely able to muster enough men to operate all of their departments early in the day and after a time some of them were closed down. The situation was not so bad down town in the business section but many thousands of people were from two to three hours late in reaching their places of business.

To add to the other troubles of the public the cable line of the North side, which was the main dependence of people in that section of the city after the crippled condition of the elevated roads and electric lines was manifest, broke down and thousands of people were compelled to walk through the storm to the business part of the city or turn back home.

At noon the situation had not improved in the slightest degree. A gale from the north, was tearing across the city at the rate of forty miles an hour driving before it great clouds of snow which would without warning turn to sleet or rain.

Telephone companies reported that they were in bad shape but that they still had one or two outlets.

TO ASK GREATER POWER FOR HOTEL INSPECTOR

Traveling Men Take Up Matter of Fire Protection and Sanitation.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Direct action toward the advancement of hotel legislation in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, was taken by the grand executive committee of this jurisdiction of the United Commercial Travelers, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon, at the Ryan hotel. The meeting was held in the name of the Dakota jurisdiction, embracing Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Manitoba. It was attended by nine officers of the organization, and the measures sought to be secured were discussed thoroughly. A committee was appointed to draft a bill to be presented at the next session of the state legislatures of Minnesota and the Dakotas, which will provide for the abolition of all weaknesses in the present laws. It also was decided that this committee shall seek to secure the enforcement of the law regarding hotel inspection, passed by the last Minnesota legislature, and if it be deemed advisable, test the extent of the powers of the inspector under that law. The committee consists of the members of the grand executive committee and the four members of the St. Paul council, appointed last year for special legislative work. The latter are: F. W. Baer, H. W. Shadle, J. A. McDermott and George W. Rogers.

The insufficiency of the power of the state hotel inspector was the basis of the larger part of the discussion. It was pointed out that his powers and rights are so limited that a thorough inspection of a hostelry is impossible, both as regards protection against fire, and with relation to sanitary conditions. In some instances it was declared the inspector has been refused admission to some portions of the buildings, and in no case has he been able to enforce, by law, the rulings which he has made on conditions which he has found. The broadening of his powers will be one phase of the bill which is to be prepared, so that he may demand admittance to the kitchens of hotels, as well as to all other portions of the buildings in which fire might originate.

One of the principal actions at the meeting yesterday was that of filling vacancies caused in the executive body of the organization by the removal from the Dakota jurisdiction of Grand Conductor J. A. McPherson of the Grand Forks council. This was accomplished by a series of changes, by which C. A. Vandever of Minneapolis was advanced from grand page to grand conductor; C. W. Sutton of Duluth from grand sentinel to grand page; F. J. C. Cox of Winnipeg was made grand sentinel, and James R. Ells of Minneapolis was given Mr. Cox's position on the grand committee.

FALLS DOWN CELLAR STAIRS

Employe of Orpheum Theater, St. Paul, Breaks His Back.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Antonio Donatelli, employed at the Orpheum theater, fell into the cellar of the theater yesterday afternoon and broke his back. He was taken to the city hospital by the police. The physicians say that the injury probably will prove fatal.

Mr. Donatelli started to go into the cellar to bring up a case of wine. The cellar leads from the barroom, and as he stepped on the first step he slipped and slid the entire length of the stairway on his back and rolled to the floor.

The police surgeon was called and it was found that Donatelli's spine was fractured. He was taken to the hospital.

Mr. Donatelli is 50 years old. He has lived here eight years and has no relatives in the city.

COMMISSIONERS HAVE NO LANDS

That Would Be Benefited by Philippine Railroad, Says Taft.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Secretary Taft sent to the senate a statement in response to the resolution calling upon him for information as to whether army or navy officers in the Philippines, or members of the Philippine commission, owned land on Dec. 1 last, or since then, whose value would be affected by the new railroads proposed for the islands. Collateral information was sought also by the resolution. Secretary Taft's response gives the entire commission, whose statements are appended, a clean bill of health. The three Filipino commissioners were important land owners before they were appointed to the commission. They have not acquired land since the holding of office, however. The secretary informed the senate that to carry out the provisions of the resolution with respect to army and navy officers would require four months, as approximately 3,000 officers would have to be examined. Examination of land transfer records would be equally tedious. Mr. Taft suggests that the resolutions be referred, so as to narrow the scope of the inquiry. He adds the information that army regulations forbid officers and soldiers from using their positions for private gain, even in transactions which otherwise would be legitimate.

COLLIDES WITH FREIGHT.

The Winnipeg Limited Wrecked---Fireman Killed, Others Hurt.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—The Winnipeg limited, which left St. Paul shortly after 5 o'clock last night on the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie road, ran into the rear of a freight train standing on the track at Glenwood, about forty miles north of here. The engine of the limited was wrecked and Fireman Earl Raney of Minneapolis, received such injuries that death followed within a short time. Engineer C. W. Forsythe was badly hurt. Four or five passengers are reported injured, but railroad officials say that none of them is seriously hurt.

CHILD LOSES SUIT.

Cannot, Under Law, Recover Damages for Injury by Parent.

Bliomington, Ill., Jan. 22.—A child under no circumstances can recover damages from a parent for any injury inflicted upon it or for any cruel or vicious treatment to which it may have been subjected. This is the law in Illinois as construed by Judge Gest in the Rock Island circuit court and probably ends a remarkable suit that has been attracting much attention in central Illinois for the past year or more.

Leonora Skinner, aged 5, was the plaintiff, and brought suit against her mother, Mrs. Myra Smith, for $10,000 damages, through her best friend, Dr. E. M. Bradford. As the declaration recited, the child was deserted by the mother shortly after its birth and was taken to Freeport in a market basket in the dead of winter and left in the depot. The exposure made the child blind and it was injured otherwise. It was taken to a home for the friendless and is still a public charge.

The physician who attended the child seeking to secure some fund by which the education and care of the charge could be promoted, filed the suit.

HETTY GREEN DUPED.

Takes Bad Half Dollar and Tries to Pass It.

New York, Jan. 22.—Tell it softly, Hetty Green, richest woman in America, shrewdest feminine financier in the world, accustomed to handling all kinds of money during her more than half-century of life, has had a counterfeit coin passed on her.

The amazing story came out Saturday in the office of the public service corporation in Hoboken, when Mrs. Green paid the transportation company 5 cents on account of a fare for which Conductor Charles Krell trusted the wealthy woman last Thursday. With characteristic acumen, Mrs. Green demanded a receipt, in order that the weighty transaction might never bob up again to worry her in her declining years.

The officials of the company filled out an imposing document reciting that the sum of 5 cents had been received from Mrs. Hetty Green for one ride on their cars in Hoboken Thursday, Jan. 18, 1906.

When Mrs. Green boarded a car near her place of residence at 1203 Washington street, she was asked for her fare, 5 cents. She handed a half-dollar to the conductor.

"Sorry, madam, but I can't take that. It's not good."

Mrs. Green then searched in her pocketbook, but found she had no more money.

"I guess you can trust me for a ride to the ferry," she said. "You can ask the postman sitting opposite who I am. He will tell you my credit is good."

The letter carrier vouched for Mrs. Green, and Conductor Krell rang up the fare, paying the nickel out of his own pocket.

SMITH'S APPEAL IS DISMISSED

Has No Recourse Against Estate for Reduction of Claim.

The appeal of S. L. Smith from the disallowance of his bill as attorney against the estate of Herseline Perreault, insane, was dismissed in district court this morning, on motion of Dr. H. V. Goetchius, guardian of the estate. The guardian was represented at the hearing by W. E. Whipple and Mr. Smith by S. T. Harrison. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that the attorney has no authority to appeal from his item of services in the final account of the administrator. The administrator is the only person that can appeal from the allowance or disallowance of the final account and he must appeal from the whole, and not any part of it.

Mr. Smith put in a bill for $522 for legal services rendered at the instance of the guardian in settling up the estate. This amount the court reduced to $100 and from which Mr. Smith appealed.

Dr. Goetchius, as guardian, appealed from the allowance of the final account which reduced his own bill from $700 to $100 and a jury gave him $112. It is claimed the only recourse left that an attorney, or any other claimant, whose bill appears in the final account as allowed, is to bring suit direct against the administrator of guardian as they have no case to appeal to district court.

TO ATTRACT TOURISTS

Convention Will be Held at Salt Lake for That Purpose.

J. M. Gidding Will Represent Duluth's Interests at the Gathering.

J. M. Gidding will represent Duluth at Salt Lake City on Jan. 25, at the conference which will be held there on that date to organize for a campaign to divert the tourist traffic from Europe and other foreign points to the picturesque parts of the Western country.

The appointment was made by Mayor Cullum this morning, and Mr. Gidding will attend the convention to represent the interests of Duluth in the campaign which is being planned.

It is the plan of some of the Western cities to wage a systematic campaign to divert the great tide of tourist traffic from Europe to the West, and keep the millions of dollars spent annually in Europe in this country.

"In such a move as this Duluth should be greatly interested," said Mr. Gidding, this morning, in speaking of the approaching convention.

"Many of those Western points, such as Yellowstone park and Salt Lake City, have well advertised attractions that will bring many tourists to them anyway, but Duluth has to compete with Chicago to get its share of the tourists. The natural tendency of the tourist, who has not heard of Duluth, is to get on the boat at Buffalo, and come up the lakes to Chicago, where he is shipped West over the Burlington, or one of the other roads running out of Chicago.

"Instead of that we want to bring them through Duluth, and have them stop over a week or so here, to see the great iron mines, picturesque Isle Royale and enjoy our invigorating climate. Chicago, being such a large city, is the terminus of the lake trip which the tourist who hasn't heard much of Duluth, will naturally select. What we want to do is to co-operate with Salt Lake and those western cities, and see that Duluth is prominently mentioned with them in all advertising matter, and that this city is advertised as one of the points in the western tour that must not be missed.

"I can't imagine any finer trip for a tourist, than the one up the lakes to Duluth, a stop of a week here to see Isle Royale and the iron mines, and then on to Yellowstone and the West.

"There has been much talk about advertising this city as a tourist point, but no concentrated effort has yet been made.

"We have every advantage needed to become a great tourist center, and all the city needs is to be advertised, and have some well organized plan to attract tourists, energetically pushed.

"Of course my motive is more or less a selfish one, but not entirely so. The tourist trade cuts a big figure in the summer time, but at the same time I want to see Duluth grow and prosper, and I think this is one means of advertising the city very extensively."

CORNER IN EGGS BROKEN BY HENS

Open Weather Spurs Them on and Speculators Lose Million.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—With losses in the last month amounting to $1,000,000, egg dealers on South Water street, who have on hand large stocks of storage produce, faced a 10-cent market and prayed for a blizzard today.

The open weather throughout the country has brought a change all along the street bordering on a panic, and unless cold weather comes immediately to stop reports that hens are lying, firms which have been pinched are likely to be pinched much worse.

Eggs that the dealers put into storage during the summer months at from 17 to 20 cents a dozen sold Saturday for 11 cents. From 800,000 to 1,000,000 cases, containing thirty dozen each—the greatest amount on record—were put into storage.

Not once have the dealers been able to sell the cold storage eggs at anything like a profit, and in the last ten days the market has gone down from 18½ cents to 11 cents. Monday or Tuesday a 10-cent market is not at all unlikely. That will mean the egg dealer will lose on an average 8 cents a dozen.

Men who know the market say that the average loss of 4 to 5 cents a dozen can be charged against every dozen eggs put into storage unless the weather changes soon. That means a loss of $1.20 to $1.50 a case. On a million cases the aggregate loss will total between $1,200,000 and $1,500,000. The big houses are expected to be able to weather the storm, but several of the smaller houses are known to be on the griddle.

PROBES LIVING BRAIN.

Extracts Steel With Forceps When Powerful Magnet Fails.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—Just as a dentist searches for the root of a broken tooth, Dr. W. W. Keen, chief surgeon at the Jefferson hospital, Saturday, after a magnet failed to do its work, thrust a pair of forceps into the brain of a living man and twisted them about until they seized a piece of steel for which the surgeon was seeking. He tightened his grip upon the handles, and then with a stronk, slow pull drew out a silver of steel three inches long bent on one end into the shape of a fishhook.

A flow of pus followed the extraction, and after a hot solution had been applied to the wound a tube was inserted into the brain to drain an abscess that had formed about the steel. The tube will remain for several days. Then the wound will be closed.

The patient is John Nall of Winston, N. C. A steel link from a broken belt struck him just above the right ear six months ago. He apparently recovered, but recently was seized with convulsions and mental aberration. Saturday a huge electro-magnet was applied to the surface of the brain in the hope of removing the steel. It failed, and the surgeon resorted to forceps.

ENGINEER'S STATISTICS

Commerce Through Portage Lake Canals During Season of 1905.

Tonnage More Than in 1904 But Less Than in 1903.

The total marine commerce through the Portage Lake canals, Michigan, the government waterway through Keweenaw Point, for the season of 1905 was 2,413,445 tons, as compared with 2,295,992 tons in 1904, 2,420,848 tons in 1903 and 2,532,32 tons in 1902, according to the annual report of the canals' commerce for the past year, just issued by Maj. Charles L. Potter, United States engineer in charge of the Lake Superior district.

The commerce for 1902 was the heaviest that has passed through the canals. The navigation season of 1903 comes next and the commerce for the last year ranks third in point of size. Of the total of 2,413,445 tons that passed through the canals last year, 1,519,112 tons were of up-bound freight and 894,333 tons were of down-bound freight.

The Portage Lakes canals have been operated by the government ever since it bought the waterway in 1891. It is chiefly important for two things, the shorter route that it furnishes for the through boats on Lake Superior and the harbor of refuge that the canals offer to the vessel trade when there is stormy weather off Keweenaw Point. The waterway is 25 miles long. Originally it had a depth of from three to five feet of water. When the government took it over the depth had been increased to 12 or 13 feet and vessels paid toll. The government abolished the toll system and deepened the channel first to 15 and then to 20 feet. The increased commerce through the canals is pratically marked by the deepening of the waterway.

With Maj. Potter's report are several diagrams giving comparative figures of the commerce for several years past, by months during the past year and the largest single cargoes through the canals in the past 14 years.

By comparing the figures of the commerce of Duluth during the months of July and August with the commerce through the canals during those two months, it is noted that a comparatively small part of the cargoes from this port go through the canals in those two months, for the reason that the weather on Lake Superior is most settled and fair at that period in the season. Beginning with September and from then on to the close of navigation in December, there is shown to be a constant increase of the cargoes from Lake Superior points this side of Keweenaw Point through the canals. This is accounted for by the fact that the weather is generally changeable and stormy during the closing months of navigation.

The increase in single cargoes in the past years is just about in the same proportion as the increase in the volume of commerce through the canals.

Following is a statement of the marine commerce of the canals in 1905, by tonnage of freight upbound and downbound:

Items—	Upbound.	Downbound.
Cement	12,759	.....
Hard coal	158,847	4,025
Soft coal	1,001,997	12,997

Shingles	.....	6,091
Wheat	.....	46,711
Unclassified	4,775	2,185
	1,519,112	$894,333

The total lumber vessels of all classes passing through the canals in 1905 was 5,757. The largest number of up-bound vessels, 254 passed through in July and the largest number of vessels down-bound, 202, in August.

The tonnage through the canals by months during last season was as follows:

April	52,551
May	221,578
June	257,089
July	263,946
August	348,561
September	343,709
October	454,264
November	504,374
December	57,379

The largest single cargo through the canals in 1892 was 1,97 tons. The increase in size was gradual until in 1902 it was 9,000 tons and in 1905 it was 9,400 tons.

The following statement shows the tonnage through the canals for the past 14 years:

Year.
1894	754,973
1895	923,756

1901	2,116,624
1902	2,532,323
1904	2,295,922
1905	2,413,445

Accompanying the engineers' report are a number of photographs showing portions of the canals and the Lily Pond.

LEVIATHAN OF FUTURE.

Remarkable Steam Passenger Packet Discribed By German Paper.

New York, Jan. 22.—German progressiveness, which has placed her to the fore in maritime enterprise, offers for the consideration of whomever it may interest a remarkable conception of the steam passenger packet of the near future.

A picture of it is printed in the current number of a German publication which has just reached here.

The explanation is made that under the extremely trans-Atlantic ferry, which will be a comparatively slow craft, but inexhaustibe as a cargo and passenger carrier.

Besides a trolley line, which would afford rapid and easy communication between various parts of the leviathan, no bar, as far as space is concerned, would be placed upon the enjoyment of the passengers of the pleasures and diversions to which they were used on land. Automobies could race on a track laid out on the upper deck, bordering the bulwarks.

It would be the easiest thing imaginable to contest a set at tennis, and scarcely more trouble to lay out golf links. Impromptu fox hunts, using an antisseed bag, or even a live Raynard, might be organized by clearing one deck of passengers for the time being. Coaching enterprises would naturally follow. Six-day bicycle races would serve to relieve the tedium of the voyage.

"Seeing the ship" automobiles would enable the voyagers to visit all parts of the craft without fatigue. Building the trolley tracks in board, instead of out board, and running the cars in a tunnel inside of the ship's skin, a very passable imitation of the subway and subway air, would be created.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Stephenson Cashier Has Narrow Escape From Being Sandbagged.

Stephenson—W. J. Duncan, cashier of the Stephenson bank, had a narrow escape from being sandbagged. While going home the other evening two masked men laid in waiting for him. He noticed their suspicious actions, and as they rushed at him he dodged the blow, finding refuge in a neighboring residence, whence he telephoned the village marshal in regard to the occurrence.

Sault Ste. Marie—Sheriff William F. Lipsett has returned to the Soo from Jackson, bringing with him Isaac Eagle, who will be confined in the county jail to await a new trial on the charge of murder at the next term of court. Eagle seems to have improved in health during his confinement and was in the best of spirits when he arrived. Eagle seemed pleased to be home again. He was attired in a gray suit of clothing and to look at the man one would not believe he had been confined for months in a prison.

Crystal Falls—The Iron County National bank of Crystal Falls, of which Jas. F. Corcoran, W. J. Richards, M. H. Moriarty Herman Holmes and Chas. H. Watson are directors, will erect a new building the coming year. The structure will go up on the lot now owned by the bank and the six additional feet between the present building and the Parks store. This additional frontage was recently purchased from Mr. Parks. The building will be of brick or stone and will be two stories high, the ground floor to be occupied by the bank and the second story by a suite of offices.

Mackinac—The City of Mackinac Island is well provided wit happaratus for fighting fire. Hydrants are located in all portions of the town, and an abundance of water at high pressure is available at all hours. The city has just built two new hose stations, one near St. Ann's church, and one near the Grand hotel, and has placed therein sufficient new fire hose. Besides these, there are two more stations, well equipped, in the heart of town. A feature of the system is the powerful streams of water that can be concentrated on a fire. The pressure is such that a stream of water directed against a roof will rip off the shingles.

Manistique—Manistique has a business man who pays a fine to his family when he swears. He was stuck for forty cents in one day recently.

Menominee—Menominee sportsmen express dissatisfaction because State Game Warden Chapman of the Soo has appointed but one state deputy game warden for the upper peninsula out of eight recently named. They think the U. P. should have been given a larger proportion of these officials, as it is here that the game stands most in need of protection.

REV. EKBLAD HERE.

Pastor-Elect of Bethany Church Preaches Twice on Sunday.

Rev. A. Theodore Ekblad, pastor-elect of Bethany Lutheran church, Twenty-third avenue west and Third street, is in the city today and will return tonight to Rock Island, Ill., to attend the annual meeting of the board of directors of Augustana college, of which he is solicitor. Mr. Ekblad preached at both services of Bethany church yesterday and made an excellent impression.

It is generally hoped that he will accept the call, but, he says, he is not yet able to say whether or not he will come. He will know within a week and will then inform the church council. He says that if it is left to himself he will come, but he is under obligations to the college and the conditions may be there that he will not be able to come. Should that prove no bar, the church council here will receive a favorable reply from him. He is much impressed with the enthusiasm which pervades the congregation of Bethany church and says it has the reputation of being hardworking for the good of the church.

Mr. Ekblad is the type of man who makes a good impression at first sight. He possesses the courtesy and ease which comes of constant mingling with all kinds of men and impresses one as a young man of tact and ability. In appearance he is pleasing, and Bethany congregation seems to have taken to him. He is equally versed in English and Swedish.

LIGHT ON THE DRESS SUIT QUESTION

We are going to turn the light on this dress suit question.

You may look extravagant, but no need of being so if you come here.

No tailor can build a better suit for $45, and it's here at $32.50.

Our finest hand-tailored Stein-Bloch Full Dress Suits are $40, and if we cannot fit you, we'll have them make one to your measure for about $50—one that no local tailor can approach in the matter of material, fit and workmanship.

Shirts that fit the body as well as the occasion, for $1.50 and $2.00. With cuffs attached or without them.

White Waistcoats in double or single-breasted style. Say $3, $3.50 and $4.

Black or white Mufflers—$1.50 to $5 for the qualities to match the suit.

And all the proper small furnishings are kept here in most complete assortments at all seasons of the year—collar, cuff, cravat, stud, glove, handkerchief.

Also the silk and opera Hats.

And the patent leather Shoes. New ones just received from Hanan, the famous maker.

KILLED AT THE MORRIS MINE

Edward Penglaize Fatally Crushed in Collision of Dinkies.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 22.—Edward Penglaize, 13 years of age, died at the Adams hospital yesterday morning as result of injuries received Saturday afternoon at the Morris mine. The boy was the stepson of Capt. Joseph Thomas. His home was near the Columbia mine, east of town. Saturday afternoon he went to the Morris, near by, to spend the afternoon with friends about the mine. He accepted an invitation from an engineer to ride on the dinkie, and as it was coming up out of the mine followed by another engine, the two cars came together at the top, when the boy's right leg was caught between the two machines. The leg was badly mangled above the knee. He was at once removed to the hospital, where preparation was made for amputation. The lad, however, showed such a weakened condition, it was thought best not to perform the operation until he recovered somewhat from the shock, but he did not rally.

Mathew Nelmarkka, 15 years of age, employed at Oscar Bay's butcher shop, met with a serious accident Saturday. He was feeding the sausage machine, when his right hand slipped and the third last fingers were cut off close to the hand.

Dennis Haley, who was lost in the woods, returned to town Saturday night, apparently none the worse for his experience. There was much excitement about town when it was known Mr. Haley was lost, and a party of searchers spent Friday night and all day Saturday hunting for him. Mr. Haley is associated with Supt. C. R. Warren in a series of exploratory operations along the western end of the Mesaba. He started to inspect a tract of land southeast of here Friday morning, intending to come up to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road and return on the evening train. He lost his bearings, but located himself at noon Saturday and returned without meeting any of the searching party.

THIS WEEK'S SERVICES.

Union Revivals in the West End Scandinavian Churches.

The union services being held by the Scandinavian churches at the West End will continue all this week. This evening one will be held at the First Swedish M. E. church at Twentieth avenue west and Third street and Ensign Anna Lindberg of the Salvation Army will speak. Tuesday evening a meeting will be held at the Norwegian Methodist church; Wednesday evening at the Salvation Army hall, Seventeenth avenue west and Superior street; Thursday evening at the Swedish Mission church; Friday evening at the First Swedish Baptist church, and Saturday evening at the First Swedish M. E. church.

Yesterday an immense audience attended the afternoon union service at the Swedish Mission church. It opened with the singing of the "Glory Song," which was done with such enthusiasm at Dr. Chapman's meetings in Minneapolis some little time ago.

Rev. Mr. Anderson read from the scriptures and Rev. C. A. Aldeen offered prayer. Prof. C. O. Larson of Chicago, rendered a beautiful hymn composed by the old Swedish gospel singer, Oscar Anfelt. Rev. A. Edstam gave the address of the afternoon and chose his text from Matthew ix:36: "But when He saw the multitude, He was moved with compassion for them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd."

At the close of the address Prof. C. O. Larson of Chicago, sang "My Mother's Prayer." The service closed with a brief address by Rev. F. O. Kling.

FIFTY YEARS MARRIED.

St. Peter Pioneer Couple Celebrate Anniversary.

St. Peter, Minn., Jan. 22.—Fifty years of married life and a residence of the same length of time in Minnesota were celebrated Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Woods, of this city. The former is 74 and the latter 70, and both are territorial pioneers of the state.

Mr. Woods first came West to Minnesota in 1855, settling in St. Paul. While in that city he witnessed the removal of the Winnegabo Indians to their reservation, east of Mankato, and he relates that the canoes of the savages extended in an unbroken line from Wabasha street to a point above the present high bridge.

After remaining in St. Paul a few months, Mr. Woods returned East, and Jan. 20, 1856, was married at Pittsburg, Pa., to Miss Julia A. Kercher. He brought his wife to their St. Peter home in the spring, but before they were fairly settled the Ink-pa-du-tah massacre occurred, and the young husband volunteered for service with the frontier guards, remaining under arms throughout the disturbance.

Again, in 1862, Mr. Woods joined Col. Flandrau's volunteers and marched to the relief of New Ulm. He was active in the battles at that place, and his ingenuity suggested the rigging up of the "Quaker" gun which so frightened the Indians and which influenced them greatly in their decision to raise the siege. After the repulse of Little Crow and his Sioux, Mr. Woods was quite content to retire to private life, opening a hardware store and conducting it for forty years.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods were among those who founded the Episcopal church here, one of the oldest houses of worship in the Minnesota valley.

For more than thirty years Mr. Woods has acted as one of its wardens, and Saturday they were suitably remembered by the different church societies.

The aged couple have six children: Mrs. Anna Schimmel, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. A. E. Williams, St. Peter; Mrs. Charles Schaberg, Saginaw, Mich.; C. R. Woods, Jr., Chisholm, Minn.; Mrs. M. S. Dean, Chicago and Harry Woods, Oaksdale, Wash. There are four grandchildren.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

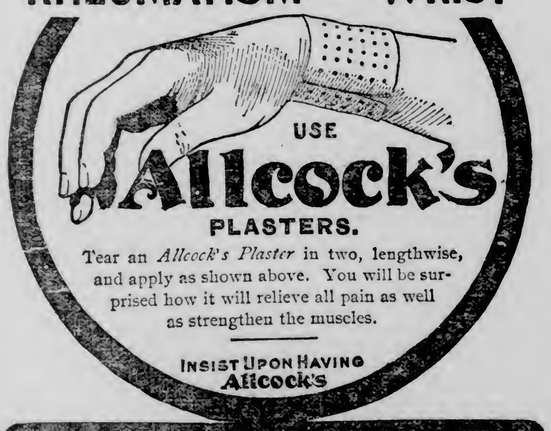

Murray Helder, of Selius Grove and Mary Crumwell, of Sunbury, were instantly killed Sunday night by a freight train while attempting to cross the Pessna railroad bridge over the Susquehanna river here.

A five-story brick building, a portion of the plant of the Pencoyd iron works at Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday night. The building was stocked with patterns and machinery. An official of the Pencoyd company estimates the lass at $50,000.

Lillie Wenzel, 20 years old, was shot and fatally wounded at Cleveland, O., Sunday night as she was leaving a dance hall on Fifty-fifth street in company with a young man named Edel. The police are looking for Homer Wieland in connection with the shooting. Four shots were fired, three of them entering the girl's body in what is feared to be vital parts.

Walter Carczlatys, a saloonkeeper, was shot and killed by robbers in his saloon at 586 Noble street at Chicago Sunday night. Six customers were made to stand in line while the robbers rifled the cash register. The proprietor seized one of the masked men and was shot three times by the other. The assailants escaped.

A BANQUET FOR POWELL

Steel Corporation Men Give Him One at Kitchi Gammi.

Greet Man Who is About to Leave for Bisbee.

L. W. Powell, who has resigned as assistant general manager of the Oliver Iron Mining company, to take general charge of the operations of the Bonanza Circle copper mines at Bisbee, Ariz., was the guest of honor at a banquet given at the Kitchi Gammi club, Saturday evening, by his business associates with the different corporations controlled by the United States Steel corporation at the Head of the Lakes.

Mr. Powell left this afternoon for Bisbee, and his friends sought to give him a last formal greeting before he left Duluth, after a residence of more than six years, during which time he made many friends.

Mr. Powell was presented with a handsome Swiss watch, which he accepted most graciously and with a show of his appreciation. The presentation speech was made by W. J. Olcott, general manager of the Oliver Iron Mining company, who acted as toastmaster. A number of glowing tributes were paid to Mr. Powell by those of his friends who were called upon for a few remarks.

Telegrams of regret were sent by T. F. Cole, president of the Oliver company, and many other persons connected with that big concern, who were unable to be present.

The speakers were Chester A. Congdon, Joseph B. Cotton, J. H. Hearding, John Uno Sebenius, W. H. Johnston, W. A. McGonagle and the toastmaster.

Others present were: Charles Trezona, general superintendent of the Pioneer, Chandler and Minnesota mines of Ely; M. S. Hawkins, general superintendent of the Mountain Iron and Virginia mines of Mountain Iron; R. R. Trezona, general superintendent of the Fayal mine of Eveleth; J. H. McLean, general superintendent; D. E. Sullivan, assistant general superintendent of the Gogebic range mines; W. H. Johnston, general superintendent of the Marquette range mines; O. C. Davidson, general superintendent of the Menominee range mines; W. M. Jeffery, auditor; George D. Swift, assistant secretary; R. E. Brace, purchasing agent of the Oliver Iron Mining company; F. E. House, president of the Duluth & Iron Range road; W. W. Croze, superintendent of mineral lands; H. J. Wessinger, chief engineer; J. L. Mullen, assistant auditor; F. D. Adams, assistant general solicitor, and W. N. Merriam, geologist of the Oliver Iron Mining company; A. F. Harvey, assistant general manager of the Pittsburg Steamship company; John C. Greenway, general superintendent of mines on Western Mesaba range; Dr. Charles G. Shipman, mine physician at Ely, and Werner Presentih, tax commissioner of the Oliver Iron Mining company.

LUMBER PRICES HAVE ADVANCED

Are From $2.50 to $3.00 Over Those Quoted a Year Ago.

No lumber sales have been reported during the past few days. A number of the local lumbermen were absent last week to attend he annual convention of the Northwestern Lumbermen's association at Minneapolis.

The chief matter of interest in the lumber market is the strong advance of lumber prices over those of a year ago this date. Lumber in this market is said to be selling from $2.50 to $3 above what it was a year ago, along all lines, the lower grades showing, perhaps, a greater increase in price than the upper grades. The lowest grade, No. 6 lumber, which a few years ago had practically no value, is now selling for $7 per thousand feet. Boards in the No. 5 grade are bringing a high price, while No. 4 boards are selling at $15. At these prices it is said that the Eastern buyers are holding off where they can find substitutes, and Southern poplar and other woods are being purchased by some in the boxmaking trade.

Nearly all the low and medium grade of lumber at the Brooks-Scanlon mill at Scanlon have been sold in advance of the cut, most of the lumber to go East. The mill is operating heavily and will have a large output of lumber this year.

DEMANDS OF THE MINERS

To be Presented to the Operators at Conference This Week.

Pittsburg, Jan. 22.—The Post says: A completed draft of the wage demands that are to be presented by the United Mine Workers to the operators at the interstate conference at Indianapolis this week was secured from reliable sources and shows one decided change in policy over the former agreement of these interests. The miners are now asking for only a one year agreement instead of the two year scale, which is to expire next April, and which was the first of the kind to be tried by the coal interests. The specific demands to be presented to the operators are included in seven propositions, as follows:

1—A straight advance of 12½ per cent for all the miners and mine laborers.

2—All bituminous districts to be admitted to the conference where they are represented by both mine workers and operators.

3—A 7-cent differential must be established between pick and machinery mining on the mine run basis.

4—A uniform day wage scale to be paid to all classes of labor.

5—Boys under 16 years old shall not be permitted to work in or about the mine.

6—That the wage agreement or contract between the United Mine Workers and the operators shall continue for one year from April, 1906.

7—All other conditions of the present wage agreement that do not conflict with the above demands shall remain in force for the same period as the new scale.

The conference between the miners and operators is to start in Indianapolis on Thursday of this week.

YOUNG WOMEN WARNED.

They Should Not Marry Old Men, Says Mrs. Beadle.

New York, Jan. 22.—Mrs. William Beadle, wife of the wealthy rent agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, who is suing him for separate maintenance on the ground of cruelty and insufficient support, draws from her own experience the conclusion that no young woman should marry an old man, and that before a poor woman marries a rich man she should ascertain whether he is a miser.

Mrs. Beadle, who says she is 26 and her husband 89, was in hiding yesterday in Jersey City. Since the publication of her domestic troubles, she has been in a highly nervous condition verging upon prostration. She said:

"My unhappy wedded life proves again that May should not mate with December. I married Mr. Beadle in July, 1900. He professed great affection for me, and I, believing in the sincerity of those professions, believed that our married life would be happy, even in spite of the great disparity of our ages.

"But within a few weeks I found that I had made a sad mistake. Although my husband earned a salary of $25,000 a year, he rented a house in New Haven for $12 a month and refused to hire any help for me.

"Besides he was very jealous and quarrelsome and continually accused me of smoking excessively and of drinking too much. Once, after a quarrel he drove me out of the house and I had to spend the night on the cold streets. And still he professes to be madly in love with me.

"I smoke a few cigarettes a day—I do not know how many. Most women of fashion do smoke in the privacy of their homes and many smoke with their husbands and with their entire approval.

"Smoking in public is a manifestation of bad taste. It would be absurd to claim that there are women who do not drink a little at meals and in proper company. I admit that I like champagne, but I deny that I drink it immoderately."

Before Mrs. Beadle married, she was Miss May Rogers, of San Jose, Cal. She says she is the daughter of a retired army officer.

SKIN ECZEMA IN WORST FORM

Black Splotches All Over Face—Produced Severe Itching—Year's Treatment by Physicians Did No Good and Became Despondent—Affected Parts Now Clear as Ever—Alabama Lady's

CURE BY THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of annoyance and suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of my town. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in its worst form. They treated me for the same for the length of one year, but the treatment did me no good.

"Finally I became despondent and decided to discontinue their services. Shortly afterwards, my husband in reading a copy of a weekly New York paper saw an advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies. He purchased the entire outfit, and after using the contents of the first bottle of Cuticura Resolvent in connection with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, the breaking out entirely stopped. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every splotch was entirely gone and the affected parts were left as clear as ever. I have not felt a symptom of the eczema since, which was three years ago.

"The Cuticura Remedies not only cured me of that dreadful disease, eczema, but other complicated troubles as well; and I have been the means of others being cured of the same disease by the Cuticura Remedies, and I don't hesitate in saying that the Resolvent is the best blood medicine that the world has ever known." Something to Think About

German railroads are owned by the people and run merely for the people's comfort, convenience and safety.

"They pay $187,500,000 a year in wages to employes, $700,000 pensions to old employes, $350,000 to widows, $15,000 for the burial of employes.

"There is no grafting, no stock-juggling, bond-juggling, rate-juggling, no rebates, discriminations, thefts, or frauds on shippers."

Very few accidents, and fares are less than two-thirds of American fares.

LINE OF COUNTY DIVISION FIXED

Movement to Divide Itasca County Assumes Definite Form.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Jan. 22.—The movement for county division is making headway, and at the meeting held at the Commercial club the proposed lines of division were warmly discussed. The Koochiching delegation said they knew they had no weight neither there nor in a county election, for the Grand Rapids end had the votes. However, all they asked was an east and west line that Interantional Falls would have a chance for a county seat.

The division finally agreed upon was this: Beginning on the east line of the county between towns 62 and 63, thence west to long range 25, thence south to line between 151 and 150, thence west to range 27, thence south one town, west one town, south one, west one, south one and west one to county line at southwest corner of Third River town—148-29.

This gives about a dozen organized towns, including Third River and up, and the villages of Northome and Ripple to the north county. Owing to these two villages having aspirations to be a county seat they may be able to throw their strength against the move and to down the proposition, say some of the leading ones, and to obviate this it is proposed to make the line straight from the north end of 63, jog south on the long ranges of the line between 150 and 151 to the county line, which would leave Northome in the south county. However that line was suggested the next day after the big meeting and will probably not affect the first agreement.

It is said the petition is all made up and will soon be circulated. The petition must be signed by 25 per cent of the county's total vote cast at the last election before it can be submitted to the governor for his order for an election on the question. This means that about one thousand names of legal voters must be obtained to the petition.

Mayor Taylor of Deer River, when asked what his idea was, stated that as Deer River is so close to the Rapids it could not expect to be included in the north territory, but it would like to be segregated from Grand Rapids, and he thought the proper thing would be a Northome the southwest corner, then add third county, giving Deer River and a piece from Cass county, and leave the county seat fight between Northome and Deer River.

SURVIVORS ARE LANDED

Sixteen Sailors From Wrecked Ship Brought to Victoria, B. C.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 22—The steamer Queen City arrived here yesterday with Capt. Davidson and sixteen other survivors of the wrecked steel ship, King David, which dragged her anchor and drifted broadside on Bakou reef, Dec. 13, when the survivors left her a total wreck after spending five weeks in an abandoned fishing camp with big driftwood fires burning nightly to signal any vessel that came near. Although the shipwrecked men were on an uninhabited beach for so long, they did not suffer severely, and had provisions for a month longer when picked up.

Capt. Davidson said he encountered thick weather, and having no observations, ran too far north, and when he sighted the recently established Clayoquet light, he mistook it for Cape Beale. On Dec. 10, at 9 p. m., the outlook reported breakers on the lee bow, the ship clearing them. More breakers were seen, and he anchored in eight fathoms. Three days later the weather cleared, and observations showed the proximity of dangerous reefs. A northeast wind blew fresh, and he tried to work seaward, but the windlass broke and the anchors dragged, until the vessel drifted on the rocks and was held by the starboard quarter there. Two knuckles of rock penetrated her side, and she rolled over with a heavy list to starboard. The crew lowered boats, and made for the huts seen on shore, a mile away.

Believing Cape Beale, 100 miles away, was the nearest place assistance could be had, the captain called for volunteers. Nine seamen responded. Six were chosen, and on Dec. 21 they left for Cape Beale in Chief Officer Walstein's boat. It was never heard of after rounding Pesquott Point. A heavy gale blew on Dec. 23, and continued for five days. The boat was doubtless swamped and all drowned. Those lost were:

A. W. WALSTEIN, 24 years old, of Oxford, N. Z.

JOHN ROGERS, aged 50, Liverpool, Eng.

H. G. RAY, aged 28, Monmouth, Eng.

F. JONES, aged 48, Carnarvon, Eng.

R. FEDERZ, aged 27, Norway.

J. PODA, aged 24, Denmark.

P. SORENSON, aged 20, Denmark.

After the mate's boat left, a steamer's smoke was seen, but she was too far away to be signalled. The survivors remained camped in the fishing huts on the shore until Jan. 14, when the steamer Queen City was sighted entering Nooka.

Capt. Townsend had seen the wreck and the smoke of the survivors' camp, and rescued them.

Complain of Thefts.

Several ski owners in the East end are complaining of the loss of their property, believed to be the result of depredations of small boys. In the vicinity of Fourteenth avenue east and Third street it is said that from six to eight pairs of skiis have been stolen during the last few days from the owners' premises. One of the losers, Capt. Green of the United States tug Circle, states that out of three pair of skiis which he left outside his door a few hours, the other day, the two best pairs were taken. The captain says that the thief is certainly a good judge of skiis.

RETURNS TO ST. PAUL.

D. H. Moon Becomes Treasurer of Sharood Shoe Company.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—D. H. Moon, formerly of the firm of Allen, Moon & So., wholesale grocers in this city, has returned to St. Paul after an absence of fourteen years, and although he has accumulated wealth, he will be actively engaged in business as treasurer of the Sharood Shoe company.

Since Mr. Moon left the city, he lived in Duluth and has been engaged in the lumber business, and although he has retired from active participation, he still retains large interests in it.

Mr. Moon has always had a warm spot for St. Paul, and on deciding to return, he sought an opportunity to become identified withh some large business concern. He made arrangements to invest capital in the Sharood Shoe company and will at once become actively a member of the firm, in the capacity of treasurer, preferring a busy life to settling down to one of ease.

BIG ADDITION

To be Made to Great Northern Car Shops in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Work has been commenced on an additional coach shop at the Great Northern car shops on Jackson street. The foundation has just been completed, and workmen are starting to erect the brick superstructure. It is expected that the building will be ready for use in two months.

The new structure is to be used for the painting and repairs of passenger coaches exclusively. It will double the present capacity of the shops for that kind of work. The regular improved facilities, trackage, etc., will be installed in the new building, making it one of the best equipped in the country.

The building will be two stories high, occupying a site 200 feet square. The estimated cost of the structure is given at $72,000.

ELOPEMENT IS EPIDEMIC.

Third Daughter to Flee for Marriage Pursued by Papa.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 22.—An epidemic of elopment seems to prevail in the family of John Thornton of this place. Two of his daughters have already found husbands in this manner, and when his youngest daughter, 16 years old, Fannie Thornton, disappeared in company with Edward Williams, the father started officers on the trail. The pair is said to have been located in Shenandoah, Iowa. Williams' courtship was brief. He is employed by a gas lamp company of Kansas City, Mo., and conducted his courtship while installing a machine in the Thornton home. Williams is handsome and had little difficulty in convincing the girl that he was her Lochinvar.

PREACHES TO THE ELKS.

Rev. R. J. Mooney Talks on the Mission of the Order.

Yesterday morning Rev. Roderick J. Meoney preached at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Nineteenth avenue west and First street on "The Mission of the Elk" and present were a large number of the local antlered tribe. Mr. Mooney is chaplain of the grand lodge of the state and is high in the esteem of Elkdom. He preached yesterday morning for the benefit of Duluth lodge, No. 133, B. P. O. E., and the church was well filled.

Mr. Mooney talked common sense and spoke eloquently of the true mission of fraternalism of all lodges, but peculiarly that of the Elks. He said that the Elks are ever ready to furnish food and clothing to needy men and women, but that their mission is greater than that; while that is a fine, charitable and commendable work, they should remember that the food of kindness is often more needed than bodily food. A fraternal hand should be stretched out to a discouraged man and he should be helped back to the standard from which he had fallen. Said he in part:

"The order of Elks is the only thoroughly American order of men. A prerequisite of membership in the order is the fact of being an American citizen in the finest sense of the word, a man who, with clear intellect takes upon himself the privileges of our franchises.

"Every true Elk is in the position of St. Peter and John when they met the cripple at the temple gate. That cripple had been there for years. He had received bread and meat and clothing for years and was a cripple still. But Peter and John with kindness of perception reasoned something like this: Why is this man a cripple? Will we do him any good by giving him a little more meat and a little more clothing. No; he will still be a cripple. We cried out to him to arise and walk.

"He did so, and as he felt the life course through his limbs he felt what it was to be a man; to act like a man; to think like a man and see life's opportunities open up before him with their invitations to usefulness and to note the promises of God to him. You and I are called on to equip ourselves to do just that kind of work among people.

"I would bring you all into the presence of Jesus the son of rightcousness, and there, by faith and prayer and repentance have each of us wait until our sulls, bathed, saturated through and through with His holy spirit of love and charity, come back again.

"A few weeks ago a lightship on Nantucket shoals got into distress; the wind was blowing at seventy miles an hour; the seas were transformed into rolling mountains of water. The steamer Azalia put ut to her rescue. She got close to her 'till the morning. For six long hours she fought with and buffeted the waves and the wind till the white streaks of the morning gave a little light and the wind going down, she sailed along side and saved the fifteen men who were aboard the light ship, and brought them safely to shore.

"That is just what the good Elk will do. He will stand by 'till the morning.' He will labor and wait till like the truest missionary of the Lord God he will have gotten the man upon his feet and once more living a life of decency and prudence."

AARON SEAMAN DEAD.

An Old Citizen of Deer River Has Passed Away.

Deer River, Minn., Jan. 22.—Aaron Seaman, a familiar character in Deer River, is dead from pneumonia. He was 75 years old. The old man had been an active, energetic character all his life, through Ohio, Illinois and South Dakota, and at one time was wealthy but met adversity through speculation in South Dakota. He owned several houses here. Deceased leaves two sons, Henry and Frank, to whom he willed his property, and a brother, John E., also living in Deer River.

BOTTENBURG IS GUILTY.

Former Wisconsin Supervisor Convicted for Stealing Horse From Morgue.

Milwaukee, Jan. 22.—After three hours' deliberation, a verdict of guilty was returned against Former Supervisor Charles Bottenberg, who, with William Stoffeld and Former Superintendent Peter J. Mead, has been on trial for a week before Judge Williams and a jury in circuit court for the theft of a black mare from the county morgue. Mead and Stoffeld were found guilty. After the usual motions for a new trial and a stay of execution, Bottenberg was released on a $4,000 bond.

"It's a shame to give it away," said the girl, with the twinkle in her eye and a fine disdain for the small artificial things of life. Of course this disdain may not extend to the time she is fifty and needs a new set of teeth, but at present it is unimpaired. "I say it is a shame, but have you noticed the recent and sudden acquirement of wads of hair that so many girls are flouncing out with these days? I know that loyalty to my sex ought to keep me still, but it is amusing and, after the recent pads that men, good looking and the reverse have worn with all the effrontery imaginable, upon their skimpy or brawny shoulders, as the case may be, they won't dare say a word about the thickened braids which we acquire with more or less ease.

"You know the new way of dressing the hair, is low and then braids beginning from the low arrangement on the neck whatever it may be, extend around the head. If the hair happens to be parted in front and has a bit of a natural wave, then these shining braids about half as thick as your wrist just above that, certainly do give the wearer an air of madonna like sweetness, St. Cecilia calmness and a number of other attributes of character, all acquired with just a simple wad of hair which, like that of ladies of many minstrel fame, will if the hair pins are removed fall down on the floor. You know it is quite deceiving, that way of dressing the hair and you are not at all skeptical until you try unsuccessfully to fix your own tresses in the same alluring way. And do you know there's not a man but is ready to fall down and worship at the shrine of the madonna of the purchased braids. And the only thing to do, if you value your reputation or lack of reputation for cattiness, when some man in your hearing gushes, 'Gosh, ain't that a swell head of hair,' is to join right in and enthuse with him, and all the time you can have the fun of amused tolerance underneath.

"And then there are the little curls, two or three in number, about three inches in length which drop alluringly from the coiffure, and peep bewitchingly from a jaunty hat. They're the most guileless looking things one would encounter in a day's journey and to known that they come in groups of three at so much a group, doesn't detract so very much either. It really seems too bad to have told, because men will, if they learn of it, prate about vanity and one thing and another, and the while they will be resting complacently under coats that are padded on the shoulders so obviously that it reminds one of the ostrich, he thinking securely that as they are out of sight they can't be labeled what they are. Oh, I guess when it comes to the vanity which invokes artifical aid, we can safely hold up our heads."

Open Night.

Tomorrow evening an open night of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class will be held in the gymnasium hall of the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock and an informal program of drills and dances will be presented by the different classes of the physical department. The affair is open to the members of the Young Women's association and their feminine friends, masculine admirers of physical prowess being strictly barred from the very informal meet. The object of the affair is to inspire additional interest in the work of this department as the new term will begin next month.

Suffrage Meeting.

The thirty-eighth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association will be held at Baltimore, Feb. 7 to 13 of this year. An especially fine program has been arranged and among these who will address the association are Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, Governor Warfield, of Maryland, the mayor of Baltimore and Colleague of the Port; Mrs. Florence Kelley, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Rev. Anna H. Shaw. The meeting is one which will attract widespread interest and though it is not probable that any Duluth women will be in attendance, it is possible that there will be several representatives from Minnesota.

Vesper Service.

Yesterday afternoon at the devotional services of the Young Women's Christian association, the meeting was in charge of the gymnasium department and in place of the regular services a vesper service was given. A large number were in attendance and following the service thirty were entertained at the informal Sunday evening tea. Dr. Mary McCoy, chairman of the gymnasium committee presided and program was given by Miss Dora Swan, Miss Allie Piper and Miss Marie Clark who sang, and a violin number was given by Miss Edith Herington. Mrs. L. W. Kline read selections from Anna Brown's "What is Worth While." The meeting was a helpful and enjoyable one.

January Journal.

The January Journal, the little monthly bulletin of events of the local Young Women's Christian association, is devoted to the annual reports of the association. Every department of the association is in a prosperous condition, but there is not a department that is not hampered by the lack of room and the need of the Y. W. C. A. building and home is alluded to again and again. The lunch room, the gymnasium department, the educational classes and the spiritual work could all be increased greatly if the facilities for work were greater. These detailed reports will be most interesting to those in touch with or interested in the work.

Browning Class.

The Evening Browning class of the Twentieth Century club will meet this evening at 7:45 o'clock at the club room of the library. "The Pope" will be the subject of this evening's lecture, which is the last in the study of "The Ring and the Book." The lecturer is Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. C. A. Duncan and Miss Mabel Duncan will leave during the week for Florida to spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Douglass, child and nurse, are registered at Miramar inn, Santa Barbara, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Zein left Saturday for New York. They will sail from that port Saturday of this week for Madrid, Spain, and from there they will visit the cities and resorts of the old world. They will not return to Duluth until late in the summer.

NO JERSEY FOR HER.

New York Woman Discusses Country Ideas of Divorce.

"Country people are awfully queer people," says the young New York woman, who is living temporarily in New Jersey, in the New York Press. "They are so truthful. I'll be willing to wager that there are more George Washingtons to the square inch in New Jersey than there are in the whole of New York put together.

"And that isn't all. They have such peculiar ideas of separation and divorce, these country people. No matter what happens, they think you ought to live with your husband. Doesn't make a particle of difference how he treats you, how unkind he is to you, how much he flirts with other girls, these country people think it is your duty to stay right with him as long as you live. It's awfully funny.

"Why, I know a country girl whose husband wouldn't take care of her at all, either of her or her two children. Her family took her home. They let her have all she wanted to eat and drink, but she might as well have been in a prison as in their house. They shut her off from the world just as though she were in deep disgrace—as though she had done some terrible thing she ought to be punished for. They won't allow her to go in the parlor and look at any fellow who comes to see her younger sisters. They make her stay upstairs with her children, putting them to bed. Then they make her go to bed with them. It's awfully sad.

"They never let her forget that she is separated from her husband. And what harm has she done? Not a thing but marry a man who wouldn't support her. She lives in New Jersey, where it would be easy after two years to get a divorce for desertion and non-support, but they won't hear of such a thing. I believe they are trying to force her to go back to her husband and starve with him because the Bible says, 'Let not man put asunder,' or something of that sort.

"Then there is a little girl out here who has her divorce. She is living with her two children in a boarding house in a little town of about 300 people. Well, you'd think that girl was a leper, to see the way the people treat her. They make a mountain out of every little molehill. She can't turn around, she can't bat her eye at anything that wears trousers that they don't comment on it. And you should hear a few of those comments from these truthful people! Terrible! They don't give her a chance to explain anything. They simply denounce her.

"Honestly, it has got so that the other day she asked me to walk down the street with her, and I was afraid to. I was, really. And she is one of the nicest little girls I ever saw in my life. Well-behaved and sweet as can be. Oh, no, when I get my divorce I shan't live in a country town or in the country. New York for me, where people have some liberality, and a divorced woman is allowed to breathe occasionally. My two years in New Jersey are nearly up. Then, back to the tall towers of Broadway and Fifth avenue for me!

"Of course, I had to give it out when I first came that my husband was dead. I had an awful time getting the dates of his death mixed, and what he died of, and all about it, and why I quit wearing black so soon. I'm only 25, you know, and in the country a widow wears widow's weeds forever. It's a wonder they don't burn her on her husband's funeral pyre. Of course, it was all very distressing with him living just over the way in New York all the time, but it was the only way out of it in this terrible country society, where you have to be so truthful and natural it takes all the interest out of life."

AVAILABLE MIND.

A Great Gift, Meaning Much to Him Who Has It.

After charm, tact, and a sense of humor, the available mind is the greatest gift the fairy godmother ever bestows, says Cully Ryland, in the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Did you ever stop to consider what kind of mind you possess? Whatever it is, it is a precious possession. As the poet said of his hair. "We are glad it is there, we'll be awfully sad when it goes."

Some of us have minds that might be accurately described as rag-tag and bob-tail; that is, not much of anything. A few facts, uncertainly conned, a small bunch of other people's anecdotes, some newspaper clippings, and a few repeatable but not reputable stories. These are its contents. Not an original thought, not a fresh idea, the kind of mind that fills its vacancies with "they say." Truly a poor affair to be called a mind at all.

There are other minds that consist chiefly of columns of figures, numbers, and dates. In this mind facts are on file. The date of the Sepoy rebellion and the telephone number of the merest acquaintance are alike registered, and may be shown up when called for. The schedule time of trains, the scale of miles between two given points, tables of weights and the names and dates of accession of kings, queen and presidents are component parts of such a mind, which, after all, is not mind, but memory.

The historical mind is somewhat on this order. The mind that compiles facts and stores them into its neat little pigeon-holes where it can lay a finger on them at any moment.

Then there is the mind that catches the foam and flying fragments, and chaff of things, and this is a mind of intense interest to its owner, for it is the amusing mind.

It is chock full of nonsense rhymes, and odd little scraps of information, full of topical songs and the latest inside information concerning people and things.

It is a restless little butterfly sort of mind, which changes the subject as often as does the dictionary, and twinkles and shimmers and flutters about this and that topic, lights here for a second and in another is gone fluttering and soaring again.

There is the Puritanical mind, the mind that holds everything a smutch of nature makes the whole world sin. It is straight-laced and narrow and old fogey, the kind of mind that makes its owner skedaddle when Pan, the impish, begins to skirl upon his pipes. The mind that dares not face the truth, but comforts itself with tying a bandage over its eyes and walking blind-fold through this sinful world.

There is the mind that idealizes and the mind which looks at all things from a practical and material standpoint.

There is the mind of him who carries "a load of learned lumber" in his head, and the inquisitive mind, whose hallmark is an interrogation point, and the mind that is always undergoing a process of being made up, because it is constantly becoming unmade.

And then, there is the available mind, the great gift, the mind that is always ready, that never flags nor lags but—to use an inelegant but most appropriate expression—is always Johnny on the spot.

It is never weighed in the balances and found wanting, but it weighs other things and other people and supplies their deficiencies with such quick readiness that they do not realize they have been found wanting.

It is as ready with its own quip and illustration as it is to help others with theirs by its appreciative silence. It is never at a loss for a reason, an epigram, or an anecdote that will sustain an argument or give the conversational ball a fresh push.

It is unhurried, unhampered by useless superfluities. It absorbs the context of conversation and goes straight and unerringly to the point. It is the mind that comprehends, that sees farther and deeper than its companion minds. It runs ahead and holds up the lamp of its intelligence that they may not halt or stumble. It is so subtle, so swift in its movements, so quickening in its power that other minds quicken in appreciation and account it to themselves for intelligence. It knows when to shine and when to suffer eclipse and the best thing about it is that it is a mind which—with a certain foundation—may belong to each one of us who observes and cultivates.

Cleaning Rugs.

Never send your valuable Oriental rugs to the ordinary professional cleaner, advises an exchange, as he will treat them to the same cheerful process accorded to a common carpet rug. This is to tack to the revolving beater, the arms of which whip it with a vigor that would make a finer rug fall to pieces. The whole point in caring for an Oriental rug is to preserve the back. The upper side you are not likely to hurt, but the woof and warp of the back can be easily damaged and should not be beaten even by hand. Snow is the best possible cleanser for fine rugs; and this snow as a sweeper also may be brought into the house and applied to large rugs and carpets with brightening effect. Of course, the doors and windows should be kept well open during the process.

The plan for the smaller Oriental rugs is to beat them gently on the right side and on grass or over a thick, ordinary door mat, or any springy surface. After this sweep with snow use a short brush of good size with which you can get down close to the rug. If it looks smoky wash it in a solution of soap bark in water. Wipe the surface off afterwards with a cloth wrung out of clean water. Large rugs should be handled in the same way under home supervision, and the professional cleaning fluids by which they are done on the floor should never be used.

Here's a New One.

Says the New York Evening Sun: The man who once heard a Boston girl mention that she was studying Keats, and asked her, "Ah, yes—what are Keats?" has been heard from again. He was calling on a musical New Yorker yesterday.

"We've just been to a concert to hear a 'Solemn Mass,'" she said.

"Who is he?" said the man.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

California celery, 12½ cents a bunch.
Florida oranges, 30 cents a dozen.
California oranges, 25 to 50 cents a dozen.
Cucumbers, 20 cents a dozen.
Red snappers, 15 cents a lb.
Veal chops, 15 cents a lb.

The Florida orange, the finicky housekeeper to the contrary notwithstanding, says the market man, is the choicest orange that the market offers now. Since the cultivation of the navel orange in California has been so extensive, the buyer of oranges usually say of Florida oranges, "Oh, they are the kind with seeds! No, we don't want them." As a consequence, the Florida oranges, which are the sweetest, have little sale, and all consumers of oranges buy the California varieties. That is the state of affairs in the Duluth market, but it is not so elsewhere, for a recent visitor here from Chicago was surprised that her hostess used California oranges exclusively, for the folks in Chicago buy Florida oranges, if they can afford them, paying 60 cents a dozen for them retail. That the Duluth supply of Florida oranges does not come through the Chicago markets accounts for the cheapness of these oranges here. At least, try them for your next order, anyway, until the really good California fruit arrives, which, according to the market man, is along about the middle of February.

BIGELOW DENOUNCED.

Shonts Says His Article is "Masterpiece of Mendacity."

Cincinnati, Jan. 22:—"A masterpiece of mendacity" was the term applied to Poultney Bigelow's attack on Panama canal management by Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the canal commission, in a speech before the Commercial Club of this city Saturday night. Mr. Shonts evidently did not think that Mr. Bigelow had been punished enough by his unpleasant experience before the senate committee on interoceanic canals this week, for he replied to the article in exceedingly strong language.

"One point will I mention as an illustration of his miraculous powers of observation," said Mr. Shonts. "He said that during a recent rain the volume of water was so great in the sewers of Panama that 'it backed the sewage up into cellars and ruined many houses.' There is not a cellar in Panama and never has been."

Mr. Shonts protested against the dissemination in the United States of "libels and slanders upon the efficiency and character of faithful workers on the Isthmus, who, by reason of their absence from their own country, cannot defend themselves from such assaults." He added to this protest a declaration of his faith in the canal project, and prophesied that the moral and political effects following its completion would be no less remarkable and salutary than its material benefits.

Discussing the great problem of labor on the isthmus, Mr. Shonts said the government is about to enter upon an experiment with 1,000 laborers from Northern Spain. He declared that there was nothing connected with the construction of the canal of more importance in its bearing on results than the labor question. He assured his hearers that the preparatory work had advanced as far as it safely could until it was definitely known whether the canal was to be a sea-level or lock canal.

"THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN."

The tremendous success accorded George Ade's comedy "The County Chairman" in New York to say nothing of the long runs enjoyed in other cities, is evidence of the warm regard in which the humorist's wit and clever dialogue are held by the playgoing public. The story is graphically told and with laughts following each other in rapid succession. Henry W. Savage, the prrducing manager, has paid particular attention to the spectacular side of the "Chairman" and it has been said that this play is the most elaborately staged of any comedy in which there is no music. The cast is up to the standard of excellence maintained in all the Savage productions and includes Theodore Babcock, George Thatcher, Herman Lieb, Richard J. Dillon, George R. Caine, Edward Gorman, Has. J. Bradbury, C. A. Burke, Marcus Moriarity, Will Phillips, Joseph Daly, Harold Grau, Ruby Bridges, Grace Romine, Laura Ayers, Zenaide Williams and Florida Kingsley.

"The County Chairman" will be at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow night.

The Aftermath of the Great White Sale

Now for the remnants and soiled and mussed goods that were left in the wake of the busiest White Sale we've ever known. Our sales for the first two weeks were equal to the sales for the whole month of January a year ago—a fact that we attribute to the high character of the linens in the sale and the lowest prices on all kinds of white goods that were quoted anywhere in Duluth. The remnants of a sale like that won't go begging for a market.

REMNANTS OF COTTONS

Over 200 end lengths that have been tucked away during the White Sale—left from the scores of pieces of bleached and unbleached sheetings, pillow casing, muslins, cambrics, linen and crash toweling that were sold. We've marked them at less than cost to insure a thorough ridding.

REMNANTS OF TABLE LINENS

Remnants of all kinds of table damask and all lengths up to 3½ yards and in varied widths—bleached and half bleached linens. Owing to the enormous lot of linens that were purchased during the sale there are more remnants than we have ever had before.

SOILED AND ODD THINGS

All odd lots and rumpled or soiled bed spreads, sheets, pillow cases, towels (linen and Turkish), lunch cloths, tray cloths, sideboard and bureau scarfs, India linons, lawns, fancy waistings, dimities, cotton blankets, wool blankets, comforters, bed pillows, cushion pillows have greatly lowered prices.

UNMATCHED TABLE CLOTHS AND NAPKINS

Pattern cloths without napkins to match and cloths that have been slightly soiled in the White Sale display are now marked to 25 to 40 per cent less than the selling price. In odd half dozen napkins you'll be sure to find something better than at any other sale.

DR. RICE'S SERMON.

Speaks From Text Relating Trial of Jobs' Faith.

Dr. Rich preached to a vast audience at the First Methodist church last evening from the texts: "Then when Satan answered the Lord, and said, 'Doth Job fear God for naught,' 'And the Lord said unto satan, behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand now., and "But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face," 'and the Lord said unto Satan, behold he is in thy hand; but save his life." His theme was "God's bargain with the devil as to a righteous man." He spoke in part as follows:

"All that a man hath will he give for his life." That's in the Bible, but the devil said it, and it becomes my privilege under the inspiration of this wonderful character Job, to declare that it is not true. God and the devil are here represented in a bargain over a truly good man. The real foundational element of goodness will enter into this transaction before we have done. There is much that passes for goodness in this world, which is not goodness. Many men are trying to keep their hands clean on the terms that 'honesty is the best policy.' Well that never sounded real honest to me. That's a very small basis from which to argue to so great a worth as honesty. If it were not good policy, then you have excuse for dropping it? Oh no! Honesty I cry, for its own sake. The devil in this case hopes to establish what he has always wanted to prove, and which a great many people really believe, that men are good only from policy. The case here resolves itself to this point, that even though he may prove the claim to be so in many cases, yet the life of one good man, good because it was right to be good, would destroy his claim. When you clean off all the rubbish off a man's man's character and get down to a basic point of real genuine goodness, that man will stand. And I want to boldly fling into this congregation the assertion, that if there is here a man, as many there are in the world, who now is sulking about the earth in a manner sour and dispirited, and having surrendered what you claim was once a good Christian life, all this on account of having lost something, or having failed to gain something of earthly substance, I want to say to you as strongly as I know how to put it, that your faith or your goodness surrendered under that plea was entirely of the wrong sort. You didn't have hold of the truth. You cannot follow Christ for the loaves. Your following of Him must be from a higher motive.

"The story we face this evening is one full of hope to the anxious world. Man can hold fast to eternal truth. This man Job comes to save the race from the stigma—'all men have their price.' They have not! Hear the word. This one great character thrills us, and sends us back to our tasks with a new grip on our swords and a new courage in our hearts. I would fling it into the teeth of every discouragement you have to meet. There are things which a good man hath which cannot be bought. Oh, the power of a really good man. Sarah Grand somewhere said: 'It takes more genius to be a man, than manhood to be a genius.' If we would but be good, good because it is right to be good, what a power we would be. For the fact is patent everywhere that goodness is the most perfect means through which God can show His truth to a hungry, world. Let us turn therefore now and note this man's marvelous character, both in losing his property and in the deeper test which struck deep at his own heart."

The series of special revival services will be continued during the entire week. Dr. Rice preaching every evening.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HUGHES.

Abbott Edes Smith of Minneapolis Pays Eloquent Tribute.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia L. Hughes were held at the family residence yesterday, at 2 p. m. Abbot Edes Smith, C. S. B., of Minneapolis, officiated and spoke in part as follows:

"When a pure, unselfish, noble and Christ-like life passes from the earth, it is well for those who remain to pause for a moment in the midst of the heat and burden of the day, with its joys and its sorrows, in order that, having learned aright the lesson of such a life, they may again take up the cross and press on with renewed courage in the straight and narrow way, made better men and women because such a one has dwelt among them a living inspiration to a more devoted self-abnegation and to a more faithful helpfulness.

"'By their fruit ye shall know them,' said our Master; and for twelve years Mrs. Julia L. Hughes has stood in the community, modest and unassuming, to be sure, but none the less a tower of unostentations and far-reaching beneficence to hundreds of men, women and children who have been in the past and who are today standing up and calling her blessed. What higher praise can be given to her than the simple truth that like our Saviour she 'Went about doing good.' Words fail me adequately to express the purity, nobility and strength of her character. Absolute truthfulness was so essentially a part of her nature that a lie could not stand in her presence. Such was the purity of her character that everything unworthy turned against her and turned from her, unable to bear the exposure which the true, the beautiful, and the good always bring to their opposites. 'There is nothing covered which shall not be revealed, nor hid which shall not be known.' 'The light reveals all things,' making the 'Darkness light and the crooked places straight.'

"As a friend, her fidelity was unswerving, and all that goes to make the highest and best type of humanity was here. Obedience to conscience was a necessity of her very being, and to recognize a duty was for her to perform it at whatever cost. Of such Christ-like qualities martyrs are ever made. Persecution could never shake her unflinching loyalty to that which she knew to be the truth, and in times of persecution she stood, if possible, even more steadfastly. To all this strength and nobility of character she added the gentler virtues and in the highest degree exemplified the Psalmist's words, 'Thy gentleness hath made me great.' Years ago she became a Christian Scientist and has ever since been unfalteringly loyal to our leader, Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, whom she tenderly loved, deeply reverenced, and fully recognized as the only person now living who can speak with authority on the subject of Christian Science.

"As a Christian Science practitioner she naturally and invariably conformed her methods to the letter and to the spirit of Mrs. Eddy's words: 'If we would open their prison doors for the sick, we must first learn to bind up the broken-hearted. If we would heal by the Spirit, we must not hide the talent of spiritual healing under the napkin of its form, nor bury the morale of Christian Science in the grave-clothes of its letter. The tender word and sweet forbearance with an invalid's hastiness, pitiful patience with his fears and the removal thereof are far better than hecatombs of gushing theories, stereotyped speeches, and straight-laced methods, which are but so many parodies on legitimate Christian Science aflame with the Master's confession.'

"It was my great privilege to be her teacher and, speaking with a very full knowledge of her motives and of the surrounding circumstances of each case, I rejoice as her teacher and as her confidential friend thus publicly, unreservedly, and with my whole heart to express my cordial approval of her as my student in every detail of her life, and at the same time to state my confidence, yes, my certainty, that even unto her last breath she never for one moment wavered in her absolute reliance on God alone. She sacrificed self, she never sacrificed principle. As the Apostle Paul said of himself, 'She has fought the good fight, she has kept the faith.' Nobly has she won the commendation of our Saviour's words, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful.'"

MISSING JEWELRY FOUND IN THE RUINS.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—Part of the valuable jewelry which was supposed to have been stolen from the body of Mrs. S. Spiesberg, one of the victims of the West hotel fire, has been found in the ruins. When Louis Endrath of Chicago, father of Mrs. Sudesberg, reported that his daughter's jewelry was missing, search of the ruins at once began, being conducted by Mrs. Charles H. Wood, the proprietor of the hotel. Yesterday Mrs. Wood recovered a pearl necklace and a diamond studded watch. A ring said to be valued at $1,200 is still missing but Mrs. Wood is confident that it will be found. Jewelry belonging to other victims has also been recovered since the search began.

FORTUNE FOR CONVICT.

Prisoner Released to Go After Legacy of $25,000.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 22.—Harry M. Stevens was released last week from the Chester penitentiary that he might go to London, Eng., to collect a fortune estimated at $25,000. He was arrested in Pike county on a charge of forgery, and after lying in jail, was given an indeterminate sentence to the penitentiary a year ago. He has been given his freedom now that he may claim the estate left to him by the death of his father. The lawyers who defended Stevens never have been paid for their services, and they advanced their client enough money to reach England, securing a promise that they will be paid as soon as the legacy is handed over. He has resided in this country for several years and is said to have squandered $7,000 in a short time.

"It's a shame to give it away," said the girl, with the twinkle in her eye and a fine disdain for the small artificial things of life. Of course this disdain may not extend to the time she is fifty and needs a new set of teeth, but at present it is unimpaired. "I say it is a shame, but have you noticed the recent and sudden acquirement of wads of hair that so many girls are flouncing out with these days? I know that loyalty to my sex ought to keep me still, but it is amusing and, after the recent pads that men, good looking and the reverse have worn with all the effrontery imaginable, upon their skimpy or brawny shoulders, as the case may be, they won't dare say a word about the thickened braids which we acquire with more or less ease.

"You know the new way of dressing the hair, is low and then braids beginning from the low arrangement on the neck whatever it may be, extend around the head. If the hair happens to be parted in front and has a bit of a natural wave, then these shining braids about half as thick as your wrist just above that, certainly do give the wearer an air of madonna like sweetness, St. Cecilia calmness and a number of other attributes of character, all acquired with just a simple wad of hair which, like that of ladies of many minstrel fame, will if the hair pins are removed fall down on the floor. You know it is quite deceiving, that way of dressing the hair and you are not at all skeptical until you try unsuccessfully to fix your own tresses in the same alluring way. And do you know there's not a man but is ready to fall down and worship at the shrine of the madonna of the purchased braids. And the only thing to do, if you value your reputation or lack of reputation for cattiness, when some man in your hearing gushes, 'Gosh, ain't that a swell head of hair,' is to join right in and enthuse with him, and all the time you can have the fun of amused tolerance underneath.

"And then there are the little curls, two or three in number, about three inches in length which drop alluringly from the coiffure, and peep bewitchingly from a jaunty hat. They're the most guileless looking things one would encounter in a day's journey and to known that they come in groups of three at so much a group, doesn't detract so very much either. It really seems too bad to have told, because men will, if they learn of it, prate about vanity and one thing and another, and the while they will be resting complacecently under coats that are padded on the shoulders so obviously that it reminds one of the ostrich, he thinking securely that as they are out of sight they can't be labeled what they are. Oh, I guess when it comes to the vanity which invokes artifical aid, we can safely hold up our heads."

Open Night.

Tomorrow evening an open night of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class will be held in the gymnasium hall of the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock and an informal program of drills and dances will be presented by the different classes of the physical department. The affair is open to the members of the Young Women's association and their feminine friends, masculine admirers of physical prowess being strictly barred from the very informal meet. The object of the affair is to inspire additional interest in the work of this department as the new term will begin next month.

Suffrage Meeting.

The thirty-eighth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association will be held at Baltimore, Feb. 7 to 13 of this year. An especially fine program has been arranged and among these who will address the association are Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, Governor Warfield, of Maryland, the mayor of Baltimore and Collector of the Port; Mrs. Florence Kelley, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Rev. Anna H. Shaw. The meeting is one which will attract widespread interest and though it is not probable that any Duluth women will be in attendance, it is possible that there will be several representatives from Minnesota.

Vesper Service.

Yesterday afternoon at the devotional services of the Young Women's Christian association, the meeting was in charge of the gymnasium department and in place of the regular services a vesper service was given. A large number were in attendance and following the service thirty were entertained at the informal Sunday evening tea. Dr. Mary McCoy, chairman of the gymnasium committee presided and program was given by Miss Dora Swan, Miss Allie Piper and Miss Marie Clark who sang, and a violin number was given by Miss Edith Herington. Mrs. L. W. Kline read selections from Anna Brown's "What is Worth While." The meeting was a helpful and enjoyable one.

January Journal.

The January Journal, the little monthly bulletin of events of the local Young Women's Christian association, is devoted to the annual reports of the association. Every department of the association is in a prosperous condition, but there is not a department that is not hampered by the lack of room and the need of the Y. W. C. A. building and home is alluded to again and again. The lunch room, the gymnasium department, the educational classes and the spiritual work could all be increased greatly if the facilities for work were greater. These detailed reports will be most interesting to those in touch with or interested in the work.

Browning Class.

The Evening Browning class of the Twentieth Century club will meet this evening at 7:45 o'clock at the club room of the library. "The Pope" will be the subject of this evening's lecture, which is the last in the study of "The Ring and the Book." The lecturer is Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr.

Personal Mention.

NO JERSEY FOR HER.

New York Woman Discusses Country Ideas of Divorce.

"Country people are awfully queer people," says the young New York woman, who is living temporarily in New Jersey, in the New York Press. "They are so truthful. I'll be willing to wager that there are more George Washingtons to the square inch in New Jersey than there are in the whole of New York put together.

"And that isn't all. They have such peculiar ideas of separation and divorce, these country people. No matter what happens, they think you ought to live with your husband. Doesn't make a particle of difference how he treats you, how unkind he is to you, how much he flirts with other girls, these country people think it is your duty to stay right with him as long as you live. It's awfully funny.

"Why, I know a country girl whose husband wouldn't take care of her at all, either of her or her two children. Her family took her home. They let her have all she wanted to eat and drink, but she might as well have been in a prison as in their house. They shut her off from the world just as though she were in deep disgrace—as though she had done some terrible thing she ought to be punished for. They won't allow her to go in the parlor and look at any fellow who comes to see her younger sisters. They make her stay upstairs with her children, putting them to bed. Then they make her go to bed with them. It's awfully sad.

"They never let her forget that she is separated from her husband. And what harm has she done? Not a thing but marry a man who wouldn't support her. She lives in New Jersey, where it would be easy after two years to get a divorce for desertion and non-support, but they won't hear of such a thing. I believe they are trying to force her to go back to her husband and starve with him because the Bible says, 'Let not man put asunder,' or something of that sort.

"Then there is a little girl out here who has her divorce. She is living with her two children in a boarding house in a little town of about 300 people. Well, you'd think that girl was a leper, to see the way the people treat her. They make a mountain out of every little molehill. She can't turn around, she can't bat her eye at anything that wears trousers that they don't comment on it. And you should hear a few of those comments from these truthful people! Terrible! They don't give her a chance to explain anything. They simply denounce her.

'Honestly, it has got so that the other day she asked me to walk down the street with her, and I was afraid to. I was, really. And she is one of the nicest little girls I ever saw in my life. Well-behaved and sweet as can be. Oh, no, when I get my divorce I shan't live in a country town or in the country. New York for me, where people have some liberality, and a divorced woman is allowed to breathe occasionally. My two years in New Jersey are nearly up. Then, back to the tall towers of Broadway and Fifth avenue for me!

"Of course, I had to give it out when I first came that my husband was dead. I had an awful time getting the dates of his death mixed, and what he died of, and all about it, and why I quit wearing black so soon. I'm only 25, you know, and in the country a widow wears widow's weeds forever. It's a wonder they don't burn her on her husband's funeral pyre. Of course, it was all very distressing with him living just over the way in New York all the time, but it was the only way out of it in this terrible country society, where you have to be so truthful and natural it takes all the interest out of life."

AVAILABLE MIND.

A Great Gift, Meaning Much to Him Who Has It.

After charm, tact, and a sense of humor, the available mind is the greatest gift the fairy godmother ever bestows, says Cully Ryland, in the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Did you ever stop to consider what kind of mind you possess? Whatever it is, it is a precious possession. As the poet said of his hair. "We are glad it is there, we'll be awfully sad when it goes."

Some of us have minds that might be accurately described as rag-tag and bob-tail; that is, not much of anything. A few facts, uncertainly conned, a small bunch of other people's anecdotes, some newspaper clippings, and a few repeatable but not reputable stories. These are its contents. Not an original thought, not a fresh idea, the kind of mind that fills its vacancies with "they say." Truly a poor affair to be called a mind at all.

There are other minds that consist chiefly of columns of figures, numbers, and dates. In this mind facts are on file. The date of the Sepoy rebellion and the telephone number of the merest acquaintance are alike registered, and may be shown up when called for. The schedule time of trains, the scale of miles between two given points, tables of weights and the names and dates of accession of kings, queen and presidents are component parts of such a mind, which, after all, is not mind, but memory.

The historical mind is somewhat on this order. The mind that compiles facts and stores them into its neat little pigeon-holes where it can lay a finger on them at any moment.

Then there is the mind that catches the foam and flying fragments, and chaff of things, and this is a mind of intense interest to its owner, for it is the amusing mind.

It is chock full of nonsense rhymes, and odd little scraps of information, full of topical songs and the latest inside information concerning people and things.

It is a restless little butterfly sort of mind, which changes the subject as often as does the dictionary, and twinkles and shimmers and flutters about this and that topic, lights here for a second and in another is gone fluttering and soaring again.

There is the Puritanical mind, the mind that believes that one smutch of nature makes the whole world sin. It is straight-laced and narrow and old fogey, the kind of mind that makes its owner skedaddle when Pan, the impish, begins to skirl upon his pipes. The mind that dares not face the truth, but comforts itself with tying a bandage over its eyes and walking blind-fold through this sinful world.

There is the mind that idealizes and the mind which looks at all things from a practical and material standpoint.

There is the mind of him who carries "a load of learned lumber" in his head, and the inquisitive mind, whose hallmark is an interrogation point, and the mind that is always undergoing a process of being made up, because it is constantly becoming unmade.

And then, there is the available mind, the great gift, the mind that is always ready, that never flags nor lags but—to use an inelegant but most appropriate expression—is always Johnny on the spot.

It is never weighed in the balances and found wanting, but it weighs other things and other people and supplies their deficiencies with such quick readiness that they do not realize they have been found wanting.

It is as ready with its own quip and illustration as it is to help others with theirs by its appreciative silence. It is never at a loss for a reason, an epigram, or an anecdote that will sustain an argument or give the conversational ball a fresh push.

It is unhurried, unhampered by useless superfluities. It absorbs the context of conversation and goes straight and unerringly to the point. It is the mind that comprehends, that sees farther and deeper than its companion minds. It runs ahead and holds up the lamp of its intelligence that they may not halt or stumble. It is so subtle, so swift in its movements, so quickening in its power that other minds quicken in appreciation and account it to themselves for intelligence. It knows when to shine and when to suffer eclipse and the best thing about it is that it is a mind which—with a certain foundation—may belong to each one of us who observes and cultivates.

Cleaning Rugs.

Never send your valuable Oriental rugs to the ordinary professional cleaner, advises an exchange, as he will treat them to the same cheerful process accorded to a common carpet rug. This is to tack to the revolving beater, the arms of which whip it with a vigor that would make a finer rug fail to pieces. The whole point in caring for an Oriental rug is to preserve the back. The upper side you are not likely to hurt, but the woof and warp of the back can be easily damaged and should not be beaten even by hand. Snow is the best possible cleanser for fine rugs; and this snow as a sweeper also may be brought into the house and applied to large rugs and carpets with brightening effect. Of course, the doors and windows should be kept well open during the process.

The plan for the smaller Oriental rugs is to beat them gently on the right side and on grass or over a thick, ordinary door mat, or any springy surface. After this sweep with snow use a short brush of good size with which you can get down close to the rug. If it looks smoky wash it in a solution of soap bark in water. Wipe the surface off afterwards with a cloth wrung out of clean water. Large rugs should be handled in the same way under home supervision, and the professional cleaning fluids by which they are done on the floor should never be used.

Here's a New One.

Says the New York Evening Sun: The man who once heard a Boston girl mention that she was studying Keats, and asked her, "Ah, yes—what are Keats?" has been heard from again. He was calling on a musical New Yorker yesterday.

"We've just been to a concert to hear a 'Solemn Mass,'" she said.

"Who is he?" said the man.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

California celery, 12½ cents a bunch.
Florida oranges, 30 cents a dozen.
California oranges, 25 to 50 cents a dozen.
Cucumbers, 20 cents a dozen.
Red snappers, 15 cents a lb.
Veal chops, 15 cents a lb.

The Florida orange, the finicky housekeeper to the contrary notwithstanding, says the market man, is the choicest orange that the market offers now. Since the cultivation of the navel orange in California has been so extensive, the buyer of oranges usually say of Florida oranges, "Oh, they are the kind with seeds! No, we don't want them." As a consequence, the Florida oranges, which are the sweetest, have little sale, and all consumers of oranges buy the California varieties. That is the state of affairs in the Duluth market, but it is not so elsewhere, for a recent visitor here from Chicago was surprised that her hostess used California oranges exclusively, for the folks in Chicago buy Florida oranges, if they can afford them, paying 60 cents a dozen for them retail. That the Duluth supply of Florida oranges does not come through the Chicago markets accounts for the cheapness of these oranges here. At least, try them for your next order, anyway, until the really good California fruit arrives, which, according to the market man, is along about the middle of February.

BIGELOW DENOUNCED.

Shonts Says His Article is "Masterpiece of Mendacity."

Cincinnati, Jan. 22:—"A masterpiece of mendacity" was the term applied to Poultney Bigelow's attack on Panama canal management by Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the canal commission, in a speech before the Commercial Club of this city Saturday night. Mr. Shonts evidently did not think that Mr. Bigelow had been punished enough by his unpleasant experience before the senate committee on interoceanic canals this week, for he replied to the article in exceedingly strong language.

"One point will I mention as an illustration of his miraculous powers of observation," said Mr. Shonts. "He said that during a recent rain the volume of water was so great in the sewers of Panama that 'it backed the sewage up into cellars and ruined many houses.' There is not a cellar in Panama and never has been."

Mr. Shonts protested against the dissemination in the United States of "libels and slanders upon the efficiency and character of faithful workers on the isthmus, who, by reason of their absence from their own country, cannot defend themselves from such assaults." He added to this protest a declaration of his faith in the canal project, and prophesied that the moral and political effects following its completion would be no less remarkable and salutary than its material benefits.

Discussing the great problem of labor on the isthmus, Mr. Shonts said the government is about to enter upon an experiment with 1,000 laborers from Northern Spain. He declared that there was nothing connected with the construction of the canal of more importance in its bearing on results than the labor question. He assured his hearers that the preparatory work had advanced as far as it safely could until it was definitely known whether the canal was to be a sea-level or lock canal.

The Aftermath of the Great White Sale

Now for the remnants and soiled and mussed goods that were left in the wake of the busiest White Sale we've ever known. Our sales for the first two weeks were equal to the sales for the whole month of January a year ago—a fact that we attribute to the high character of the linens in the sale and the lowest prices on all kinds of white goods that were quoted anywhere in Duluth. The remnants of a sale like that won't go begging for a market.

REMNANTS OF COTTONS

Over 200 end lengths that have been tucked away during the White Sale—left from the scores of pieces of bleached and unbleached sheetings, pillow casing, muslins, cambrics, linen and crash toweling that were sold. We've marked them at less than cost to insure a thorough ridding.

REMNANTS OF TABLE LINENS

Remnants of all kinds of table damask and all lengths up to 3½ yards and in varied widths—bleached and half bleached linens. Owing to the enormous lot of linens that were purchased during the sale there are more remnants than we have ever had before.

SOILED AND ODD THINGS

All odd lots and rumpled or soiled bed spreads, sheets, pillow cases, towels (linen and Turkish), lunch cloths, tray cloths, sideboard and bureau scarfs, India linons, lawns, fancy waistings, dimities, cotton blankets, wool blankets, comforters, bed pillows, cushion pillows have greatly lowered prices.

UNMATCHED TABLE CLOTHS AND NAPKINS

Pattern cloths without napkins to match and cloths that have been slightly soiled in the White Sale display are now marked to 25 to 40 per cent less than the selling price. In odd half dozen napkins you'll be sure to find something better than at any other sale.

Registration Day

Tomorrow, Tuesday. Polls open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m.

DR. RICE'S SERMON.

Speaks From Text Relating Trial of Jobs' Faith.

Dr. Rich preached to a vast audience at the First Methodist church last evening from the texts: "Then when Satan answered the Lord, and said, 'Doth Job fear God for naught,' 'And the Lord said unto satan, behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand now., and 'But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face," 'and the Lord said unto Satan, behold he is in thy hand; but save his life." His theme was "God's bargain with the devil as to a righteous man." He spoke in part as follows:

"All that a man hath will he give for his life.' That's in the Bible, but the devil said it, and it becomes my privilege under the inspiration of this wonderful character Job, to declare that it is not true. God and the devil are here represented in a bargain over a truly good man. The real foundational element of goodness will enter into this transaction before we have done. There is much that passes for goodness in this world, which is not goodness. Many men are trying to keep their hands clean on the terms that 'honesty is the best policy.' Well that never sounded real honest to me. That's a very small basis from which to argue to so great a worth as honesty. If it were not good policy, then you have excuse for dropping it? Oh no! Honesty I cry, for its own sake. The devil in this case hopes to establish what he has always wanted to prove, and which a great many people really believe, that men are good only from policy. The case here resolves itself to this point, that even though he may prove the claim to be so in many cases, yet the life of one good man, good because it was right to be good, would destroy his claim. When you clean off all the rubbish off a man's man's character and get down to a basic point of real genuine goodness, that man will stand. And I want to boldly fling into this congregation the assertion, that if there is here a man, as many there are in the world, who now is sulking about the earth in a manner sour and dispirited, and having surrendered what you claim was once a good Christian life, all this on account of having lost something, or having failed to gain something of earthly substance, I want to say to you as strongly as I know how to put it, that your faith or your goodness surrendered under that plea was entirely of the wrong sort. You didn't have hold of the truth. You cannot follow Christ for the loaves. Your following of Him must be from a higher motive.

"The story we face this evening is one full of hope to an anxious world. Man can hold fast to eternal truth. This man Job comes to save the race from the stigma—'all men have their price.' They have not! Hear the word. This one great character thrills us, and sends us back to our tasks with a new grip on our swords and a new courage in our hearts. I would fling it into the teeth of every discouragement you have to meet. There are things which a good man hath which cannot be bought. Oh, the power of a really good man. Sarah Grand somewhere said: 'It takes more genius to be a man, than manhood to be a genius.' If we would but be good, good because it is right to be good, what a power we would be. For the fact is patent everywhere that goodness is the most perfect means through which God can show His truth to a hungry, world. Let us turn therefore now and note this man's marvelous character, both in losing his property and in the deeper test which struck deep at his own heart."

The series of special revival services will be continued during the entire week. Dr. Rice preaching every evening.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HUGHES.

Abbott Edes Smith of Minneapolis Pays Eloquent Tribute.

The funeral services of Mrs. Julia L. Hughes were held at the family residence yesterday, at 2 p. m. Abbot Edes Smith, C. S. B., of Minneapolis, officiated and spoke in part as follows:

"When a pure, unselfish, noble and Christ-like life passes from the earth, it is well for those who remain to pause for a moment in the midst of the heat and burden of the day, with its joys and its sorrows, in order that, having learned aright the lesson of such a life, they may again take up the cross and press on with renewed courage in the straight and narrow way, made better men and women because such a one has dwelt among them a living inspiration to a omre devoted self-abnegation and to a more faithful helpfulness.

"'By their fruit ye shall know them,' said our Master; and for twelve years Mrs. Julia L. Hughes has stood in the community, modest and unassuming, to be sure, but none the less a tower of unostentations and far-reaching beneficence to hundreds of men, women and children who have been in the past and who are today standing up and calling her blessed. What higher praise can be given to her than the simple truth that like our Saviour she 'Went about doing good.' Words fail me adequately to express the purity, nobility and strength of her character. Absolute truthfulness was so essentially a part of her nature that a lie could not stand in her presence. Such was the purity of her character that everything unworthy turned against her and turned from her, unable to bear the exposure which the true, the beautiful, and the good always bring to their opposites. 'There is nothing covered which shall not be revealed, nor hid which shall not be known.' 'The light reveals all things,' making the 'Darkness light and the crooked places straight.'

"As a friend, her fidelity was unswerving, and all that goes to make the highest and best type of humanity was here. Obedience to conscience was a necessity of her very being, and to recognize a duty was for her to perform it at whatever cost. Of such Christ-like qualities martyrs are ever made. Persecution could never shake her unflinching loyalty to that which she knew to be the truth, and in times of persecution she stood, if possible, even more steadfastly. To all this strength and nobility of character she added the gentler virtues and in the highest degree exemplified the Psalmist's words, 'Thy gentleness hath made me great.' Years ago she became a Christian Scientist and has ever since been unfalteringly loyal to our leader, Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, whom she tenderly loved, deeply reverenced, and fully recognized as the only person now living who can speak with authority on the subject of Christian Science.

"As a Christian Science practitioner she naturally and invariably conformed her methods to the letter and to the spirit of Mrs. Eddy's words: 'If we would open their prison doors for the sick, we must first learn to bind up the broken-hearted. If we would heal by the Spirit, we must not hide the talent of spiritual healing under the napkin of its form, nor bury the morale of Christian Science in the grave-clothes of its letter. The tender word and sweet forbearance with an invalid's hastiness, pitiful patience with his fears and the removal thereof are far better than hecatombs of gushing theories, stereotyped speeches, and straight-laced methods, which are but so many parodies on legitimate Christian Science aflame with the Master's confession.'

"It was my great privilege to be her teacher and, speaking with a very full knowledge of her motives and of the surrounding circumstances of each case, I rejoice as her teacher and as her confidential friend thus publicly, unreservedly, and with my whole heart to express my cordial approval of her as my student in every detail of her life, and at the same time to state my confidence, yes, my certainty, that even unto her last breath she never for one moment wavered in her absolute reliance on God alone. She sacrificed self, she never sacrificed principle. As the Apostle Paul said of himself, 'She has fought the good fight, she has kept the faith.' Nobly has she won the commendation of our Saviour's words, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful.'"

MISSING JEWELRY FOUND IN THE RUINS.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—Part of the valuable jewelry which was supposed to have been stolen from the body of Mrs. S. Spiesberg, one of the victims of the West hotel fire, has been found in the ruins. When Louis Endrath of Chicago, father of Mrs. Sulesberg, reported that his daughter's jewelry was missing, search of the ruins at once began, being conducted by Mrs. Charles H. Wood, the proprietor of the hotel. Yesterday Mrs. Wood recovered a pearl necklace and a diamond studded watch. A ring said to be valued at $1,200 is still missing but Mrs. Wood is confident that it will be found. Jewelry belonging to other victims has also been recovered since the search began.

FORTUNE FOR CONVICT.

Prisoner Released to Go After Legacy of $25,000.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 22.—Harry M. Stevens was released last week from the Chester penitentiary that he might go to London, Eng., to collect a fortune estimated at $25,000. He was arrested in Piko county on a charge of forgery, and after lying in jail, was given an indeterminate sentence to the penitentiary a year ago. He has been given his freedom now that he may claim the estate left to him by the death of his father. The lawyers who defended Stevens never have been paid for their services, and they advanced their client enough money to reach England, securing a promise that they will be paid as soon as the legacy is handed over. He has resided in this country for several years and is said to have squandered $7,000 in a short time.

Alumni Sleigh Ride.

The Irving School Alumni association gave a sleigh ride Friday evening to celebrate the success of the minstrel show which they presented last month. There were about seventy who attended, occupying two large sleighs. They went to the home of Prof. S. A. Foster, on Forty-sixth avenue east and London road, where Mr. and Mrs. Foster served refreshments after which a program was rendered. Miss Maude Gilbert and Ray W. Abbott each gave a piano solo and then the crowd joined in on a number of popular songs. Miss Effie Brotherton gave an excellent reading; Ollie Dignus sang "The Story of the Chimes" and several other selections, and Master Cornelius Vanderbilt Lauermann sang and was accompanied by Albert Lauerman, who played the banjo. The happy crowd arrived at an early hour of the morning satisfied that a few hours had been well spent.

OUR ANNUAL RUMMAGE SALE

WILL GET ITS FINISHING STROKE NEXT WEDNESDAY NIGHT

LISTEN: Just ten days ago we started our annual rummage sale, which is our annual housecleaning, It began in our basement and progressed until we finished in our fourth floor Saturday night. No store anywhere ever enacted a more radical, systematic process of cleaning out all soiled, damaged, mussed or unsalable goods. Those of you who attended the sales will vouch for the values given and for the crowds responding to our announcement.

Such a cleansing process, whether it is in the bath tub, in your home or in your store, results in leaving the patient, home or store in a clean, sweet and healthy condition. That's what we are aming to get at. Two days to each floor did not wipe out everything we wished, for this reason we are going to give you

Two days more of Rummage Bargains--Tuesday and Wednesday

And they will be hummers because every floor and every department will contribute its odds and ends. Economical housekeepers and wily buyers will be here. PRICES WILL BE CUT STILL DEEPER—in many instances the rummage sale prices of last week will be cut in two.

This is the last rummage sale we will treat you to for twelve months. Therefore, if prices cut any figure with you, there will be two unusually busy days at the Glass Block Store, right off. Enough said.

Basement Rummage Bargains

The two days' sale cleaned out many lots entirely, but left many good things. These we positively refuse to carry into inventory and here's how we practically give them away during the next two days:

The silk department has no rummage for the stock was beautifully cleaned up during the two days of rummage selling last week. But the silk buyer has a better thing for you, and one that ought to bring an enthusiastic crowd. It's twenty-five pieces of fine—which we had the good fortune to pick up for less than its regular value. This black silk will compare favorably with any you can possibly buy for $1.25. It comes to us in the nick of time for everybody's asking for new black silks. The entire purchase will be offered TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY at a price, which, considering the newness and value of the silk, will rival the best rummage bargains in the house. It may not hold out for two days, so be one of the early ones.

$1.25 black Peau de Soie for 75c a yard

GOD SPEED THE DAY.

Jacob A. Riis, a noted publicist and a close friend of President Roosevelt, in an interview in Ohio says that if duty demanded that the president continue his part in the war between special privileges and the people, he would do it, even to the extent of again becoming a candidate for the presidency, against his own wishes. Further, and more important still, since the above is probably premature, Mr. Riis predicted that the people would win in their war against the encroachments of special privileges, even though the fight had to continue for three, five or even ten years. The fight will wipe out partisanship, he said, and the first indications of this will be seen at the congressional elections to be held this year.

In other words, as The Herald has heretofore shown, partisanship has been the stone wall which has been erected between the people and their rights; erected by their own consent because of their blindness to its ultimate object. Now that they are beginning to see what it means, and to realize that they have been duped by traitorous appeals to party loyalty which meant nothing to them but much to the vested interests that have profited thereby, they are in a mood to tear down this stone wall, and by exercising their elective franchises intelligently, in their own interests unbiased and unclouded by political considerations, to set things to rights in their own house.

There is no lack of evidence of this trend of public opinion. In the press of the country it is particularly noticeable. The strictly party organ, which was the rule but a few years ago, is almost extinct today, and though many newspapers are still Republican or Democratic in name, in practice they are independent, and seeking the best interests of the people rather than serving the political bosses who have thrived upon partisanship.

Who cares today whether a LaFollette, a Folk, a Jerome, a Roosevelt, a Hanly or a Johnson is a Democrat or a Republican, so long as he shows himself to be a servant of the people rather than of a party? Every one of these men has been elected by the votes of citizens who have thrown blind partisanship to the winds and cast their ballots for the candidates best suited to serve the people. Who cares, on the other hand, whether a candidate who is known to be subservient to political bosses and special privileges is a Democrat or a Republican? He is assured of defeat, no matter what his politics may be or how strongly entrenched the party he belongs to may be.

Governor Johnson, in a recent gathering, expressed the idea clearly when he said that as between the Democrats and Republicans in Maryland, where the Democratic organization is corrupt, his sympathies were with the Republicans, and that as between the Republicans and Democrats of Pennsylvania, where the Republican organization has grown corrupt, his heart is with the Democrats.

This is the spirit that will win the battle for the people and against the specially privileged who have fattened on the kind of partisanship that the bosses and party leaders have used to blind the voters to their own interests. The sooner all votes are cast with the single idea of electing the best men, the men that will serve the people instead of the corrupt party organization and the overgrown interests it protects and serves, the sooner will victory perch upon the banners of the people, and the 'square deal" reign supreme.

HIS REVENGE.

Growing out of a sordid elopement case of fourteen years ago there is a story that has set Iowa to speculating.

In 1892 the wife of D. E. Douglass, a farmer living six miles out of Sioux City, deserted him, and went West to one G. S. Porter in California. The farmer, philosophically enough, let them go and paid no further heed to them, evidently deeming himself the luckier of the two men.

A few months ago, however, he heard that his wife had died, still as the companion of Porter. In the meantime Porter had been industrious and frugal, and had cautiously placed his savings in his reputed wife's name.

On the advice of a sharp local lawyer, Douglass laid claim to the property, the result of the industry and management of the man that had stolen his wife. He claimed the property as the only heir of his wife. She was never divorced from Douglass, and therefore never married to Porter. The property was in her name. There was but one thing to do, and this the Los Angeles court recently did. It awarded Porter's property to Douglass.

Thus Douglass had his revenge, after waiting for it many years. Perhaps few people would care to get property in that way, but on the other hand many people do not seem to care so much how they get it so long as they do get it.

OUT OF TUNE.

The Herald trusts that there is nothing in the stories from Washington to the effect that the consular reform measure is in danger from Democratic opposition, unless that opposition is based on something better than a regard for the preservation of patronage against the event of a Democratic victory later on. The report is that some of the Democratic leaders do not want to have the merit system applied because most of the members of the service now are Republicans, and in the case of a Democratic victory the party would have no way of getting its men into consular places if the reform measure passes.

This would probably be the result, but that is not a good reason for opposing the change. If the Democrats defeat it now, and come into power later, the Republicans will then have the same excuse for opposing reform, and the result will be that the consular service will continue to be the same shamefully inadequate and discreditable thing it is now.

The probability is, however, that the objection that reform would eliminate a large field of patronage is appealing to Republican politicians not less than to Democratic workers, and that a good deal of Republican opposition is masquerading behind the Democratic dissatisfaction. Politicians of the old style accept reforms that curtail patronage with reluctance, no matter whether they are Republicans or Democrats. The old style of politics which embraced within its disreputable fold the practices of bossism, looting of public treasuries, corruption of public servants and general demoralization of the public service, was based upon patronage, and to eliminate patronage is to take away its foundation.

Naturally there is objection from those who cling to the old fashion in politics, heedless of the fact that they are hopelessly out of tune with modern tendencies.

REGISTER TOMORROW.

Every citizen of Duluth should set at the head of his list of important duties tomorrow a reminder to go to his polling place and register, that he may be able to vote in the coming municipal election.

Much has been said about "directors that fail to direct," whose carelessness has led to the wrecking of great financial and business enterprises.

The city of Duluth is a great enterprise, in which every voter is a stockholder and a director. Its success depends upon the interest that these directors take in its affairs. If they fail to direct, the city is likely to fall, as other cities and other business enterprises have fallen under similar circumstances, into the hands of those who will plunder it for their personal profit, regardless of the needs and rights of the citizens. And if this comes about through the carelessness and neglect of the citizens, theirs is the blame.

You, Mr. Voter, are a director in this city of great promise. Your power is as great as that of any other director. Your responsibility, therefore, is also as great. As the units make up the whole, so do the citizens make up the community. Upon the character of the citizens and the degree of attention they give to public affairs depend the conduct of public business, the success of internal improvements, and the size of the taxes. If things go wrong, and you have failed to do your part in the annual elections, it is our fault; yours personally, even though the fault may be shared by others.

Duluth should cast a vote of 12,000 or 15,000. Local politicians are figuring on a vote of 6,000. If only a little more than a third of the citizens take a part in the election of a mayor and council, it will be little less than shameful. Let The Herald suggest to you, Mr. Voter, with all due humility, that you should fool the politicians by getting out tomorrow to register, and by seeing that your friends and employes and associates all get out to register, and that together you roll up a vote that will show that the people of Duluth are awake to the need of a greater popular interest in public affairs.

Don't fail to register tomorrow.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"College men are getting quite as prominent in theatricals as they are in other lines of work for which no course is provided at the universities where they are given the finishing touches of education," said Harry Daniels, business manager of "The College Widow," which comes to the Lyceum week after next. Mr. Daniels is registered at the Spalding.

"Take our company, for instance," he continued. "We have five college men in the cast. There's Frederick Truesdell, who plays the part of Billy Bolton. He's Yale '95, and was a strong football player before he left college. Nate Norcross, who is the Dick Larrabee football coach of the piece, is another. He was graduated from Harvard in 1900.

"Then there is Lawrence Wheat, who has made such a hit as Stubby Talmadge, the boy who owes for his board. He was graduated from Washington & Jefferson in 1897. Fred Wilson, one of the football squad, and one of the best singers in the quartette, wears an Iowa '99 pin, while Robert Mackay spent two years at Harvard, returning from college when he was so seriously injured in football that he was compelled to use crutches for more than a year.

"These fellows, with the remainder of the company, will be seen in Duluth before their appearance in fifteen of the large cities of the country, including Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Buffalo and other big places between here and New York. We are just returning from a tour of the Pacific coast states, where we did a phenomenal business, particularly in San Francisco."

"I never could see much fun skating in a rink," said L. O. Hill of St. Paul at the Lenox. "It's good exercise, I suppose, going round and round and never getting anywhere, if you have skates on your feet while you are doing it, but I fail to see where the fun comes in, unless, of course, you have some charming young lady who holds a warm place in your regard. Circumstances alter cases, you know.

"I used to be quite a skater a few years ago, and was on the ice a good deal, but not on rink ice. I was never skating in a rink more than four or five times in my life. The sport has no attraction for me in such a place. I like to be where I know I skate miles if I want to, without covering my back tracks. I like to get on a river of good ice and skate till I get tired."

"One hears a good deal said nowadays of the power of public opinion," said L. A. Gray of Sault Ste Marie, Mich., at the St. Louis. "I heard Governor Hanly of Indiana, lecture in Duluth the other night, and I noticed that he used the expression several times. It is the same with other speakers who talk along similar lines. They say all that is necessary to bring about a reform or any desired legislation is to turn the power of public opinion in the right direction, and whatever is wanted to happen will happen.

"When one comes to figure it out, he finds there is a lot of truth to such claims. The politician or anyone else cannot very well stand against the power, if it is all set against him. I believe the governor is about right in saying that the people must begin with themselves to stop grafting and all forms of dishonesty in politics. They have got to show evidence of what they want before they will be able to get it.

"It looks very much to me as if the politician of the future, for a few years, at least, must be of the Jerome, Folk, LaFollette and Hanly type before they will be able to do very much. Whether they are sincere in what they say or do or not, it is up to them to lay claim to be a radical reformer, and to be against bossism and all forms of graft and dishonesty, before the people will even lend them an ear. The shrewd politician is beginning to realize this, too, and there are going to be a lot of quack political doctors on the market for awhile. Those who have adopted the Folk, Jerome and Hanly tactics have met with such success that they are sure to have a lot of imitators. Imitations are seldom as good as the originals, but if public opinion will only keep set in the right direction they will have to be good or get out. If public opinion is the greatest power in the country, the press must come second, for the press is the molder of that power."

"If I were in business for myself I would rather have some small manufacturing plant, turning out something that would sell, than anything else," said F. R. Van Leuven of La Crosse, Wis., at the St. Louis. "I leave the big factory to the other fellow. There is too much worry and bother attached to it, with a lot of room for big losses if one loses at all.

"But with a small institution a man knows where he is at all the time, and doesn't have to depend upon a score of other fellows to look after parts of his business for him, and wonder all the while whether or not they are doing what they are paid for doing. I know fellows that have small plants who are doing finely, and I envy them rather than the man at the head of an institution so large that he doesn't hardly know where he is at half the time."

Life's Spring and Autumn.

In the springtime of youth, oh, the plans that we make
Through the hours that are measured in song;
And winding and far are the paths that we take.
For life is so long—so long!

In the autumn of age how we anxiously haste
Our tasks without rest or relief,
And never a moment then dare we to waste,
For life is so brief—so brief!

Political Walking Delegates.

Washington Post: If the anti-pass order is not abrogated there will be a lot of walking delegates in future political conventions.

THE WEATHER

Following an extraordinary warm spell, during which temperatures almost summer like, were reported from various eastern points, came a touch of real winter, beginning yesterday morning in Duluth and continuing in the night to the climax of 12 degrees below zero. The warmest yesterday was 2½ degrees, but the weather man expects the cold snap to hold out, and to increase in intensity until a depth of 20 degrees below zero comes tonight. Low temperatures of 20 to 30 degrees below zero were common last night in the Northwest. Some phenomenally high temperatures were recorded over the country Sunday, such as Cincinnati 74, Buffalo 68, Pittsburg 74, Milwaukee 50, Chicago 58, etc. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The eastern storm is central over Tennessee. It is attended by abnormally high temperatures east of the Mississippi river, and has caused snow in the lake region and light to heavy rains over the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys and southeastern states. It is followed by a cold wave and high pressures which cover the eastern slopes and extend into the upper Mississippi valley, with zero weather throughout the entire Northwest. Another storm has appeared off the Oregon coast and is causing rain or snow in Oregon, Washington and Nevada. These conditions favor fair weather in this section tonight and Tuesday with temperatures continuing below zero."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Jan. 22.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Colder tonight with minimum temperature close to 20 degs. below zero. Variable winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Forecast until 7 p. m. Tuesday: Wisconsin—Threatening and colder tonight with snow and cold wave in extreme east portion. Tuesday partly cloudy with colder in east portion.

Minnesota and North Dakota—Fair tonight and Tuesday. Continued cold.

South Dakota—Fair tonight and Tuesday. Not quite so cold in north and central portions.

The Wave of Liberalism.

New York World: Liberals all the world over should rejoice in the Tory downfall and hope that it heralds a like revolution of sentiment in other lands. There are signs that this is the case.

Political thought moves in world-wide waves, disregarding national boundaries. From the American to the French, the Greek, the Spanish-American revolutions, the keynote of political freedom was that for which men died. Overlapping it and because of it came a great humanitarian wave of thought that built hospitals, opened schools, rescued the deaf and dumb, reformed the conditions of labor and culminated for us in the freeing of the slaves. Soon followed an era of imperialism, beginning admirably with the unity of Italy and the making of the German empire, but going on to the partition of Southern Africa, the Boer war, the taking of the Philippines and the Russian aggressions in China so recently punished. On the whole it was a bad, reactionary spirit, and Kipling was its poet.

May we not hope that a better era is now dawning, and that in England the wave of unemployment, in Germany wider self-government for the people, in Russia the downfall of absolutism and in America the reformation of high finance and the cleansing of home politics may seem objects better worth while than dreaming dreams of "glory" won by senseless wars abroad and exhausting the very life of the nations with military preparations?

That Senate of Ours.

Collier's Weekly: Senator Bailey's reason for deeming himself unsuited to leadership of his party in the senate is at least suggestive. "I have not acquired," he says, "the art of being agreeable under all circumstances, and I will never place myself in a position where a failure to do so is certain to result in constant personal annoyance and might result in serious embarrassment to my party." The senate has a special social atmosphere, where "courtesy" is followed far beyond the line of moral soundness, and, if no other good results from the advent of Mr. La Follette, it is to be hoped he will at least do something to destroy this private-club-like harmony of intercourse. Elsewhere, certainly, in American politics, tact of the grossor sort described by Senator Bailey has ceased to be a necessity. Who has it now? Not Cleveland, Bryan, Folk, Roosevelt or La Follette. Not even Taft, and certainly not Root. Not Deneen, Jerome or Douglas; not any of the men who have led the movement of these recent years. The breed of universally agreeing and conceding gentlemen, in America at large, is almost extinct. It cannot exist much longer in the senate. When courtesy means human sympathy, when tact is another word for kindness, these qualities adorn our life; but when they are a cloak for unjust concession and moral indifference, they are but weapons in the general arsenal of selfishness and hypocrisy.

Empty.

Today no restless happy feet
Go patter, patter, patter;
Today no chubby baby hands
Send everything a-scatter;
Today the birds sing glad outside,
Rose petals scatter far and wide,
Perfumes drift through the door and bide;
but, oh, what does it matter?

No lilting, happy baby laugh
Awakes my heart to laughter;
I go about my work, but hear
No wee feet patter after;
Though all the world is bright with dew
And blossoms that a baby knew,
My life, my soul, is full of rue!
Life's door has shut on laughter!

I kneel beside a little bed
Wherein no babe lies sleeping!
The prayer he lisped I soft repeat
In voice grown wan from weeping:
"If me should die before me wake
Me pways thee, Lord, my's soul to take—"
Oh, baby, mamma's heart will break!
God have you in his keeping.

A Warm Winter.

New York Tribune: While there is doubt whether winter is at last in earnest, it is not amiss to recall testimony as to an earlier, warmer winter. According to a Massachusetts man, on Jan. 6, about 30 years ago, the thermometer reached 91 above at Plymouth. Bluebirds sang and butterflies flitted about. Grass was green and a cherry tree was in bloom. Boys went in bathing in Little Pond. On Jan. 12 it was recorded that Capt. Parker Hall had "put in most of the year's planting." On Feb. 7 Elijah Sherman fed his hens on grasshoppers. March 22 Mayflowers were plentiful.

A Record of Note.

Philadelphia Record: In the estimation of necrologists, last year was remarkable for the demise of many eminent politicians without the formality of burial.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken from the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1886.

Auditor John M. Millar of Cook county is visiting St. Paul. He made the journey from Grand Marais to Beaver Bay on snowshoes, sleeeping in the open air. From Beaver Bay to Two Harbors he came by rowboat, and thence by stage to Duluth.

A meeting is called for this evening at the old board of trade rooms, in the Metropolitan block to organize a snowshoe and toboggan club. It is proposed that the club go in a body to the St. Paul carnival.

The Lake Superior Roller Mill company has been dissolved by C. Stuebe and William Brust retiring. J. J. Atkinson and H. Engel will continue the business, under the style of Atkinson & Engel. The mill is now running four days a week.

W. L. Reed has returned from his visit to Toronto and the East.

Will Sargent has gone to his lumber camp on the north shore.

A new lodge of Knights of Pythias, named the Proctor Knott lodge, will be instituted this evening. There are twenty-five candidates, and they will be initiated by Frank S. McDonald, grand chancellor for Minnesota. Agate lodge will be represented by W. A. Hicken, C. E. Budden and McNamara, and Nemadji lodge by A. G. Brown and Champ Green and W. J. Whipple.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

Western Land association to David A. Duncan, lots 305, 307, 309, 311 and 313, block 54, Second division, $7,000.

J. D. Jones to Louder, Osborn & Blemer, lots 1, 2, 3 and 4, block 79, and lots 5, 6, 13, 14, 15 and 16, block 83, Portland division, $16.

Edmund Sherwood to Sarah V. Starkey, part lots 94 and 96, block 33, Third division, $4.50.

Thomas McMerkin to Luther Mendenhall, west half of lot 32, block 51, Third division, $3.75.

Capt. Holt left this morning for his home in Detroit, where he will spend the winter.

Daniel Van Baalen of Van Baalen Bros., is in the East buying a spring stock of boots and shoes.

Attorney Parsons, familiarly known as "Judge," was called to Northern Pacific Junction to try a replevin suit.

J. A. Willard of Mankato has purchased $15,000 worth of Duluth real estate as an investment.

Navigation will be open all winter from present indications.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Le Sueur News: We move that every standpatter in house and senate be requested to resign. Of course they will not.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Just think of being the richest man in the world and then afraid to tell the truth!

Long Prairie Leader: The matter of drainage for state and government lands in Northern Minnesota is a very important one, and one that deserves the attention of Congress, but we doubt the wisdom of maintaining a lobby in Washington to work for the drainage bill. The idea of a "lobby" is distasteful to the average American citizen, and the campaign for government drainage ought not to mimic the methods that have brought most all special legislation into disrepute.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: If any Minnesota congressmen line up with the trusts against President Roosevelt, they had better be looking for another job.

Aitkin Age: It is such men as H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil crowd, who defy the courts and the public, that breed anarchy. In fact, he is one kind of an anarchist himself.

Belle Plaine Herald: Minnesota swamp lands should be reclaimed as well as so-called arid lands of Western states. If congress votes money to reclaim the Western deserts, it is no more than fair that the thousands of acres of swamp lands in this state should be given the same chance to become valuable.

Aitkin Age: A. L. Cole is one of the most talked of men for the Republican candidate for governor at this time, and if there is a better one for Northern Minnesota and the progressive element of the party in general, we don't know his name just now.

Albert Lea Standard: The Windom Reporter, whose editor, Eb. Huntington, is one of the most staunch Republicans, and whose uprightness and ability is recognized throughout the state, freely and with forceful fact and argument declares himself in favor of the re-election of Governor Johnson, and to his honor be it said, he seems to enjoy and to be proud in doing it. Mr. Huntington says, "Put us right in the Johnson column if you want to. The Reporter will not whimper about it. The Republicans have not a better man for governor."

Albert Lea Times-Enterprise: Messrs. Lord, Jacobson, Block and all the others who have been mentioned as aspirants for gubernatorial honors are excellent men, but before any one succeeds in securing the nomination he must climb up on Senator Lord's platform.

Fergus Falls Journal: Sauk Center gives the people of the state a chance to make a choice. It offers them the homeliest man in the state in the person of Frank M. Eddy for governor, and the handsomest man in the state in the person of Cassius M. Sprague for lieutenant governor. You take your choice.

Little Falls Herald: The president appears to have congress on his hands, feet and face.

Crookston Times: Congressman Steenerson's bill appears to be a good beginning for national aid in drainage. There is little probability that the bill, or any drainage measure, will pass either house of congress at this session. The idea of federal aid for drainage is too new to be immediately accepted. Besides, nine-tenths of the members of congress are indifferent to drainage.

Who Has Surrendered?

Washington Post: One big issue is a fugitive from politics, or it has suffered the ostracism of the politicians. We allude to Secretary Taft's free trade manifesto of last summer, that when he entered the market to buy certain ships, supplies and materials necessary to the work of constructing the Panama canal, he did not intend to confine himself to the home market, and would buy abroad if he could buy cheaper in foreign markets. We all recollect that that stuff that sometimes breaks loose in Georgia burst forth from under the feet of every standpatter. There was a quarter section of it until John Dalzell, and as much again broke loose under Speaker Cannon.

What has become of this issue? Is it asleep, or has it gone on a journey? Peradventure it has made a trade, and cannot wait on congress. The president, who O. K.'d the free trade declaration of his secretary of war last summer, mentioned "materials and supplies" for the canal in his message, but he spoke not a word about markets in that connection.

Who has surrendered? Or, to employ the elegant and expressive tariff nomenclature of congressional eloquence, who was "four flushing?" Has the king of France repeated his grandstand play of marching up the hill with 40,000 men and then marching down again? We have had enough of that sort of thing of late years. Either the administration meant business or it was bluffing. It was willing to wound. Did it fear to deal the blow? There ought to be some explanation. Did the secretary purchase exclusively in the home market? Quite likely, for that Georgia stuff has given no trouble since last summer to the G. O. P., so far as canal materials and supplies are concerned. But the country is entitled to an explanation. This issue was the bantling of the secretary of war. What has he done with it? Is it an abandoned child, repudiated as a bastard and sent to Dotheboys hall, and put under the tutelage of Schoolmaster Squeers? We shouldn't wonder.

Perjury Like a Gentleman.

Philadelphia Ledger: A Virginia man, shot in a general quarrel, agreed to swear that the shooting was accidental if the shooter would support his victim's family. He swore, and died, and the shooter was acquitted. As an example of committing perjury like a gentleman this is unique.

It Is Ever Thus.

New York Mail: Those who suffer most from the "curse of riches" are those upon whom the curse hasn't been visited.

And It's Going Some More.

Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin: An increase of 36 per cent in Lake Superior's commerce of 1905 over that of 1904 is a record that the merchant marine of the Great Lakes has been "going some."

FLASHES OF FUN.

Philadelphia Press: "Why are you here, my poor man?" asked the prison visitor.

"Through no fault of mine, sir," replied the convict.

"No?"

"No, I ain't had a single chance to break out."

Indianapolis News: "Better keep away from that old hayseed," cautioned the first bunco man.

"What for?" demanded the other.

"Because I did the fellow myself only a few months ago."

"Well, what man has done man can do.'"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "She has no sense of humor. She never laughs at any of my jokes."

"But don't you think you are partly to blame?"

"How so?"

"In not labeling them."

Judge: Customer—Why don't you tack up this "Do it now" motto? It's been lying around on the counter for a month.

Grocer—Wa-al, I'm a-goin' ter tack it up some time—if I ever get to it.

Cleveland Leader: Missionary—My friend, do you ever think about your future state?

Oklahoma Ike—Say, pard, don't you read the papers? We ain't been thinkin' of anything else fer the last two years.

Chicago Tribune: "We enjoyed your piano recital last evening immensely, professor."

"I am glad you did, madam. I was unable to be present myself, on account of an accident, but a brother artist kindly filled the engagement for me."

A Fellow Feeling.

Philadelphia Ledger: A large touring automobile containing a man and his wife in a narrow road met a hay wagon fully loaded. The woman declared that the farmer must back out, but her husband contended that she was unreasonable.

"But you want I back the automobile so far," she said, "and I don't intend to move for anybody. He should have seen us."

The husband pointed out that this was impossible, owing to an abrupt turn in the road.

"I don't care," she insisted, "I won't move if we have to stay here all night."

The man in the automobile was starting to argue the matter when the farmer, who had been sitting quietly on the hay, interrupted:

"Never mind, sir," he exclaimed, "I'll try to back out. I've one just like her at home."

The Waterfall.

Elf and sprite and pix and fairy,
Haunt the torrent's flashing spray;
I can hear their twinkling laughter
As it tumbles on its way.

See from yonder blackened bowlder,
Cupped and creviced, peers a gnome;
Nods and beckons me to follow
To his pale, enchanted home.

Where the sapphires and the rubies,
Hanging in the vaulted night,
Glance and glimmer, dance and shimmer,
With a dim, fantastic light.

Hark! the rasp and clash of voices
Where the waters rush and roar!
Hark! the elfin pipers playing
Where they plash upon the shore.

Tiny hands amid the ripples
Beat applause and faintly gleam;
Light, mysterious, mocking fingers
Whirl the leaf upon the stream.

Elf and sprite and pix and fairy
Haunt the torrents flshing spray;
Ever sounds their tinkling laughter
As it tumbles on its way.

GETS ONLY ONE FALL

Carl Mattson Fails to Throw Martin Johnson a Second Time.

Duluth Fireman Again Wins the Purse in Wrestling Match.

Martin Johnson, the Duluth fireman wrestler, was declared the winner in the wrestling bout at the Metropolitan theater Saturday evening, against Carl Mattson, the Minneapolis youth who undertook to throw him twice within an hour.

Mattson secured one fall in 40½ minutes, but he was unable to secure the second one in the 19½ minutes remaining, and the purse of $50 was awarded to Johnson.

In the three meetings between the two men at the Metropolitan, they have wrestled a total of 1 hour 40 minutes, and in that time Mattson has secured but one fall.

The bout Saturday evening was as close and as interesting a wrestling match as has ever been seen in Duluth. Johnson was on the defensive during the greater part of the time, owing to the conditions under which the match was held, but at times he showed a disposition to take the offensive, and on one or two occasions gave Mattson something to think about.

Mattson secured the first fall on a half Nelson hold. With the assistance of a leg hold he succeeded in throwing Johnson over his back by means of the half Nelson, and lying underneath Johnson's body, he gradually worked his way from under and was forcing Johnson's shoulders to the floor, when the fireman gave up. He was exhausted from the long struggle, and the strained position in which he was lying was a killing one, especially when his recently broken rib is taken into consideration. He was completely exhausted when time was called and fainted for a moment in his chair, but quickly revived when water was dashed in his face.

The ten minutes' rest was all he required, and when Referee Tom Madden called time for the second fall, Johnson appeared to be fully as fresh as his opponent. He was more aggressive in the second round, and appeared to be trying for a fall himself.

The work during the last ten minutes grew fast and furious, as Mattson feverishly tried hold after hold, to down his man, but Johnson finished strong, and he was on the offensive when time was called, after an hour of the closest wrestling seen in Duluth in many years.

Immediately after the fight, it was announced that the two men would meet in a straight match for two falls out of three, for a purse of $100 and a side bet of from $100 to $300. The championship of the Northwest also goes with the purse. The date will be announced later.

The two men are probably the most equally matched wrestlers that have been seen in Duluth. There is not more than four or five pounds difference in their weight, and they are apparently equal in strength and endurance. Considerable rivalry has developed during the three matches held in the last month, and some bad blood was shown Saturday night, in the manner in which they went after each other's "wind" when opportunity offered.

NO RECORDS ARE BROKEN

Mild Weather and Sticky Snow Retarded the Ski Runners.

First Tournament of Duluth Club Witnessed by Large Crowd.

Mild weather and soft, sticky snow kept the ski jumpers from making any good records in the tournament held Saturday afternoon at Woodland, but considering the conditions, the jumps were excellent.

Fully 2,000 people witnessed the sport, and if the day had been clear and bright it is likely that the number would have been double that figure, as a great number of people thought the tournament would be called off or postponed.

The snow was packed hard, and the men lit with such force that it was very difficult to keep their position. Aasmund Melgaard of Starbuck, Minn., was the only man who succeeded in making his four jumps without a fall, and he was also successful in an extra jump made to break a tie with Knut Helland of Cameron, Wis. Melgaard won this latter by 69 feet to 65.

Melgaard is hampered in his jumping by his lack of weight, but he has beautiful control of his body and skis while in the air, and he was repeatedly cheered by the spectators Saturday for his clever work.

Ole Westgaard, who won first place at the national tournament in Ishpeming last year for distance and style, was disqualified for failing to keep his feet, but he made the greatest distance of any of the jumpers Saturday, covering 90 and 91 feet in two of his jumps.

Melgaard was awarded the first prize for general good work. While his jumps were shorter than many of the others, the manner in which he kept his feet and his general clever work entitled him to the highest award.

Melgaard was also awarded the prize for the longest standing jump. He was tied with Knut Helland of Cameron for this prize, and in the extra jump he covered 69 feet to Helland's 65. Helland was awarded a special prize for the good showing he made.

The youngest rider on the hill was T. Holter of Ishpeming, who won the second prize for general good work. He jumped 78, 80, 86 and 77 feet, standing on the second jump.

Capt. John Mangseth of the Duluth club won third place, jumping 73, 72, 64 and 88 feet, standing on the second jump.

The fourth prize went to Ole Mangseth of Red Wing, and the fifth to Carl Ek of Red Wing.

Olaf Larson of Duluth was sixth and Gustav Bye of St. Paul seventh. Larson made one of the two longest standing jumps of the day, the other being made by Holter of Ishpeming. Both jumpers cleared 80 feet, but as they were not made in the special event for this prize, they did not count against the 76-foot jump made by Melgaard.

The following table shows the distances made by the jumpers:

SOUGHT TO REACH POLE

Dr. Otto Nordenskjold Gives Interesting Lecture at High School.

Tells of Hardships and Discoveries in Frozen Regions.

Dr. Otto Nordenskjold, the noted Swedish explorer who has figured so prominently in expeditions to the South polar regions, gave an interesting account of his adventures in the far, frozen Southland before a large audience at the high school assembly hall, Saturday evening.

With the aid of stereopticon views, he took his hearers all through that exciting and perilous period during which Dr. Nordenskjold and a mere handful of men battled against the worst blizzards men have ever experienced and the most biting cold. The hopes of rescue were often much dimmed, but they were finally taken off by an Argentine cruiser and brought back to civilization.

Their scientific discoveries were most valuable and they succeeded in learning, in other ways, a great deal about the vast extent of rocky, chilly land which lies south of Cape Horn.

Dr. Nordenskjold and his party left the Argentine republic in the steamer Antarctic for the South pole, if they could possibly reach that much sought spot, the South pole. The start was made at about the beginning of the year 1902, from Buenos Ayres. Shortly afterwards they bade good-by to the civilization, which they were not destined to return to until 1904.

The plan of the expedition was for the good ship Antarctic to go as far South as possible and then land Dr. Nordenskjold and five men, who would put up the house that had been constructed for them in Sweden and spend the winter there. From this winter station, it was proposed to send out sledge expeditions which would penetrate as far as possible in the direction of the pole.

The six explorers were landed all right and the party on the Antarctic saw to it before they left that plenty of provisions, clothing and other necessities were left behind. Finally, on Feb. 15, Dr. Nordenskjold and his five comrades saw the Antarctic sail away to the North and toward home.

Even in the middle of February, which is really one of the summer months in that region on the other side of the equator, it was cold on the island where Dr. Nordenskjold and his party had their station. The temperature was about 50 deg. the day after the Antarctic set sail for the North.

It was the original plan of the expedition for the Antarctic to go as far North as Argentina and return on the following summer to take off the six who had been left behind.

"No one in the Northern hemisphere can realize how penetrating is the cold in the Antarctic regions," said Dr. Nordenskjold. "The blizzards are frequent and very severe. The first intimation of one is a slight mist in the west and in a few seconds the storm is upon you. The wind is terrific and it is utterly impossible to walk in the face of the wind because the snow cuts like a million needles. The thing to do is to seek shelter.

"Our house was built for us in Sweden and was fortunately very warm. It withstood all the wind and snow during the two winters which we spent inside of it. But the wind played havoc with some of our belongings. It would carry trunks and such articles several hundred feet. After every blizzard, we sent out in search of our property and it was no easy task. On one occasion, our largest and best boat was carried away and so badly battered that they were never able to use it again.

"As long as we could get out doors we considered ourselves lucky, but that was not very often.

"Our house was heated with an iron box stove, which gave considerable satisfaction. Of course, the upper part of the house was often nice and warm while the lower part was very cold, but we could not help that. Although it was not very large, it contained five rooms, three bed rooms—in each of which two persons slept, a large living room which extended almost the entire length and breadth of the house and a small kitchen.

"One bad thing about the house was the dampness. But we did not mind that so much. We managed to keep from freezing. When we went out-of-doors, we were clad in ordinary clothing with an entire suit, including a hood of canvas. We found this more practical than furs, which were too heavy. The canvas kept out the wind, which was most important.

"We were worse off from July to the middle of August.

"I determined to set out with sledges in August to reach the South pole. I was accompanied by two of my companions, an Argentine naval officer and a Swedish sailor. We intended to be gone for two months but took food for our dogs for only about eighteen days, trusting to providence to find enough seals and penguin—the curious bird which is found in polar regions—to sustain the animals. We did not have many dogs because most of them died on the boat when it crossed the equator on the way south.

"But we had most miserable luck and did not see a single seal and very few penguin so we had to share our own food with the dogs. On Oct. 18, we approached our most southern point, and were back at the winter station by Nov. 4, after having traveled over 400 miles. We made some most interesting discoveries."

Dr. Nordenskjold gave an interesting description of the strange bird, the penguin, and its habits. The creature walks in an erect position, has wings which really are not wings at all—for it cannot fly—and subsists altogether on the tiny crabs which may be found in the water. There is not the slightest sign of vegetation that far south, except here and there a little moss. The bird makes a nest of stones and is content.

The Antarctic summer waned and no sign of the Antarctic, which was to return to their relief, was seen. The sturdy explorers tried not to have misgivings in their hearts and made preparations for spending another winter in their little houses. Their stock of fuel and provisions got rather low toward the end and they used seal blubber with which to cook and made penguin soup, which they tried their best to like.

In October, 1903, which is one of the months when the days are longest and warmest in the very far south, Dr. Nordenskjold and another man, who had set out upon an exploring expedition encountered three men. At first they did not recognize comrades from the good ship Antarctic, so wild and animal like did they seem.

These strange creatures who seemed to have sprung up out of the frozen wilderness had left the ship on the previous summer in an effort to reach Dr. Nordenskjold's station and tell him that the boat was unable to reach the station because of the ice. But they were obliged to spend the winter in an ice and canvas hut which they constructed, living on peguins and seal blubber.

About a month after the arrival at the station of the three wayfarers from the Antarctic, who knew not that boat's fate, there arrived some Argentine naval officers, who had been sent out in the steamer Uruguay to the relief of the Nordenskjold expedition. That very evening, Capt. Larsen and his men of the steamer Anarctic arrived on foot and told of the sinking of their ship and their hard winter in an improvised hut. The entire party was taken on board the Uruguay and taken back to the north. The party was warmly welcomed at every port.

Dr. Nordenskjold gave a very scholarly and interesting lecture and every person present Saturday evening seemed to enjoy it immensely. He was introduced by J. Uno Sebenius. The Orpheus singing society, under whose auspices Dr. Nordenskjold came to Duluth, sang several numbers.

FOR CONSTIPATION

Franovich Jury is Discharged.

No agreement could be arrived at by the jurors in the personal injury case of Rudolph Franovich against Butler Bros. and they were discharged Saturday afternoon, after deliberating over thirty hours. Franovich brought the suit for $30,000 for the loss of an arm under a switch engine. He claimed his accident was due to the negligence of the defendant company in leaving a large spike in the engine that is claimed to have caught his clothes and caused him to fall.

NEW TENOR HERE.

C. Victor Streator Heard at First M. E. Church Sunday.

A new tenor sang yesterday morning and evening at the First Methodist church. His name is C. Victor Streator and he comes here from Ashland where he has been teaching voice culture for some time.

Last evening he sang "My God, My King." The auditorium of the First Methodist church is a pretty good place in which to try a voice out for it is hard to fill; but Mr. Streator succeeded in filling it with ease. His voice is sweet and of very fine quality and those who heard him seemed pleased with the singing.

MISS NORTHMORE'S HIT.

Receives Hearty Reception After Both Numbers at Band Concert.

Miss Josephine Northmore, who was on the program at the Third Regiment band concert at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon, for two numbers, made a hit probably not equalled by any other singer who has appeared at the concerts this season. Her encores were insistent and hearty. Her first number was "Lenore" and she was compelled to respond and to the second number which was "Where Roses Gleam" she received two encores. Miss Northmore was suffering from a cold but sang well nevertheless. Many in the audience, who did not know of the peculiarity of her voice, were startled when her tenor, or one might say, almost baritone voice, gave forth the first notes. The solos were both very delightful.

Another feature was the cornet duet "The Friendly Rivals" by Hilmer and Solle, the band's leading cornettists. The duet was really excellent and was enjoyed as shown by the tremendous applause which greeted the two at its finish. The encore had to be responded to. Aside from Miss Northmore's contributions and that of the cornettists, only four numbers were on the program, all of which were good. Probably the most enjoyed was the old favorite, a grand selection from "Il Trovatore."

PAYS HIGHEST ROYALTY FEE

M. A. Hanna & Company Takes Lease on 75 Cent Basis.

A royalty of 75 cents per ton, the highest ever agreed to for Mesaba iron ore is said to have just been agreed on between M. A. Hanna & Company of Cleveland, and the Pillsbury, Bennett and Longyear syndicate which owns considerable land on the Mesaba range.

M. A. Hanna & Company have a lease on a property adjoining the Forest mine which lies between the Stevenson mine and Nashwauk, and it is on the production in this location that the royalty mentioned is to be paid.

The acquisition of the Leetonia mine by the Jones & Laughlin Steel company is said to have also been made on practically a 75 cents per ton royalty basis. The people interested in the Pillsbury, Bennett and Longyear properties are doing a great deal of exploratory work.

FOOTBALL GAME TO BE CHANGED

Radical Changes Proposed by the "Big Nine" Conference.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—"The game of football as played at present is hereby abolished in intercollegiate and collegiate contests in the conference colleges."

Thus reads one of the decisive conclusions reached by the members of the conference college football committee after two days' discussion of the evils of and remedies for the college game.

The coach is to be a regular member of the faculty, receiving a comparatively small salary.

The training table is to be abolished. There are only to be five intercollegiate games a season.

The season will not begin until the first day of school, and must end on the two Saturdays before Thanksgiving day.

The athlete is to have only three years of competition. Only undergraduates will be eligible.

No more than 50 cents can be charged for admission to games.

These and many other vital suggestions have been made. These suggestions will be sent in the form of recommendations to the various faculties of the "big nine" for consideration and provided a "considerable number" agree to them they will go down on record as permanent changes. If a "considerable number" of the faculties do not agree with them, the conference members will try to have the game of football abolished for a period of at least two years.

DINES ITS EMPLOYES.

Life Insurance Company Has Heart to Heart Gathering.

The management of the Conservative Life Insurance company of Los Angeles, Cal., gave a dinner Saturday evening at the Spalding to its employes in Duluth. J. N. Russell, superintendent of agencies from Los Angeles was present and gave a talk as did several others, including M. L. Baker, the local manager. Miss Adele McLaren favored the company with several recitations and W. A. Coughlan contributed to the evening's entertainment.

Those present were Messrs. and Mesdames M. L. Baker, L. A. Noll; Misses Adele McLaren and Agnes Campbell; and Messrs. W. A. Coughlan, George Lynott, Dr. Codding, J. N. Russell of Los Angeles, J. H. Sharp, E. S. Campau, Dr. C. B. Keyes, Oliver Olson, James W. Carkner, Hall Amos and Charles S. Cargill.

DULUTH IS SELECTED

Will be Permanent Bonspiel City if Club Members Consent.

Remaining Officers of the Northwestern Association Are Elected.

"Resolved, that the annual bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association be held at Duluth permanently, and that the expenses of the same be borne by all the clubs of the association pro rata on per capita of their membership or in some other way to be decided upon by the officers and executive committee, on the understanding that the holding of the bonspiel annually in Duluth is satisfactory and acceptable to the members of the Duluth Curling club, who will be called upon to vote on the question within the next twenty days.

"Resolved further, that the dues, assessments and subscriptions made by all the clubs be paid into the treasury of the association not later than Dec. 1 of each year."

The foregoing motion was made by James McCutcheon of Minneapolis and seconded by George F. MacKenzie of Duluth, at the meeting held Saturday afternoon to decide upon the location of the next bonspiel.

The list of officers was also completed after the resolution was chosen honorary secretary-treasurer of the association, and if the plan is favored by the members of the Duluth club, the duties of the secretary-treasurer will probably fall upon his shoulders.

The executive committee is composed of the following members: A. B. Van Bergen of St. Paul, John Fairbairn of Virginia, George F. MacKenzie of Duluth, J. C. Myron of Duluth, L. A. Barnes of West Duluth.

The way is thus cleared for the choice of Duluth as the permanent bonspiel city, if the Duluth club members favor it, as this city has a majority of the board of directors, the secretary-treasurer and the president of the association located here.

No games were played Saturday afternoon or evening, but the curlers commenced play at 12:01 a. m. this morning. An account of the entire morning's play is found in another column.

WILL PLAY RETURN GAME

Fairmount Hockey Team Will Meet the Columbias at Superior.

The Fairmount hockey team of West Duluth will endeavor to retrieve its lost laurels in a game with the Columbias of Superior, Wednesday evening.

The Fairmounts have lost to both the Superior team and the Duluth high school alumni team, but they are anxious for return games with both clubs, and have been putting in some hard practice.

The game Wednesday night will be played at Superior, and the two teams will line up as follows:

Columbias.	Fairmounts.
E. Olson	goal Ryan
Randall	point M. Sarvela
Horn	cover point Constantine
Hammerbeck	rover Sarvela
Anderson	center Bijou
B. Olson	left wing Clarke
Grenner	right wing Constantine

GOES TO CONVENTION.

Simon Clark to Attend National Grocers' Meeting at Niagara.

Simon Clark left last evening for Niagara Falls, where he is to attend this week, the convention of the National Grocers' association of America. Mr. Clark, who is president of the Minnesota Grocers' association, is also one of the vice presidents of the national association and is one of its most active members. At the convention to be held this week in Niagara Falls, hundreds will be in attendance and the measures which will be taken up will be of the greatest importance. Mr. Clark will endeavor to push through resolutions asking congress to pass pure food laws, making the campaign for pure food national rather than local to states as it is at present. Mr. Clark has been at work on this idea for some time and has advocated it untiringly. He believes that with a uniformity of pure food legislation for all parts of the country, greater good would result than if the present state laws are allowed to exist.

Mr. Clark left with the determination to land the next national convention for Duluth. He has already secured promises that will be of great aid to him.

CITY BRIEFS

Robert Hanson, a fifteen-year-old boy, was arrested Saturday night by Officer Westerlund on the charge of hurling large snowballs from the roof of the building at Lake avenue and First alley on the heads of the people passing. He was released on his own recognizance until today, when he will probably be taken before the juvenile court.

A. P. Johnson, of 323 Twenty-first avenue west, was found unconscious in the basement of a store building near his home Saturday afternoon, and died before medical assistance could reach him. He owned the store building in question, and was looking over the property when he died. Death is believed to have been due to heart disease.

Articles of incorporation of the Potosi Zinc-Lead Mining company have been filed with the county register of deeds by H. B. Fryberger, W. H. Pritchard and M. A. Armstrong. The company is capitalized at $50,000.

The funeral of Mrs. A. E. McQuein was held this afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church and interment was made in Forest Hill cemetery. Mrs. McQuein died Saturday at her residence, Eleventh avenue west and Superior street.

Revival meetings will be held every evening this week at Bethany chapel on Garfield avenue and will be conducted by Rev. S. F. Sharpless of the Second Presbyterian church.

The entertainment and dance to be given tomorrow evening at Masonic Temple by the Knights Templar will be more open than at first announced. It has been decided that any knight or member of the chapter may invite a friend or two to attend.

Articles of incorporation of the Nelson Exploration company were filed today with the county register of deeds. The incorporators are David Fairchild of Duluth, Fred Nelson of Virginia and T. T. Hudson of Duluth. The capital stock is $50,000.

Only one jury case was on trial in district court today, the personal injury suit of Archille Caron against the Powers-Simpson company, in Judge Ensign's room. Judges Cant and Ensign heard court cases. Judge Cant the appeal case of S. L. Smith, from order of probate court, and Judge Ensign the civil action of A. H. Burg against Cathrena Andrews and others.

J. M. Gidding & Co. began today a great sale of high-class fur pieces and sets, consisting of baum marten, chinchilla, ermine, mink and black lynx.

The young people of Lester Park M. E. church will conduct the services at the Star of Hope mission this evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Arthur Browne will have charge of the meeting and the pastor, Rev. Charles Fox Davis, will preach the sermon. There will be special singing.

Charles Westberg defeated Charles Norlin at the Ideal billiard hall Saturday evening, by the score of 100 to 62 in the match pool game in progress there.

IMPRISONMENT

Was Threatened Cudahy by Garfield, Says Packers' Attorney.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Edward A. Cudahy, the Omaha packer, was directly threatened with imprisonment by Commissioner Garfield if Mr. Cudahy refused to give the commissioner information regarding the packing business, according to a statement made by Attorney Cowin in court today. Mr. Cowin argued that such evidence against the packers by the packers themselves in itself constituted a promise of immunity to the informants.

ELEVEN THOUSAND.

BE SURE TO REGISTER

Voters Who Neglected Primaries Must Register or Lose Vote.

The Polls Will Remain Open From 6 A. M. Until 9 P. M.

Don't forget to register!

No voter who is in the city tomorrow can have any excuse for not getting his name down on the books, and qualifying for the approaching municipal election. The judges will register voters from 6 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening, so that no person can complain that he has not had an opportunity to register.

Those who do not register cannot vote at the approaching municipal election, and there is but one remaining day of registration after tomorrow.

Those who voted at the primaries need not register again, but those who failed to register at the primaries, must register either tomorrow or on the last day of registration.

The percentage of voters whose names are now on the list, is very small, and not more than one-fifth of the elegible voters of the city saw fit to take advantage of their franchise at the primaries.

In order to get anything like a normal registration, it is necessary for between 3,000 and 4,000 voters to turn out tomorrow, or nearly as many as voted at the primaries. It is not expected that the number will exceed 2,000, but the candidates are working hard to get out as large a number as possible. Even if they succeed and get out for 5,000 to 6,000 voters on the two remaining days of registration, nearly one-half of the eligible voters of the city will have disfranchised themselves. From 8,000 to 9,000 voters is a large number for Duluth to send to the polls, but it is little more than half the total number of eligible voters in the city.

REGISTRATION DAY TOMORROW

(TUESDAY)

Polls open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m.

FOUR ADMIRALS ARE DROWNED

By the Sinking of the Brazilian Turret Ship Aquidaban.

Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Jan. 22.—The Brazilian turret ship Aquidaban has been sunk at Port Jacarapagua, as the result of an explosion. It is reported that 300 of her crew perished, and that only one officer was saved.

Four rear admirals perished on board the Aquidaban, which had been used for the accommodation of a number of supernumery officers and men attached to the flotilla escorting the cruiser Barroso. The Barroso had on board the minister of marine and his staff, who were inspecting the site proposed for a new arsenal. The explosion on the Aquidaban occurred in the powder magazine.

Pastor's Wife Dies.

Mrs. J. Lindgren, wife of Rev. J. Lindgren, pastor of the Finnish Baptist church, died this morning at the family residence, aged 63 years and 7 months. She is survived by her husband and six children. Three are sons, John, living in St. Paul, and Allen and Felix, living in Chicago, and three are daughters, Mrs. Victor Johnson of West Duluth, and Misses Tekla and Anna, living at home.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

QUIET, EFFECTIVE WORK.

Right Food Builds Up and Strengthens While You Wait.

"The improvement in my condition came very soon after I had begun to use Grape-Nuts food, and so easily and naturally that I was a well woman almost before I knew it," writes a Nebraska woman:

"For years I have suffered from chronic constipation, with its accompanying headaches, languor and extreme nervousness. This condition had gone on so long without permanent relief from anything I could take that I had become fairly resigned to it, as something to be endured with patient fortitude.

"Five years ago Grape-Nuts became a very popular dish with all sorts and conditions of people in our village, and I bought a package just to see what it was like, with no thought of any special benefit that I might derive from its use. I liked the crisp, nutty flavor of the new food from the beginning and kept on using it.

"If I had been told in advance of the salutary effect that eating Grape-Nuts would have on me I would doubtless have been incredulous, and it was a most pleasing surprise to suddenly realize that my constipation was gone and with it my headaches, while my nerves had grown steady and normal and my strength was nearly doubled—that I was actually in the enjoyment of the natural health that had been denied me for at least ten years.

"This is what Grape-Nuts food did for me, and this is the condition in which it has kept me for the past five years. I am still fond of it, and would eat it even if it had not proved so signally beneficial.

"When my baby was recovering from a severe attack of cholera infantum, I found that Grape-Nuts food was not only a much relished but most strengthening and wholesome food for her, and it continues an indispensable item in her daily menu." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

POWELL IS ON HIS WAY

Starts for Bisbee, Going by Way of Chicago.

Mining Man Leaves Duluth to Take Up New Duties.

L. W. Powell, formerly assistant manager of the Oliver Iron Mining company and vice president of the Pittsburg Steamship company, but who is now to be general superintendent of the Bonanza Circle mines at Bisbee, left this afternoon at 4 o'clock over the Wisconsin Central for Chicago.

Mr. Powell was accompanied by Mrs. Powell and the children. They will accompany him as far as Chicago, but will not go with him to Bisbee yet. Mrs. Powell and the children will go to the home of Mrs. Powell's mother in Virginia, where they will remain until spring.

Mr. Powell was at his desk in the office he has been occupying in the Wolvin building ever since the structure was completed, up to a late hour this afternoon, attending to some final business before quitting the Lake Superior mining concern to undertake greater responsibilities in the great copper camp of the Southwest.

All day long, his telephone buzzed and he answered calls from friends who sought to say good bye. Mr. Powell has made many friends during his six years' residence in Duluth and all of them expressed regret at his departure.

Mr. Powell will enter upon his new duties at Bisbee as soon as possible and greater activity in the Bonanza Circle mines will immediately result. He will be third vice president of the Calumet & Arizona and other mining companies which comprise the group and will have complete charge of their operations.

TO REGULATE, NOT MAKE RATES

View of Senator Clay on Duties of Commerce Commission.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senator Clay addressed the senate today on regulation of railroad rates.

Mr. Clay supported the proposition that the interstate commerce commission should be permitted to regulate railroad rates. He contended that the railroad companies should not be interfered with in the first instance in preparing their schedules, but said that when these are once promulgated there should be a body with authority to modify and revise upon complaint.

He declared that the laws granting authority to state commissions to revise rates so as to insure justice had been frequently upheld by the courts. "In these very cases," he went on, "it was claimed that the legislative power must be exercised by the legislature itself, and could not be delegated to any other body, but the courts have uniformly held that where the legislature enacted that rates shall be reasonable and just, the duty of executing this law and of finding what rates are reasonable and just may be delegated to a commission, and that a grant of such power is not a delegation of legislative authority. If such laws, enacted by the legislatures of different states, have been sustained as constitutional, why cannot congress enact that all interstate freight rates shall be reasonable and just, and leave to the interstate commerce commission the right and power to investigate and find out what rate will be a proper one, what rate will be just and impartial as between the shippers and the roads?"

After quoting many decisions in support of his contention, Mr. Clay analyzed the present law, and said that it does not afford adequate protection to the shipper. He said:

"Railroads can destroy towns, cities and private industries by improper rates, and who will say that power should not be lodged somewhere to investigate intelligently all complaints, solely with a view of doing justice between the roads and the shippers? The presumption is that an intelligent, broad-minded commission will be impartial and seek diligently to do justice to both sides. Why presume that the commission will decide adversely to the roads? Why presume that narrow-minded partizans, easily influenced by public clamor, will be appointed to discharge this duty? It will not be a difficult task to secure honest, intelligent, upright men to perform this work, and no other kind ought to be appointed."

Mr. Clay hinted at the possibility of an agitation of the question of government ownership of railroads, if attention is not given to the demand for regulation, saying:

"The sentiment has been growing in favor of government ownership. Mr. Hearst came within a few thousand votes of being elected mayor of the city of New York in the last election for mayor in that great city. I have never been a follower of Mr. Hearst. Who had the remotest idea of the strong following which he developed in that race? It was not the man, it was the platform on which he made his race—government ownership. I do not believe in government ownership of railroads. I recognize the fact that the vast number of employes engaged in the work of operating and building these roads would be largely under the influence of the party in power in control of the government. Such power would enable the party in control of the government to hold it for all time to come. The only way to turn public attention from public control is government regulation by law."

New Spring Styles

Tumbling In!

Right on the heels of the January clearance of winter apparel comes the news of the new things—advance guards, you might call them!

In Tailored Suits

Pony Jacket and Eton Suits and Plain Jacket effects—in a variety of styles.

Notable among them are suits of cream serge for those who expect to go South — $39.50, $45 and $52.50.

In Separate Skirts

Many notable examples of the tailors' art are to be found in the circular and circular-gored effects—made of imported materials, in "shadow plaids"—almost invisible hair lines of tiny pastel stripes and checks over solid grounds.

Cream White Serges—Panamas and Chiffon Panamas in white, reseda, Alice blue, French gray—and, of course, black.

One especially strong line at $10.75—of chiffon Panama, in any of the above shades and black. Circular gored, with two folds of self cloth at bottom and tailored Vandyke points.

Another of "Shadow Plaids" at $10 — Pastel shades so harmonized that the effect is charming.

"French voiles" in cream and black are a feature — $22.50. Folds of voile, down and around in many effective ways.

These are but three examples of over forty new spring styles.

The starting point, $7.50. At $10.75 and $15 the makers stretched a point—so did we—otherwise they'd have been $13.50 and $18.50.

Baum-Marten, Chinchilla, Ermine, Mink, Black Lynx and White Fox Scarfs, Muffs or Sets---A Great Sale

READ ON!

A New York maker of high repute had many handsome sets that he wanted to turn into money quickly, and accepted an offer made by our Mr. Nat Gidding, who is now in New York. The sale was confirmed by wire and the Furs were immediately shipped on by express. They were placed on sale today at the following prices:

And let us add, that this will probably be the last opportunity that you'll have this season to get rich and magnificent furs at such great savings!

First of all, raw furs are higher today than they were last summer—and continue to advance!

"Then why are you selling them so cheaply?" you ask. Because makers can't afford to tie up so much money for a year, or until next fall—the winter having been an open one has left them with heavy stocks—many have had to unload at a great sacrifice. Fortunately for ourselves we closed out about all of our finest pieces and were in a position to buy—at prices that we thought would tempt you to buy now, instead of paying the higher prices of next season! And we bought.

We question if Duluth has ever seen such magnificent fur pieces—surely not at such price. But why say more—come and see them—if only to glance at them through the show window.

Baum-Marten — SCARFS at $87.50, $110 and $125—worth $125 to $200. MUFFS at $79.50, $87.50 and $97.50—worth $100 to $150.

Chinchilla — SCARFS at $25, $32.50, $47.50 and $69.50—worth $39.50 to $87.50. MUFFS at $42.50, $67.50 and $89.50—worth $65 to $125.

Ermine — SCARFS at $35, $50, $75, $85 and $95—worth $65 to $150. MUFFS at $39.50, $47.50, $65, $85—worth $57.50 to $150.

Mink — SCARFS at $16.50, $29.50, $45, $85 to $275—worth $25 to $400. MUFFS at $20, $37.50 to $150.

Black Lynx — SCARFS at $16.50, $22.50, $37.50, $49.50—worth $25 to $75. MUFFS at $18.50, $25, $37.50, $49.50—worth $29.50 to $75.

White Fox — SCARFS at $21.50, $27.50, $35 — worth $32.50 to $57.50. MUFFS at $22.50, $27.50—worth $32.50 and $42.50.

Persian Lamb, Jap Marten, Blue Fox, Blended Sable, Sable Squirrel, etc.—in a great variety of styles and prices—at great savings.

As of hyacinths and daffodils!"

Great Western

Extra Dry

Has the same delicious flavor and boquet as these famous old Champagnes of France—the only American Champagne possessing these qualities. It is due to the long cultivation of the Rheims vineyards, where grapes for Great Western are grown. The soil has the same rare qualities peculiar to the fine Champagne-producing grapes of sunny France. Only the duty—not the quality, makes the difference in the price you pay.

SWINDLED BY HER BROTHER

Heiress to Large Estate is Reduced to Abject Poverty.

Santa Monica, Cal., Jan. 22.—One of the most curious and prolonged family quarrels ever exploited in the courts has just been brought to an end at Los Angeles.

For years the Joyce family—of which "Tom" Joyce, the wealthy oil man, is the head and front—have been wrangling in the courts, though the actual fight itself has been confined to "Tom" and his sister, Mrs. Jane Guerin.

Mrs. Jane Joyce, the mother of the litigans, over whose estate the fight originated, lived at Hyde Park, a suburb of Boston. She was in poor circumstances until, like lightning out of a clear sky, a bunch of money dropped into her lap.

There were five children, all of whom but Jane had scattered to seek their fortune. Tom came to California, where he "struck ile" and is a reputed wealthy man; John and a sister named Mrs. Rose Davis went to Seattle and lived there for years; Martin L. disappeared and the family never heard of him until recently, when he turned up rather romantically. Jane Guerin stayed with her mother and cared for her in her old age.

About ten years ago Boston needed the property of Mrs. Joyce for improvement purposes, and paid her $8,000 for it. Whether sudden joy had anything to do with it or not, the old woman was stricken with paralysis. Physically and mentally she became incapable of looking out for either herself or her money. Her daughter Jane cared for her, but the added care of a sick woman was too much for the daughter and she took ill and was sent to the hospital. While she was thus confined her brother John and sister Rose came from Seattle. They had heard of that $8,000 and had come home on a visit. They got about $2,100.

To save the remainder of the $8,000 from being dissipated, sister Jane secured the appointment of a guardian for her mother and the estate. Then she wrote to her brother Tom to return East. He decided to bring his mother to California, and took over her guardianship, though the money was not turned over to his care until later.

A small house was taken on Alpine street, where the invalid mother was installed with sister Jane as her caretaker. That was in December, 1896, and until about January, 1899, Tom allowed his mother $25 a month for her support. Under the distressing circumstances of the case, however, this sum did not suffice, and Jane Guerin and her young daughter had to go out to work.

Then the poor, incapable old mother died. Sister Jane was the one who would have been entitled to act as administrator, but she nominated her brother Tom in her place.

He had received the $6,000 remaining in the estate at the time his mother died. He assumed the duties of administrator and when the time came for creditors to file their bills sister Jane filed her claim for $2,725 for nursing and attending her mother. Tom turned this claim down and the course left open was to sue the administrator. She did this.

The case came up before Judge York, but was thrown out of on a non-suit. Her attorney appealed. Over a year later, the court of last resort decided that case shouldn't have been thrown out of court.

But by this time Mrs. Guerin was ill and in abject poverty. She asked the Associated Charities for relief, which under the circumstances, was not granted.

Then brother Tom offered his sister $500 for her claim against her mother's estate on one condition—that she also sell her distributive share in the estate for a like amount. In dire poverty, Mrs. Guerin could not refuse. She took the $1,000 her distributive share being made over to Mrs. Sadie Joyce, Tom's wife.

Realizing later how much she had thrown away, she made a tender back to her brother of the money she had received and gave notice of recision of the contract.

This phase of the contest, and the last, came up before Judge Conrey last week, and was again decided against Mrs. Guerin. The court held that the contract and assignment must stand. Sister Jane dropped out of all interest right there.

The outcome of the prolonged trouble is that Tom Joyce gets the whole estate.

GLOOMY SCIENTISTS

Predict World Will Follow France in Birth Rate Decline.

London, Jan. 22.—Dr. Arthur Newsholme, medical officer of health of Brighton, and Dr. H. C. Stevenson, assistant medical officer to the education committee of the London county council, are taking the greatest interest in the subject of the declining birth rate. They are preparing a joint paper, in which two main theses are advanced—that the inhabitants of the United Kingdom and other civilized countries are markedly less fertile than was the case but a few years ago, and that this state of affairs is due to other than natural causes.

"France," said the joint authors, "has anticipated the rest of the world, and has thus come near the consummation of its social fel-de-se. But it is only a question of decades, in the absence of a great change in the normal standpoint of the majority of the people, before other countries follow in the same pace. The outlook is gloomy, and we cannot look with confidence to the help which is likely to come either from preaching or medical teaching."

For the purposse of comparison the birth rate of Sweden is taken as the standard of all of the European countries. In that comparison the only country showing a stationary birthrate is Austria. Taking the countries as a whole, however, the joint authors conclude that there cannot be any direct relationship either in 1881 or in 1902-3 between the degree of national prosperity and the birth rate. Norway and Ireland, both relatively poor countries, have a high birth rate, but Bavaria and France, which are relatively more prosperous, have one a high and the other a low death rate. The authors conclude that it is by no means certain that children would be better reared because less numerous. With the decreasing birth rate in nEgland and Wales there had been no reduction of infant mortality.

The whole field of collected facts seemed to lend to the conclusion in the decline of the birth rate was not due to increased poverty, but was associated with a general raising of the standard of comfort, and it was an expression of the determination of the people to secure this greater comfort.

CHROME WORKS AT BALTIMORE BURN.

Baltimore, Jan. 22.—Fire was discovered shortly after midnight in the plant of the Baltimore Chrome works and before it was controlled about a third of the main buildings of the extensive plant had been destroyed. The blaze originated in the building in which the engine room is located, but the exact cause is unknown. The milling section of the works suffered severely but in the absence of officials of the company it is impossible to say to what extent the machinery is damaged. Earlier indications were that much stock ready for shipment had been destroyed, but whatever damage of this sort was suffered was probably by water. The works covered about two and a half acres and are said to be the only ones of the sort in the United States. The best estimate of the loss obtained places it at about $100,000.

EIGHTEEN LOSE LIVES

Fifty Injured in Panic in Colored Church in Philadelphia.

Small Fire Startled Audience Which Could Not be Controlled.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—Eighteen persons were killed and probably half a hundred injured in a panic following the cry of "fire" last night in St. Paul's colored Baptist church, on the west side of Eighth street, between Poplar street and Girard avenue. The services were being held on the second floor of the building. A defective flue set fire to the chimney, causing smoke to issue through the crevices in the floor near the pulpit. The room was filled at the time and the cry of "fire" coupled with the sight of the smoke threw the congregation into a panic.

A rush was made for the stairs despite the efforts of Rev. E. W. Johnson, the pastor, to allay the fears of the frenzied people. All wanted to get out at once, and men, women and children alike were knocked down and trampled upon by those pushing from behind. The stairway to the first floor had one sharp turn in it and the frightened people became so tightly wedged in the bend of the stairs that the frail wooden bannister gave way, precipitating many to the first floor.

Following is a list of the identified dead: Sarah Rusin, Mrs. Lawrence, Mrs. Paton, Ruth Fraiser, John Berry, Anna Alexander, Mamie McKenney, Susie Holmes, Mrs. Mary Weblock, Charles Gardiner, aged 14, Mamie McCall, Abose Slaughter, three years old, Catherine Sewell, Ruth Trainer.

The crash and the screams and shrieks of the women and children added to the frenzy of those above. They did not stop in their onward rush to get out. Notwithstanding the wide open doors on the first floor leading to the street, the crush was so great that 18 persons had the life stamped out of them before the panic was ended.

A general alarm was sent in for ambulances, firemen and police. In the meantime the greatest confusion reigned. Men and women ran about the streets calling for missing loved ones. A great crowd gathered and the work of rescue was promptly started. Dead and injured were quickly taken to hospitals and nearby houses.

The fire was only trifling, the flames being extinguished before the firemen arrived.

The disaster occurred while a collection was being taken up. The pastor had just concluded his sermon, the text of which was "Why sit we here until we die?"

Following the collection there was to have been a baptism of a man and wife. Some of the colored people, owing to the lateness of the evening, had left the church and others were about to go. As the pastor was arranging the pulpit preparatory to beginning the baptismal service, a woman in one of the front rows gave a loud shriek of "fire."

Instantly all those about her were on their feet looking for the blaze. There were no flames in sight, but those near the pulpit smelled the smoke and started down the aisle toward the pulpit. Then followed a half dozen cries of "fire," and the whole congregation became panic-stricken. The pastor by this time realized the seriousness of the situation, and in a loud voice, which added to the confusion, called to the terror-stricken people to be seated.

No one listened, and despite his frantic appeals, a rush started that meant death to many that were in it.

When the rush started, those in the rear of the church did not fully realize what was wrong and were slow to move. The frantic shrieking of the women and children became louder and more general, and many were knocked down in the two aisles of the church. Then came the terrible rush down the stairways. For some unknown reason everybody tried to get down the left side of the building, comparatively few seeking the right by the right stairway. Several men on the first floor attempted to hold the people back, but were knocked down, and then the human stream came tumbling down. The weaker ones fell only to be trampled upon and crushed by those coming from behind.

The horrible shrieks sent up by the prostrate persons added to the confusion and by this time even the colder ones in the rear of the fighting mass of men, women and children became terror stricken.

Strong men in fear that the building was falling, leaped over the heads of women and children and fought only for their own safety. The terrible crush in the bend of the stairs became so great that the balustrade, which was only a frail, wooden affair, gave way. There was a terrible crash as half a hundred persons were precipitated to the floor, a distance of about ten or twelve feet. This heightened the intensity of the panic and the rush became an awful jam.

The pastor of the church, a man of powerful physique and strong voice, continued to appeal to the crowd in the rear to stop their rush, but none would heed. Over the prostrate forms the crowd went crushing the life out of those who were unable to extricate themselves. In the confusion some of the worshippers thought of the narrow door on the right side of the pulpit and made a quick exit that way which action on their part probably saved the lives of a number of those who had been caught in the crush.

When those who came down the front stairs had left the building, a terrible sight presented itself to the rescuers. The first floor and the stairway to the bend were covered three deep with the dead and dying. On the street hundreds were shrieking for help and looking for their missing loved ones. The rescuers did not know which way to turn first, but Police Captain Hamm and a policeman who arrived on the scene just as the last of the panic-stricken people were rushing from the edifice, took charge and turned in a general alarm for ambulances, policemen and firemen. With the help of scores of colored men and white people, who were attracted to the scene, the dead and the injured were extricated from the terrible mass of humanity and laid on the sidewalks on Eighth street.

The ringing of the fire bells, the clang of the ambulance gongs, the almost total darkness and the thick fog added to the growsomeness of the scene and caused utter confusion for a time.

Order was brought about, however, and every one who could not stand was placed in an ambulance and rushed either to the Children's, St. Joseph's or German hospital. No time was taken up to see if any victim was dead, and within an hour after the disaster occurred the street had been cleared of the mass of people and the church door closed.

The scene at the hospitals was pathetic in the extreme. A great crowd of colored people gathered at the door of each institution, but no one was admitted without a satisfactory reason. Within the buildings the entire house staff were ordered out and nearby physicians were called upon to assist in ministering to the suffering. An examination of the dead showed that most of them had been suffocated or had died from internal injuries. Of the injured, few, if any, are likely to die.

The fire was a most trifling affair. Whether the flames were extinguished or burned themselves out, is not known but there was no fire in the building when the firemen set to work.

E. W. Johnson, the pastor of the church in a statement said:

"The church was not crowded; it was not even well filled. The collection was being taken when a woman sitting in a front pew cried 'fire' and started to run down the aisle. I smelled smoke but felt sure there was no danger. My congregation, however, became panic stricken, and no human being could stop the rush for the doors. I tried my best to calm the people but it was no use; terror had seized them and they rushed to their death. I attempted to get them to stop their pushing on the stair and directed many to leave by the door at the side of the pulpit. It was awful. The memory of that terrible crush and the death of my beloved people shall never be effaced from my memory."

John B. Taylor, superintendent of police, arrived on the scene a short time after the panic was over. A rumor was current that the church had been overcrowded but this could not be confirmed by the superintendent, who had made a preliminary investigation of the disaster.

ITALIAN KILLED WHILE ATTACKING YOUNG GIRL.

New York, Jan. 22.—Felix Bettelli, 25 years old, of Brooklyn, was stabbed to death yesterday in the home of Lena Campano in that borough, after he had tried to kill both the young woman and her 17-year-old brother, Nicholas. Failing in his attempt to force his attentions on the woman, Bettelli attacked her and tried to stifle her cries by drawing his pistol. She dared him to fire and he promptly sent two shots into her right arm and hand. The sound of the shots aroused the girls brother, who, springing from his bed, attacked Bettelli. He received a bullet in the right arm but continued the attack. Seizing a hunter's knife, he plunged the long blade into Bettell's right side, inflicting an injury which caused death an hour later in a hospital.

REFUSE IS PROFITABLE

Wealth Obtained From Rubbish is a Big Brooklyn Industry.

Four Plants That Produce Thousands of Dollars' Worth Daily.

Brooklyn, Jan. 22.—A most curious industry has for years been developing in Brooklyn. It is that by which riches are extracted from rubbish.

In the line of queer enterprises the second-hand furniture dealer occupies a common place. The antique dealer is more interesting and the curio dealer is most interesting of the three. Among the many things which pass through the hands of these people, some occasionally prove rich finds and are readily converted into unexpected wealth.

Then there are the human scavengers who go mousing about the streets, rummaging in this ash barrel and that deposit of filth, seeking something—the onlooker knows not what. They pick out bits of rags, papers, broken plates and metal, with an air as though these findings were a small compromise for the thing he sought.

The fact is, he found pretty much what he was seeking, only not enough of it, and he knows how to dispose of each and everything to advantage.

Then there are the dump scavengers, old men, old women and sometimes children covered with rags and filth, working from sun up to sun down over the piles of refuse dumped by the street cleaning cars into waste places, where this stuff may be utilized in filling new land. But a certain per cent of this rubbish finds it way into the bags of the scavangers and valueless as it may seem, is converted in money.

The education of these scavangers as to the values of apparently worthless materials is rather remarkable. They have a pretty accurate training by which they instinctively differentiate between values of metals, rags, papers and broken crockery, and they pounce upon a curio in which they can see as large a sum as a dollar, which to them is something of a bonanza.

In the hands of an expert dealer this article may be worth $50, but that is the dealer's business, not theirs.

It was probably such an instinct as this—of extracting from an apparently worthless thing every element of value which gave rise years ago to what has developed into an important and flourishing industry in Brooklyn. It consists solely of the extracting of gold, silver and platinum from the rubbish which finds its way into its shops. There are four plants occupied by this work in Brooklyn, and it is wonderful how much gold and silver are run into bricks or rolled into leaf and sold by them as refined precious metals.

One man in Brooklyn, rated as a multi-millionaire, found his great wealth in this curious enterprise. One plant engaged in this work has been long established on North Portland avenue; another on Fleet street, and the most recentaly established is on Plymouth street.

Up to eight years this business was unknown in this country, though in England it dated back to the reign of George III.

Before its inception here millions of dollars' worth of precious metals went the way of all waste and their atoms were blown away by the winds or filtered into the earth, where they will never be recovered. Gold and silver smiths, precious metal decorators, publishers, etc., never thought of saving the dust which the washings from their hands when the dinner bell rang them to their daily repasts.

Nor was it until recent years that pen and pencil makers, dentists, photographers, sign painters, china decorators, etc., thought to save the sweepings of their shops, the dust from their clothing and hair and the old rags and papers which their hands touched while at work. All these things are now carefully saved, for if perchance a single atom of gold adheres to any such thing it is received and deposited again in its place in a commercial leaf or ingot.

The business has developed into an exact science and an expert from one of these extracting plants can, by a casual examination of a pile of rubbish and dirt, give a fair estimate of the amount of precious metals it contains, though an exact estimate cannot be given until the pile has been reduced to ashes, pulverized and assayed.

In the largest one of these plants which your representative visited, were hundreds of barrels of rubbish and sweepings systematicallly gathered from far and near. To the casual observer they were only fit for the dump heap.

They contained a great assortment of dirty rags, crumpled paper, pieces of carpets, broken crockery, bits or iron and steel, ashes and clinkers. Then there were piles of broken picture frames, letters from signs, etc., and stacks of dirt and ashes and filthy liquid sediments mixed with sawdust to allow of being burned. There were also many old salt fish barrels and whisky barrels filled with dirty, stenchy water, and heaping barrels of broken crucibles and mortars.

These things constituted the raw materials of the plant, and were estimated to be worth from $30,000 to $40,000.

This concern alone periodically—about every three months—goes the rounds of 800 jewelry establishments, watch case factories, sign painters' shops, china decorators' studios, polishing establishments, etc., and gives those places a thorough cleaning up; sweeping down the ceilings and walls, renovating floors and carpets and carrying off barrels of water from handwashing.

All this refuse has accumulated certain quantities of gold and silver which is extracted and returned to the owner minus a commission of about 20 per cent, if the stuff has not been bought outright. Every barrel of rubbish or of hand-drippings is marked by a number corresponding to the owner's names.

Should one man have a barrel of sweepings, another of water and another of metal scrap, these things are reduced to a separate heap of ashes and dust and his number is placed on it. There is a separate burning for the material of each customer and his number is transfered from the rubbish pile to the box of ashes. Iron is burned by a sulphur process which converts it into slag crystal which readily admits of its being crushed and pulverized.

The burning is done in furnaces resembling those under a big factory boiler, only there are many smoothly paved receptacles corresponding with their several doors of big factory furnace.

When the ash has been separately gathered and numbered they are then run separately through a steam propelled crusher, which grinds them into the consistency of rouge, excepting bits of metal and other hard materials taken out by a subsequent process of sifting.

This coarse residue is then separately treated, and when reduced to a fine powder is returned to the ash bearing its owner's number. When the ashes have been mixed and remixed until the dust of the gold and silver has been equally distributed, a two-ounce sample is taken out by a half tube scoop, similar to a butter tester. This sample is then assayed and the amount of gold and silver in the ash pile computed. The value may prove to be $1 to $1,000, according to the richness of the deposit.

When the value of each ash deposit has thus been computed the ashes are thrown together in a common heap, when they are prepared for the smelting process, when in a molten state the precious metals would be separated from the mass and converted into ingots.

Preparation for this process consists of mixing the ashes with certain metal fluxes and lead, and then molding them into briquets of a convenient size for handling.

The reason for this expedient is that were the ashes otherwise thrown into the furnace the terrific blasts of air necessary for producing a white heat would blow them away into the air through the chimney.

The smelting furnace is a bottle-shaped pot with a door above the bulge, or in the neck of the bottle. About half way between its base and door force draught pipes are inserted from four sides, and one-third distance from the blow pipes to the base is a pipe opening, through which the molten slag, lead, etc., flows out while the heavier metals, such as gold, silver and platinum, precipitate to the bottom, where they are discharged from another pipe aperture.

When the fire is kindled with paper, excelsior, oil and other highly inflammable material, the evacuating pipes are plugged up with clay.

Coke is added, and as it turns into white heat the ash and litharge briquets are added. When the metal begins to melt, it precipitates to the bottom of the furnace, according to its specific gravity and the flux floats on top. On the flux floats the fire at the mouth of the force draughts.

When the metal is thoroughly reduced to a molten condition the clay cap of the upper evacuating pipe is knocked off, allowing the flux and slag to run off. Then the lower pipe is likewise opened and the composite molten metal of gold, silver, etc., runs out and is discharged into bolds, forming ingots.

From the smelter the ingots of gold and silver are sent to the United States assay office in Wall street, where they are officially assayed and tamped. They are then rolled or beaten or molded into commercial form, and are disposed of as required.

In the early days, when this industry began, jewelers, etc., thought it easy to exchange their old worn out floors for a new hardwood one, but as time went on they became wise to the accumulations of wealth in them.

Some such floors are worth several thousand dollars, and the bench of a gold polisher or sign painter has a proportionate value. When a floor is taken up the greatest care is exercised in gathering every bit of dust or dirt. "The richest deposit," said a man prominent in this business, "is not in the floor itself, but in the joints and dust on the plaster and laths under the floor.

"To gather this dust we use fine varnish brushes, and it sometimes takes a man several hours to sweep between two beams.

"The uneven surface of the plaster and all the holes have to be carefully cleaned, and each little pile of dust is scooped up and put into a receptacle with the greatest care. The cleaning up of one floor, with walls and ceilings, sometimes consumes days of labor."

REUNITED AFTER FORTY YEARS

Seattle Woman Finds Long-Lost Brother in County Jail.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 22.—After accepting for two days the hospitality of a sister whom he had not seen for forty years, and who found him in the county jail, where he had been taken to await an examination as to his sanity, aged D. W. Beaton again disappeared. His sister, who gave her name as Mrs. Meston, reported the matter to the police and between her sobs urged the officers to do all in their power to locate the missing man.

The story of the meeting of brother and sister after such a lapse of time is interesting. They parted in Leith, Scotland, when the man was only 29 years of age, and a small newspaper story telling of the man's plight resulted in the sister going to the county jail to see if he could by any possiblity be her brother, who had long since been mourned for dead.

The meeting was a sad one and when the sister left the jail she took her brother with her, telling the officers that she would care for him until he was able to work.

During the interval between his saying good-by when he left home to seek his fortune and this meeting, the brother had met with many vicissitudes, and when found was poverty stricken and broken in health, his condition being augmented by a return of the trouble which a wound in his head causes him from time to time.

To the officers at the county jail Mrs Meston stated that she had just received word that her brother was at Monto Cristo, and that he had secured work with a man by whom he had been employed in the past.

"He told me nothing of his intentions," said Mrs. Meston, "and must have walked the entire distance, as he had no money when he left my house. I have been very much worried since he left the house, and will take pains to find out whether or not he is in comfort. He could have remained with me as long as he wished, and I am at a loss to account for his leaving as he did."

BOILER IN CHICAGO BLOWS UP; ONE DEAD.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—A panic among the guests of the Windormere hotel, Fifty-sixth street and Cornell avenue, followed the explosion early of a steam boiler in the basement. The accident caused the death of John Rapkoch, engineer and the serious injury of Mrs. Seeta May, a guest. The explosion partially wrecked the hotel building and damaged adjacent residences and apartment buildings. The guests of the hotel were left in darkness by the destruction of the lighting plant and many were obliged to await the arrival of firemen who battered down the doors of their apartments and released them. Fire followed the crash, but was soon under control. The damage was estimated at $15,000.

MERCURY MAKES WRECKS NOT CURES

Thousands who have had their health ruined by Mercury testify that it makes wrecks instead of cures in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. While it may mask the disease in the system for awhile, when the treatment is left off the trouble returns with renewed violence, combined with the disastrous effects of this powerful mineral. Mercury, and Potash, which is also a common treatment for Contagious Blood Poison, eat out the lining of the stomach and bowels, produce chronic dyspepsia, cause the teeth to decay, make spongy, tender gums, affect the bones and muscles, and leave its victims complete physical wrecks. Another effect of this treatment is mercurial Rheumatism, the worst and most hopeless form of this disease. There is but one certain, reliable antidote for this destructive poison, and that is S. S. S. It is the only medicine that is able to go into the blood and cure the disease permanently. S. S. S. does not hide or cover up anything, but so completely drives out the poison that no signs of it are ever seen again. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and while curing Contagious Blood Poison, will drive out the effects of any mineral treatment. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that S. S. S. contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book with instructions for self-treatment and any medical advice wished furnished without charge.

I suffered greatly from Contagious Blood Poison. I consulted physicians who prescribed Mercury. Nothing did me any good—in fact the treatment proved more harmful than beneficial. A friend told me that S. S. S. had certainly cured him, and I immediately commenced its use, and in a short while I could find no trace of the disease. This was two years ago, and I can truthfully say I am entirely cured.

SLIGHTLY STRONGER

Wheat Firmer—Trade Restricted by Interrupted Wire Service.

Flax Weak Early But Develops Some Strength at Low Point.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 22.—Demoralized wire service had the effect of curtailing business this morning and the market moved within rather narrow limits. Scarcely any of the Monday statistics were obtainable here, the world's shipments being about all that came in. They were a little less than expected, being 8,304,000 bus for the week, against 8,633,000 bus the previous week and 7,056,000 bus last year. Liverpool closed ½d higher and Paris ½c higher. The closing prices in all markets were a little nigher. The May option in Duluth advanced ⅛c, in Chicago and Minneapolis, ⅛-¼c, in New York, ½c, and in Winnipeg was unchanged.

Corn was firmer, the May option in Chicago being ⅛c higher. Liverpool was ⅞d higher. World's shipments of corn last week were 6,261,000 bus, against 5,558,000 bus the previous week and 4,578,000 bus last year.

May oats in Chicago were unchanged.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 92, against 28 last year, and at Minneapolis 648, against 669 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 750 against 697 last year. Chicago receipts were 14 against 24 last year.

Wheat was steady in the local market, May wheat opened ⅛c higher at 85⅛c and went to 85¼c at 10, dropping to 85c at 10:12. At 11:10 the price advanced to 85¼c again, dropped to 85⅛c at 12:50, and at 1:02 went to 85¼-⅜c. The closing price was 85⅜c, a gain of ⅛c over Saturday. July wheat was inactive and closed at 86¼c, a gain of ¼c over Saturday.

Trading in flax was steady during the entire session. The market was weak at the opening, but bracced up, the buying at the low point being very strong. Flax was ¾c lower in London. May flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.18, fell to $1.16, rallied to $1.17⅜, fell to $1.17⅛, rallied to $1.17⅞, again dropped to $1.17, advanced to $1.18 and closed at $1.17⅜, a loss of ½c over Saturday.

July flax opened ¾c lower at $1.15¼, fell to $1.17 and rallied finally to $1.15¾, fell to $1.14 and closed at $1.15⅜, a loss of ⅝c over Saturday. September opened ¼c lower at $1.15 and fell to $1.14¼. The closing price was $1.17½.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Grain Gossip.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The market opened strong on firmer Liverpool cables and cold weather. Stocks of wheat decreased 168,000 bus over last week, and 1,496,000 bus over same week last year. Indications point to the close approach of the time when the wheat will be reduced in the visible. Wheat has been remarkably strong this morning, which we bodieve is an indication that the trade appreciates the importance of the position wheat occupies in the world's markets, and with the ever increasing demand, the price is bound to work higher, with possible frequent set backs, which, however, will not extend far. The market was somewhat devoid of character most of the day. Prices for several days has been of a scalping nature as it is too early for any concentrated upward movement, and on the soft places, such as last Saturday, wheat should be bought.

Flax was off a little at the opening on lower foreign cables, and enbles from India reporting rain. Offerings were scarce and prices rapidly advanced and to the opening figures. Support seemed to be somewhat lacking, thus governing the market. Trade was comparatively light, awaiting news. Argentine reports are of no more encouraging nature than they have been for some weeks, and this little rain in India is likely to have no material effect on American values, for it will take many of them to even save the crop, such as it now is. The fluctuations give fine opportunities for purchases at the lower figures, and we are in favor of the buying side on any of these dips.

G. C. SWALLOW NOT TO BE TRIED

Indictment Against Him Dismissed in United States Court.

Judge Amidon today dismissed the indictment of the United States against George C. Swallow, of the firm of Shallow & Hopkins, one of the partners of which, L. J. Hopkins, was acquitted in United States court Saturday on the charge of conspiring to defraud the government out of lands. Mr. Washburn, attorney for the defendant, moved that if the case was not dismissed it be tried at once. Assistant District Attorney Ewert argued against the motion, but it was granted.

The trial of Ed J. Straw, charged with perjury in a land case, is now on trial.

HEAVY SLEET AT ST. LOUIS

Street Car Traffic Badly Hampered—Communication Cut Off.

St. Louis, Jan. 22.—A blanket of sleet two inches thick covers the ground this morning with the temperature at 10 above and a fine sleet blowing. Street car traffic was badly tampered and railroad traffic was delayed. Telegraph communications with Chicago and points east of St. Louis was poor early in the morning, when it suddenly ceased at 8 o'clock and three hours later had not been resumed. At the telegraph offices it was stated that communication was being effected east of here in a slow, roundabout fashion, but the service was badly interfered with on account of the sleet.

Kansas City, Jan. 22.—Close to zero weather with a high wind and at some points a light snow, were the weather conditions today in this part of the Southwest. The coldest point reported to the local weather bureau was Dodge City, Kas., where the thermometer registered 2 degrees above zero. At Kansas City and Oklahoma City it was 12 degrees above. The predictions are for zero weather generally over this locality tonight. A storm of snow is reported to be general in Arkansas today.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—This city today experienced the warmest Jan. 22 in sixteen years.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Market Started Out Strong With Steadily Rising Tendency.

Reading Made New High Record and Anaconda Advanced.

New York, Jan. 22.—The stock market opened strong. Toward noon St. Paul started upward and prices elsewhere advanced, Reading rising to 169½, a new record, and Anaconda touching 282. The tone was firm at 1 o'clock in spite of realizing.

BLOODSHED AT WARSAW

Infantry Shoot Down Socialists Who Are Celebrating "Red Sunday."

Warsaw, Jan. 22.—The anniversary of "Red Sunday" in St. Petersburg is being observed here today by the strike of employes of factories which has already been marked by bloodshed. A detachment of infantry fired on a number of Socialists wre were compelling shopkeeprrs of the Withoski market to close their places.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 22.—"Red Sunday" anniversary is being observed here and at other cities. So far there has been no disorder.

The frequent patrols of all the streets this morning are marched at wide intervals in battalion formation. This is almost the only indication that the day is the anniversary of "Red Sunday."

The stores are open and the ordinary life of the city is progressing as usual. Up to 11 o'clock no trouble of any kind has been reported. The streets were crowded with people, many wearing bands of crape on their arms.

Citizens!

TELEGRAPH WIRES DOWN

Telephones, too, Suffer In Storm all Over Country.

Stock Quotations Are Few and Little News is Received.

Storms played havoc with the telegraph and telephone lines throughout the country last night and today and as a result Duluth's communication with that part of the United States which lies outside the boundaries of Minnesota was slight.

Wires were down everywhere and great inconvenience was caused to business concerns and individuals. Those which probably suffered most were the grain and stock brokers, the Board of Trade and the Associated Press.

Nearly all the morning, the stock brokers were almost entirely without quotations and no quotations from the Boston copper exchange were received all day nor did the combined efforts of everyone interested secure them.

Quotations on Amalgamated and Anaconda received at Paine, Webber & Company's office by way of New York, New Orleans and Minneapolis and were New York quotations. No word of the prices on North Butte was received.

Great inconvenience was caused at the Board of Trade. Private wires were nearly all out of commission.

The tie-up all over the country naturally greatly hampered that gigantic news service concern, the Associated Press. The wires to Minneapolis and St. Paul were all right but those cities had very little communication with the rest of the country. As a result, very little telegraph news was received at The Herald office.

One wire out of St. Paul to Salt Lake was working and Minneapolis had communication with St. Louis on the long distance telephone. St. Louis was able to connect with Cleveland but communication went no further.

The following prices on Bisbee stocks prevailed in Duluth today:

Calumet & Arizona $122 bid, Calumet & Pittsburg $36.75 bid, Junction $26.50 bid, Lake Superior & Pittsburg $49.50 bid and Pittsburg & Duluth $25.50 bid. Keweenaw was $18.50 bid.

BRANDED AS A FALSIFIER

Attack Made on Dr. Wiley by Bee Keepers' Union.

Statement of Twenty-Five Years Ago is the Cause.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—While it is generally admitted that strained honey is sometimes more or less adulterated, those interested in the production of honey insist that the presence of honey in the comb is absolute proof of its purity. This fact would be accepted by all, say the honey men, if it were not for the statement made twenty-five years ago by Dr. H. W. Wiley, now chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, in a scientific paper in which he gravely asserted: "In commercial honey which is entirely free from bee mediation, the comb is made of paraffine and filled with pure glucose by appropriate machinery. This honey, for whiteness and beauty, rivals the celebrated real white clover honey of Vermont, but can be sold at an immense profit at one-half the price."

When Dr. Wiley's attention was originally called to his statement and its accuracy denied, he stated that when written it was "meant for scientific pleasantry" and intimated that the bee keepers who resented it "undergo a certain cerebral inspiration which renders them incapable of seeing a joke." As the National Bee Keepers' union did not appreciate his humor, but believed this to be a serious matter and one not to be trifled with, A. I. Root, of Medina, O., at that time vice-president of the National Bee Keepers' union, offered $1,000 for a sample of manufactured honey in the comb, which drew from Dr. Wiley the statement that he had received the information on which he based his first statement from a Dr. E. J. Hallock, of Boston, who was, unfortunately, dead. Thus the statement Dr. Wiley first made as a plain fact and then characterized as a scientific pleasantry, was subsequently claimed by him to have been made on the authority of a deceased chemist. Since that time, so far as known, Dr. Wiley never corrected his statement about paraffine combs and artificial honey, but, on the contrary, the statement, according to Dr. Wiley, "has appeared, I believe in almost every publication in the country."

Because of the widespread publication of Dr. Wiley's statement and its incorporation in scientific works, both American and foreign, the honey men claim that their business has been great claim that their business has been greatly injured and to offset the effect of this "scientific pleasantry" have formed the Honey Producers' league to conduct a campaign of education. As the first step in this campaign a remarkable document is being circulated among senators and members of congress giving certain correspondence with Dr. Wiley with comments thereon and bearing the euphonious title of "The Wiley Honey Lie." Apparently the Honey Producers' league is a trifle sore on the eminent exploiter of the "poison squad" for in the "Honey Lie" appears the following language applied to Wiley:

"Therefore he 'knowingly, wilfully and maliciously' lied out of the whole cloth just to cause a sensation and to injure an honest pursuit. It is astonishing that any man could make such a brazen-faced confession without blushing for the very infamy it exhibited! To lie for the filthy lucre it brings is bad enough, but when he permits that lie to be copied all over the world and to be used to injure an honest business without making the least endeavor to arrest its evil effect by an honest contradiction—the crime is doubled."

Commenting on Dr. Wiley's statement, Prof. Eaton, the well known authority on pure food, is quoted in the "Honey Lie" as saying: "What is the cause of these unwise statements? First, perhaps desire for publicity. Second, to alarm the public to a degree of food adulteration. Third, thorough ignorance."

According to those interested, the fight will be kept up and if Dr. Wiley does not correct his statements he will have a posthumus reputation second only to that of Ananias. The Honey Producers' league was organized last year particularly to combat Dr. Wiley's statements. It is incorporated in Illinois and has headquarters in Chicago.

Meanwhile, the National Bee Keepers' union has a standing offer of $1,000 to any one who will produce two pounds of manufactured honey in the comb as described by Dr. Wiley. This offer has been standing more than a year but has never been claimed. As far as the records show Wiley is the only one who knows anything about such imitation honey and he obtained his information, so he says, from a chemist who unfortunately died twenty years ago and who cannot, therefore, substantiate Dr. Wiley's statements.

EXAGGERATED REPORT.

Dr. Herschfield Did Not Advise Sending Bombs to Russia.

The report of Dr. M. S. Herschfield's speech at the Kalamazoo hall, yesterday afternoon, as published in this morning's paper, is claimed to be like the report of Mark Twain's death, who declared it to be an exaggeration. The meeting was called by three branches of the Public Ownership party of Duluth—the English, Finnish and Polish—and the speeches which were made were delivered in those three tongues.

The report mentioned says that the doctor, who was chairman of the meeting, advised those present to send bombs to Russia with which to raise things in general. Dr. Herschfield denies this. He says he did advise those present to send money to their friends there with which to buy guns and ammunition with which to fight for their freedom if it became necessary.

This he does not consider so very radical, for it was only about a century ago that America was asking for the same thing from its friends, and only eight or nine years ago since it was doing the same thing for Cuba.

SENTENCES OF THE MURDERERS

Of the Presbyterian Missionaries in Lien Chou, China.

New York, Jan. 22.—The first report of the commission of inquiry into the Lien Chou massacre reached New York today from Canton, China, whence it was sent by the Rev. Dr. Henry V. Noyes. He reports to the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, under which all the murdered missionaries had been working, that the commission has returned to Canton, but that the members would have to go again to Lien Chou, as there are more criminals to be arrested when they can be found. The United States commission, he says, is not judicial, and the measure of guilt and punishment is fixed solely by the Chinese government, although the American officers assist in the examination of witnesses, which is thorough and persistent. Dr. Noyes says the whole investigation seems to have been conducted with great carefulness and impartiality both on the part of the United States government and the Chinese. Wen Taotai who represents the viceroy, is a very intelligent man, and it was he who fixed the following sentences:

Three—actual murderers—to be decapitated. This sentence was executed before the commissioners left Lien Chou.

Four to be imprisoned for five years, two for three years, two for one, and one for six months.

Two to be cangued.

Five to be bambooed.

As to the criminals who have so far eluded capture and justice, they also are to be punished after arrest. A full report of the trial has not yet been received in this country.

Dr. Noyes speaks of the recognition given by the United States commission and by the missionaries to the invaluable services of the man who saved Miss Patterson's life. It was the brave act of a hero. As Consul-General Lay said in an address to him: "Your brave, noble deed was the one bright spot in that dark day."

This man went with the murderers into the cave to try and save at least some of the missionaries. He could be of no help to Mrs. Machle, Amy, Dr. Chestnut or Mr. and Mrs. Peale. But farther back in the cave he found Miss Patterson and said to her: "I am a believer in Jesus. Follow me and I will save you." He took her to a deep pit like a well, and helped her down into it, concealing her under an overhanging rock. The searchers threw wisps of lighted straw down into the pit, but failed to discover them. Miss Patterson asked him while they were hiding, whether he was really a believer in Jesus. He said he was not. "Then why did you say so?" she asked. "I feared that otherwise you would not have trusted me and I could not have saved you."

Dr. Noyes also tells the story of a little boy, a scholar in the mission school, who came to see Dr. Machle, with a scar showing that he had received an ugly gash on the head, which had healed. He said that he had followed the missionaries to the cave and there received the cut, and that Dr. Chestnut, while at the tree before she was killed, tore off a portion of the skirt of her dress and bound up the wound. It was the last patient she ever treated.

In a letter also received today by the Presbyterian board, from the Rev. A. A. Fulton, it is stated that the losses by burning and looting of the Lien Chou station will probably aggregate $50,000 Mexican, and the claims will be quickly paid.

OPHIR TUNNEL

Watch It!

According to our best information, the Ophir Tunnel company has purchased the Buckhorn mine, adjoining the Ophir Tunnel, and have consolidated the two properties into one, to be known as the Buckhorn Ore company. The new company will have three million shares, par value $1.00. One million shares go to the Ophir Tunnel company, share for share.

Therefore Ophir Tunnel stock is as good as Buckhorn Ore company stock.

The principal officers of the Buckhorn Ore company are slated as follows: President, A. D. Thomson, Duluth; vice-president, James A. Butchart, Duluth; secretary and treasurer, A. L. Kern, Milwaukee.

Ophir stock for sale at market price and more information for the asking.

Latest—The Salt Lake Herald of the 14th inst, says that R. M. Atwater, the new manager of the Buckhorn Ore company, left on the 13th for the company's property at Ophir to superintend the work.

Interesting developments are expected next week in regard to the organization of the Buckhorn Ore company.

Devises Neat Folder.

S. A. Thompson of Duluth has arranged a neat and novel advertisement for the firm of Little & Nolte, which is also a very handy thing to carry for the man who has to catch trains at times and is therefore always wanting to know when to start for anywhere. The ad. is in the shape of a neat little eight-page folder called "Upgrante," an obvious abbreviation of "day and night." In the timetable the hours of departing or arriving are printed on a white back ground for day-time while night-time is represented by the figures being printed in white on a black background. The effect is novel and convenient. It informs one at a glance without the superfluous p. m. or a. m. attached, just what time of day to start or when one will reach a destination.

ZERO WEATHER AND KEEN ICE FOR THE CURLERS

Play Was Resumed at Midnight in the Bonspiel Events.

Chances Are Good for Finishing Everything Up Before Night.

With zero weather and the keenest ice of the winter, play in the bonspiel began at 12.01 o'clock this morning, and at noon the chances appeared bright for the six different events to be cleaned up before night, unless some of them are held up by the same rinks remaining in two or three events.

Most of the games played up to noon today were in the Meyers' event, which has now reached the semi-finals, the only rinks left being Cameron of St. Paul, Stocking of Duluth, Whalen of Fort William and Hastings of Minneapolis.

The Hastings rink of Minneapolis played havoc with the Duluth rinks this morning, putting both the Ron Smith and the MacLeod rinks out of the Meyers' event. The Stocking rink also won two games in this event, defeating Halcrow of Bowesmount and Pitblado of Winnipeg.

In the Canadian Sault event, the Rochon rink of Winnipeg reached the finals by defeating A. K. Smith of Superior. The Canadian Sault and Duluth events are nearly completed, but two games remaining to be played in the former and one in the latter. In the former the winner of the Hastings-Cameron game will play Rochon, and in the latter Chisholm of Superior will play Hastings, who won from Campbell of Sault Ste. Marie on a forfeit today.

The Macrae rink of Duluth is apparently just striking its gait. It was badly beaten during the first two days of the bonspiel, but it has been showing steady improved form, and this morning it defeated both the Schnarr and McCutcheon rinks, going into the semi-finals of the Flour City and the International events.

The Hastings rink of Minneapolis bids fair to capture at least one set of prizes. It is in the finals of the Duluth and the semi-finals of the Sault and Meyers' events, and if it keeps on winning, it may tie up one or two of these events until tomorrow.

The Cameron rink of St. Paul is in the semi-finals of both the Meyers and Canadian Sault events, and the Stocking rink of Duluth is in the semi-finals of both the St. Paul jobbers and the Meyers events.

The race for the grand average prize is a pretty one, and apparently lies between the Hastings rink of Minneapolis and the Tom Cameron rink of St. Paul. Hastings has won nine games and lost one, having been defeated by the Stocking rink of Duluth in the first round of the St. Paul jobbers event.

Cameron has won nine games and lost two, having been defeated by the Weir and Macrae rinks.

Rochon of Winnipeg had won seven games and lost two, while Whalen of Fort William has won eight and lost three.

The two games in the semi-finals of the Meyers event were scheduled for the noon drawings today, and it is hoped to have all of the events with the possible exception of the International and Flour City, down to the final round before evening.

One of the features of the last day's play is the magnificent showing made by the Frank Greene rink of Duluth. The Greene rink has reached the prize winning class in the Flour City event, being one of the four rinks left in the semi-final round, and has reached this position without winning a game in the entire bonspiel. It won two games in succession on forfeits, and will come in for a prize in the Flour City event whatever happens.

Following is a summary of the games played this morning:

J. E. MEYERS EVENT.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

The Town of Lansford Almost Wiped Out by Fire.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Lansford, a town 25 miles northwest of here, was almost wiped out by fire Sunday. The estimated loss is $51,000. The entire business district is in ashes and only heroic efforts on the part of the volunteer fire department saved the residence district from destruction. The fire started in the office of the Lansford Times and spread rapidly. In all, ten buildings were burned. When Miss Helena Carlson went to call her brother-in-law, August Foss, she found him cold in death. In the same room were the six small children of the dead man, all sleeping peacefully. The story of Foss' death is a sad one, and the sympathy of the community goes out to the little ones. Nearly three years ago Foss, who then lived at Grand Forks, lost his wife, who died of consumption. Since that time he has been addicted to drink, and it is believed his sudden death was due to an overdose of liquor. He came here last April.

Bismarck—Henry Martin, a young man of Dymond, was killed by foul gas in a deep well he was digging. A man named Caspian, who was helping him, made a heroic attempt to rescue the unfortunate man, and almost lost his own life. Caspian saw Martin lying at the bottom of the well, and without hesitation grasped a rope hanging to the windlass and slid down into the death-dealing hole. He attached the rope to Martin's body, and, although almost overcome by the poisonous fumes, climbed hand over hand up the slender rope until he reached the top, where he fell unconscious in his wife's arms. The rope was quickly raised, bringing Martin's body to the surface, but he was already beyond medical help.

Washburn—By order of the court, Sheriff randin has burned the gambling paraphernalia captured in a raid last July. The state's attorney asked for an order directing the destruction of the property and a date was fixed. At the appointed time several court officials and curious spectators gathered at the place designated for the auto de fe, a field just north of the railroad crossing. The paraphernalia was piled in a heap, oil was poured over it and the sheriff applied the torch. The property destroyed consisted of a roulette wheel, crap table and 1,000 poker chips, worth between $50 and $100.

Wilton—Jacob Muhlstein has been arrested here by United States Deputy Marshall McKay, and will be given a hearing at Bismarck, on a charge of aiding in the transportation and concealment of smuggled property. The arrest of Muhlstein was brought about by Detective Sergeant P. M. Eagan of the Canadian mounted police. It is alleged that Muhlstein has been acting in connection with Isadore Katenlinsky, who was arrested at Bismarck a few days ago on a charge of smuggling horses, farm implements and other property into the United States from Canada.

It is alleged that in Muhlstein's possession were found a fur cat and several cases of soap, part of the property which Katenlinsky is accused of having smuggled.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Judge J. H. McCoy today granted the petition of former Governor Herreid, as attorney for the Great Northern road, to hold a special term of circuit court and empanel a jury to hear the condemnation proceedings begun against the owners of the Park Place hotel by the road, to secure the ownership of the hotel property for a site for the downtown station of the Great Northern. The date for the special term was set for Feb. 16.

Jacob Ressler, a chimney sweep, was brought to Aberdeen late Thursday, charged with robbing the Mallett hardware store at Groton of a quantity of tools. He is held under bonds of $500 to await the action of the circuit court. Ressler was suspected of the robbery, which occurred several days ago, and when his room at the hotel was searched, the stolen goods were discovered. He acknowledges his guilt.

Lead—The local Northwestern train, while passing over the trestle just out of town, struck and killed a man believed to be G. W. La Belle, a Frenchman. The body was discovered later by some young men of Deadwood. It was lying beside the track and was mangled almost beyond recognition. From the position of the body it is thought the man must have been lying on the tracks when the cow-catcher struck him. He was about 50 years of age and plainly dressed. His name was learned by means of papers in his pocket.

Pierre—Friday night John Colarberg, who was employed in the supply yards on the west side of the river, went through an airhole while crossing on the ice, and disappeared. He was in advance of two companions and called once for help. Before anything could be done to save him he was gone. He came here from some town in Minnesota about a year ago and has been working as a laborer since that time.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU.

Few People Realize the Importance of Good Digestion Until it is Lost.

Many people suffer from dyspepsia and do not know it. They feel mean, out of sorts, peevish, do not sleep well, do not have a good keen appetite, do not have the inclination and energy for physical or mental work they once had, but at the same time do not feel any particular pain or distress in the stomach. Yet all this is the result of poor digestion, an insidious form of Dyspepsia which can only be cured by a remedy specially intended to cure it and make the digestive organs act naturally, and properly digest the food eaten. Bitters, after dinner pills and nerve tonics will never help the trouble; they don't reach it. The new medical discovery does. It is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is a specific for dyspepsia and indigestion. It cures because it thoroughly digests all wholesome food taken into the stomach, whether the stomach is in good working order or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by digesting the food, instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, gives it a much needed rest and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

When you are nervous, run down and sleepless, don't make the common mistake of supposing your nervous system needs treatment and fill your stomach with powerful nerve tonics which make you feel good for a little while only to fall back farther than ever.

Your nerves are all right but they are starved, they want food.

Nourish them with wholesome every-day food and plenty of it, well digested, and you can laugh at nerve tonics and medicine.

But the nerves will not be nourished from a weak, abused stomach, but when the digestion has been made perfect by the use of this remedy all nervous symptoms disappear.

Who ever heard of a man or woman blessed with a vigorous digestion and good appetite being troubled with their nerves?

Good digestion means a strong nervous system, abundance of energy, and capacity to enjoy the good things of life.

Stuart's Dyspepsia tablets will certainly set your stomach and digestive organs right; they can't help but do it because they nourish the body by digesting the food eaten, and rest the stomach.

You get nourishment and rest at one and the same time, and that is all the worn out dyspeptic needs to build him up and give new life to every organ and an added zest to every pleasure.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a God-send to the army of men and women with weak stomachs and nerves and justly merits the claim of being one of the most worthy medical discoveries of the time.

RAILROADS

MODIFYING LIABILITY

Steps Proposed to Lessen Claims for Lost Baggage.

C. M. Corcoran Goes to Minneapolis for Adams Express Co.

The question of modifying the liability of railways, for baggage lost or destroyed, has been before the baggage and passenger departments for some time. It is proposed to print on all forms of contract tickets the following provisions, as recommended by the American Association of General Baggage Agents:

"This ticket entitles the purchaser to the free carriage of his baggage, consisting of wearing apparel, provided same does not weigh more than 150 pounds and does not exceed $100 in value. Excess in weight or declared value will be charged for at current tariff rates."

As a rule for the guidance of passengers and baggagemen, the following is also proposed:

"When the passenger stipulates for a greater sum than $100 to be paid in case baggage is injured or lost, the charge for the increased valuation will be one-half of the current excess baggage rate for 100 pounds excess baggage for each $100 or fraction of $100 increased value stipulated. Excess baggage checks must be issued for collections made on this account."

Within recent years, according to the Railway Age, the claims for baggage have steadily increased, and it is urged as a strong reason why roads should protect themselves that while a few years ago the majority of claims could be settled within the specified amount of the limitation printed on the ticket, which was in some cases $50, in a few cases $150, and in the great majority of cases $100, nowadays it is not unusual to have claims filed on one lot of personal baggage to the extent of from $500 to $5,000.

The limitation of these alleged exorbitant claims, it is argued, is a mere matter of justice to the railroads. It is also a matter of justice to the passengers in providing that the carrier shall not transport and insure for the same compensation $100 worth of baggage for one person and $5,000 worth for another. Passengers are further benefited in that they are not forced either to send their luggage by express or to sign an arbitrary contract limiting the value of their effects. They may insure them to any amount. At least the railroads claim this is a benefit.

A 5 per cent charge for excess insurance has been made on Canadian railways for a short time, and has become one of the fundamental rules of the Eastern Canadian Passenger association, receiving the approval of the railway commission of Canada. The proposal to extend the insurance plan to railways throughout the United States was introduced by General Baggage Agent Skinner of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad.

GOES TO MINNEAPOLIS.

C. M. Corcoran, since 1890 agent for the Adams Express Co. in Duluth, has been appointed route agent in charge of the lines of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Co. His headquarters will be at Minneapolis, and he will have supervision over nearly 200 offices.

In point of service Mr. Corcoran is one of the oldest men in the express business at the Head of the Lakes, and his circle of friends here is a large one. Although glad to hear of his promotion, they rather dislike to see him leave Duluth. Mr. Corcoran left for Minneapolis today, but the Adams Express Co. will not begin to operate over the lines of the Minneapolis & St. Louis until Feb. 1.

ROBBED OF GEMS WORTH $75,000

British Detectives After Thief Who Stole Jewels in London

New York, Jan. 22.—That Lady Parker, wife of Sir Gilbert Parker, was robbed of $75,000 in jewels several weeks ago in the Carlton hotel, London, has been revealed in this city since the departure of a representative of Scotland Yard for Palm Beach, Fla. For more than a week the London detective worked in this city, independently of the central office, visiting pawn shops and following other trails.

In the recent political campaign in England Lady Parker took up a temporary residence in the Carlton. She was Miss A. E. Van Tine of this city, daughter of the late A. A. Van Tine, and wealthy in her own right. Her jewels are well known and on this occasion she had in a casket in her room containing part of her collection.

There came a knock at her door one morning and a well dressed man was discovered. At sight of Lady Parker he apologized profusely, saying he had made a mistake, having been called to the room of a friend.

Little was thought of the incident and Lady Parker went to make some calls. When she returned she discovered that the jewel case and its contents had been taken. Nothing else had been disturbed. Entrance had been obtained by a master key.

It was Lady Parker's description of the man who had rapped at her door that caused the Scotland Yard man to take slip for this city. The detective authorities thought they recognized in it a man who has made a reputation as a sneak thief and hotel thief on two continents. It was learned he had sailed for New York. He arrived, but there were traces of him here, and after a week's investigation a clew was found which indicated that he had gone to Florida.

That Craving for DRINK

Don't stand idly by and allow some poor unfortunate victim of the drink habit to lose gradually every vestige of manhood.

Don't, when you can save him.

White Ribbon Remedy

will effect a lasting cure.

Anyone can administer it in a glass of water, tea, coffee or food without the patient's knowledge. No taste. No odor.

It gradually destroys the diseased appetite and in its place plants a dislike for all intoxicating drinks. The nerves become healthy. Vigor and energy take the place of dullness and inactivity.

Write to-day to White Ribbon Remedy Co., 218 Tremont St., Boston, Mass., for a trial package and letter of medical advice free in plain, sealed envelope. All letters confidential and destroyed when answered.

White Ribbon Remedy sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail in plain package, price $1.00.

AN AMERICAN MANUFACTURER WHO HIRES THOUSANDS OF MEN IN RUSSIA TAKES GLOOMY VIEW OF SITUATION

Says the Russian People Are Not Ready for Reforms.

Czar's Manifesto Has Only Served to Demoralize Masses.

Ignorant People Easily Become the Prey of the Agitators.

Moscow, Jan. 23.—Alexander Barry, a naturalized American, who is among the most prominent manufacturers of Moscow, takes an exceedingly gloomy view of the situation industrially and politically. Mr. Barry employs from 400 to 3,000 men and unquestionably has a more profound knowledge of Russian conditions than any other person in the empire. He is convinced that the Russian people are not ripe for a full constitutional regime.

The opening of the floodgates of agitation by the publication of the imperial reform manifesto only served to demoralize a portion of the mass which had already been disturbed by the agitators.

Continuing, Mr. Barry said: "The ignorant masses really have none of the political aspirations attributed to them by the agitators, but owing to their poverty they are easy prey to the appeals for liberty, which for them means license. That they neither understand nor pray for true political rights is proved by the fact that in Moscow less than 10 per cent, and in the provinces not over 2 per cent of the voters will register.

TROUSERS FOR MARRIED WOMEN

But Spinsters May Not Legally Wear Them, Says Magistrate.

New York, Jan. 23.—"Married women may wear trousers, but you'll have to wait until you qualify," said Magistrate O'Reilly in the Manhattan avenue court, Brooklyn, to Elsie Williams of No. 97 Third avenue, Manhattan, who was before him on a charge of masquerading in man's attire. No evidence had to be presented by Capt. Gardner, of the Stagg street police station, the complainant. Miss Williams supplied it herself, for when she appeared in court she still wore her brother's clothes, the police having been unable to find a gown for her. It did not need the tumbling of her yellow locks about her shoulders to show she was a girl, and a good-looking one. Her face told that. It shaded from shell pink to beet red, the latter hue particularly about the eyes, as, weeping, she explained she had donned the all-too-candid garments on a bet with a woman friend.

"The law permits women with husbands to wear trousers," said the magistrate, with mock severity, "but I find"—he pretended to look up a section of the penal code—"that it is forbidden for spinsters to do anything of the sort. 'A femme sole,'" he continued, professing to quote from the law book—"shall not assume the apparel of the opposite sex.' You have violated the law, young woman, and may be sent to jail. What have you to say why sentence should not be passed upon you?"

He was not trifling with justice, but seeking to frighten the pretty young prisoner into a resolve never to repeat the offense. Elsie's 19 years had not covered sufficient experience to give her anything to say, save that she had bet $2 with Mrs. Rose Stewart of 27 Stuyvesant street, that she could traverse Brooklyn in such array without detection.

She not only wore her brother's clothes, but was accompanied by him when she sailed east of the bridge on Wednesday night, and, patterning her demeanor after his, she doubtless would have won her wager had not a canary-colored curl strayed from beneath the dark wig she wore when, after a trip about the borough, she rode in a Graham avenue car. Capt. Gardner, who was riding toward his precinct headquarters, got a glimpse of the curl before Miss Williams pushed it back. To assure himself, he purposely trod on the girl's toe, and when a feminine scream followed the act he gently took the pouting "boy" into custody. Miss Williams was followed by half the men passengers until Gardner drove them away. The other men were chaperoned by their better halves, and didn't have to be driven back. All the unmarried men in the court room, and the married ones who had escaped their wives, stared eagerly at Miss Williams when she was led before the bar of justice. She seemed duly impressed by her unpleasant predicament, and the magistrate's brief lecture, so sentence was suspended and she went home in a borrowed frock.

CUT OUT DEMOCRATS;

Gerrymandering Bill Redistricting Two Iowa Congressional Boundaries.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 2.—Consternation in Democratic ranks was caused yesterday afternoon by the introduction by Representative Cummings of the long-expected gerrymandering bill, designed to make the Second congressional district in the state surely Republican, by taking Johnson and Iowa counties therefrom and adding them to the Fifth district, receiving in exchange from the Fifth district Jones and Cedar counties. This would place Congressman Cousins in the Second district, in which he could not hope to get a nomination.

Senator Cale of Mason City introduced a joint resolution providing for a woman suffrage amendment to the constitution, and declares it will pass.

A sensation was caused in the house yesterday by the resignation of A. B. Wheeler of Cerro Gordo county, as assistant doorkeeper. He is a newspaper man and Cummins adherent. The latter forces secured his appointment, despite the opposition of Senator Gale and Representative Stansberry of Mason City. He contributed an article to the Rockwell Phonograph, saying the legislators had their "feet in the trough." Gale and Stansberry charged him with lese majeste, and threatened to demand a public apology and resignation, and he fled. After an absence of three days he sent his resignation, despite assurances of the Cummins leaders that he had committed no unpardonable crime.

NO WATER IN THE STAND PIPES AT WEST HOTEL

Employe Testifies at Inquest That He Found Hose Useless at Time of Fire.

Minneapolis, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Arthur J. Atwater, the bell boy who discovered the fire at the West hotel, was on the witness stand at the coroner's investigation in Minneapolis.

At 7:12 o'clock he had gone up on the elevator and back again, and there was no fire in the shaft at that time.

He noticed the glare of the reflection of flames on the marble columns. Stepping to the shaft of the elevator he saw a flame overhead about three feet long, running up the guide rail.

He tried to get the clerk to ring for the fire department, but the clerk thought it was better to wait and see how much the fire amounted to. The boy then turned on the stand pipes, and with the help of another boy pulled out the hose, but no water came.

Atwater, then, was about to turn in an alarm himself when he was stopped by the clerk, who went to look at the fire, thus losing about thirty seconds, before the alarm was turned in.

James R. Wood, the bell boy who had been on the night watch, testified that he was standing near the captain's stand when he heard the cry of fire from the elevator boy. The latter ran out of the elevator and then ran back and ran up again. The blaze appeared to be coming up from the basement.

Assistant Building Inspector Lindquist gave his opinion on the stand that if all the inmates of the hotel had been awakened when the fire was first discovered all would have had plenty of time to get out, but the employes did not appear to know their duties. Inspector Frank Furlong of the building department, said that when he had inspected the building several months ago, he was told by Col. Wood that the employes were thoroughly instructed in how to act in case of fire, and that there was a fire annunciator in every room, tested every twenty-four hours.

Joe Marcio assistant in the baggage room testified that he first saw the fire in the elevator shaft at 7:15 when he started to go to the office. He had been in the hotel since 5:45 a. m.

The next witness was Isaac M. Rief, the bell captain, who was on watch at the time of the fire. He was in the dining room at the time. A commotion across the court in the house made him aware of the danger. He hurried to see that the fire alarms were turned on and working. Opening the door leading to the elevator shaft he saw that it was all ablaze. Running up the back stairway, thinking that was the best way of escape for the guests, he called for them to come out that way. Smoke filled all the halls except that shut off by a brick wall to the rear. All the help could do was to get the people out, and though the employes had been drilled in the use of the fire apparatus, the alarm was so sudden that they did not get a chance to make use of their knowledge of its workings. Later in the morning he noticed that there was water in the hose on the third floor.

William W. Maloney, the hotel houseman, testified when he first heard of the fire, he was going from the fifth to the sixth floor. The elevator shaft seemed to lift up, but he could see no flames. He then rushed to the assistance of those who were pulling the hose to the elevator shaft, when the fire shot up in the shaft. Maloney let go of the hose and ran to give the alarm, so he said. He remained on the sixth and seventh floors, arousing the guests until the arrival of the firemen.

George F. Wood, who operated the elevator from 6 o'clock that morning, said when he first noticed the fire he had got a ring from the sixth floor. As he lifted his hand to the dial he saw a little flame on the guide, which had been oiled, under the other elevator, which was descending. He ran his elevator up to the sixth floor, left the car and shouted "fire" to alarm the guests.

John S. Gorey, the baggageman, said he had just taken the first hose from the reel when Maloney told him to telephone to the basement for water. Gorey failed to get water when he turned on the connection, and running to the shaft of the elevator he saw the flame dash out.

An adjournment was taken to next Monday.

ROCKEFELLER'S WIG POSSIBLY A DISGUISE.

New York, Jan. 23.—When John D. Rockefeller took to wearing a wig less than a year ago, he adopted a disguise that has proved almost impenetrable. It was thought when the black and gray head covering first made its appearance that the oil man decided to wear it because of his abhorrence of a bald head.

A close friend of Mr. Rockefeller, however, says it was not millionaire's vanity that prompted the change, but his desire to conceal his identity from an inquisitive public. Mr. Rockefeller, because of his hairless head and sharp features, used to be easily recognized when traveling about the country. It is believed that the process-servers in the Standard Oil investigation may have passed Mr. Rockefeller on the street without recognizing him.

PRIEST ASTOUNDS FLOCK

By Declaring That Church at Ardoyne, Ireland, is Haunted.

Belfast, Jan. 23.—Father Hubert, the Roman Catholic rector at Ardoyne, has caused a sensation by declaring the church haunted. His ghost talk was made in a sermon. On retiring to rest a few nights previously, he said, a knock came to his bedroom door. A similar knock was heard by another priest in a neighboring room, and both opened their doors simultaneously. Both saw the figure of a Passonist father pass along the corridor and disappear.

For several nights the ghostly incident was repeated, until at last Father Hubert, in the presence of several other other Passionist fathers, called upon the apparition to speak.

The response came quickly. The ghost, speaking to Father Hubert, said he had not fulfilled a promise made when he (the apparition) was in the flesh to pray for him a certain number of times on certain occasions.

Father Hubert then told the astonished congregation that he had made such a promise to a Passionist father, since dead, whose ghost the apparition was recognized to be by himself and two others of the fathers who had seen it.

ELEPHANT REMEMBERED

Tricks That it Had Not Performed in Many Years.

New York, Jan. 23.—Bazil, a 50-year-old elephant, unhesitatingly went through a serious of tricks yesterday it had not performed for twenty-three years. The test was brought about by an argument between Peter Barlow, the elephant trainer, and Dr. Martin J. Potter, a veterinary surgeon, which resulted in a wager of $100.

Bazil was one of the first elephants brought to this country by P. T. Barnum. It was in charge of "Bob" Fryer in Barnum's circus. At that time Peter Barlow was a bare-back rider, but a fast friendship grew up between he and Bazil, so the animal executed all the boys' instructions with obedience and zeal.

In 1880 there came a parting. The moment the beast saw Barlow yesterday, though it had not seen him in twenty-three years, it began to trumpet loudly and to "flap" its ears with vigor. The pet followed, and in turn the tests, Bazil going through the old tricks with accuracy and punctuality.

FAMOUS GENERAL ILL

GEN. JOE WHEELER.

New York, Jan. 23.—Brig. Gen. Joseph Wheeler, U. S. A., retired, is seriously ill at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Sterling Smith, in Brooklyn. He has been confined to his bed for three days with a bronchial affection. There is fear that his illness may develop into pneumonia.

COMPLAINANT WITHDRAWS

Duncan Kennedy No Longer Interested in Wilder-Appleby Suit.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Lochren filed an order in the United States circuit court yesterday allowing Duncan Kennedy to withdraw as one of the complainants in the suits brought by the so-called California heirs, attacking the wills of Mrs. Fanny S. Wilder and Mrs. Cornelia Day Wilder Appleby. The suits will be prosecuted by the remaining complainants, in an effort to have the will declared to be void, which would result in the distribution among them of the estates, valued at more than $2,000,000, instead of the money going to the establishment of Amherst Wilder charity for the worthy poor of St. Paul. A suit brought by the same praties in the state courts resulted in the upholding of the validity of the wills.

JOHN H. GRILL NAMED

As Meeker's Successor on State Game and Fish Commission.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—John H. Grill, of Fairmount, is the new appointee to the state game and fish commission to succeed D. W. Meeker, of Moorhead, whose term expires.

The governor has not announced the appointment, but his private secretary has, through Fairmount papers.

The term of Uri Lamprey, of St. Paul, president of the board, also expires. No successor has been named, and the governor will not state whether or not Mr. Lamprey will be reappointed.

SCHOOL TEACHER DEAD.

Barron, Wis., Jan. 23.—A gloom was thrown over this city by word received from Chippewa Falls, Wis., of the sudden death of Miss Mary P. Coleman, language teacher in the high school here for the past year. Miss Coleman was a very accomplished young lady and highly respected by all who knew her. She left for her home at Chippewa Falls two weeks ago, feeling indisposed. An attack of appendicitis was the cause of her death.

THE STEAMER TROJAN STRUCK BY A SOUTHERN LINER AND SENT TO THE BOTTOM OF SOUND IN A DENSE FOG

Steamer Nacoochee Struck Ill-Fated Boat Squarely Amidships.

Trojan Remained Afloat for Three Quarters of an Hour.

Captain and Crew Rescued and Brought Into Boston.

Boston, Jan. 23.—The loss of the steamer Trojan of the Boston & Philadelphia line, in collision with the steamer Nacoochee, of the Savannah line in Vineyard sound last Sunday, was reported here today by the Nacoochee which arrived having on board the captain and crew of the Trojan.

The accident was due to fog. The Nacoochee struck the Trojan amidships, and the latter steamer went to the bottom within three-quarters of an hour, but Capt. Thatcher and the crew of twenty-seven men of the Trojan were taken off by men from the Nacoochee.

A HOMELESS GIRL FALLS UNCONSCIOUS IN STREET

Hunts Long for Work in St. Paul and Then Drops in Exhausted Condition.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cold, tired and homeless, out of work and in despair, Anna Burg, 23 years old, dropped unconscious to the snowy street from sheer exhaustion yesterday morning while searching for employment. She was taken to her home on East Tenth street in a serious condition from exposure and heart trouble, but will recover.

A few days ago the girl, whose home is at Cold Springs, came to St. Paul in the hope of finding some work. She rented a room at 29 East Tenth street, and then set out to look for work, but nobody seemed to want an inexperienced girl from the country, and her small supply of money began to dwindle.

She set out yesterday morning through the bitter cold once more to search for work. This time she chose the St. Anthony hill district, but it was the same old story. She became exhausted and dropped unconscious on Nina avenue. Pedestrians hurried to the girl's assistance and Reuben Warner carried her into his home.

The police ambulance was summoned and after being treated by Police Surgeon George Moore, the unconscious girl was taken to her home. She will be under the care of the police surgeon until able to work when an effort will be made to secure employment for her.

FINDS NEW OPERA STAR.

Madame Calve Makes Discovery of 17-Year-Old Girl.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 23.—Madame Calve, the celebrated prima dona, who sung here in concert, has discovered a young girl contralto, Lois Fourt, for whom she predicts great things. The girl, who is but 17 years of age, was given an audience by Madame Calve in the Lincoln hotel and sang with such exquisite charm that the prima donna with tears in her eyes, clasped the girl to her breast, saying: "You have the voice, you have the temperament, you have the physique; you will be great."

The other members of Madame Calve's company were also amazed at the great and marvelous voice, and predict a future for her. After singing Gounod's "Oh, That We Two Were Maying," Madame Calve told Miss Feurt that she would formally adopt her and give her a thorough training in Paris.

COLUMBIA PROFESSOR

Expects to Have Conference With Dr. Hodgson's Spirit.

New York, Jan. 23.—Dr. Isaac K. Funk, who for many years has been identified with physical research, last night discussed the claim of a Western man that he had held a communication with the spirit of the late Dr. Richard Hodgson of Boston.

Dr. Funk said that he expected to be able to communicate with Dr. Hodgson's spirit on Jan. 25. He based his hopes on a statement made to him by Prof. J. H. Hyslop of Columbia university, who was referred to in the message credited to the spirit of Dr. Hodgson.

"Prof. Hyslop has told me that he expects that by Jan. 25 Dr. Hodgson's spirit will be able to communicate with those he has left behind. I am very curious to begin investigation on that line as soon as the time appointed by Dr. Hyslop arrives. I have done nothing as yet and am awaiting Prof. Hyslop's action."

HIBBING EXCITED OVER A SCANDAL

Musicians of Different Sexes Arrested Together in a Hotel.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hibbing has a salacious scandal, one which citizens of this metropolitan place think is bad enough to find a place in Col. Mann's Town Topics, even if the principals are not members of "400." The principals are gay Bohemians in their manner of living, although, as a matter of fact, A. M. Ross, the man in the case, is colored, and Mrs. Manthon, the woman in the case, is white.

For some time there have been whisperings in Hibbing about Ross and Mrs. Manthon and when, this morning, the Hibbing police found the pair in bed together at a hotel which is operated in connection with a Chinese restaurant, people were not taken entirely by surprise. But they were interested.

Ross is the leader of an orchestra and Mrs. Manthon is his planiste. He has made Hibbing his home for several years, but he did not meet the fair Mrs. M. until about a year ago, which was the time that she came here.

Both are married. The wife of Ross is a white woman and they have a son who is 15 or 16 years of age.

The gossips have it that the enraged wife of the dusky musician has been seeking Mrs. Manthon for several days, armed with a knife of no mean dimensions. The police beat her to it, however, and arrested the woman and the undutiful husband before the enraged wife and mother got busy with the carver.

Ross is about 40 years old, while Mrs. Manthon is about 28 or 30, and very pretty. She has a husband who, until recently, was employed in a Hibbing laundry. It is said that he became aware of his wife's fickleness about a week or so ago, and turned her out—just the way they do on the stage. Then he sought solace in the flowing bowl and lost his position.

Judge Brady had not made disposition of their case at a late hour this afternoon.

STUBBORN BLAZE IN ST. PAUL DAIRY.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire starting in the basement of the Milton dairy, Ninth and Wabash streets, last night, damaged the building to the extent of $5,000. The loss is covered by insurance. The origin of the fire could not be determined.

The blaze was discovered at 9:30 o'clock by Patrolman Nightingale, who noticed a red light in the office. As he was about to investigate a puff of smoke broke from the doorway, followed by a sheet of flame.

Above the store are the Wabasha apartments, and the occupants were on the verge of a panic, until assured by the police and the firemen that there was no danger. They were ready to vacate on a moment's notice.

Under the play of eight streams the flames soon wilted, but owing to the fumes produced by the burning grease, the firemen had great difficulty in forcing their way to the seat of the fire.

At 10:30, one hour from the time the first alarm was turned in, the fire was practically out. Most of the damage was due to smoke and water.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES UNIVERSITY $1,450,000.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Announcement was made last night, at a special meeting of the University of Chicago board of trustees, that John D. Rockefeller had just given the university $1,450,000. Of this sum, $1,000,000 is for the permanent endowment, $350,000 to cover the current expenditures of the deficit of the various departments up to June 30, 1905, and the remaining $100,000 of the gift is to provide a fund, the interest of which is to go to the widow of President Harper during her lifetime.

WIRE TROUBLE CONTINUES

Chicagoans Send Messages to 'Frisco Thence East Via Montreal.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The sleet and snowstorm which paralyzed telegraphic communication between this city and other parts of the country passed eastward during the night, but today the wire situation was little better than yesterday. Out of a total of seventy private wires between Chicago and Eastern points, but two were working today, and one of these was badly crippled at times. The other was divided among commission houses, each firm being allowed to use it in turn for fifteen minutes.

Some of the brokers in order to send their orders to New York sent their messages over their private lines in San Francisco and from there back via Sa. Paul and Montreal. Other circuits were made by way of St. Paul, thence back to Omaha, Kansas City, and Memphis, to New York. Late in the morning the conditions in the East were declared to be growing worse instead of better.

Street car service was restored almost to a normal basis by this morning and the telephone service was improved.

The railroads, however, were badly demoralized, having apparently much more trouble than on yesterday. The majority of trains arriving in the city were late and those from the east were for the most part from three to six hours late. The fact that wires were down all along all of the lines created much confusion in the handling of trains.

Train service between this city and the west was not so badly handicapped as that to the east and wire conditions to the west were reported as slowly improving.

FIVE ITALIANS DIE IN SNOWSLIDE

Employes of Sunny Side Mine Caught by Immense Avalanche.

Silverton, Colo., Jan. 23.—Five Italian miners employed at the Sunny Side mine lost their lives in an immense snow slide yesterday afternoon.

No trains from Durango and Denver have arrived here since last Wednesday, due to slides and immense drifts of snow which have blocked the tracks.

GOAT MEAT AS FOOD.

Wisconsin Farm Manager Demonstrates Its Use at Banquet.

Turtle Lake, Wis., Jan. 23.—To demonstrate that the Angora goat is equal if not superior to the sheep for the production of mutton as a staple food, the manager of a farm near here has given a banquet, the menu of which consisted chiefly of goat meat. There was goat soup, English goat hotchpotch, goat tongue, devilled goat ham, goat stew with green peas, fried goat steaks, fried goat chops, baked leg of goat, hashed goat, spiced goat, minced cold goat, goat cutlets and goat ragout.

SERIOUS TROUBLE MAY FOLLOW VICEROY'S PLAN.

Canton, Jan. 23.—Serious trouble threatens to break out as a result of the viceroy's scheme for taxation in order to raise revenue for the construction of the Canton-Hankow railway. The merchants' guilds are determined on a retaliatory strike and the viceroys threatens the leaders with decapitation. Three Chinese gunboats have been summoned from Shanghai.

STRAW CASE TO JURY.

Case is Being Submitted in United States Court.

The trial of Edward J. Straw for perjury in the matter of placing Miss Bernice Farrell on some land in the Sturgeon lake district is about over in United States court. The attorneys are addressing the jury this afternoon and the jury will go out in a short time. The defense, which addresses the jury last is closing its side of the case to that body as The Herald goes to press.

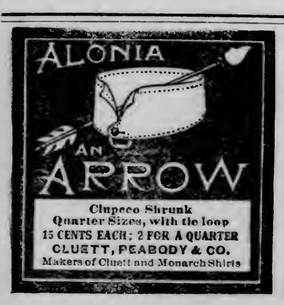

Before Judge Morris, the attorneys for the defense in the damage suit of Robert O. Johnson against F. A. Patrick & Company, are arguing a motion for direction of verdict in favor of the defendant.

Team Does Lively Stunt.

A team of broncbos attached to a sleighload of apples and other merchandise belonging to the Fitzsimmons-Derrig company ran away down Fourth avenue west, between Third and Fourth streets, this afternoon. They became unmanageable just below Fourth street. In turning the corner at Third street the momentum sent the horses and rig rolling over and over until they came against the fence on the lower side of the street. The driver escaped from the general wreck by dropping off into a snowbank before the team turned the corner. The rig was badly demolished and the apples were strewn for about a block.

PASSED A BAD CHECK

William McGilvray Believed to be Professional Confidence Man.

His Pockets Were Filled With Blank Checks and Notes.

Carrying numerous checks, notes and various kinds of negotiable paper claimed to be worthless, William K. McGilvray was arrested this morning on the charge of vagrancy.

He was claimed by the police to have passed a worthless check for $5 and did not deny the fact, although he said that he expected that a man who owed him money would deposit a sufficient amount to his credit to allow the check to be cashed.

McGilvray is looked upon by the police as a professional confidence man. He carried blank checks printed in the name of the McGilvray Stock Raising company, which he claimed consisted of himself, his father and his sister. He said the company had sixty head of cattle on a ranch in Washington and was just going to incorporate.

He also carried a plat of some lands in Montana, comprising 2,200 acres. He claimed to have an option on the land, and said he was trying to dispose of it.

In his pockets he also carried some papers relating to some logging contract work and he claimed to be hiring men for a logging company.

In spite of his claim that he was interested in all these schemes, he had scarcely a cent in his possession when arrested and had attempted to pass one of the checks on the conductor of a South Shore train, according to the claim of the police.

The check for $5 which he succeeded in passing, had been forwarded to the bank in Washington on which it had been drawn, and had been returned with the notation of the cashier that McGilvray was a fraud and had attempted to swindle a number of people.

The prisoner maintained that the man who had written the notation on the check was an enemy of his, and kept up a strong front throughout the trial. He answered all questions promptly and stoutly maintained that he had not intended to swindle any person.

The evidence of the check however, was too strong, and Judge Cutting found him guilty of vagrancy. He was fined $20 and costs with the alternative of spending thirty days in the county jail.

Milwaukee, Jan. 23.—Five inches of snow and sleet fell in Milwaukee and vicinity during the night. The government thermometer registered 19 deg. above zero today. The storm has not caused any material delay in the railroad service.

A POOR TRICK.

Young Waldorf Astor told in New York a story illustrative of the abounding animal spirits of the English guardsman, says the Los Angeles Times.

"There was a young subaltern of high birth," he said, "who had unusually strong forearms and wrists. He had the habit of slipping up behind, seizing a man's coattails, and—zipp—a quick, powerful jerk, and the coat would be split clean up to the collar.

"This joke had been played so often that everybody knew it. At a country house we were both visiting, I decided to play a joke myself on the strong-armed subaltern. Accordingly, one night in the smokeroom, I placed myself before him, and then I turned my back temptingly. I knew he would be unable to resist those coat tails.

"He did not resist them. He seized them in his vise-like hands, and in a jiffy the trim, shapely coat I was wearing hung like a rag upon me, split up the back in two halves.

"The subaltern, regarding his work, laughed loud and long. When he was done, I said quietly,

"'I slipped up to your room a little while ago, and this is your coat that I have on now.'"

NORTH BUTTE LITTLE WEAKER

Wires Still Out of Commission and Quotations Are Few.

Most wires were out of commission again today and the blackboards in the stock brokers' offices were bare in consequence. Direct wires to Boston were away out, and the few copper stock quotations which were received were secured by roundabout routes and not over the regular private wires.

Paine, Webber & Co. secured a few North Butte quotations. North Butte opened at $87.75, which was the high price of the day, dropped to $86.75, advanced to $87.62½, fell to $87, and closed at $86.75 bid and $87 asked.

The following prices on Bisbee stocks prevailed in Duluth today: Calumet & Arizona $120 bid, Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $37, Lake Superior & Pittsburg $49 bid, Junction sold at $27, Denn-Arizona $32 bid, and Pittsburg & Duluth sold at $25. Black Mountain was $12 bid, Copper Queen of Idaho $2.50 bid and $2.75 asked, Sullivan $5 bid, Keweenaw $18.50 asked, and Warren sold at $18.

TRIPS TO TROPICS.

Americans Learn of a Nearby Land of Winter Sunshine.

These are the days of the winter cruise, when it is possible, at comparatively small expense, to laugh at blizzards, ice storms and fogs, and to get quickly into the region of balmy airs, soft skies and a gentle climate, says the New York Sun. Americans are just beginning to realize that they can obtain all these without a stormy trip across the Atlantic in winter, and that it isn't necessary to go to the Mediterranean in search of relief. They can find delight right at their doors in the West Indies, and with only four days' sailing. The steamship lines to the Antilles are receiving more patronage this year than ever before.

It is possible to take a trip of twenty-six or more days and visit practically every island of importance in the Antilles for a surprisingly small sum. One may go to Venezuela and Colon on a trip, and visit such picturesque places at Porto Rico, St. Thomas, St. Kitts, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad and Jamaica, besides making nearly a dozen other calls. Moreover it is now possible to travel in this region in absolute comfort. Large steamers, some of them carrying passengers only, are now employed in this service.

The traveler may make a trip on what are called main line steamers entirely, or he may change after he reaches the large islands to one or more of the yachting steamers of commodious size, and cruise around among the smaller islands, thus becoming acquainted with many of the beauties and novelties that are out of the beaten track. The most popular of the islands just now is Jamaica, where on some of the longer cruises the traveler may stay as many as fifteen days in hotels that are as up-to-date and as attractive as can be found anywhere. The English historian Froude once said that the climate of Jamaica was "inimitable."

The great charm, however, of a West Indian trip lies in the variety of scenery and of climate. Americans can now go with ease to the scene of the great volcanic eruption at Mont Pelee. They may visit the great botanical gardens of Trinidad and see the wonderful waterfalls of its lofty mountains. They may enjoy the dry climate of Barbados with the cool trade winds that blow constantly at this time of year. They may see the rugged mountains and wonderfully fertile plains of little Grenada. They may become acquainted with the famous baths of Soufffriere. They may visit an extinct volcano on Guadeloupe, and they may see the smoking hills on St. Kitts. They may go hunting and fishing in British Guiana, the interior of which abounds with large game and rare tropical birds.

Everywhere the traveler will find wonderful harbors, no one like another. He will hear various languages and see the flags of various nations. The historical associations will appeal to him, for when he reaches St. Kitts he will see the land that Columbus first saw; in Martinique he will be in the birthplace of Empress Josephine; at Cartagena he will see still standing the famous palace of the Inquisition; at Colon he will see the beginnings of the Panama canal; at Martinique he will see the remains of the recent earthquakes; at half a dozen islands he will still find traces of the days when the pirates ruled the Spanish main. The entire region is rich with the romance and the blood and fire of history.

The steamship companies have prepared trips of varying length and time. The pleasantest ones are those which include a stay of several days in one or more of the leading places visited. With the West Indies almost at one's door, and with every comfort in traveling, the woneder is that those who can afford theluxury of a rest in winter have not crowded the steamships before this. Never has there been such a demand for accommodations as at present, and the result is that fully half a dozen steamers have been added to the services of the lines engaged in it this winter.

Many Americans are getting the West Indies habit. Winter vacations are increasing in number, and people are just finding out that no better outing can be found than a peaceful cruise on the old Spanish main at a time when those who have to remain at home are struggling with the terrors and blasts of north winds, snow, slush and dangerous fog.

LONG TRIPS.

The late Congressman Naphen told a story about a friend of his, a saloonkeeper, who had occasion to hire a new bartender, says the Boston Herald. After a while he noticed that the receipts were not up to the usual amount. He finally accused the bartender of "knocking down," but the latter denied taking anything. Upon being pressed, he admitted reluctantly that he just took "car fare" each day.

"Car fare!" yelled the saloonkeeper; "where the devil do you live—in New York?"

LAWYERS WRANGLE

Over Statements Made by District Attorney in Packers' Case.

The Court Sustains Government's Official on an Appeal.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The government, through District Attorney Morrison, made its opening statement in the packers' case today. The district attorney entered on his address to the jury with vigor. Attorneys for the defense at once interposed objections.

"The claims of the defendants in this case," declared District Attorney Morrison," are only a part of their claptrap defense presented by men of influence in the effort to unfit the jury for fair deliberation in this case. These men have not only the ingenuity of criminal lawyers, but they are corporation lawyers—trust lawyers."

Attorney Hynes, who closed the opening for the packers yesterday, with an attack upon the district attorney made strong objections to the statements of the district attorney.

"I object to the statement that I am a trust lawyer for myself, as well as my associates," declared Mr. Hynes.

"You are defending a trust now," replied Attorney Morrison; "you are defending men right now who are being charged with being members of a trust."

Mr. Hynes still objected to the statements of the district attorney and the court was called upon for a decision. It ruled in favor of the district attorney.

Another clash occurred when the district attorney declared that the plea of the packers that they are entitled to immunity was an "after thought."

"These men," continued the district attorney, indicating the attorneys for the packers, "while the grand jury was in session went before the highest law office in the land and put forth every effort and influence to stop this prosecution. They said nothing about immunity then. Attorney Joseph Miller, who appears here for the packers was there, and he never said one word about immunity."

"I object to that statement because the district attorney can never hope to prove it," said Mr. Miller.

"I will put Mr. Miller himself on the stand and he will tell all about that interview. I was present, and I know what he said."

The attorneys for the packers again offered objections, but Judge Humphrey said: "I gave you gentlemen a wide latitude, and I am disposed to grant the government a very wide latitude."

After some additional legal sparring, the district attorney went on with his statement.

"The issue in this case," he declared, "is not what Mr. Garfield, or anyone else has done, but whether under the law, these men are entitled to go free and never be put on trial under the indictment. I was not aware that any government official had misquoted those poor defendants, until I heard the statements in this case. It is a surprise to me that the attorneys for these men should base their case on a chance of shielding their clients from a trial on the main issue."

The district attorney declared that the packers are not entitled to immunity because their statements were not made under oath. It made no difference, he declared, how much a man talked, not under oath, he would still be subject to the operation of the law.

BAGPIPE LORE.

Probable Origin of Scot's Own Musical Instrument

According to the encyclopedia, the bagpipe is a wind instrument the fixed characteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and sounded by a wind chest or bag, which bag has in turn been supplied either by the lungs of the performer or by a bellows, says a writer in the London Globe. The original instrumcnt was presumably the simple reed, or shepherd's pipe, which was well known to the Trojans, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. But the strain of blowing these ancient pipes was so great that some genius conceived the idea of having a reserve supply of wind in a bag attached to the pipes, and hence the bagpipe. The first real instrument is believed to have been a skin of a goat or kid, with two pipes, through one of which the bag was inflated, the other emitting the sound. In early times the bagpipe was common in Great Britain and abroad. At one time there were five different kinds known on the Continent, some inflated by the mouth and others by bellows; while in the British Isles three kinds were known—the great Highland bagpipe, the Lowland bagpipe of Scotland (which closely resembled the Northumbrian) and the Irish bagpipe. In the great Highland bagpipe, which originally had but one drone, a valved tube leads from the mouth to an air-tight bag, which has four other orifices, three large enough to contain the base of three fixed long tunes termed drones, and another smaller, to which is fitted the chanter. The three are thrown on the shoulder, while the latter is held in the hands. All four pipes are fitted with reeds, but of different kinds. The drones are tuned by means of sliders, or movable joints, and this tuning or preparation for playing, which generally occupies a few minutes of the piper's time before he begins to tune proper, is heard with impatience by those not accustomed to the instrument. Indeed, it gave rise to the saying, applied in Scotland to those who waste time over small matters, "You are longer in tuning your pipes than in playing your tune."

The Scottish Lowland bagpipe, like the Northumbrian pipe, was in two forms, one consisting of a smaller and milder toned edition of the Highland instrument and the other a miniature of this and having the same relation to it as the fife has to a German band. Its great drawback, from the point of view of the devotees of the Highland bagpipe, is that it is unsuited to perform what they consider the perfection of pipe music—the pibroch. These small pipes were, however, gentler than the Highland, having the same tone, but less sonorous. It was to the strains of such a bagpipe that Chaucer tells us the company of pilgrims left London, and it is the same instrument that is alluded to in Shakespeare as the Lincolnshire bagpipe. The Irish bagpipe is the instrument in its most elaborate form and is supplied with wind by a bellows. The drones are all fixed on one stock and have keys which are played by the wrist of the right hand. The reeds are soft and the tones very sweet and melodious, and there is a harmonious bass which is very effective in the hands of a good player. The Irish instrument is fast dying out, but there is believed to be at least one player in Glasgow, an old man, bent with years, but devoted to his pipes, who takes his stand near the top of the classic High street and to a small but appreciate audience renders Scottish and Irish airs on the bagpipe of Erin.

The bagpipe, though at one time fairly common, never obtained a firm hold in England. It lost favor and gradually deteriorated, until it is now practically extinct. The average Englishman neither appreciates nor understands it. A famous poet irreverently once compared its notes to "the shrill screech of a lame goose caught in corn," while another heretic writer likens its sound to a "horrible, noisy, mad Irishman," or to the cries of the "eternally tormented." To the Irish people it appeals more strongly; they still possess in a degree the feeling of attachment to the bagpipe which is so general among Scotsmen. There is evidence of this in the revival of pipe bands in certain Irish regiments. But it is undoubtedly more closely associated with Scotland, both in the Highlands and Lowlands, than with any other country; the particular instrument in use being the great Highland bagpipe, which, as already explained, consists of three drones, including the big drone, which was added about the beginning of last century; it is this type which has gradually superseded the Lowland pipe. There is no doubt that the bagpipe was in use in Scotland from a very early period; and it is in Scotland that it has been brought to the highest degree of perfection. Its music distinctly connects it with Scotland, as is clear in the pibroch, the strathspey, the reel, the march and other popular melodies. There are proofs that the instrument was cultivated in that country certainly in the twelfth century, and of its universal popularity as early as the fifteenth century; while in the seventeenth century nearly every town in the Highlands and Lowlands boasted of its piper.

It is not sufficiently realized that the great Highland bagpipe is fitted for Highland music only. It is most offensive to those who understand and appreciate the instrument to hear English and other unsuitable airs attempted on it. It is the exponent of Highland music, and of that only. It also belongs to the open air as naturally as heather belongs to the hills and salmon to the sea lochs. It is quite a modern innovation, though a pleasing one, perhaps, to Scotsmen, for the pipers of Scottish regiments to play round the mess table after dinner. There has been quite a revival in the popularity of the bagpipe in recent years, and it is now heard in Irish regiments and in the Northumberland Fusiliers, the sides having been introduced into the Indian and Egyptian armies. These regiments are in every way entitled to have pipers, so long as there is no attempt to dress or otherwise disguise them in the Scottish national uniform. When all is said and done, the fact remains that the bagpipe, as at present patronized, is the national instrument of Scotland. To the Scotsman there is a particular charm about it that never fails to stir the blood. It intensifies his thoughts and inspires him in a manner which is difficult to describe in words. Nothing will rouse a Scottish audience as the pipes will, and no sound is more welcome at an open gathering than the wild notes of the national instrument.

GEN. BOOTH'S ROMANCE.

This description of Gen. Booth's married life makes an interesting supplement to the account of his work which appeared in last week's M. A. P.: The general's married life was very idyllic, the courting of the young couple was romantic and bestrewn with difficulties, and the letters that passed between them were singularly affectionate and spiritual after their marriage, says the London M. A. P. William Booth, stimulated by his enthusiastic wife, threw aside a ministerial livelihood with the chance of promotion, to preach in the byways and alleys of London. Mrs. Booth's first attempt at speaking astonished her husband, and began an epoch of platform women. She began in a chapel. He started the Salvation Army as the Christian Mission in an old tent in the Quakers' burial ground, East London. The movement grew by persecution. Frequently his life was in danger from the mob. Until he became old he led the marches and processions in the open air, and his great height and striking face always identified him as the leader and brought a storm of sticks and stones. His portraits do not convey a good idea of the man. He is very tall and agile, has deep-set gray eyes alight with vitality and courage, a nose shaped in the Iron Duke mould, a long, firm, well-shaped mouth half hidden under a straggling beard and mustache, and a noble head covered with white hair.

SOME COAST TRAGEDIES.

The series of shipping disasters which devastated the great lakes last fall had its counter part along the Atlantic seaboard, and some grewsome wrecks have occurred, says the Chicago News. During the past few weeks the relentless gales have wrought havoc with steam and sailing ships in these northern waters. The steamer Turbin, from Sydney, N. S., to Boston, coal laden, went down off Yarmouth, N. S., and every soul on board perished. Her disaster was attended with great mystery; an explosion was seen by parties on shore to have occurred on her, a great column of fire and smoke shot up into the air, and then the hapless craft sunk, her whole personnel perishing with her. A suggestion was advanced in some quarters that she had been blown up by an infernal machine placed among her cargo to destroy her by Hungarian anarchists working at Sydney, whose chances of employment were lessened by some lavor-saving devices installed on her. But it is much more probable that her destruction was caused by spontaneous combustion.

The steamer Lunenburg was lost on the Magdalen islands the following week, her wreck involving fifteen lives. She was caught in a blizzard and driven onto a reef, where she slowly pounded to pieces, and as no help could be given from the shore, all on board perished, except five persons, who were washed to land. Two days later the Columbine struck on a rock off the south coast of Newfoundland and sunk with the fifteen souls aboard her. The saddest part of her mishap is that her hull drifted into the very harbor where her captain resided and brought up almost at his door. The captain's wife, whose third husband he was, had lost both his predecessors in the same vicinity through similar mishaps. Following closely upon her, the Florence was engulfed with eleven men, only portions of her wreckage being washed ashore to tell of her end. The Energy is overdue and is believed to have met the same fate, and the Gloriana also is missing.

In a recent gale on the Newfoundland coast ten vessels, with crews aggregating 118 men, were driven to sea, one of his begging letters. It proved to be from Williams college, asking an endowment on the plea that the old man's birthplace was near the institution.

"I'd like to do something for that school," said he, meditatively.

"Well, I would, father, if I were you," his son encouraged him.

"I believe I will." The old man's ardor kindled. "I believe I'll give them something handsome."

"So you should," the son pursued. "Why not?"

"I will. I will give them"—he thought for a moment—"I'll give them $100!"

PLATINUM.

Jeweler's Circular Weekly: The war between Russia and Japan was probably responsible for the fact that the output of platinum in the United States increased from 110 ounces in 1903, valued at $2,080, to 200 ounces, valued at $4,160 in 1904. Owing to anxiety in regard to the fate of the platinum industry in Russia, the price of platinum rose about 10 per cent during 1904.

"It should not be understood," says Dr. David T. Day of the United States geological survey, "that the slight rise of 10 per cent in the price of platinum would serve as any great stimulus to the placer gold miners of the West who furnish the platinum products of the United States, for those miners are comparatively indifferent to a slight change in price.

"The scarcity of platinum and the consequent rise in price, however, led to much energy on the part of Eastern smelters of platinum in urging upon the placer miners of the West the advisability of saving platinum in cleaning up the hydraulic mines. The increase thus effected is interesting as showing what is possible in the United States in the future."

In the opinion of Dr. Day, the outlook for increased production for the year 1905 is good, because the investigation undertaken by the geological survey of the black sands of the Pacific slope and of the increased knowledge thus furnished to the miners in regard to the value of the platinum and to simple means of saving it.

The world's supply of platinum for the year amounted to about 300 kilograms, or 9,625 troy ounces from South America, and 6,000 kilograms, or 192,500 troy ounces from Russia. All the American platinum came from California and Oregon, inasmuch as operations have been suspended in the Rambler Copper mine, Wyoming, which furnished some platinum the year before. The imports of platinum into the United States during 1905 showed a decline of more than 8,000 ounces, due to European control of the supply.

STRAW CASE TO JURY.

Case is Being Submitted in United States Court.

The trial of Edward J. Straw for perjury in the matter of placing Miss Berenice Farrell on some land in the Sturgeon lake district is about over in United States court. The attorneys are addressing the jury this afternoon and the jury will go out in a short time. The defense, which addresses the jury last is closing its side of the case to that body as The Herald goes to press.

Before Judge Morris, the attorneys for the defense in the damage suit of Robert O. Johnson against F. A. Patrick & Company, are arguing a motion for direction of verdict in favor of the defendant.

Team Does Lively Stunt.

A team of broncbos attached to a sleighload of apples and other merchandise belonging to the Fitzsimmons-Berrig company ran away down fourth avenue west, between Third and Fourth streets, this afternoon. They became unmanageable just below Fourth street. In turning the corner at Third street the momentum sent the horses and rig rolling over and over until they came against the fence on the lower side of the street. The driver escaped from the general wreck by dropping off into a snowbank before the team turned the corner. The rig was badly demolished and the apples were strown for about a block.

PASSED A BAD CHECK

William McGilvray Believed to be Professional Confidence Man.

His Pockets Were Filled With Blank Checks and Notes.

Carrying numerous checks, notes and various kinds of negotiable paper claimed to be worthless, William K. McGilvray was arrested this morning on the charge of vagrancy.

He was claimed by the police to have passed a worthless check for $5 and did not deny the fact, although he said that he expected that a man who owed him money would deposit a sufficient amount to his credit to allow the check to be cashed.

McGilvray is looked upon by the police as a professional confidence man. He carried blank checks printed in the name of the McGilvray Stock Raising company, which he claimed consisted of himself, his father and his sister. He said the company had sixty head of cattle on a ranch in Washington and was just going to incorporate.

He also carried a plat of some lands in Montana, comprising 2,200 acres. He claimed to have an option on the land, and said he was trying to dispose of it.

In his pockets he also carried some papers relating to some logging contract work and he claimed to be hiring men for a logging company.

In spite of his claim that he was interested in all these schemes, he had scarcely a cent in his possession when arrested and had attempted to pass one of the checks on the conductor of a South Shore train, according to the claim of the police.

The check for $5 which he succeeded in passing, had been forwarded to the bank in Washington on which it had been drawn, and had been returned with the notation of the cashier that McGilvray was a fraud and had attempted to swindle a number of people.

The prisoner maintained that the man who had written the notation on the check was an enemy of his, and kept up a strong front throughout the trial. He answered all questions promptly and stoutly maintained that he had not intended to swindle any person.

The evidence of the check however, was too strong, and Judge Cutting found him guilty of vagrancy. He was fined $20 and costs with the alternative of spending thirty days in the county jail.

A POOR TRICK.

Young Waldorf Astor told in New York a story illustrative of the abounding animal spirits of the English guardsman, says the Los Angeles Times.

"There was a young subaltern of high birth," he said, "who had unusually strong forearms and wrists. He had the habit of slipping up behind, seizing a man's coattails, and—zipp—a quick, powerful jerk, and the coat would be split clean up to the collar.

"This joke had been played so often that everybody knew it. At a country house we were both visiting. I decided to play a joke myself on the strong-armed subaltern. Accordingly, one night in the smokeroom, I placed myself before him, and then I turned my back temptingly. I knew he would be unable to resist those coat tails.

"He did not resist them. He seized them in his vise-like hands, and in a jiffy the trim, shapely coat I was wearing hung like a rag upon me, split up the back in two halves.

"The subaltern, regarding his work, laughed loud and long. When he was done, I said quietly.

"'I slipped up to your room a little while ago, and this is your coat that I have on now.'"

NORTH BUTTE LITTLE WEAKER

Wires Still Out of Commission and Quotations Are Few.

Most wires were out of commission again today and the blackboards in the stock brokers' offices were bare in consequence. Direct wires to Boston were away out, and the few copper stock quotations which were received were secured by roundabout routes and not over the regular private wires.

Paine, Webber & Co. secured a few North Butte quotations. North Butte opened at $87.75, which was the high price of the day, dropped to $86.75, advanced to $87.62½, fell to $87, and closed at $86.75 bid and $87 asked.

The following prices on Bisbee stocks prevailed in Duluth today: Calumet & Arizona $120 bid, Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $37, Lake Superior & Pittsburg $49 bid, Junction sold at $27, Denn-Arizona $32 bid, and Pittsburg & Duluth sold at $25. Black Mountain was $12 bid, Copper Queen of Idaho $2.50 bid and $2.75 asked. Sullivan $5 bid, Keweenaw $18.50 asked, and Warren sold at $18.

TRIPS TO TROPICS.

Americans Learn of a Nearby Land of Winter Sunshine.

These are the days of the winter cruise, when it is possible, at comparatively small expense, to laugh at blizzards, ice storms and fogs, and to get quickly into the region of balmy airs, soft skies and a gentle climate, says the New York Sun. Americans are just beginning to realize that they can obtain all these without a stormy trip across the Atlantic in winter, and that it isn't necessary to go to the Mediterranean in search of relief. They can find delight right at their doors in the West Indies, and with only four days' sailing. The steamship lines to the Antilles are receiving more patronage this year than ever before.

It is possible to take a trip of twenty-six or more days and visit practically every island of importance in the Antilles for a surprisingly small sum. One may go to Venezuela and Colon on a trip, and visit such picturesque places at Porto Rico, St. Thomas, St. Kitts, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad and Jamaica, besides making nearly a dozen other calls. Moreover it is now possible to travel in this region in absolute comfort. Large steamers, some of them carrying passengers only, are now employed in this service.

The traveler may make a trip on what are called main line steamers entirely, or he may change after he reaches the large islands to one or more of the yachting steamers of commodious size, and cruise around among the smaller islands, thus becoming acquainted with many of the beauties and novelties that are out of the beaten track. The most popular of the islands just now is Jamaica, where on some of the longer cruises the traveler may stay as many as fifteen days in hotels that are as up-to-date and as attractive as can be found anywhere. The English historian Froude once said that the climate of Jamaica was "inimitable."

The great charm, however, of a West Indian trip lies in the variety of scenery and of climate. Americans can now go with ease to the scene of the great volcanic eruption at Mont Pelee. They may visit the great botanical gardens of Trinidad and see the wonderful waterfalls of its lofty mountains. They may enjoy the dry climate of Barbados with the cool trade winds that blow constantly at this time of year. They may see the rugged mountains and wonderfully fertile plains of little Grenada. They may become acquainted with the famous baths of Souffriere. They may visit an extinct volcano on Guadeloupe, and they may see the smoking hills on St. Kitts. They may go hunting and fishing in British Guiana, the interior of which abounds with large game and rare tropical birds.

Everywhere the traveler will find wonderful harbors, no one like another. He will hear various languages and see the flags of various nations. The historical associations will appeal to him, for when he reaches St. Kitts he will see the land that Columbus first saw; in Martinique he will be in the birthplace of Empress Josephine; at Cartagena he will see still standing the famous palace of the Inquisition; at Colon he will see the beginnings of the Panama canal; at Martinique he will see the remains of the recent earthquakes; at half a dozen islands he will still find traces of the days when the pirates ruled the Spanish main. The entire region is rich with the romance and the blood and fire of history.

The steamship companies have prepared trips of varying length and time. The pleasantest ones are those which include a stay of several days in one or more of the leading places visited. With the West Indies almost at one's door, and with every comfort in traveling, the wonder is that those who can afford the luxury of a rest in winter have not crowded the steamships before this. Never has there been such a demand for accommodations as at present, and the result is that fully half a dozen steamers have been added to the services of the lines engaged in it this winter.

Many Americans are getting the West Indies habit. Winter vacations are increasing in number, and people are just finding out that no better outing can be found than a peaceful cruise on the old Spanish main at a time when those who have to remain at home are struggling with the terrors and blasts of north winds, snow, slush and dangerous fog.

LONG TRIPS.

The late Congressman Naphen told a story about a friend of his, a saloonkeeper, who had occasion to hire a new bartender, says the Boston Herald. After a while he noticed that the receipts were not up to the usual amount. He finally accused the bartender of "knocking down," but the latter denied taking anything. Upon being pressed, he admitted reluctantly that he just took "car fare" each day.

"Car fare!" yelled the saloonkeeper; "where the devil do you live—in New York?"

LAWYERS WRANGLE

Over Statements Made by District Attorney in Packers' Case.

The Court Sustains Government's Official on an Appeal.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The government, through District Attorney Morrison, made its opening statement in the packers' case today. The district attorney entered on his address to the jury with vigor. Attorneys for the defense at once interposed objections.

"The claims of the defendants in this case," declared District Attorney Morrison," are only a part of their claptrap defense presented by men of influence in the effort to unfit the jury for fair deliberation in this case. These men have not only the ingenuity of criminal lawyers, but they are corporation lawyers—trust lawyers."

Attorney Hynes, who closed the opening for the packers yesterday, with an attack upon the district attorney made strong objections to the statements of the district attorney.

"I object to the statement that I am a trust lawyer for myself, as well as my associates," declared Mr. Hynes.

"You are defending a trust now," replied Attorney Morrison; "you are defending men right now who are being charged with being members of a trust."

Mr. Hynes still objected to the statements of the district attorney and the court was called upon for a decision. It ruled in favor of the district attorney.

Another clash occurred when the district attorney declared that the plea of the packers that they are entitled to immunity was an "after thought."

"These men," continued the district attorney, indicating the attorneys for the packers, "while the grand jury was in session went before the highest law office in the land and put forth every effort and influence to stop this prosecution. They said nothing about immunity then. Attorney Joseph Miller, who appears here for the packers was there, and he never said one word about immunity."

"I object to that statement because the district attorney can never hope to prove it," said Mr. Miller.

"I will put Mr. Miller himself on the stand and he will tell all about that interview. I was present, and I know what he said."

The attorneys for the packers again offered objections, but Judge Humphrey said: "I gave you gentlemen a wide latitude, and I am disposed to grant the government a very wide latitude."

After some additional legal sparring, the district attorney went on with his statement.

"The issue in this case," he declared, "is not what Mr. Garfield, or anyone else has done, but whether under the law, these men are entitled to go free and never be put on trial under the indictment. I was not aware that any government official had misquoted those poor defendants, until I heard the statements in this case. It is a surprise to me that the attorneys for these men should base their case on a chance of shielding their clients from a trial on the main issue."

The district attorney declared that the packers are not entitled to immunity because their statements were not made under oath. It made no difference, he declared, how much a man talked, not under oath, he would still be subject to the operation of the law.

BAGPIPE LORE.

Probable Origin of Scot's Own Musical Instrument

According to the encyclopedia, the bagpipe is a wind instrument the fixed characteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and sounded by a wind chest or bag, which bag has in turn been supplied either by the lungs of the performer or by a bellows, says a writer in the London Globe. The original instrument was presumably the simple reed, or shepherd's pipe, which was well known to the Trojans, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. But the strain of blowing these ancient pipes was so great that some genius conceived the idea of having a reserve supply of wind in a bag attached to the pipes, and hence the bagpipe. The first real instrument is believed to have been a skin of a goat or kid, with two pipes, through one of which the bag was inflated, the other emitting the sound. In early times the bagpipe was common in Great Britain and abroad. At one time there were five different kinds known on the Continent, some inflated by the mouth and others by bellows; while in the British Isles three kinds were known—the great Highland bagpipe, the Lowland bagpipe of Scotland (which closely resembled the Northumbrian) and the Irish bagpipe. In the great Highland bagpipe, which originally had but one drone, a valved tube leads from the mouth to an air-tight bag, which has four other orifices, three large enough to contain the base of three fixed long tubes termed drones, and another smaller, to which is fitted the chanter. The three are thrown on the shoulder, while the latter is held in the hands. All four pipes are fitted with reeds, but of different kinds. The drones are tuned by means of sliders, or movable joints, and this tuning or preparation for playing, which generally occupies a few minutes of the piper's time before he begins to tune proper, is heard with impatience by those not accustomed to the instrument. Indeed, it gave rise to the saying, applied in Scotland to those who waste time over small matters, "You are longer in tuning your pipes than in playing your tune."

The Scottish Lowland bagpipe, like the Northumbrian pipe, was in two forms, one consisting of a smaller and milder toned edition of the Highland instrument and the other a miniature of this and having the same relation to it as the fife has to a German band. Its great drawback, from the point of view of the devotees of the Highland bagpipe, is that it is unsuited to perform what they consider the perfection of pipe music—the pibroch. These small pipes were, however, gentler than the Highland, having the same tone, but less sonorous. It was to the strains of such a bagpipe that Chaucer tells us the company of pilgrims left London, and it is the same instrument that is alluded to in Shakespeare as the Lincolnshire bagpipe. The Irish bagpipe is the instrument in its most elaborate form and is supplied with wind by a bellows. The drones are all fixed on one stock and have keys which are played by the wrist of the right hand. The reeds are soft and the tones very sweet and melodious, and there is a harmonious bass which is very effective in the hands of a good player. The Irish instrument is fast dying out, but there is believed to be at least one player in Glasgow, an old man, bent with years, but devoted to his pipes, who takes his stand near the top of the classic High street and to a small but appreciate audience renders Scottish and Irish airs on the bagpipe of Erin.

The bagpipe, though at one time fairly common, never obtained a firm hold in England. It lost favor and gradually deteriorated, until it is now practically extinct. The average Englishman neither appreciates nor understands it. A famous poet irreverently once compared its notes to "the shrill screech of a lame goose caught in corn," while another heretic writer likens its sound to a "horrible, noisy, mad Irishman," or to the cries of the "eternally tormented." To the Irish people it appeals more strongly; they still possess in a degree the feeling of attachment to the bagpipe which is so general among Scotsmen. There is evidence of this in the revival of pipe bands in certain Irish regiments. But it is undoubtedly more closely associated with Scotland, both in the Highlands and Lowlands, than with any other country; the particular instrument in use being the great Highland bagpipe, which, as already explained, consists of three drones, including the big drone, which was added about the beginning of last century; it is this type which has gradually superseded the Lowland pipe. There is no doubt that the bagpipe was in use in Scotland from a very early period; and it is in Scotland that it has been brought to the highest degree of perfection. Its music distinctly connects it with Scotland, as is clear in the pibroch, the strathspey, the reel, the march and other popular melodies. There are proofs that the instrument was cultivated in that country certainly in the twelfth century, and of its universal popularity as early as the fifteenth century; while in the seventeenth century nearly every town in the Highlands and Lowlands boasted of its piper.

It is not sufficiently realized that the great Highland bagpipe is fitted for Highland music only. It is most offensive to those who understand and appreciate the instrument to hear English and other unsuitable airs attempted on it. It is the exponent of Highland music, and of that only. It also belongs to the open air as naturally as heather belongs to the hills and salmon to the sea lochs. It is quite a modern innovation, though a pleasing one, perhaps, to Scotsmen, for the pipers of Scottish regiments to play round the mess table after dinner. There has been quite a revival in the popularity of the bagpipe in recent years, and it is now heard in Irish regiments and in the Northumberland Fusiliers, the sides having been introduced into the Indian and Egyptian armies. These regiments are in every way entitled to have pipers, so long as there is no attempt to dress or otherwise disguise them in the Scottish national uniform. When all is said and done, the fact remains that the bagpipe, as at present patronized, is the national instrument of Scotland. To the Scotsman there is a particular charm about it that never fails to stir the blood. It intensifies his thoughts and inspires him in a manner which is difficult to describe in words. Nothing will rouse a Scottish audience as the pipes will, and no sound is more welcome at an open gathering than the wild notes of the national instrument.

GEN. BOOTH'S ROMANCE.

This description of Gen. Booth's married life makes an interesting supplement to the account of his work which appeared in last week's M. A. P.: The general's married life was very idyllic, the courting of the young couple was romantic and bestrewn with difficulties, and the letters that passed between them were singularly affectionate and spiritual after their marriage, says the London M. A. P. William Booth, stimulated by his enthusiastic wife, threw aside a ministerial livelihood with the chance of motion, to preach in the byways and alleys of London. Mrs. Booth's first attempt at speaking astonished her husband, and began an epoch of platform women. She began in a chapel. He started the Salvation Army as the Christian Mission in an old tent in the Quakers' burial ground, East London. The movement grew by persecution. Frequently his life was in danger from the mob. Until he became old he led the marches and processions in the open air, and his great height and striking face always identified him as the leader and brought a storm of sticks and stones. His portraits do not convey a good idea of the man. He is very tall and agile, has deep-set gray eyes alight with vitality and courage, a nose shaped in the Iron Duke mould, a long, firm, well-shaped mouth half hidden under a straggling beard and mustache, and a noble head covered with white hair.

SOME COAST TRAGEDIES.

The series of shipping disasters which devastated the great lakes last fall had its counter part along the Atlantic seaboard, and some grewsome wrecks have occurred, says the Chicago News. During the past few weeks the relentless gales have wrought havoc with steam and sailing ships in these northern waters. The steamer Turbin, from Sydney, N. S., to Boston, coal laden, went down off Yarmouth, N. S., and every soul on board perished. Her disaster was attended with great mystery; an explosion was seen by parties on shore to have occurred on her, a great column of fire and smoke shot up into the air, and then the hapless craft sunk, her whole personnel perishing with her. A suggestion was advanced in some quarters that she had been blown up by an infernal machine placed among her cargo to destroy her by Hungarian anarchists working at Sydney, whose chances of employment were lessened by some lavor-saving devices installed on her. But it is much more probable that her destruction was caused by spontaneous combustion.

The steamer Lunenburg was lost on the Magdalen islands the following week, her wreck involving fifteen lives. She was caught in a blizzard and driven onto a reef, where she slowly pounded to pieces, and as no help could be given from the shore, all on board perished, except five persons, who were washed to land. Two days later the Columbine struck on a rock off the south coast of Newfoundland and sunk with the fifteen souls aboard her. The saddest part of her mishap is that her hull drifted into the very harbor where her captain resided and brought up almost at his door. The captain's wife, whose third husband he was, had lost both his predecessors in the same vicinity through similar mishaps. Following closely upon her, the Florence was engulfed with eleven men, only portions of her wreckage being washed ashore to tell of her end. The Energy is overdue and is believed to have met the same fate, and the Gloriana also is missing.

In a recent gale on the Newfoundland coast ten vessels, with crews aggregating 118 men, were driven to sea, and so far five of them have not got back. Similar ill luck befell four at the same time last year, but they were all seen in midocean by passing steamers, and the crews taken off when almost at the last extremity. It is hoped that the same happy fate may be that of the five crews involved in the present incident, whose relatives are now almost apprehensive of the outcome. The steamer Logan, bound for Tilt Cove, on the east coast of Newfoundland, struck on a ledge five miles west of it in a blizzard and sunk in fifteen minutes, carrying down seventeen men. Such disasters occur every season at this time, and the coasts are fringed with the shattered hulls of countless the crafts, while the roster of the dead who have gone down with them would make an appalling record.

GENEROUS.

A quarter of a century ago there lived in a western village a gentle old man subsisting on a meager salary, says the Boston Herald. One day he learned that his brother had died in San Francisco and left him a fortune of $50,000,000. The transition was staggering, especially so since it was followed by a shower of appeals for money from every quarter of the globe and from persons known and unknown to him.

His son, who acted as his secretary, noticed with regret that the father seemed unable to grasp the meaning of his new power, and was glad to have him at last evince a little interest in one of his begging letters. It proved to be from Williams college, asking an endowment on the plea that the old man's birthplace was near the institution.

"I'd like to do something for that school," said he, meditatively.

"Well, I would, father, if I were you," his son encouraged him.

"I believe I will." The old man's ardor kindled. "I believe I'll give them something handsome."

"So you should," the son pursued. "Why not?"

"I will. I will give them"—he thought for a moment—"I'll give them $100!"

PLATINUM.

Jeweler's Circular Weekly: The war between Russia and Japan was probably responsible for the fact that the output of platinum in the United States increased from 110 ounces in 1903, valued at $2,090, to 200 ounces, valued at $4,160 in 1904. Owing to anxiety in regard to the fate of the platinum industry in Russia, the price of platinum rose about 10 per cent during 1904.

"It should not be understood," says Dr. David T. Day of the United States geological survey, "that the slight rise of 10 per cent in the price of platinum would serve as any great stimulus to the placer gold miners of the West who furnish the platinum products of the United States, for those miners are comparatively indifferent to a slight change in price.

"The scarcity of platinum and the consequent rise in price, however, led to much energy on the part of Eastern smelters of platinum in urging upon the placer miners of the West the advisability of saving platinum in cleaning up the hydraulic mines. The increase thus effected is interesting as showing what is possible in the United States in the future."

In the opinion of Dr. Day, the outlook for increased production for the year 1905 is good, because the investigation undertaken by the geological survey of the black sands of the Pacific slope and of the increased knowledge thus furnished to the miners in regard to the value of the platinum and to simple means of saving it.

The world's supply of platinum for the year amounted to about 200 kilograms, or 6,625 troy ounces from South America, and 6,000 kilograms, or 192,500 troy ounces from Russia. All the American platinum came from California and Oregon, inasmuch as operations have been suspended in the Rambler Copper mine, Wyoming, which furnished some platinum the year before. The imports of platinum into the United States during 1905 showed a decline of more than 3,000 ounces, due to European control of the supply.

TO RECOVER DEADHEADS

From the Menominee and Brule Rivers, Company is Formed.

But One Concern in Michigan Engaged in "Submarine Logging."

Negaunee, Mich., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the purpose of "lumbering" the Menominee and Brule rivers and their tributaries, the Menominee River Improvement company has been incorporated by a number of well-known Marquette and Menominee lumbermen. Although the corporation is styled an "improvement" company, the real business to be engaged in will be the recovery of "deadhead" or sunken logs from the beds of the streams on which operations will be carried on.

"Submarine logging" is of comparatively recent origin, and at the present time there is but one company in Michigan actively engaged in the business. This company, organized only last summer, is operating on the Manistee river, in the lower peninsula. Its equipment for lifting logs consists of a number of flat-bottomed scows on which lifting cranes and small engines are placed for the purpose of hoisting timber from the bottom of the stream. When the logs are lifted they are crosspiled on the banks and allowed to dry until in condition to be again put into the water and floated down the river to the mills. After a log has been submerged for a number of years, the water works its way in between the bark and timber, where decomposition ensues to a limited extent, the bark, however, only responding to the disintegration, while the wood remains unaffected. As soon as taken from the water, the bark is removed, and in about three months the logs are dry enough to float again.

Nearly every navigable stream in the state on which lumbering operations have been carried on in past years contains great numbers of sunken logs. The Manistee, Menominee and Muskegon rivers contain perhaps more than any other three streams in the state, owing to the fact that the logging work in the territory tributary to them has been much heavier than in other districts. For a distance of nearly 200 miles, the Manistee river is paved with sunken pine, elm, cherry, oak, maple and other kinds of timber. Some of the logs have been under water for forty years, or since the date of the first operations on the stream.

A Manistee lumberman recently said that he believed there were at least 1,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber in the bed of the river that could be recovered and manufactured into lumber. That his estimate is not far from correct is verified to some extent by the operations of the Manistee company, which took over 300,000 feet of mixed timber from one deep hole at a bend in the stream last summer. The area worked over was less than 400 feet in extent. It is interesting to note that notwithstanding that a saw log may be submerged for thirty or forty years, disintegration does not ensue until the log is exposed to air, nearly every timber recovered being found in perfect condition except for a few inches at the ends, where "checking" is observed. The prompt removal of the bark prevents further deterioration.

In the early days of lumbering only the best class of timber was cut and put into the rivers for transportation to the mills, in consequence of which the timber now recovered by the submarine loggers is usually of the finest grade and nearly all long lengths. Of the billions of feet of pine and hardwood driven down the Menominee river in the past forty years, perhaps 10 per cent is in the bottom of that stream. The small logs, floating better than the large ones, were easily driven, but the heavy logs, which encountering a jam, sank readily, and many were never recovered. Lumber companies using rivers as a means of log transportation estimate a definite percentage of loss on account of these "deadheads." Naturally the percentage is greatest where hardwood logs are driven, owing to the heavier character of the wood as compared with pine or hemlock, and the loss from sinking is an important item.

While river transportation is much cheaper than rail, the loss is also greater, and in late years the largest lumber companies have adopted rail logging in the hardwood belts almost to the exclusion of river driving. Maple, beech, elm, cherry, oak and ash logs sink very soon after being put into the water, and if allowed to remain several months are seldom recovered. The great bulk of the deadheads, however, are pine logs, it having been only within recent years that attention has been paid to hardwood logging. The lumbermen operating in the days when timber lands were cheap figured the cost of recovering deadheads at more than the lumber would sell for in the market, and so the bottom of the streams were never cleared except where logs pulled up to such an extent that navigation was interfered with.

The extent of the operations of the Menominee River company will cover the Paint, Michigamme, Sturgeon, Fence, Deer, Brule, Nett and Little Cedar rivers, all tributary to the larger stream, which, with the Brule, forms a considerable portion of the boundary line between Northern Michigan and Northern Wisconsin. For logs recovered the owners of the timber will be charged at a specified rate per 1,000 feet. Where logs are found bearing the marks of lumber companies not now engaged in operations on the river, the improvement company will come into possession of them after a certain length of time unless the owners pay the lifting charges. The profits from this source will amount to a large item, as many millions of feet of timber are in the rivers, bearing the stamp of concerns formerly operating on the streams, while the companies themselves have long ceased to do business and many of the individual owners have either died or have left the state. The submarine logging will be carried on during the spring, summer and fall, the winter season not being conducive to profitable operations.

The lumber manufactured from deadheads is said to be the same in every respect as that made from logs taken from the living forest. This statement is contradicted by some lumbermen, but recent experiments made in the Lower Peninsula bear out the contention that there is very little or no difference. Even after months of drying on the banks of streams from which they have been recovered, deadheads upossess a nauseous odor that in the process of manufacture, and for weeks after the lumber is piled in the yards this odor remains. Maple lumber manufactured from deadheads, especially if the logs be sawed during the winter season, is particularly white, and if sawed in winter is less liable to stain than if sawed in summer.

It is worthy of note that contemporaneous with the commencement of submarine logging in Michigan, there is at Muskegon a company whose operations are conducted on similar lines to that of logging. At one time during the palmy days of pine lumbering on the Muskegon river, there were over 100 sawmills located on Muskegon lake, at Muskegon. Slab wood in those days was of no commercial value, and the sawmill men were put to the necessity of getting rid of this class of refuse at the smallest cost. The slabs were loaded into carts and dumped into the lake, millions of cords being disposed of in this way, until the entire lake bottom was covered with slabs to a depth of twenty-five to thirty feet and used in the manufacture of lath, which commodity, in keeping with the price of lumber, has reached a high market value.

With the disappearance of the forests of Michigan, submarine logging of the navigable streams will probably become general in a few years. The waste of the early lumbermen will be turned to profit. Many millions of feet of the finest product of the Michigan pineries lie embedded in the mud and sand at the bottom of streams, and much of this will be recovered.

THE VALUE OF BABYLON

Professor Delitzsch Tells Importance of New Discoveries.

Whole City Likely to be Excavated Within Twenty Years.

New York, Jan. 23.—Prof. Friedrich Delitzsch's third lecture on Babylonian antiquity, delivered in the large lecture hall of the Museum of Natural History, attracted a larger crowd even than the two earlier lectures. Those in the audience who came expecting that the lecturer would expatiate on the religious side of the discoveries of Assyriology, as he did in Berlin before the kaiser, were disappointed, for Prof. Delitzsch summed up that part of his subject very briefly. He devoted his time to explaining very generally of what importance the new discoveries are and in pointing out the desirability of extending explorations. As before he made much use of the stereopticon and presented some very beautiful pictures.

He first showed how much further back into antiquity the Babylonian discoveries carry us, using parallel chronological lists of the kings and of accepted dates in Hebrew history, well established names from the deluge down to the fall of Nineveh, some corroborated by the Hebrew records, and recorded lists of rulers, going back to the creation, with several who ruled before that, at least before the date the Jews set for their creation. He showed the monuments containing the cuneiform chronicle on the screen. Other examples of cuneiform writings were shown, with the changes into a sort of hieroglyphic character, and samples of Sumerian and Hittite inscriptions that have not yet been deciphered completely.

Prof. Delitzsch next pointed out that a new world had been disclosed by the revelations of Assyriology, and that a means has been obtained of checking the Hebrew statements. Heretofore in Semitic studies we had had but one book, the Old Testament; now we have another and a much older one in the cuneiform literature that has been recovered. The high attainment in the arts of the Babylonians was shown by many pictures. They were excellent draughtsmen, as is seen above all in their representations of animals; they invented enamelling and colored their alabaster sculpture. Extraordinary specimens in brilliant colors of the enamelled tile work were shown. A sample of their knowledge of mechanics was seen in the representation of the removal of a colossal stone winged bull. Prof. Delitzsch used many of these pictures to show that many modern or mediaeval traditions come from the Assyrians and Babylonians. A king fighting a very lively griffin, he pointed out, suggested the Archangel Michael or St. George and the dragon. The serpents twining around a wand were carved in Babylon ages before Greece dreamed of Hermes. A remarkable compound beast, a serpent with fore-legs like an ostrich, the hindlings of a panther, and a scorpion at the end of its tail, recalled Greek and Old Testament myths. A lifelike clay figurine of the devil was recognized without explanation by the audience, which came near applauding, and was followed by a very angel-like woman with wings.

The accuracy of the Babylonian and Chaldean astronomical calculations are astonishing. We moderns are still living in their teachings in astronomy and mathematics. They had the decimal system. They divided the hour into sixty minutes and the circle into 360 degrees. They devised the twelve signs of the Zodiac and the names that no religion has succeeded in modifying—Sunday, Monday and so forth. The Chaldean magic and astrology passed to Egypt and to Greece, and has come to our times. Melanchthon believed in the influence of the stars; Keppler, the astronomer, drew a horoscope for Wallenstein, and even Leibnitz was busied with alchemy. The long stay of the Jews in Babylon and the settlement of Samaria and other portions of Palestine by Babylonians explains how so many Babylonian ideas entered into the minds of the Jews of the New Testament time —for instance, the belief in demons. Many religious ideas that we ascribe to the old Testament existed much earlier in Babylon and are found in these records. Plenty of Bible phrases occur word for word in the legal documents. We find in Babylon God appearing in a dream, or interfering in person, and the legend that man was made of clay moistened by the sweat of the maker. We find the conception of life after death nobler than the Hebrew view, and ideas of a hell of drought and a paradise of waters.

Professor Delitzsch was very severe on Herodotus for the wron gideas he has spread about Babylon; he was rather cold about the Hebrew versions, too. He referred to the excavations that are going on—English, French and particularly the American at Nippur and the German at Assur and Babylon. He asserted that in something over twenty years the whole site of Babylon could be excavated. He wound up with an appeal for sympathy and support for the work the excavators have undertaken.

HANDSOME EAST END HOME SOLD

George Spencer Sells Residence to J. H. McLean of Ironwood.

George Spencer has sold his handsome residence at 302 Sixteenth avenue east, and the purchaser is J. H. McLean of Ironwood, Mich., who has been in charge of the operations of the Oliver Iron Mining company on the Gogebic range. It is understood that Mr. McLean will before long become a resident of Duluth and that the property is purchased to be his residence. It includes four lots on East Third and five on East Fourth streets, the grounds extending from Third street through to Fourth, making it an especially handsome site. During Mr. Spencer's residence there of more than ten years he has greatly embellished the grounds with beautiful trees, shrubs and other appurtenances that go to make it a charming place. It is understood that the consideration was in the neighborhood of $25,000, although the deed has not yet been placed on record.

MONTANA TO SUE PACKERS.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 23.—County Attorney James Healy, representing the state of Montana, will begin today suits against Swift, Armour and the Hammond packing interests to recover $65,000, alleged to be due as license money for the sale of oleomargarine, butterine and imitation cheese in the past year.

EXPERT ADVICE.

Jim Webster was brought before a Vermont justice of the peace, says the Boston Herald. It was the same old charge. After the evidence was all in, the judge, with a perplexed look, said: "But I do not comprehend, Webster, how it was possible for you to steal those chickens when they were roosting right under the owner's window, and there were two vicious dogs in the yard."

"It wouldn't do you a bit of good, judge, for me to 'splain how I cotched 'em; you couldn't do it if you tried forty times, and yer might get a hide full of buckshot de bery fust time yer put your leg ober de fence. De bes' way fer yer to do, jedge, is fer yer to buy yer chickens in de market."

WEST DULUTH

FOR EKLUND AND CULLUM

Eighth Ward Almost Certain for Democratic Candidates.

Western End of Seventh Will Give Mayor a Majority.

The political situation in the Eighth ward is not in the least mixed—it is too strongly for Cullum and Eklund. John Eklund, the Democratic candidate for alderman is far in the lead, and it is generally believed that he will win by a handsome majority. A large number of Republicans have declared themselves for him, and it is expected that he will be given the handle of "alderman" by a comfortable margin. Mr. Foubister, his opponent, is a well-known and well-liked man, but Mr. Eklund is equally well liked, and the organization behind him is well nigh perfect.

Mayor Cullum is strong in the whole of the Eighth ward and in the western end of the Seventh. It is expected that he will poll a large vote in both of these wards. In the Eighth it seems to be nothing more than a foregone conclusion that he will be given a good majority, and out here his election is considered only in the light of the amount of the majority.

Sleighing Party.

A sleighing party was given Saturday evening in honor of Miss Lizzie Campbell, whose birthday it was. Afterwards refreshments were served at her home, on Fifty-seventh avenue west. Those present were:

Misses Nellie Brett, Blanche Felix, Tena Alveson, Maude Moe, Gertie Hanson, Irene Moore, Marie Thorenson, Ann Campbell and Mabel Campbell; Messrs. Riley Baker, Roy Suature, Fred Pudvan, August Hickey, S. Ehr, Earl LaFlaire, Arthur Hartough, Harry Brett, Theodore Epper and Roy Baker.

Illustrated Lecture.

An illustrated lecture "The Sign of the Cross" will be given by Rev. R. J. Mooney in Holy Apostles Episcopal church Wednesday evening and at this affair Misses Alice Cooley and Florence Hyland will sing. This lecture is in the course, which Dr. Mooney has been operating and which has been known as an "educational" course and they have been well patronized. Dr. Mooney proposes organizing in West Duluth a singing school on a high scale in the very near future and his plans will probably be explained at this lecture.

West Duluth Briefs.

Richard Schell has inflammatory rheumatism and is confined to his home.

Mrs. Munroe, who has been visiting with her brother P. R. Haley of 605 Fifty-seventh avenue west, returned today to her home in Winnipeg.

The Columbia Dancing club of West Duluth gave a sleigh ride party to New Duluth last evening and danced in the Good Templars hall there. Eleven couples took in the affair.

PENSION HUMORS.

Some Amusing and Original Applications for Aid.

If he dared to do so, the commissioner of pensions at Washington could compile a delightful volume, putting therein the strange applications for pensions that come to his office, says the New York Tribune. Some of these letters belong to the "too good to keep" class and they find their way into the world, where they add a good deal to the hilarity of nations. Some applicants for pensions manifest the most childlike ignorance regarding the method of procedure necessary when applying for a pension. They seem to think that all they have to do is to send an application to the pension office and Uncle Sam will forward a check by return mail. Some go so far as to send personal letters to President Roosevelt, and the writer has knowledge of at least one ex-soldier who feels confident that he had his pension "riz" from $10 to $12 a month by a letter sent to the president telling him that if the pension was not "riz" by a certain time the applicant would "jine the Dimmycrats."

Soon after the close of the Civil war there came to the pension office in Washington the following unique and poetical application for a pension that went the rounds of the newspapers at least thirty years ago, for a copy of it is in a scrapbook that old:

to Commissioner of Pensions Washington.

these many years I've tried in vain an honest Pention to obtain
For wound received in Sixty one at first Battle of Ball Run one of ohioes sons so brave who went to the front the union to save
And whilst Engaged in above said fight a rebel Shell took half my sight
Not content by taking an Eye this treacherous shell in Passing by took my Eye Brow Clear to the bone and Left me as unconscious as a stone burning a blister of Crystal Clear from the jaw bone to the Ear
but thanks to god my life was spared
Chek and Eye brow but sLitely Seared and one Eye was left to me for to write and read Poetre
I hope that with that Eye to see the day when unkel Sam his Cripples will Pay.

Much more recent is the letter sent to the commissioner of pensions by an applicant who had contracted blood poisoning in the following remarkable manner:

"I got blood poison by beinge hit with a hens eg wen I cam back frum the frunt. The eg was not good when you send my pension i want the Deed made sos my wife can't get none of it. She throde the eg. She war a rebel."

Equally appealing and remarkable was another letter sent to the pension office in which the applicant set forth his claims to a pension in this wise:

"The way I got my War ingery was a ketchin' of a hog. The Hog war wanted by our captain for forege. We was chasin' the hog and she crawled threw a hole, an' I thot I were about the size of the hog, and tried to crawl threw, but I stuck an' in trying' to wiggle out I throde the rales off an' one it hit me on my hed and knocked me senseless. I do not think the hog had nothin' to do with my line of duty, for I did not ketch the hog. Wich she never was caut, so pleze send along my pension."

One aged pensioner had evidently made a serious blunder by taking unto himself a wife in his old age, for love of gain seems to have been the motive of the woman who married him, if the following letter stated the facts in the case:

"Dear Mister Geverument, Pleze to fix up my penshun papers so as my wife cant draw my twelve dollars a munt when I am ded she say she marryed me for loy an to be a old mans Darling but now I no it was for to git my penshun on herself by being my widower so pleze let my penshun end with me but pleze doant let on to her that you got this from me or i would have a but time of it and thies is hotter now than I can stand. So when I send word that I am no moar then send her this if you want to but not until the penshun is shut off whitch is her just desserts for marryin' for money an in a mersheenary spirrit."

A SAILOR KING.

Norway's new king was once an apprentice in the Danish navy, says the Kansas City Journal. In the mess to which he belonged he was called by his first name—that is, Carl in Danish—and he had to eat the same "grub" and stand the same hardships as all the other apprentices. Although everybody knew him to be a prince of the realm, no deference whatever was paid him as such. On the contrary, he was "hazed" and made miserable in good old midshipman style. He took his medicine bravely enough. On board ship he had to mend his own clothes, darn his socks, sew on buttons and keep his weapons and accouterments in order. He slept in a regulation sailor hammock, with his clothes rolled up under his head for a pillow, without night shirt, and wearing only a sailor's striped undershirt and bundled up in a woolen blanket, sometimes with his sea boots dangling by the hammock rope. He used to make the big brass binnacle flash like silver mail. He could never quite get used to chewing tobacco, which in the eyes of every true apprentice is one of the cardinal virtues, and whenever he was seasick, which often happened, he used to sit in the gangway on a bucket and chew rye bread.

A FOOL BOY.

Edgar Lewis is employed on a large stock farm in Newry, Me., owned by Walter A. Foster, says the Boston Herald. During a cold spell last winter the water pipes which supplied water for the cattle at the barn froze. The cattle had to be driven to the river each day for water.

A rain storm had caused a brook to flow across the path, so the cattle had not been turned out for several days. Lewis went to his employer and said: "I am afraid the cattle will choke to death soon, for I have been unable to drive them to the river for several days on account of the brook."

"or heaven's sake, Ed," said Mrs. oster, "what is the brook made off?"

IRISH HEMORRHAGE.

This story is told about Kemp Sturgeon, who was well known by about everybody in Roxbury, says the Boston Herald.

Mr. Sturgeon was standing on Hammond street, gazing at some green paint a painter had spilled. An old lady who saw him stopped and asked him what the trouble was. He replied: "Nothing much; only an Irishman had a hemorrhage.

How to Save Baby From Being Sick

BY A MOTHER WHO KNOWS

Every mother should avoid the possibility of sickness befalling her children in this season. And, of course, most mothers do honestly try to avoid such possibilities, but many do not appreciate the one great essential.

Feed the little folks good, healthful, pure, strengthening food and there need not be any fear.

For many years physicians have prescribed malt extracts, which contain a large percentage of maltose, or malt sugar. Malta-Vita, the crisp, delicious whole-wheat food, contains from eight to ten per cent of Maltose.

Malta-Vita, on account of its large percentage of maltose, is easily digestible and readily assimilated by the human economy, forming rich healthy blood, is especially beneficial for children and it is so good to eat—not at all like the tasteless variety of breakfast foods—that the little ones always welcome its appearance on the table.

Mrs. Miles McCormick of South Bend, Ind., says: "We had almost despaired of finding something our baby could eat without being distressed. He had, since birth, been a constant sufferer from constipation and a general derangement of the stomach and bowels. Since we began feeding him Malta-Vita he has improved wonderfully and is entirely cured of constipation.

Malta-Vita is sold by all grocers. Big package 10 cents.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Have You Rheumatism, Kidney, Liver or Bladder Trouble?

To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, will do for YOU, all our Readers May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail,

Pain or dull ache in the back is unmistakable evidence of kidney trouble. It is Nature's timely warning to show you that the track of health is not clear.

If these danger signals are unheeded, more serious results are sure to follow; Bright's disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble, may steal upon you.

The mild and the extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle free, by mail.

Gentlemen—I attribute by present good health to Swamp-Root. I suffered many years with kidney trouble and had an almost constant pain in my back. Your great remedy, Swamp-Root, cured my trouble, and I have since been perfectly well. Yours truly.
B. H. Chalker, Ex. Chief of Police, Ozark, Ala.

Lame back is only one symptom of kidney trouble—one of many. Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root are, being obliged to pass water often during the day and to get up many times during the night, inability to hold your urine, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, catarrh of the bladder, uric acid, constant headache, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, irregular heart-beating, rheumatism, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion.

If your water when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment in settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in The Duluth Evening Herald. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THEY OFFER CONCESSION

Striking Printers Act on Suggestion of Typothetae Member.

Will Swap Agreements With Employers If That is Agreeable.

There is a faint glimmer of hope that the strike of the job printers may be arbitrated but the glimmer is very faint. The strikers have submitted a proposition to the Typothetae, which is the name of the boss printers. The union claims that one of the members of the Typothetae, who is sick of the fight, suggested to the officers of the union that such a proposition might meet with favor by the employers and as it seemed fair to the strikers, the matter was submitted but has not yet been acted on.

The proposition is this: That the scale be signed for an eight-hour day, or, rather, a 48-hour week, which is the same thing, on the basis of $17.40 a week instead of $18 as the printers were getting for the 9-hour day previously. In addition to this it must be agreed that 40 cents be paid for the first additional hour and 50 cents an hour for any time over that; and that there be a half holiday Saturdays.

Whether or not this will be accepted is problematical. John Christie, one of the members of the executive committee of the Typothetae was seen today and still sticks to his former declaration that his shop will have nothing to do with any proposition which does not include the 9-hour day and the open shop. He declares that he will not run a union shop again; it must be open to union and non-union men alike and employes must recognize the 9-hour day. He says he does not believe the Typothetae will accept the new proposition from the printers and even if they do he will not. He showed a statement to prove that during the last six months of 1905 his business over the previous six months increased more than 25 per cent, and that in spite of the strike. He adds that he does not, in the face of such figures, need to recognize the union and will not do so under any circumstances.

UNDER STRANGE ORDERS.

The French minister of war has just granted leave to certain of the best shots in the garrisons at Calais and Boulogne to put themselves at the disposition of the local authorities for the purpose of destroying the many seals that frequent the sandbanks between these two towns and are a serious menace to the fishing industry, says a writer in the London Tit-Bits. Before now soldiers have been similarly employed.

A few winters since the Province of Luxemburg was so infested with wolves as to give rise to serious alarm among the inhabitants, who by themselves were quite unable to cope with the scourge. They, therefore, consulted the minister of agriculture, who, thinking maybe that the army would be better employed than idle, organized hunting parties composed of soldiers, with a most satisfactory result.

Four years ago a vast horde of rats crossed the German frontier into East Belgium. Their depredations were wholesale, and so audacious, in many instances, did the animals become as to attack and severely wound young children. People were even compelled to abandon their homes. At last the government was applied to for assistance, and from the garrisons of the neighboring towns soldiers were dispatched to the assistance of the inhabitants, who were with their aid enabled at length to stem the rodent invasion.

Sparrows were the pest that the French troops were called upon to exterminate some time ago in Algiers.

During the maneuvers recently held at Chartres a lion escaped from a traveling menagerie and went off at a brisk pace through the town. Great was the consternation of the inhabitants, who called upon the soldiers for protection. For answer the latter bade the timid citizens keep within doors, and scoured the streets until the savage beast was captured.

In August of 1900, during the journey of a company of French engineers from the capital to Marseilles, the driver, by some unfortunate accident, fell from the engine on to the line, while the stoker, overcome with emotion, fainted. A couple of soldiers, however, at once stepped into the breach and volunteered to drive the train, which they did with such skill and nerve that it arrived at Dijon three minutes before the advertised time.

In February of 1903 a terrible blizzard swept over Southern Russia. Hundreds of peasants' huts were buried beneath the snow drifts, while outside Odessa three trains were completely blocked. Word was at once sent to the neighboring barracks, and over 4,000 soldiers armed with shovels promptly appeared upon the scene. In a very short while the lines were cleared.

A more curious role, however, than any of the foregoing is that of acting as a living object lesson to the anatomy students at Heidelberg university, which, it seems, is expected of any soldier who may chance to be quartered in that German town.

WOULD HAVE PLAYHOUSE

Virginia Commercial Club Taking Steps to Get Opera House.

Representative Visits Duluth to Interest People in Project.

If the plans which the Commercial Club of Virginia have under way meet with the success the business men expect them to, that city is likely to have a thoroughly modern opera house this coming year, costing in the neighborhood of $40,000 and with seating capacity for 1,000 persons.

J. P. Chalmers, representing the Virginia Commercial club, was in the city today to confer with local parties that have some large realty holdings in Virginia and who are being interested in the project of erecting the new building on their lots. The site that has been selected, if the owners will consent, comprises three lots in the heart of the business section of the city, with a frontage of 75 feet on the main street and 125 deep on the intersecting avenue.

Mr. Chalmers says the Virginia business men have gone into the matter enthusiastically and will, if necessary, offer assistance of a very substantial nature to bring the project to a culmination. Mr. Chalmers has conferred with C. A. Marshall of the Copper country circuit and has received assurances of a most satisfactory nature that Virginia, with a new opera house of the seating capacity mentioned, could without doubt be included in the circuit. With the theater at Hibbing and a new one at Virginia it would be an advantage to the circuit to include the two range cities.

To substantiate the claims of the Virginia Commercial club that the new opera house would have sufficient territory to draw from, Mr. Chalmers says the new motor car line that is planned for this coming year to connect the range towns will bring at least six or seven good towns in close touch with Virginia, so that with the people that would be drawn from the outside towns, in connection with the 6,000 population of the city of Virginia itself, there is no question but that the patronage available will be satisfactory. The Commercial club of Virginia, Mr. Chalmers says, will not consider a project to build an operahouse of smaller capacity for the reason that it would shut that city out of the Copper country circuit. Offers for a smaller house have already been considered by the business men and have been turned down.

TEACHER GETS $300 DAMAGES

School District No. 10 Must Pay for Services Contracted for.

School district No. 10, St. Louis county, must pay Miss E. G. Smiley of this city $300 for teaching services which she did not perform, but which she was willing to perform under terms of a contract which she had with the district officers for the school year of 1903-04. Judgment to this effect, without costs, was rendered in district court this morning by Judge J. D. Ensign.

The court finds that Miss Smiley contracted to teach for the district for a term of eight months, beginning in the fall of 1903, but that when she appeared ready to begin school she was refused permission to proceed. Miss Smiley alleged that she entered contract to teach for $80 per month, and she sued for $640. The court held that she was entitled to damages in the sum of $300, and no more.

A stipulation for judgment at the amount mentioned was filed today by Davis & Hollister for Miss Smiley, and H. B. Fryberger, representing the district.

PRINTING CONTRACT

Is Awarded to Miller-Davis Company of Minneapolis.

Bid Was $30 Under That Made by Local Printers.

County printing involving a contract of more than $1,900 kept the county board in a lively discussion nearly all the morning session today. Just before the adjournment this noon the contract for printed blanks and stationery was awarded to the Miller-Davis Printing Company of Minneapolis, for $1,910.60. The Duluth Printing & Manufacturing company was but $29.95 over the successful bidder, with a bid of $1,940.55.

The bids for the printing were submitted yesterday, there being considerable competition. As the items were bid on in separate schedules, it took the auditor's clerical force until this morning to figure up the totals. The Miller-Davis Printing company and the Duluth Printing & Manufacturing company were the only two concerns to put in bids covering every item. Some of the other bidders selected items here and there throughout the schedules. The Trade News Publishing company was also a factor in the bidding, with a figure of $1,834, but by oversight of E. L. Millar, its manager, some items of stamped envelopes had been omitted. If these were put in at their proper price, it was held that his bid would have exceeded the others.

The board approved the bonds furnished by various individuals and firms who were awarded the contract for other items of the county printing at the annual meeting, also the bond of Darst & Hughes in the sum of $3,500 for the faithful performance of a contract for a steel bridge over the St. Louis river west of Zion station.

The bid of John Schluenes of $50 for shelving for the auditor's vault was accepted. County Auditor Halden was directed to call for bids for furnishing steel tables and chairs for the vault in connection with the register of deeds' office. It is the intention of the board to do away entirely with wooden furniture in the vault and lessen the danger of a conflagration there.

In a committee report on the Talmadge river new steel bridge, the bill of A. Y. Bayne & Company, builders, was given a severe jar. At the meeting held the first of the month the bridge company put in a bill for ninety-two cubic yards of concrete work at $8.50 per cubic yard, the contract price. Some of the commissioners thought that the concrete measurements were incorrect and on resolution of Commissioner Patterson the bill was held up and a committee appointed to employ an engineer to re-measure the concrete abutmens. Capt. Durage, who was employed, reported that the concrete work measured only 52.85 cubic yards or about forty cubic yards less than the bridge company had measured it. The board took steps to have the bridge bill reduced by about $340, before allowing it.

WAPITI'S ANTLERS.

Ernest Thompson Seton in Scribner's Magazine: About the end of the winter—that is, in mid-March—the antlers of the year before break off flush with their base an inch or more above the skull, usually they are found close together, showing that they fell nearly at the same time.

At first the place of each antler is a broad, raw spot. In a few days it shows a thick rounded pad of blood gorged skin. This swells rapidly and in a fortnight the great bulbous fuzzy horn beginning has shot up to a height of several inches. At exactly the right time, place and in just the right direction a bump comes forth to be the foundation of the brow tine.

In a few more days the bez tine is projected by the invisible architect. In a month the structure is nearly a foot high and all enveloped in a turgid mass of feverish, throbbing blood vessels—the scaffolding and workmen of this surprising structure. Night and day the work is pushed with astounding speed, and in four months this skyscraper is finished—a wonderful structure, indeed, for a score of nature's forces have toiled, a myriad of invisible workmen have done their part and an edifice that according to ordinary rules should have taken a lifetime is here rushed through in a summer and all in absolute silence.

August sees the building done, but it is still cluttered with scaffolding. The supplies of blood at the base are reduced and finally discontinued. The antler is no longer in vital touch with the animal; it begins to die. The sensitiveness leaves each part, the velvet covering soon dries, cracks and peels, and the stag assists the process of clearing off the skin by scraping his horns on the brush wood. September sees him fully armed in his spears of dead bone, strong in body, glorying in his weapons and his strength and ready to battle with all comers.

LASTED FIVE WINDOWS.

The officers on Governors island are telling an excellent story on General Fred Grant, says the Kansas City Journal. It seems that two soldiers had been in the habit of getting into a scrap every day and were constantly up before their colonel for discipline. Every sort of mild punishment was tried without avail till at last the commander of the department of the East was appealed to. After taking a horizontal view of it the general sent for the sergeant major and said: Just see that those two men, Crowley and Hitchins, clean all the barracks windows, Crowley to do the outside while Hutchins attends to the inside. And, recollect, neither man is to leave any window till the other has finished." The scheme was highly successful. The enemies scowled thunderously, even murderously, at each other for five windows, but flesh and blood could hold out no longer. At the sixth they burst out laughing and have been the best of friends ever since.

COME INTO NORTHERN

Calumet and Lake Linden Would Consent to the Plan.

Annual League Meeting Will be Held in Duluth Sunday.

A six club league, with the towns of Lake Linden and Calumet replacing Superior and Crookston, is a possibility in the Northern league next year, according to J. M. Lamb, manager of the Winnipeg club, who has just returned from the Copper country, where he attended the meeeting of the Copper Country league held there last week.

Mr. Lamb passed through Duluth on his way back to Winnipeg last night. He came to the city to attend the bonspiel, and returned with the Canadian curlers.

Mr. Lamb stated yesterday that the cities of Calumet and Lake Linden were apparently in favor of joining forces with the Northern league next year, and that he believed the deal could be consummated.

Both of these cities are good ball towns, and draw the best crowds of any of the cities in the Copper Country league, which supported higher-priced teams than the Northern league did last year.

It is believed that a very favorable rate could be secured from the South Shore road for ball players. This road has always assumed a very favorable attitude toward sporting events, and it is believed that it would look with favor on the plan to include the Copper country towns in the Northern league.

If Superior and Crookston were retained it would make the much desired eight club league, but these two cities have always proved a drag upon the others, constantly demanding favors, and failing to furnish their fair share of the gate receipts.

The annual meeting of the league will probably be held next Sunday, when the question will be considered. The meeting must be held in Duluth, under the rule that calls for the annual meeting to be held in the city winning the pennant.

The election of a new president will be one of the chief matters of importance. E. H. Kent, it is said, will resign and sever his active connection with the league. If this is the case, and if the Copper country is to be included in the circuit, the next president of the league should be a Duluth man. Duluth should be the central city of the circuit, and by far the most available city for the offices of the league. Edward Hazen or W. Kuehnow of the Duluth club would make good men for the place. If Mr. Kent resigns, as rumor says he is about to do, the directors could do much worse than to choose one of the Duluth directros for the place.

MOON NOT DEAD.

Scientist's Observations Show It to Be Still Alive.

There was a time in the history of the earth when it had no satellite, when it was not the globe we know it now, but a great liquid planet incrusted by a shell some thirty-five miles in thickness, says the Scientific American. That time is separated from us by an interval which cannot be accurately determined, but which must be measured by millions of years at least. In those early days of its planetary career the earth spun on its axis with a constantly increasing swiftness that reduced day to a few hours. When the period of revolution had finally dwindled to a bare three hours, a catastrophe occured, one of the most fearful in all celestial history. Such was the enormity of the centrifugal force of the earth that five thousand million cubic miles of its mass were hurled off into space. In that cataclysm our moon was born.

Strange as its origin may be, the moon has still other peculiarities to offer. It is the largest of all planetary satellites, so large indeed that to the inhabitants of a neighboring world it must appear with the earth as a marvelously beautiful double planet.

Because it is smaller in mass than the earth, the attraction of gravitation on the moon is considerably less than it is on the earth. If it were possible for one of us to journey to the moon and live there, we should find ourselves able to accomplish six times as much as we can on the earth. We could lift weights six times as heavy, run six times as fast, work six times as hard—all becuase the moon attracts bodies with but one sixth the force of the earth. We could leap over barns with ease, and run a mile at express-train speed.

Despite the chasm of 253,000 miles that separate us from the moon, we know more of the physical characteristics of the single pallid face which it ever turns toward us than we do of the Arctic regions, or of the heart of Africa. We have studied, mapped and photographed the great dark plains which were once thought to be seas and were accordingly miscaled "maria," the lofty mountain ranges that sometimes tower 20,000 feet above the seas; and the vast, annular craters that pit the moon's aged features.

Although it once formed part of the earth, the moon is different from our globe in many respects. Charred by fires long since dead, honeycombed like a giant ball of slag, scarred by terrific volcanic upheavels, its telescope aspect is anything but cheerful. Craters are not uncommon features of the earth; but on the moon their number and size are truly astonishing. At the lunar south pole these dead volcanoes are so closely packed together that to Galileo (the first white man who ever saw the moon through a telescope) they seemed like the eyes of a peacock's tail. So large, indeed, are many of these craters, that a man standing within one of them would be unable to see the surrounding ramparts, because they would lie below his horizon. A diameter of 10, 20 or even 60 miles is not infrequently met with in a lunar crater.

Are these craters all dead? Most astronomers believe so, but Prof. W. H. Pickering of Harvard university, has recorded a number of observations that seem to point to the activity of a few of them at least. He relies chiefly on the fluctations in size which have been observed in a comparatively small crater called Linne as a crater of moderate size. A century later it is described as a small, round, brilliant spot. When modern instruments of precision were invented the crater was measured repeatedly, with decidedly surprising results. Once its diameter was four miles; then it grew to six miles, and now it has shrunk to three-quarters of a mile. If this volcano is extinct how comes it that it changes its size so strangely Still another proof of activity is found by Prof. Pickering in the eccentricities of a gigantic crater called Plato, and in dense clouds of white vapor which have appeared before als eyes, rising from a tortuous cleft known as Schroeter's Valley. So minute have been Prof. Pickering's observations that their accuracy cannot be seriously called into question.

Granting that a few of the moon's craters are active, it follows that they must discharge something into space. That something, judged by our earthly volcanoes, must be water and carbonic acid gas. Because the pressure on the moon's surface is exceedingly low, and because the temperature during the long, cold lunar night is probably not far from 460 degrees F. before zero, water cannot possibly exist in the fluid state. Ice and snow are the only forms water can assume.

If there are any evidence of snow and ice. Almost every crater is lined with white. The lofty peaks of mountain ranges are hooded in white. At the South Pole, the white glare is almost blinding. What is this white sheen? Merely the natural color of the moon's wrinkled face, according to most astronomers—snow and ice forming where it should form, according to Prof. Pickering. The disappearance and reappearance of these white spots are admirably explained by this theory, for snow and ice would vaporize in the long lunar day—equal to fifteen of our days, and congeal again in white crystals as the sun sets.

It has been said that an earthly volcano vomits carbonic acid. Conceding that a lunar crater ejects water in the form of a vapor and carbonic acid gas, is there any reasons why life,in its lowest forms at least, may not exist on the moon? Prof. Pickering believes that he has discovered traces of vegetation. There are variable spots on the moon, spots that darken after sunrise, and gradually disappear toward sunset. They are not shadows, for they are most pronounced when the sun is high in the heavens. They appear quickly at the equator, and encroach on the higher latitudes after a few days have elapsed. They are never seen in the polar regions. It is in these variable spots that Prof. Pickering has discovered what he considers to be vegetation. Whether he is right or wrong, this much is certain. He has explained with admirable simplicity a phenomenon that has long puzzled astronomers. To offset the objections that the temperature of the moon is too low to support organic life, it may be answered that certain lichens thrive in our own Arctic regions, where the temperature rarely rises above the melting point of ice. Moreover, many bacteria resist the most intense cold that we can produce. It may be objected that in a single day vegetation cannot grow appreciably; but on the moon a day is equal to fifteen of our days, and may well be likened to miniature season.

The advances which have recently been made in selenography by Prof. Pickering show that although the moon is not a riotously luxuriant abode, it is anything but the lifeless orb commonly supposed. It may be desolate and cold, but it is not altogether dead.

TO RAISE TEA IN TEXAS.

Mr. Akioki, a Japanese of distinction, is in this country seeking information as to the climate and resources of Texas, where it is proposed to found a colony of his countrymen, says the Kansas City Journal. He will shortly bring over 300 families, who will settle on a solid tract of 10,000 acres in Bee county. They will undertake tea farming and silk culture. The mulberry tree grows everywhere in the region to a great size. San Antonio is the nearest town to the proposed colony and the expectation is that the new comers will make good citizens and intermarry and coalesce with their Texas neighbors. Mr. Akioki says that if the first colony is a success he will buy another tract on which he has an option, and in this there are 100,000 acres, enough to make homes for 3,000 families. There is a small colony of Japanese now in Bee county. They have devoted themselves to raising tea and this year sold their products with a good profit.

BISHOP'S TRICK.

The bishop of Llandaff, at Newport, mislaid his robes and had to preach without them; and elsewhere a clergyman forgot he had undertaken to conduct the service, which was consequently dispensed with, says London Modern Society. But in neither case did the people suffer from clerical remissness, like a Scottish congregation mentioned in his reminiscences by Sir Archibald Geikie, who tells how the minister neglected to bring his manuscript of his sermon and had to make time to go home, a mile off, and fetch it. Almost distracted, he gave out the 119th psalm, and directly the congregation began to sing the first of the 176 verses he rushed away to the manse, from which he by-and-by returned to the church breathless, finding the clerk waiting uneasily. "How are they getting on?" he gasped. "Oh, sir," said the clerk, "they've got to the end of the 8th verse, an' they're cheepin' like wee mice!" The pious congregation was exhausted, but the situation was saved.

OLD CROWN SERVANTS.

Who is the oldest working minister of the crown? Doubtless the Hon. William Moore, chief secretary of Tasmania, who has been lauded in receiving congratulations on his eighty-eighth birthday, says the London Chronicle. Tasmania possesses one of the finest climates in the world, and has many promising centenarians. Sir Adye Douglas, the president of the Tasmanian upper house, is in his ninety-first year. So is the Roman Catholic archbishop of Tasmania, Dr. Daniel Murphy, who received his mitre sixty years ago. Dr. Murphy's diamond jubilee is to be celebrated next month with a commemorative college.

BEGAN AS BOOTBLACK.

John B. Tracy, recently elected mayor of Taunton, Mass., is one of fifteen children born to a poor man in the neighboring town of Milford, says the Kansas City Journal. Twenty years ago, then a small boy, he went to Taunton and began life as a bootblack. Later he managed shoe shine stands in other towns and accumulated a little money. Buoyed up by his pluck, he studied law, borrowing money to pay for his tuition, was admitted to the bar and when elected mayor had a practice worth $12,000 a year. Previously he had served twice as city attorney.

THE DIFFERENCE IN CLOTHES MAKING.

An atmosphere of reform permeates the entire country today and knocks the wind out of many men and concerns who have been putting on airs while they were doing up their trusting brethren in the congregation. It's a holy terror how they tumble.

Some Lincoln Steffens or Tom Lawson is needed in the clothing business as well as in many others. The last number of the Apparel Gazette had letters from merchants all over the country, and the universal cry is that business is made more difficult by the increase of unscrupulous competition. There is some of it in Duluth, but the people are being educated.

Our illustration in this ad explains one feature of fraud in the clothing business.

Quite often a "runner" for a wholesale house shows us some suits or overcoats that look very low in price. One offer particularly low in price excited our curiosity not long ago, and we measured the width of the coats; they were fourteen inches less than the coats furnished us by Stein-Bloch, Kuh, Nathan & Fischer and Henry J. Brock & Co. They were skimpy, narrow, mean; the trimmings were cheap and the work spelled s-w-e-a-t s-h-o-p. What there was of cloth was good, but it takes more than cloth and plenty of it to make a reliable garment.

Our coats are full, liberal, roomy, stylish—and our January clearing prices of $14.50 and $10.50 are in some cases less than the wholesale price we paid, and in all cases are true bargain prices worth any man's while and money.

St. Paul Jobbers—J. MacLeod, Duluth, 1; I. Pitblado of Winnipeg, 2; D. W. Stocking of Duluth, 3; Charles Dunbar of Bowesmount, 4.

J. E. Meyers event—D. W. Stocking of Duluth, 1; W. H. Whalen of Fort William, 2; Tom Cameron of St. Paul, 3; Sam Hastings of Minneapolis, 4.

Flour City event—Alex Macrae of Duluth, 1; James McCutcheon of Minneapolis, 2; F. A. Greene of Duluth, 3; J. C. Wall of Milwaukee, 4.

International event—Not finished this morning.

Grand average—Hastings of Minneapolis.

The Northwestern Curling association bonspiel, which has been in progress since last Monday, was practically wound up last evenings when the finals in five of the six events were run off. Only one event remains to be completed, and the final games will be played in that today. Only Duluth and Superior rinks remain in this event, and it can be completed at any time convenient to the members of the rinks concerned.

The Duluth club was fortunate in the outcome of the bonspiel, and three of the six events were captured by rinks from this city, while the Duluth rinks in the International also stand a fair show of landing a fourth trophy for Duluth.

The R. J. MacLeod rink, composed of S. A. Jones, A. H. Smith, Harry Hurdon and R. J. MacLeod captured the St. Paul Jobbers event.

The Stocking rink, composed of Gilbert Cutler, W. L. McLennan, George MacKenzie and D. W. Stocking, won the Meyers trophy, and the Flour City, or consolation trophy, went to the Alex Macrae rink, composed of E. D. Field, M. A. McLennan, F. A. Day and Alex Macrae.

The Hastings rink of Minneapolis probably made the best showing of any rink in the bonspiel, capturing first place in the Duluth event, second place in the Canadian Soo, fourth place in the Meyers, and first prize in the grand average.

The Stocking rink, in addition to its first place, had a third prize in the St. Paul Jobbers.

The only two other rinks to win more than one prize were the Whalen rink of Fort William and the Cameron rink of St. Paul. The former got second place in the Meyers and fourth place in the Duluth event. Cameron took third place in the Meyers and fourth place in the Canadian Soo.

The games yesterday afternoon and last evening were witnessed by large crowds of spectators.

The first final game to be played was the contest between Stocking and Whalen in the Meyers event. The game was a beautiful exhibition, the Stocking rink putting up a practically perfect game. Every stone counted in the play, and during the first six heads they took a lead of six points. Whalen managed to cut this down two points in the last six heads, but could not manage to overcome it entirely. The final score was 11 to 7 in favor of Stocking.

The final game in the Canadian Soo, which was begun at 7 o'clock, was one of the most exciting matches in the bonspiel. Hastings had already played four games during the day, beginning the first one at midnight, but Rochon was in little better shape, having also begun play at midnight, although he had only played two game previous to his match with Hastings.

The two rinks alternated in the lead throughout the twelve ends, but Rochon finally won out at the last end, by a score of 11 to 10.

The R. J. MacLeod rink made a wonderfully strong finish. After defeating the Stocking rink in decisive style in the semi-finals of the St. Paul Jobbers event, they went on against the strong Pitblado rink of Winnipeg, and administered another decisive defeat to it, by the score of 12 to 4.

The Macrae rink continued its good work of the last few days of the bonspiel, and won out in the consolation event, defeating both its opponents by large scores. It is still in the semi-finals of the International.

When the remaining games in the International event have been completed, the final curling bonspiel will have become a matter of history in curling circles. Many of the visitors got away last evening, and the others left on the early morning trains today, as none of the outside rinks remain in the International event. The visitors all expressed satisfaction at the accommodations provided by the Duluth club, and with the hospitable manner in which they had been treated while in the city. The only feature which detracted from the complete success of the bonspiel was the unfavorable weather, and the fact that three or four of the visiting rinks had to forfeit their games and return home, owing to the delay.

Following is a summary of the games played last evening and this morning:

DULUTH EVENT.

Finals—
Hastings, 12; Chisholm, 5.

Macrae, 14; Greene, 5.
Finals—
Macrae, 14; McCutcheon, 7.

JOHN H. POTTER PASSES AWAY

Aged and Respected Attorney Succumbs to Attack of Pneumonia.

After an illness of a few days John H. Potter died last evening at his home, 1623 South street, of pneumonia. His funeral will be in charge of the Masonic fraternity and will probably occur next Friday.

Judge Potter was taken ill quite suddenly one day last week when he was visiting N. H. Wilson, at the latter's office in the Torrey building. A carriage was called and the aged attorney was removed to his home as quickly as possible, but little hope was had from the first that he would survive owing to his infirmity.

During the sixteen years that he has resided at Duluth, Judge Potter has said but little to his friends and acquaintances here of his earlier life in the East, though he has at times related instances that came to memory which showed that he has met in legal fray some of the best law talent in the East.

John H. Potter was born in Whitefield, Me., Dec. 23, 1835. As a young man, after nothing more than a common school education, according to statements that Judge Potter has made, he opened a law office at Winthrop, Me., where he practiced for a few years and built up a reputation that afterward paved the way to a partnership with Eben F. Pillsbury of Augusta, Me., one of the foremost lawyers in Maine at that time and who is still regarded as one of the ablest members of the legal profession in New England. The law firm of Pillsbury & Potter flourished and was a power in legal circles until failing eyesight began to seriously handicap Judge Potter. It is said that while he was in the midst of the trial of an important case he was suddenly stricken with blindness.

Later he regained a little of his eyesight, but never to such degree that he could depend on it for his own reading. Discouraged by the unfortunate circumstances, Judge Potter determined to come West, which he did in 1890, locating in Duluth. He opened a law office and continued practicing up to the time of his death, but his clientage in later years fell off because of his increased infirmity as age crept upon him.

For a number of years after his coming to Duluth Judge Potter's law reading depended much on the efforts of his ward, a relative who came to the West with him. After she returned East, Judge Potter had to depend on the kindness of his friends, which, owing to the exactions of a lawyer's line of reading, was most unsatisfactory.

Judge Potter, however, had a clear mind, as many attorneys of this city who have long been acquainted with him will testify. He had a wonderful memory for law and could discourse with a vigor that showed his familiarity with history and literature. During his residence here he has tried many cases, civil and criminal and there were times when striking returns of his former brilliancy were apparent.

Judge Potter was of kindly genial disposition and was respected and liked by all who knew him. Although he fought long and hard an unequal battle against adversity, he rarely betrayed by action or word the discouragement that must have been his.

Little is known of Judge Potter's family in the East. He was married to Sarah M. Towle, of this city, Nov. 25, 1903, who still survives him at their home on South street.

NO CHECK ON THE ACCOUNTS

Subordinate Officials on Isthmus Ran Things as They Pleased.

Washington, Jan. 23.—E. S. Benson, general auditor for the Panama canal commission and the Panama railway, testified yesterday in the investigation of canal affairs which is being conducted by the interoceanic canal committee of the senate. He devoted some time to an explanation of the workings of the accounting department, which, he said, was sadly neglected under the old isthmian canal commission. New books were opened by Mr. Benson when he took hold of this department in April. Inquiry by Senator Morgan developed that the accounts on the isthmus were not subjected to examination by the general auditor's officers of this city, and apparently under the system followed, there was no check on the accounts kept on the isthmus by subordinate officials.

Another interesting statement brought out was that the Panama canal commission bought stamps from the Panama government, surcharged "canal zone" for forty per cent discount and sold them at par. He could not say whether the transaction was a "governmental speculation" in stamps.

Mr. Benson said he could not have afforded to take the place at less than a salary of $10,000.

Senator Gorman called upon the auditor for an itemized statement of the payments made by the old commission prior to April 30, 1905, together with all the liabilities for supplies and material. The date named is when the present accounting department began its work. Mr. Benson agreed to supply this information. In the purchase of supplies, Mr. Benson said he thought the chairman of the committee passed upon the recommendations of the purchasing agent, but that the commission itself did not pass upon it.

The committee held an executive session, at which it decided to examine Chief Engineer John F. Stevens on the type of canal to be constructed. The session will be executive.

WORKS WITHOUT FAITH.

Faith Came After the Work Had Laid the Foundation.

A Bay State belle talks thus about coffee:

"While a coffee drinker I was a sufferer from indigestion and intensely painful nervous headaches from childhood.

"Seven years ago my health gave out entirely. I grew so weak that the exertion of walking, if only for a few feet, made it necessary for me to lie down. My friends thought I was marked for consumption—weak, thin and pale.

"I realized the danger I was in and tried faithfully to get relief from medicines, till at last, after having employed all kinds of drugs, the doctor acknowledged that he did not believe it was in his power to cure me.

"While in this condition a friend induced me to quit coffee and try Postum Food Coffee, and I did so without the least hope that it would do me any good. I did not like it at first, but when it was properly made I found it was a most delicious and refreshing beverage. I am especially fond of it served at dinner ice-cold, with cream.

"In a month's time I began to improve, and in a few weeks my indigestion ceased to trouble me, and my headache stopped entirely. I am so perfectly well now that I do not look like the same person, and I have so gained in flesh that I am 15 pounds heavier than ever before.

"This is what Postum has done for me. I still use use it, and shall always do so." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is more than a fat food. There is no animal fat that compares with it in nourishing and building up the wasted, emaciated body. That is why children and anæmic girls thrive and grow fat upon it. That is why persons with consumptive tendencies gain flesh and strength enough to check the progress of the disease.

"BRIDEGROOM" A WOMAN.

Woman Masquerading as Man Marries Girl at Kansas City.

Kansas City, Jan. 23.—John Alladne Whitman and Miss Marietta Jelly, cashier in a restaurant, were married Friday at Independence by Justice H. F. Buchanan. The bride had a little money and some of her friends who suspected Whitman's sincerity, caused his arrest Sunday. Yesterday at police headquarters, it was learned that the "bridegroom" was a woman. The prisoner will be prosecuted for perjury, committed in obtaining the marriage license.

"I am a woman, but I have dressed as a man for three years," said Whitman, when questioned in the presence of Chief Hays. "I have worked as a man and lived as one. I married this girl as a matter of accommodation. She said she could not live without me. My real name is Pauline Webster."

SWEEPING INJUNCTION IS PLACED ON PRINTERS.

Cleveland, Jan. 23.—An injunction of the most sweeping nature was granted here yesterday against the striking printers. The petition was filed by twenty-four establishments and charges that their former workmen have entered into a conspiracy to destroy their business.

In the language of the injunction, the union is restrained from boycotting the establishments, from sending circulars to customers, from furthering any conspiracy to hinder the printing industry and from bribing or offering inducements to the employes to leave their work.

BOSTON MILLIONAIRE WEDS CHAMBERMAID.

Boston, Jan. 23.—Until last Thursday a chambermaid and waitress in the household of Stephen Crosby on the Back Bay, Miss Elizabeth Jennie Murphy is now Mrs. Le Roy Fay, wife of a millionaire Boston clubman. Mr. Fay met Miss Murphy last summer. He sought an introduction and began an ardent courtship. He is 35 years old and his bride 26.

PILES CURED QUICKLY AT HOME

Why Suffer Agony Any Longer When You Can Get a Quick, Sure Cure For Your Piles by Simply Sending Your Name and Address?

Trial Package is Sent Absolutely Free, in Plain Wrapper to Everyone Who Writes.

Surgeons themselves consider a permanent cure of piles by a surgical operation as very doubtful, and resort to it only when the patient has become desperate from long continued pain and agony. But the operation itself is every bit as excruciating and nerve-racking as the disease. Besides, it is humiliating and expensive, and rarely a success.

The wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure makes an operation unnecessary. You cure yourself with perfect ease, in your own home, and for little expense.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives you instant relief. It immediately heals all sores and ulcers, reduces congestion and inflammation, and takes away all pain, itching and irritation. Just a little of the treatment is usually sufficient to give a permanent cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared in the form of suppositories so they can be applied directly to the parts without inconvenience, or interrupting your work in any way.

We are sending a trial treatment free of charge, to every one who sends name and address. We do this to prove what we say about this wonderful remedy is true.

After you have tried the sample treatment, and you are satisfied, you can get a full regular-sized treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents. If he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send you the treatment at once, by mail, in plain sealed package.

Send your name and address at once for a trial of this marvelous quick, sure cure. Address Pyramid Drug Co., 10469 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

BEAUTIFY EAST END

Council Authorizes Circulation of Petition for Planting of Trees.

Plan Likely to be Followed in Other Parts of City.

For the purpose of beautifying the East end, Herman Moore introduced a resolution in the council last evening, authorizing the park board to circulate petitions for the planting of trees on First, Second, Third and Fourth streets from Eleventh to Twenty-fifth avenues east.

Property owners who sign the petitions will have trees planted in front of their property by the park board and the cost assessed against the property.

Mr. Moore, in urging the passage of the resolution, stated that it was the hope of many of the property owners in the East end that this would result in greatly beautifying that part of the city.

The resolution is likely to be followed by others, coming from other members of the council, and this spring the park board will probably plant a larger number of trees than ever before in the history of the city.

City Clerk Cheadle submitted his annual report to the council last evening. It showed the revenue derived by the city from fees and licenses to be $180,618.65, of which amount $172,000 was derived from saloons. The remainder was made up of the fees derived from hackmen, billiard hall proprietors, peddlers, fortune tellers, plumbers, employment office men, pawnbrokers, owners of dogs and others who are subjected to a special tax.

The board of public works presented a report on the inspection of the billboards of the city. The report showed in detail, the location and condition of every board in the city. The report was received and filed for reference, no action being taken as to the future inspection of the boards, which will probably be left with the building inspector's department.

The report of the engineer on the inspection of the tar macadam mixing plant, was received. He reported that it would take about $100 to place the machine in good shape, and the repairs recommended by him, were made.

On a motion by Alderman Trevillion, the board of public works was vested with the sole right to order ferry service and to regulate the hiring of boats for this purpose. The motion was passed as a result of a dispute arising over a bill for ferry service, received by the council.

The annual reports of the city treasurer, the board of public works and the secretary of the free employment bureau were received.

TEACHER ROBBED BY HER PUPILS

Sunday School Teacher Forced to Sign Warrants Against Boys.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—When Miss Ethel Hansen, 86 Humboldt boulevard, a teacher in the Sunday school of the Bethel Norwegian Lutheran church on Humboldt street, went to the West North avenue police station yesterday afternoon to identify the handbag and money stolen from her Saturday night, she was sadly surprised. The four confessed culprits were members of her own Sunday school class.

At first Miss Hansen positively refused to sign warrants against the boys, but when informed by Lieut. Danner that she would be compelled to come into court as a witness, she yielded, and with tears falling from her eyes, attached her name to the four writs.

The boys, all of whom wear knee trousers, told Lieut. Danner they were members of a "gang" and that some of them had been in the highway business before. They all are of good families.

A REJECTED LOVER SHOOTS FOUR PERSONS.

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 23.—Henry Neumbaumer, a returned Alaska miner, yesterday shot and mortally wounded Ollie Powell, his sweetheart, who had rejected him, La Fayette Gray, his successful rival, Mrs. Robert Gray, his mother, Lillian Gray, sister of La Fayette, and then killed himself in front of the Gray residence. It appears that the miner had fallen in love with Ollie Powell and she had rejected him. They were to have been married last November but the night before the wedding she is said to have run away with Gray. Neumbaumer returned to Alaska but could not get over his grief and returned to Boise last Wednesday. Yesterday he concealed himself behind a high fence across the street from the Gray residence and shot his victims down as they came out of the house, using a shot gun loaded with buckshot. The enraged man was quickly surrounded by officers and citizens attracted by the shooting to the spot, and with a revolver, shot himself to escape arrest.

CUT OFF PULLMAN PASSES

Company Thinking of Putting an End to Complimentary Berths.

Pittsburg, Jan. 23.—The Pullman company has under advisement an order abolishing Pullman car passes. It is expected that the order will be promulgated just as soon as the trunk line railroads have shown it feasible to carry on traffic without giving free transportation to thousands of politicians and their friends. Only the greater members of the house of congress and prominent politicians, together with a number of wealthy people and railway officials, carry Pullman annuals. Since the abolition of passes in Pennsylvania, there has been a falling off of more than one-quarter of the Pullman patronage from Pittsburg.

"The County Chairman," George Ade's interesting and amusing comedy of political life in a small Indiana town, is making its second visit to Duluth, a performance being given last evening at the Lyceum before an audience smaller than it deserved. The company is the same that presented the play upon its last visit and is all that could be desired in every part. George Thatcher, the veteran minstrel, is still the colored vote of the town of Antioch and a finer exponent of the part could hardly be found. In these days of declining minstrelsy Mr. Thatcher has been most fortunate in finding a field that employs his talents to much better advantage. Theodore Babcock, is the same bluff, generous Jim Hackler, county chairman. All of the village characters are presented faithfully and in a very humorous way and to enumerate all deserving of mention would be to repeat the entire cast. The play is a satire on political methods and is one of the most thoroughly enjoyable of its kind.

"The County Chairman" will be repeated again this evening.

BALTIMORE BEAUTIES.

New Show Pleases the Patrons of the Metropolitan.

Some Baltimore Beauties, from Fourteenth street, New York, opened a week's engagement at the Metropolitan last evening with a show that compares very favorably with the others which have been seen at the "Met" this season. The burlesques are funnier than most of such pieces; the girls are good-looking, and the vaudeville acts excellent. The olio is fully as strong as the one which the Yankee Doodle Girls gave last week.

"A Scotch Highball" serves as a title for the opening burlesque. It is a mixed drink, all right, and an attempt has been made to give it a Highland flavor. Two of the comedians are disguised as Scottish noblemen, and the old gag of the two men who look just alike and who are mistaken for each other is revived. The songs are pretty and the finale is very stunning and was loudly applauded.

Edna Davenport, one of the favorites of the first burlesque, appears to advantage in the olio, giving a song and dance turn. Martini and Maxmillan have a burlesque magic act that pleases mightily. Maxmillan is the comedy man of the team, and for art's sake he allows his partner to slap him until his face is crimson through his white make-up. This makes a hit, only the audience would like to see the abused one finally retaliate with something more formidable than a stuffed club. Glenroy and Hughes are good bag-punchers. Armstrong and Bertrand have a good skit, and the Zarrow Trio accomplishes some marvelous trick bicycle stunts.

"A Busy Night" concludes the performance.

THE BIJOU'S NEW BILL.

Last night's audience found much to commend in the bill at the Bijou theater this week. Every act was rewarded with enough applause to warrant the performers in making some claims before the booking agent for the Keith circuit.

Love and Rollas score with a conventional enough comedy sketch. Alfred Anderson should be scored for calling himself the "male Melba," but his voice is very good. Wells and Wells are clever musical artists. Harry Wilmot's turn is deserving of all the applause it got last evening. Daly and Murphy are satisfactory singing and dancing comedians; the Juliuns are clever gymnasts and the moving pictures interesting. Dolly Wells makes some lightning sketches.

A GIRL PEEPED INTO AN OFFICE

What She Saw Figures in Sensational Suit for Divorce.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The divorce trial of Mrs. Hallie G. Rhoades against Judge Edwin J. Rhoades, of which lively things have been expected, was fairly warm.

Miss Dorothy Cross, a pretty stenographer, who "peeked" from her office into that of Albert H. Propper, attorney for Mrs. Rhoades, told of events she had witnessed that would hardly seem at all necessary in the preparation of a divorce suit. While Miss Cross was blushing and reciting her story, Mrs. Rhoades and her mother, Mrs. Black, sat very stiff and upright, with flaming faces, muttering "hussy" and other endearing things under their breath.

"It was quite accidental," said Miss Cross, "that the case came to my attention. I looked across the little court one day and saw Attorney Propper was across the room to where Mrs. Rhoades was sitting, and lay his head upon her chest. At that time I did not know who they were. I noticed them frequently after that. saw them hug and kiss each other and sit on each others laps, and once Mr. Propper changed his shoes in the presence of the two women, Mrs. Rhoades and her mother.

"Judge Rhoades came into our office one day and saw what was going on. He asked me to keep an eye on the actions across the court and take some notes, which I did."

Here the witness produced a small book and consulted it. "Attorney Propper would sit on the laps of each of them. One time Mrs. Rhoades came there alone. Then some one pulled down the shade in their office."

This is the divorce case in which Judge Rhoades accused his wife and Mr. Propper of playing "kittenish." This pastime consisted of each climbing a tree in turn and leaping into the arms of the other. Mrs. Rhoades, aside from indignant denials of all the charges, alleges that her husband threw tomatoes at her, and also made her the target of much bad language. All the persons connected with the suit are prominent in social and club life in Chicago Lawn, a residence suburb. All but witnesses were excluded from the hearing.

THE BERWIN FUND.

In the heroic rescue of a woman guest whose life was endangered by the fire in the West hotel at Minneapolis recently, Capt. John Berwin lost his own life.

Since then the people of Minneapolis have contributed considerably over $5,000 to a fund for the relief of the widow and four orphaned children of this fireman-hero.

This is well. It is not only pleasant because it will relieve from the added horrors of want the gloomy home of this servant of the people who died at his post, but because the accident has stirred the sympathies of the people of Minneapolis, which is always a wholesome and improving process.

The man who has undergone the experience of having the crust of selfishness that life grows about his heart shattered by such a soul-stirring episode as that of John Berwin's death cannot help being better for it. It shows that heroism and chivalry are not yet dead in the world; that there are men living who take no thought of their own security in seeking the safety of those whom it is their duty to care for; that unselfish devotion to duty even at the risk of personal safety still exists.

No matter how much the weeds of carelessness and selfishness may grow up to cover it in the garden of the heart, the fact remains that we are brothers all, here in the world, and that we are dependent to a greater or less degree upon each other for security, happiness and content. When men forget this, the world is going wrong. It is only when some conspicuous event like the death of John Berwin shows what men owe to each other that the great truth of the brotherhood of man is brought home, and then, in the universal sympathy that results, men grow closer together.

What the people of Minneapolis are doing for the stricken family of John Berwin is the least possible recognition of his heroic sacrifice, yet it is about all that can be done. Though the touch of human sympathy may soothe in some measure the sorrows of the bereaved, and the substantial contributions that have been made may guard the hero's loved ones from poverty, they cannot bring him back to life again. Yet the giving, as a concrete expression of the sympathy of the people, is wholesome and beneficial for the givers. It is a tribute to the fact that "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

FOR PEOPLE OR PELF?

When the cost of transmitting parcels in this country is compared with the cost of shipping them in European countries, it is impossible not to wonder whether the United States postoffice is conducted for the benefit of the people, or for the benefit of the railroads and express companies.

In France you can transmit seven pounds in one parcel at a cost of 12 cents. The same commodity in this country would have to be divided into two parcels to avoid the 4-pound maximum, and it would cost $1.12 to ship it. France will carry eleven pounds in one parcel for 16 cents, and in the United States you have to divide it into three parcels and pay 51.75. Twenty-two pounds, in one parcel, will go in France for 25 cents, and in this country it will go in six parcels at $3.52.

When it comes to sending twenty-two pounds, rather than cut it up into six pieces and pay $3.52 you will turn it over to an express company, and pay whatever it is pleased to charge you.

Here is a comparison of prices between Great Britain and the United States:

Great Britain—Weight limit, 11 pounds. One pound, 6 cents; 2 pounds, 8 cents; 3 pounds, 10 cents; 4 pounds, 12 cents; 11 pounds, 21 cents. Rates insure to $5; 4 cents registry fee insures to $25.

United States—Domestic: Weight limit, 4 pounds. One pound, 16 cents; 2 pounds, 32 cents; 3 pounds, 48 cents; 4 pounds, 64 cents; 11 pounds, in three parcels, $1.76. Eight cents registry fee gives no insurance.

This is what people mean when they talk about a "parcels post." The people run the postoffice, theoretically at any rate. The parcels post would be a great convenience. The nation should be able to carry parcels at cost, cutting out the express company's profit, but some way all efforts to bring about such a result have failed. For one thing, the railroads receive for carrying mails eight times the amount received for carrying express, so under present conditions the government could not afford to compete with the express companies. For another thing, the people of New York are represented in the United States senate by a man who is president of an express company, and who represents all the rest of them there.

The people are likely to ask pretty soon whether this country is being run for them or for the profit of a few.

POPULAR CREDULITY.

The days of witch-burning are over in this land, and as a nation this country can no longer be classed as superstitious; yet occasionally incidents arise that prove the existence of a depressing amount of credulity.

Some time ago, in the autumn, a troupe of strolling entertainers visited Providence, R. I., and one of its members prophesied that between Dec. 16 and Dec. 24 there would be a boiler explosion in one of the Providence department stores. The story spread like wildfire, and the result was a complete paralysis of business in the big shops of that city during the holidays.

There is scarcely a fakir whose methods are so raw that he will not gather about himself a clientage that will include many people that pass as intelligent. Several years ago a woman gave entertainments in Duluth which purported to be evidences of her supernatural powers of divination. She showed in the principal theater, and drew crowds nightly. She did some mystifying tricks, of course, and a surprisingly large number of so-called intelligent people expressed full belief in her possession of the powers she claimed. She answered questions, after the mannner of such imposters, in a vague and intangible manner, and if the facts happened not to be wholly inconsistent with her silly answers there were plenty of people to say that her powers were wonderful.

It would seem impossible that a stranger could come into a city, and by performing a few petty tricks not half so wonderful as those performed by professed tricksters like Hermann, could delude the population into keeping out of the shops during the holiday season, yet that is what happened in the city of Providence. Superstition is ignorance. The old-time belief in ghosts and similar apparitions was due purely to ignorance, and while those who accept ghost stories as realities are very scarce nowadays, there are prevalent many stupid beliefs that indicate that as a people we have still much to learn.

THE TREE RESOLUTION.

The action of the city council last evening in adopting Alderman Moore's resolution providing for more shade trees in the East end was a splendid thing to do. The planting of a single tree in a city adds a touch of nature that relieves the monotony of the average city's appearance, and it is a patriotic and loyal service.

There cannot be too many trees in Duluth. There should be trees not only in the East end, but in every other portion of the city where they can possibly be planted. The East end has made excellent progress in the work of beautifying itself in the last few years. The trees planted some years ago have been cared for tenderly, and they are showing the results of it in rapid and graceful growth.

The residence portion of Duluth, at least, should be covered with just as many trees as there is room for. If this is done, and the work of caring for the growing trees is patiently and properly carried on, in a few years streets so adorned will be real bowers of beauty in the summer time.

It is a work of some expense and difficulty to plant and maintain an ample supply of trees throughout the city, but it is a work that pays for itself many times over in making the city a better place to live in, and the money thus laid out could not be better expended.

WORK FOR ALL.

In publishing a recent editorial from The Herald calling upon Duluth to take the lead in the work of upbuilding Northern Minnesota, the Crookston Times commends it to the attention of Crookston people and calls upon them to do their part.

This is the proper spirit, exactly. Duluth is the largest city in Northern Minnesota, with interests extending throughout the great but embryotic empire of which she is the capital, and as The Herald has said before it is fitting that she should take the lead in this great work. But success cannot be brought about by one community alone, even by a community as large and as deeply interested as Duluth. Every community in the northern half of the state, no matter what its size may be, should take hold and join in a concerted effort to lift this section of the state into the position to which its natural advantages and enormous resources entitle it.

Crookston must bear its share of the burden, as the Times says. So must Brainerd and Grand Rapids and Detroit and the iron range towns; so must every other community, large and small, in every part of Northern Minnesota that has not yet been developed to its fullest extent.

There is a great work to be done, a work immensely profitable to the state at large and particularly to Northern Minnesota and the communities therein whose growth must attend the growth of this part of the state. Duluth must lead, but every community must does its part. The fullest measure of success is to be reached in the shortest time only by a united and systematic and untiring pull, a "long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together."

There are swamps to drain. There are waste lands to be made tillable. There are vacant lands to be filled. There are industries to attract and to support. There are calumnies to overcome and to deny, and there are schemes of preserving the wilderness to combat and destroy. There are state lands to be opened to settlers. There are settlers to advertise for and locate. There are new enterprises to embark upon and old ones to be upheld. There is plenty of work, but it is a noble work of building up and creating a great and wealthy empire out of a great and picturesque wilderness, a work in which there should be pride and pleasure and profit.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Duluth is the poorest Sunday town I ever saw," said E. T. Hurley of St. Paul at the Lenox. "The only thing an outsider can do to keep himself interested is to get drunk, and as I, with several other traveling men who come here that I could name, do not belong to the class that take pleasure in getting soused, the only thing left to do is to sit around all day and evening and be bored.

"The theaters here should be open Sunday evenings, as they are in other metropolitan cities. They could do no harm, and they really would do some good by keeping a lot of men and boys out of the saloons who frequent these places merely because there is no other place to go. It hurts the town not having Sunday shows, for the news of this fact and of the lack of Sunday attractions here has gone abroad, and every traveling man who can do so arranges his business so as not to spend Sunday in Duluth. This would not be the case if the theaters had shows on the evening of the day of rest. Otherwise the town is all right, and the traveling fraternity like it, and like to be here.

"The notion that there should be no Sunday shows is old-fashioned and foolish. All other up-to-date towns of the Northwest have them. It appears to be permissable for a man to get all the intoxicants he want here Sundays, and to stagger up and down the streets making a fool of himself, but the innocent amusement of attending the theater is denied him. Churches are all right, and there are those among us who like to attend them, but you know well enough that there are scores of people in Duluth's hotels every Sunday who have no particular inclination to attend church in the evening, although they may go in the morning.

"All this being true, imagine the condition the average visitor to the city finds himself on Sunday evenings, particularly in the winter time. There is absolutely nothing for him to do except read or lounge around the barrooms, and there isn't anything very attractive about reading during all of one's spare time. The chances are a man has been reading all day, and by the time evening arrives he is tired of it. The same rule, I dare say, holds true of a good many citizens, although it isnt so bad with them, for they at least have friends they may call on or be with. But we from the outside are up against it. Only a few of us have friends here who we can depend upon to afford us an evening's entertainment, and with those few there is always the chance of infringing too much upon the good nature of the friends in question.

"What possible objection can a reasonably minded person offer to having Sunday shows? None whatever, so far as I can see. Any hotel man in the city will tell you that his business is hurt by the present practice, and that he gets a lot of kicks every week because of it."

Mr. Hurley was one of a group of five traveling men, all of whom had the same objection to offer.

"The candy business is good now," said Edward Mason of Minneapolis, representing a house that deals in chocolates and cocoa, at the McKay. "The prosperity of the dealer in candies depends very largely upon the prosperity of the country in general, for when the times are bad there aren't many sweets bought. They are luxuries, you know, and people don't indulge much in luxuries when money is scarce.

"Business was good all during 1905. Lots of goods were sold, and both wholesalers and retailers had nice profits to show at the end of the year. Competition on the road is keen between candy salesmen, as it is in all other lines. A man would have to look a long while these days before he found a line that there wasn't sharp competition in, unless it is some patented article, or stuff controlled by a trust. But we have to take things as they come, and I notice that everybody appears to be making a living all right, competition or no competition."

"The Bitter Root valley, extending seventy or eighty miles south from Missoula, Mont., is one of the prettiest regions in the entire country," said C. S. Knowlton of Hamilton, Mont., at the St. Louis. "Hamilton, lying pretty well down the valley, was started in 1890, and now has a population of about 1,200 souls. It has a bunch of handsome residences, electric lights, telephones and all the rest going to make up a modern town. On one side of the valley lie the Bitter Root mountains, and the Rockies are on the other side. It is well watered and fertile, and the ranches along the river are famous for the prosperity of their owners, and for their own beauty. Pine forests descend to the valley's edge. It is a land of dreams, such as one reads about.

"Ranching, lumbering and fruit growing, quite a combination, are the principal industries of the country. Last fall the fruit growers around Hamilton shipped over 400,000 boxes of apples to the outside world, and in all of these there was not a single second-class box of the fruit. Not a worm or blight of any kind has ever affected the orchards of the valley, and the first evidence of any of these pests that are so burdensome on fruit growers elsewhere is yet to be discovered there.

"If you want good fishing or hunting you should come out and pay us a visit. Eighteen miles from the town is Lake Como, named after one of Italy's famous lakes, and I'll warrant it is just as beautiful. I haven't heard that anyone ever found how deep it was. Salmon trout abound in its waters, and a person can have all kinds of sport with them. And then there are numberless trout streams flowing into the Bitter Root river or its branches. In these streams, and in the river itself, trout are plentiful, and they lie, great, big, hungry fellows, eager for the fisherman's bait. To the enthusiast there is no spot offering greater sport. There is game till you can't rest, furred and feathered, large and small."

THE WEATHER

Though the themometer did not drop so low as it was expected to, 4 degrees below zero being the lowest last night, a sharp wind made it seem much colder than the thermometer showed it to be this morning. It was cloudy and threatening, and if it had been warmer much snow would have been likely. As it was, there were occasional gusts of snow, alternating with periods of filtered sunshine. The weather man expects these snow flurries to continue tonight, and he says it will be colder. Tomorrow it will be partly cloudy. The highest temperature reached here yesterday was 8 degrees above. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The eastern storm is centered this morning over the province of Ontario. It has been attended by continued snow or rain in most districts east of the Mississippi river, and high temperatures in Atlantic states. It is much colder in the eastern lake region and from the Ohio valley toward the gulf states, attending high pressures in the Southwest. It has also grown colder in Manitoba as a result of high pressure over Saskatchewan. The influence of the North Pacific disturbance is partly responsible for higher temperatures in the Rocky mountains, Eastern slopes, the Dakotas and Minesota. Some rain has fallen over Pacific states and snow in the extreme Northwest. Conditions favor partly cloudy weather tonight and Wednesday, with zero temperatures tonight."

Following are the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Abilene	18	Miles City	—10
Battleford	10	Milwaukee	18
Bismarck	—10	Minnedosa	—34

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Jan. 23.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Snow flurries and colder tonight. Wednesday partly cloudy. Brisk northerly winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Wednesday: Wisconsin: Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with probably light snow flurries and colder in extreme east portion.

Minnesota: Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Colder in northeast portion tonight.

North Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Wednesday. Rising temperature Wednesday.

South Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Wednesday. Colder in northeast portion tonight.

THE SECESSION THREAT.

Minneapolis Journal: "Must we rebel?" inquires the Grand Rapids (Minn.) Independent. Pursuing the subject, the Independent concludes that secession is the only thing left, since southern Minnesota insists on favoring the preservation of a little of the timber about the headwaters of the Mississippi.

"There is only one way for the people who live north of the forty-sixth parallel of latitude to play even with those fellows," says the Independent, "and that is to divide the state. The truth of the whole matter is that we are growing away from under their control and they want to shut out immigration by causing the government to put us into a forest reserve. We will willingly go with Duluth as our seaport, the iron range as a sure money-getter, Crookston as the source of our bread and butter supply, Fergus to manufacture our wool crop, Bemidji as the seat of our penitentiary and Grand Rapids the capital of the new state."

The forty-sixth parallel, it should be noted, divides the state nearly in two, but with a larger area north of it. The line runs south of Breckenridge, Fergus Falls, Wadena and Brainerd and right through Pinckley. Such a division would make two very fair states, and there are only a few trifling constitutional questions in the way to make the split impossible. This isn't the first time northern Minnesota has seceded. Senator Spencer of Duluth divided us at some legislation affecting the iron range, he threatened to take Duluth, West Superior, the Minnesota iron range and upper Michigan and put them all into a nice, comfortable, conservative state, steel-bound and copper riveted. He didn't do it, but he scared us nearly to death talking about it.

What a calamity it would be to southern Minnesota and the Twin Cities to divide the state. Of course, we would have the same trade relations as before, unless the federal constitution were amended so as to keep the wheat of the Red River valley away from our Minneapolis mills, as everybody is so anxious to do. But if we divide the state we would have to maintain that line state capitol all by ourselves, spend all that great school fund and lay out our road and bridge fund on southern Minnesota roads. We would also have to worry along without Halvor Steenerson, J. Adam Bede, A. D. Stephens, Elmer Adams, Lee Willcutts, A. L. Cole, P. H. McGarry, George R. Laybourn of the umbrageous chin, and P. Ellard Dowling, the great whitewasher Worst of all, we would lose our undivided half interest in the drainage lobby at Washington, and in A. G. Bernard, its prophet.

No, there's no use talking, we simply won't stand for secession.

SMILING LINES.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I see that a Michigan woman left all her estate to her lawyer."

"I suppose that's what might be called forestalling the inevitable."

Philadelphia Bulletin: "When he goes to pay his life insurance premium these days," remarked the home-grown philosopher, "the smile of the most confirmed optimist is likely to fade to a sickly grin."

Cleveland Leader: "McBlough's prize-fighting days are over."

"How's that?"

"He has lost three fingers of his right hand."

"Well, he can learn to write with his left hand if he practices."

Washington Star: "This is indeed an age of commercialism," said the man of sentiments.

"What makes you think so?"

"Some of our statesmen never mention the American eagle any more and are continually applauding the work of the American hen."

Philadelphia Press: Travels—Yes, I met Britton in London and shook hands with him.

Holmes—Why, you just told me you never saw him before.

Travels—I didn't see him. I was introduced to him in a fog.

New York Sun: Stella—How did you refuse him?

Bella—Beautifully; I just copied the vote of thanks papa got when he retired from the board of directors.

Philadelphia Ledger: "You are a blackmailer," declared the goaded capitalist, turning upon the agent.

"Easy, easy," replied the agent, blandly; "you needn't shout about it. I guess I know my business."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken from the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1886.

The village recorder is daily receiving letters from a distance inquiring as to the advantages offered by Duluth manufactories, etc. The boom has certainly come.

The tug Camp is now the property of A. Booth, having been purchased with the rest of Mr. Truelsen's business.

Yesterday was the coldest day of the present season at St. Paul. The mercury went down to 30 to 35 deg. below zero early in the morning. In Duluth it was 27 below at 7 a. m. and 12 below at noon.

Fire broke out this morning in the National saloon kept by Cullen & Hathaway next door to the Montreal house on Michigan street, Rice's Point. The saloon was totally destroyed and the Montreal house, occupied as a wholesale and retail liquor store by O. B. Champagne, was considerably damaged. Cullen & Hathaway's loss is about $2,000, with no insurance. The building is owned by Mr. Salvaith, a French Canadian and is a total wreck. The damage to Champagne's building may reach $2,000.

About fifty representative citizens gathered at the old board of trade rooms for the purpose of organizing for a season of winter sports in Duluth. The attention of the meeting was devoted for the first half hour to profound administration of the graceful figure of J. A. Boggs clad in a supero snowshoe costume. Col. C. H. Graves was elected as chairman and C. M. Parkhurst, M. A. Hays and C. D. Woodruff were named as a committee to draft articles of organization. It was decided to organize as the Duluth Toboggan and Snowshoe association, and the following thirty-six gentlemen became members: M. A. Hayes, Frank Burke, Jr., George M. Smith, John Flynn, P. M. Graff, J. C. Schaefer, James A. Goggs, W. G. Peck, Robert Dowse, H. B. Moore, C. H. Graves, C. B. Woodruff, D. E. Woodbridge, J. E. Cooley, J. P. Johnson, R. N. Marble, H. H. Myers, D. J. Sinclair, B. F. Myers, A. C. Weiss, Ed Clow, H. Stone, H. W. Allenworth, C. M. Parkhurst, W. Perry, H. Rose, Charles Thornton, F. W. Bement, J. H. Upham, L. C. Holliday, E. Poirier, G. G. Hartley, Thomas Buckley, S. F. Leddell, Fred Reynolds. The following officers were elected: President, Col. C. H. Graves; vice president, G. G. Hartley; directors, James A. Boggs, chairman; Fred Reynolds, C. B. Woodruff, George M. Smith, C. M. Parkhurst. The directors at once named H. B. Moore for treasurer and R. N. Marble for secretary.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Ripple Compass: The Duluth Commercial club in deciding to set apart $1,000 to be used in advancing the cause of drainage in Northern Minnesota could not have made a wiser investment, and the inhabitants of the swamp district should show their gratitude for this generous lift by increased dealings with Duluth.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Statesman Dowling of Eveleth had some doubts as to just what The Duluth Evening Herald meant by its reference to "strong men" for the state legislature, and by a method of deduction peculiar to that statesman's class pulled the desired information from The Herald while it was yet smoking hot. He, the statesman, is probably fully satisfied now. He ought to be, anyway.

Eveleth Mining News: Bernard and Hays of the drainage league have stuck their feet in it proper. Besides making people a little sceptical of their disinterestedness by hieing themselves off to Washington to lobby for federal aid, they seem likely to call the attention of Uncle Sam's servants down there to the fact that Minnesota has not been doing by the swamp lands what was intended when they were turned over to her. That is the way it looks to The Duluth Herald, a paper that has the habit of striking at the root of things.

St. Peter Free Press: The figure of Jake Jacobson, "the gentleman from Lac qui Parle," looms menacingly over the Minnesota Republican camp.—Duluth Herald.

Quite the contrary, dear Herald. It is the Democratic camp where they burn the midnight oil to prevent "the gentleman from Lac qui Parle" from landing the gubernatorial nomination.

Hibbing Tribune: Every time that The Duluth Evening Herald advises care in selecting legislative candidates it hits the bull's eye of the county's needs. Our districts are unlike any other section of the state, and naturally our representatives have to labor hard to gain the ear and good will of their colleagues from the farming country; and the broader the gauge and the wiser he is, the more influential will be the man we select.

Crookston Times: Duluth will be known for frigid weather no more. A woman suffrage club is a-borning there.

Fergus Falls Journal: The Duluth Herald has interviewed a bartender in that city who says that New Year resolutions don't last long and that trade is just as good as ever after ten days, which is about the time a lusher can withstand the attractions of a saloon. The general impression was that a man ought to hold his grip on the water wagon at least a month.

Perham Enterprise: The Duluth Herald wants Northern Minnesota to send strong men to the next legislature, regardless of whether they are Republicans or Democrats. The Herald cannot be accused of partisanship.

C. D. I. in Cass Lake Times: The man that knows it all is a more hopeless case than the man who is densely ignorant, because the former lacks the capacity to learn.—Field Survey.

Besides he's such an unconscionable bore.

Cass Lake Times: The Duluth Herald placed another jewel in its crown when it so strongly advocated country exchange courtesies.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a man's married his children begin; and that's where his money ends.

There is nothing that can explode theories like getting married and trying to run a house.

Some men are so lazy that if they inherit money they think they have worked too hard to get it.

It's a mistake to swear before people who don't know enough about it to understand what you mean by it.

It would be a terrible misfortune to a woman to be carried off in an ambulance if she hadn't got on her best clothes.

Finnish Honesty.

From Mrs. Meakin's Russia: Russians all over Russia are glad to employ Finnish servants, because "they never steal and nothing has to be locked up." I remember how once, when I went to the captain of a steamer which was carrying me to Stockholm to find out when I could telegraph to Helsingfors for a valuable gold buckle I had left in a hotel, he replied: "There is no occasion to telegraph; write to the hotel manager when you get to Stockholm and he will send the buckle on to you. No one ever steals in Finland." I wrote as he directed, and the buckle followed me to England, where I received it soon after my arrival.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Several congressmen are behaving as though they were infected with a Rogers microbe-graft. Sometimes we are convinced that it would be a good thing for this republic if congressmen and senators were elected every thirty days. Then they would be good.

Aitkin Age: While the subject of railroad rate regulation is before the public, what's the matter with going after the express companies? It costs more to get a package from St. Paul to Aitkin than it does from New York to St. Paul.

Little Falls Herald: Governor Johnson's strong pronouncement in favor of municipal ownership will be a source of gratification to all who wish him to use his abilities for the greater good of all.

Red Lake Courier: The editor of the Roseau Region is an amusin' cuss. He calls Jake Jacobson the "watchdog of the treasury." Jake may be a "watch-dog" but his bark ended at the state convention three years ago.

Stephen Leader: The machine Republicans held a confab in St. Paul last week for the purpose of making a slate for the state ticket to be voted this fall. They did the same thing two years ago, and forced a candidate on the Republican ticket which was not acceptable to the rank and file of the Republican voters. We all know what the consequence was. Are they going to try to repeat the dose this year?

Thief River Falls Press: All this talk about Jake Jacobson for governor is a mere waste of words. Jacobson has been a foe to drainage and in Minnesota, where the paramount issue is drainage, he could not get a look in at the gubernatorial nomination.

Fergus Falls Free Press: Make a charge against the honest man and he laughs; but the "crook" howls.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The trusts may be against President Roosevelt, but his luck has not entirely deserted him. He has the good fortune to be roasted by Senator Tillman of South Carolina.

St. Peter Herald: If we are to judge by the expressions printed in a number of our exchanges, there is grave danger of the Republican party of this state being kidnaped by the senatorial syndicate.

Breckenridge Gazette: Those senators and representatives who are trying to get the better of the president in his fight for railroad rate regulation should go West and ask the mountain lions and bears about it. It might save them a bad licking.

Austin Transcript: McCleary declines to debate the tariff revision question with ex-Congressman Frank Eddy. He no doubt admits in his own mind that Eddy would beat him so completely that refusal to debate will bring less disgrace than defeat in actual debate. Eddy is decidedly ahead at present.

Halstad Reporter: What a difference in men! Lawson wants to talk all the time and Rogers wont talk at all.

WEST END

TWO TO ONE ON CULLUM

West End Republican Offering That on Democratic Candidate.

Mayor Has Immense Popularity in Sixth and Seventh Wards.

The ward workers in the Sixth ward in particular and some in the Seventh are getting down to business now for the coming election and in the West end of the city those who claim to know can see no place where Thomas Trevillion can cut into Mayor Cullum's acknowledged popularity in that part of the city.

A prominent Republican who is doing business in that part of the city is offering to bet 2 to 1 in favor of Cullum being re-elected and says it is not a matter of sentiment with him but a clear business proposition. If any Trevillion men are looking for good bets, the best part of the city to look for them is in the West end where the big votes are. There they will find quite a bunch of Cullum money. Men out there are betting and offering to bet that Cullum will carry at least five wards out of the eight. They claim that there is not the slightest doubt of Cullum carrying the Sixth and Seventh, and from reports, the Eighth.

As to alderman the fight in the Sixth is getting hard, with Charles Mork in the lead. Mr. Mork is popular himself but the great strength of Cullum in that ward is helping out the Democratic candidate for alderman to a great extent. Mr. Skoglund is also popular and is working hard for the election and so are many of his friends. Were it in an off year, the contest between these two would be very pretty and very close, it is believed.

In the Seventh, Alderman Haven has not yet any opposition for re-election and as Joseph Shartel or any other ambitious one has only until next Saturday to file, something must be done pretty suddenly and at that it is acknowledged that with the start in time and popularity which Mr. Haven has, anybody who files will have only a forlorn hope.

ASSOCIATION A GO.

Athletic Organization Will be Crystallized in Few Days.

The beginning of an athletic association for the West end has started and will probably crystalize at a meeting to be held at the Second Presbyterian church next Friday evening. The young men interested met at that place last evening and practically decided upon what is to be done. It has not been formally ratified yet, but the choice of those who form the nucleus of the association seems to have fallen upon a vacant store building at Twenty-fifth avenue west and Superior street, and a committee was appointed to purchase the necessary apparatus today.

At the next meeting, which will likely be held Friday night, officers will be elected and a regular organization formed. The fees of the association will be 50 cents a month, or, if paid in advance, $5 a year. This, it is believed, will keep the association amply in funds. Eighty-seven young men enrolled the first thing, and it is expected that close to 150 will be in the list within a very short time. Besides the money received from membership, a number of business men of the West end have volunteered to contribute liberally to such a movement, which will be a very comforting thing to those who will have the finances in charge.

The business men look at the matter in a practical sort of a way, and give as their reasons for wanting and agreeing to support this kind of institution—and the business men were primarily the cause of the movement—that: Their sons and employes will have a place for social gathering and physical development, and as there is no such place in the West end now, one should be started; it will help boys morally, giving them some place besides the saloons and dance hall to spend their time; and the boys and young men will spend their money in the West end, instead of going up town to get rid of their cash.

Many of the young men of the West end feel the need of some place where they can obtain physical training and relaxation, and as it is too far to go up town to the Y. M. C. A., after working hours, they are anxious for the successful launching of such a place in the West end.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

West End Commercial Club Holds Annual Friday Night.

The West End Commercial club will meet in Sloan's hall Friday night and will hold its first annual election of officers. It is expected that the old officers will be re-elected. President J. J. Moe said today that there will be no program as the evening will be too full without having musical features.

Besides the election, will come up several matters of public importance which will be reported on by committees already appointed. This discussion will likely taken up some time and should be attended to at once, so the program part will be passed up for that evening.

West End Shortrails.

Rev. F. O. Kling of the Swedish Mission church will speak this evening at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church at the union meeting to be held there.

The installation of the North Star Benefit association officers will be held at Sloan's hall a week from tomorrow night.

The little daughter of Thomas J. Feathers of 121 Twentieth avenue west is very sick with pneumonia.

It's pure if it comes from the Lion Drug store.

Mrs. Sarah Iverson, aged 67 years, died yesterday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Callnomedeen, 123 North Twentieth avenue west. Besides her daughter, two sons, Edward and Lewis survive her. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late home. Interment will be in Forest Hill cemetery.

Drs. Coventry and Oredson held a postmortem examination on the remains of A. P. Johnson, found dead Sunday at 323 Twenty-first avenue west. Heart palpitation and bowel trouble were found to be the cause of death. The funeral will be held Friday from Mr. Johnson's late residence.

The funeral of Mrs. McQuein was held yesterday afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church, Rev. S. F. Sharpless officiating. Interment was had in Forest Hill cemetery.

Revival services are being held every evening this week in Bethany chapel on Garfield avenue by Rev. S. F. Sharpless of the Second Presbyterian church. The first meeting was held last evening.

What the doctor orders is what you need—no substitute at the Lion Drug store.

YALE FACULTY

Puts Stop to Students' Midnight Frolic With Coryphees.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 23.—Yale seniors, piqued because the faculty forbade the senior promenade this year, planned a midnight substitute for it Saturday night. They invited twenty-seven chorus girls from Richard Carle's "Mayor of Tokio" company to go to Morris Cove and have an impromptu promenade.

As the party was preparing to leave in fifteen hacks the faculty appealed to Mr. Carle to help them suppress the prank. He made a speech to the girls in their dressing-rooms, promising to expel from the company any girl who took part.

The faculty agreed to take prompt action on any student who was mixed up in the affair. The "prom" was given up and the seniors had to settle a big champagne and refreshment bill.

A Jamaican Lady Speaks Highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mrs. Michael Hart, wife of the superintendent of cart service at Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies islands, says that she has for some years used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, croup and whooping cough, and has found it very beneficial. She has implicit confidence in it and would not be without a bottle of it in her home. Sold by all leading druggists.

HE DIFFERS FROM SHAW

Bank Examiner Kerst Against Removing Banking Laws' Restrictions.

More Elasticity in Loaning Facilities Would Mean Disaster.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—State Superintendent of Banks Kerst does not take kindly to Secretary Shaw's recommendation for a more elastic law covering legal restrictions upon bank loans.

He declares the national secretary of the treasury is fostering a sentiment that will seriously undermine the financial standing and prosperity of the country.

Public Examiner Kerst was asked by a Minneapolis man to give his views regarding the legal limitations on bank loans, and answered as follows:

"Minnesota state banks are allowed to loan to one party up to 15 per cent of the bank's capital and surplus, as compared with 10 per cent as the limit imposed upon national banks. The experience of the Minnesota department of superintendent of banks with state banks is, that the 15 per cent rule is well observed, and that our state banks agree to the wisdom of the provision, as well as lend their cordial co-operation to its enforcement.

"Even so large a state bank as the Security Bank of Minnesota, located in your city, with a capital of $1,000,000; surplus and profits of $700,000, and deposits of $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, a bank which compares in resources and volume of business with the largest national banks of the state, I find strictly observes the 15 per cent rule, as do other large banks of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and the large towns generally. It is very seldom that any of the 410 state banks of Minnesota are tempted to disregard the legal limit upon loans, and in the very rare instances of non-observance that have occurred, our department has had no difficulty in obtaining prompt compliance with our orders to observe the rule.

"About the only cases where the 15 per cent rule is complained of by our state banks are when some of the small country banks of minimum capital—say $10,000 to $15,000—find that the 15 per cent rule hampers them in handling farm mortgages. Of course, a bank of only $10,000 capital handles, under the 15 per cent rule, no mortgage larger than $1,500. Sometimes such a bank would like to handle a first-class farm mortgage of $2,000 or $3,000, and in order to enable the bank to take these I would favor a slight amendment to our banking laws which would make a loan thus secured possible; this would not imply, however, that I would favor any looseness in the interpretation or enforcement of the law; and the standing of the Minnesota banks is so high in regard to observance of legal requirements, that I do not believe they would countenance any looseness in Minnesota banking.

"You call my attention to the recent statement of Secretary Shaw in regard to legal restrictions upon loans, in part, as follows:

"'The 10 per cent provision was framed at a time when loans were comparatively small, when business was not on the present great scale, and borrowers were individuals, not great corporations. I suppose a $3,000,000 capitalization is large enough for a Chicago bank, but if Armour wished to borrow money, will you tell me how much good $200,000 would do him? A Chicago man told me he once borrowed $8,000,000 legitimately for his business. The great borrowers of today will scarcely submit to dividing what they want among ten different banks in order to secure the full sums they require.

"'A law it made to fit the condition existing at the time it is framed, but the condition changes while the law remains as it was cast. The practical question then arises: Shall the law be drawn out to answer the new condition, or the new condition be hacked to fit the law. Which is alive, the law or the condition, and is not the welfare of the living to be regarded as superior to the enactment of the dead?'

"Permit me to say that I am not in sympathy with the sentiments above expressed, although they emanate from so high an authority as the national secretary of the treasury. I am able to look upon such statements as the above in no other light, than as demoralizing in their influence, both upon bankers and bank examiners. With the spreading of such philosophy by those high in authority, the country is threatened with the near approach of the day when our banking laws shall become a farce, and when loose and lawless banking, connived at by weak or unscrupulous officials, shall seriously undermine the financial standing and prosperity of the country.

"Does Secretary Shaw mean to imply from the illustration given above that he would seriously approve of a bank of $3,000,000 capital making a loan of $3,000,000 to $8,000,000 to one party? I doubt if any banker would jeopardize his reputation by justifying a risk of that character. With fire insurance companies it has become the custom to divide any large risk amoung a dozen or more of companies; and why is not that the safe and sound policy in regard to a large banking risk, like a $3,000,000 loan?

"In the case of a loan of several millions, the natural and customary plan is to place on the market an issue of additional stock or bonds. But, if it is a short time loan at higher rates, the company is likely to ask for the money in smaller installments, as it is needed in the weekly or monthly transactions, so as to economize as much as possible in regard to the length of the loans and consequent interest charge. Even in the rare event of a loan of several millions on short-time paper, both the borrower and the banks are better safeguarded against emergencies, if the loan and consequent risk is divided.

"It strikes me that the lesson of the half dozen national bank failures during the past year in Chicago, Pittsburg, Topeka, and Faribault, is, that what the country needs is a more strict, rather than more loose, compliance with the banking laws, and particularly the laws governing loans."

One of these days a want advertiser will offer for sale something you have long looked for—but you will be none the wiser if you overlook the ad.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear If the Advice of this Duluth Cizizen Is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidney's fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Duluth women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. M. McGillivray of 1228 Superior street west, Duluth, Minn., says:

"I just as heartily endorse Doan's Kidney Pills today as I did over six years ago, when I had found relief from dull pains through the loins and other symptoms of kidney trouble. My back would give out if I exerted myself in doing even the most trivial household work. I had persistent headaches, and my rest did not benefit me at night. The kidney secretions were likewise irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the start, banished the backaches, headaches and pains, and imparted strength to the different organs, and helped me in every way. I have had no occasion to use any kidney medicine since that time."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

The Evening Browning class of the Twentieth Century club resumed its meeting last evening, this being the first meeting of the class since before the Christmas holidays. The lecturer, Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., gave the concluding lecture in the series on "The Ring and the Book," the character of the pope being considered. Mr. Powell said, in part:

"In looking over a collection of the world's literature recently I found a sample of the profound criticism which is often given on Browning's poems. The work was, it is true, of the sort which administer literature in homoeopathic doses and spoke of Browning's 'The Ring and the Book' as a poem in blank verse of some 25,000 lines, dealing with a Roman murder trial, and that when the reader is through he knows little more of the guilt or innocence of any of the persons than he did when he began. The man who gets this literary hash together cannot be blamed much, for in compiling a work which shall include criticisms and selections from all the world's literature, no great time can be spent on any one writer or poet. It is true that Browning does not step forth in any one place and assert that Pompilla was a saint, Guido a villain, Caponsacchi a martyr and so forth. The reader must get his facts as the people of Rome got theirs, from the same gossip of the streets and homes, from the records of the court and so on.

"One character will present the matter in such a way that the reader has satisfactorily decided guilt and innocence for himself, when another popinjay steps forth and there is immediate danger of the former decisions being upset. But how anyone can read Pompilia's confession, Guido's first defense and then his cowardly dying bravado, and miss his way in the discovery of truth, must be lacking in some instinct for truth which comes from truth in the soul.

"In the reading of the Pope's canto the feeling must be inspired that Browning is behind this reading, and in these lines gives voice to the judgment of God. We must read beneath the surface to see the purpose of holding the mirror up to life to show us life gathered together for study that we may see the truth which could in no wise be told. Mixed though it is with the alloy of fancy, when tested with the acid of our interpretation we will have gotten truth."

Mr. Powell dwelt at length upon the character of the pope, the simple good old man, and his lengthy consideration of all the characters in the awful murder, before affirming the judgment of the court for the execution of Guido, and of the doubts which assail him of the achievements of Christianity, when such a crime is possible after the influence of Christ has been in the world for 1,700 years. The remaining lectures in the course will be on "Talaustion," "Christmas Eve" and Easter Day," "A Death in the Desert" and "Browning's Religious Philosophy."

PROGRAM OF TOASTS.

Woman's Council Arranges for Midwinter Breakfast.

The members of the committee in charge of the mid-winter breakfast to be given by the Women's council at the Spalding, Feb. 12, are greatly elated at the assurance which they received today that Governor Johnson would be their guest of honor at this function. Word has not yet been received from the governor, but friends of his in this city whose guests Governor and Mrs. Johnson will be at that time, assure the delighted club women that they may count on the governor and his wife for their honored guests. The presence of the state's executive will add many times to the delight of the club women of the city for Governor Johnson is extremely popular with the club women of the state.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Minnesota State Federation of Women's clubs and also president of the Women's council of this city, will preside as toast mistress and the general subject of the toasts will be "Duluth's Problems" and the responses will be: "The Point," Mrs. John McLeod; "The Hills," Mrs. J. H. Crowley; 'The New Element," Mrs. William S. Woodbridge; "Commercial Spirit," Rev. John W. Powell; "Altruistic Spirit," Mrs. Alexander Milne; "Our Young People," Mrs. I. L. Lenroot of Superior.

THE TROUSSEAU.

Miss Roosevelt's at Present Most Interesting of All.

The first accurate description has just been obtained of the marvelous trousseau, including details of the wedding gown of Miss Roosevelt, who will be the sixth bride to go forth from the White House when she is wedded to Congressman Nicholas Longworth next month, says a New York dispatch.

The marked individuality of Miss Roosevelt made it certain that she would be no means leave either the material, the style of making or the garniture of her trousseau to her dressmaker. That it would not be of the conventional type which the average bride leaves to her modiste to create, everyone felt sure, and for once everyone was right, for Miss Roosevelt has verified the truth of all these prophecies.

There are ten of these wonderful gowns, made for the most part in the empress or princess styles, as the most becoming to the youthful bride, and lending themselves the more readily to the rich oriental weaves of which nearly all of the trousseau is made.

The wedding gown, to begin with, is not being made in Baltimore, as reported, but in the establishment of a well-known New York French modiste, where Miss Roosevelt has had her gowns designed and made for several seasons.

The first fittings of this garment were made in Washington last week, and the work of finishing it was resumed today. There are twenty-six yards of material in this wedding gown, over which will fall a full court train, to consist of a like number of yards of brocaded satin in a graceful lily design, exquisite in texture and one of the many sumptuous pieces of brocaded and embroidered satin, presented to Miss Roosevelt during her trip to the Philippines.

Draped in princess design, the wedding gown will fit closely to the waist, then sweep away in a long train.

The gown is built up over a soft silk lining, which is finished at the bottom with many frourfrou ruffles of chiffon and lace, to hold the satin out and keep it from tangling. Lace finishes the upper part of the bodice and the short sleeves, just below the elbow, but no more lace shall appear in the gown.

It is said that the bride's bouquet will consist of lilies and white orchids, but Mr. Longworth has not taken anybody into his confidence in this respect.

All stories to the contrary notwithstanding, Miss Alice's trousseau is nearly made up of silks and satins and other fine materials presented to her upon her eastern trip. There are pongees, plain and embroidered; crepes of the finest eastern silk and make, hand embroidered, with shawls and pieces for slippers to match; rolls of the peculiar oriental silk that is not pongee, nor yet quite like our taffeta or peau de soie, but which partakes of the qualities of all; there are pieces of old costing from $40 to $100 a yard, and these average four yards to the piece, and a lot of other Oriental stuffs in embroidered Indian mull and silks.

Among the afternoon gown materials in the trousseau are crepes embroidered in hawthorn, wistaria, morning glory and chrysanthemum designs and satins, repeating the first three patterns in Japanese workmanship, with silks showing Chinese embroideries, the gift of Tsi An, empress of China, exhibiting the mingled colorings of roses chrysanthemums, iris and lilies, blended to form a harmony of color.

NOT DANGEROUS.

London Papers Comment on Employment of Women.

The London Mail, drawing attention to a statement of its New York correspondent concerning the extent to which the labor of women is replacing that of men, asks: Is such a process of substitution a good or a bad thing for the workers themselves and for the state to which they belong?

If men, who generally require higher pay because they have, as a rule, to bring up a family, are crowded out of work to make way for women, who take lower wages because they are prepared to accept celibacy as their lot, or because they receive from their parents as a free gift some part of their cost of living, the result would unquestionably be deplorable.

It would mean that the social organism was committing slow suicide. The male portion of the population would be less and less able to marry because it would lack the earning power to maintain a wife and family. The female portion would be exempt from the economic pressure which must candidly be admitted, in perhaps numerous cases, to be one of the causes that lead women to accept marriage.

Thus, where women were largely employed we should expect the birth rate to fall, as it is falling in England and the United States, and the number of unemployed male clerks to increase to enormous proportions, as it is reported to have done in England. If, however, we look at the evidence of general statistics, it is not proved that the substitution of female for male labor has gone to very serious lengths.

It would seem that while the openings for women have increased, and are increasing in the modern order of industry, the number of men employed fully keeps pace with the population. It may, too, be reasonably contended that the increased opportunities for women must have a solitary influence upon the race by placing women in a better economic position, and enabling them to insist upon a higher standard of morality and conduct in men before they will consent to give their hands.

Women's labor is only mischievous when it reduces male labor to a parasitic position, as in the town of Dundee, where, owing to the fact that the competition of the low-wage countries of the East has to be faced, employers cannot pay men, and those who should be workers subsist upon the wages of their wives.

LIVE BUTTERFLIES

Is One of the Latest of European Fads.

The wearing of live butterflies in the hair marks the advent of another senseless caprice, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

An Englishwoman, Princess Blanca Colona, is responsible for having started the fad, and now it is reported on good authority that many London fashionables have taken it up.

The butterflies are secured by means of a silken thread and a hairpin, and doubtless are a particularly stout and contented kind of butterfly, for the ordinary American insect would pull and flutter so ceaselessly at his tether that soon he would be quite dead from his struggle for freedom.

To be sure, captive butterflies in the hair, crawly as the effect might be, are not quite as bad as captive chameleons or beetles on the corsage; and these were decorative schemes not many years ago.

It would seem indeed true that the veneer over the primitive savage in all of us was a very thin one; and the vanity of the worldly woman is not many times removed from that of her savage sister.

Never before in fashion's history has there been such an outcry raised against the wearing of egrets as in the past year.

Columns have been printed, circulars distributed, even a game warden of Florida shot in the execution of his duty, trying to protect the white herons at mating time from the hunters of the delicate egret feathers; yet this year the egrets triumphantly wave wherever fair and wealthy woman flaunts her fineries.

What, to her, is the slaughter of the heron at mating time? For just then, in the birds love season, is when the egret is at its loveliest; what to her the fact that fledgelings die and that the white heron is becoming extinct; nothing matters when the fact remains that egrets are costly, therefore worn only by the wealthiest women.

Many are the innocent victims sacrificed upon the altar of woman's vanity; yet some, it might be said, are necessarily offered that we may be warm and add a certain amount of beauty to the world; but to this class surely does not belong the captive butterfly, chameleon or beetle, and for common humanity's sake we might call a halt upon the wholesale slaughter of the beautiful white heron of Florida.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Limes, 50 cents a dozen.
Honey, 18 cents a comb.
Egg plant, 25 cents each.
Sturgeon, 50 cents a lb.
Halibut, 15 cents a lb.
Pork tenderloin, 25 cents a lb.

Limes are not used very much except in one line of business and vast and all-embracing as that business is according to those kindly people who would like to get the canteen out of the army, one small box off in one corner takes care of that trade altogether. But limes are not kept in market for "family trade especially." They are interesting little fruits, however, and many a housewife sending a longing glance in their direction when she has wearied of saying "Send up a dozen of oranges" or "Two grape fruits, I guess."

Honey and hot biscuits, the kind you make at the first try, in spite of the funny papers, ought to make a hit at luncheon one of these days if you have brought your family up right, for anything nicer than biscuits, smoking hot, crisp and rich, with little chunks of delicious butter melting in a ravishing way and on top of that an inch covering of honey, o-o-oh!

THE MAGIC OF NINA HILLER.

By Max Sterner.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It is not to be written whether Mrs. Huggins was more surprised at the apparition which appeared in her shabby sitting room or whether Nina Hiller personifying the apparition, was more surprised at the prevailing slovenliness of the place. Certain it was that the dingy room which served as an office for Mrs. Huggins' fifth class lodging house, had never been graced by so neat and smart and altogether charming person as Miss Hiller. Certain it also was that Nina never had dreamed there were so many unutterable kinds of dirt as she saw about her.

Mrs. Huggins was inclined at first to be a bit belligerent but Nina's perfect frankness and gentleness disarmed her. As for Nina her lips trembled just for the fraction of a moment as she contrasted the cheerless place with the neat and comfortable country home she had left.

"Do you have furnished rooms to rent?" she inquired.

"I do," replied Mrs. Huggins shortly. "May I see one?" persisted Nina.

"What for?" rejoined Mrs. Huggins.

"I am looking for a room," replied the girl.

Mrs. Huggins gasped in surprise.

"There's plenty vacant, the Lord knows," she said, "But they ain't hardly your kind.

"I am not very particular so long as the place is respectable and the rent is not high," said the girl.

"Respectable," snorted Mrs. Huggins, "I never ran no place that wan't respectable."

"I'm sure of that," the girl hastened to say, "I only meant that was why I came here.

"Well, its cheap enough," went on the landlady. "Goodness knows, it has to be. There don't seem to be no money any more. I have to take what folks can afford to pay."

Then she looked shyly at the girl and said with rough kindness: "I really think you might find a place you would like better. Its only poor folks that put up here."

"I am very poor," replied Nina simply. Then noting Mrs. Huggins' keen glances at her neat and tasty clothes and more especially at her gloves and rather stylish hat, she smiled and added: "I am from the country. My parents died very recently and left me alone, and there was not much left after the bills were paid."

"The city is a poor place to come," replied Mrs. Huggins grimly, but not unkindly, "Goodness knows there's a plenty here now tryin' to keep soul and body together. If you've got any friends in the country you'd better go back and get any kind of work to do to keep an honest roof over your head. There's an army of 'em here walkin' the streets, lookin' for work—and it's a bad business for a young girl and a purty one like you, a gettin' discouraged and hungry and lonesome and all that."

The girl blushed and smiled a brave, confident little smile.

"I had a good mother and a good father," she said with quiet dignity, "and I am sure I will do nothing to disgrace them. I have no doubt at all but I will find work to do and that I will get on famously."

The upshot of it all was that Nina became established in a dingy room on the second floor with two dingy windows. There was a dingy carpet on the floor and a meagre quantity of dingy furniture. There was also a neglected fire place in the corner. It was all so hopeless and squalid that it required all of Nina's courage to face it.

While waiting for her trunk the new comer went out and returned with an armful of packages which filled the person of Mrs. Huggins with burning curiosity. A boy followed her with a good sized box. Mysterious sounds came from the room of the new lodger. Presently a coal man carried several sacks of coal to the room. This was the straw that broke the landlady's back, so to speak, She simply had to go up and see what was going on.

If curiosity filled her before she opened the door, astonishment prevailed when she gazed at the transformed apartment. The windows were washed inside and out, the carpet brightened up, all the furniture wiped and cleaned, a dainty coverlet was on the bed and a score of pretty and artistic things were tastefully placed about the room. And in the grate a fire was burning smartly. The entire effect was most home-like and cheerful. Mrs. Huggins could scarcely believe it was in her own house. She never had seen anything like it—certainly nothing even suggesting it there.

"Are you goin' to have a fire all the time?" demanded Mrs. Huggins. "Coal costs a lot.

"I'm going to try to be comfortable," replied the girl. "I think I can earn enough to keep warm and have enough to eat."

The miracle was duly announced to various of the lodgers as they came in that evening, principally in the form of admonitions given with more or less vehemence by Mrs. Huggins.

"No more rough house in Number 12," she said sharply to Rose and Madge two bindery girls, who occupied the next room to the new lodger. "Of course, I know there ain't been no harm in it, but there's been a lot of noise. Let the fellers take you to a dance if you want to make a racket. As long as we've got a real leddy we won't scare her out."

"Cut out rushin' the growler to Number 16," she commanded Tim Ragan and Ed Root. "Either drink your beer at the saloon or move up on the third floor. Second floor's respectable now."

All this was alarming but the very first evening Nina invited the bindery girls in to see her.

"I do so want to know you," she said. "You see I have always lived in the country and been friends with all my neighbors."

Awe-struck with the comfort and beauty of the room the girls went in very silent and very ill at ease. Under the friendly chatter of the new lodger they thawed out and remained a long time, telling the little stories of their narrow lives.

One by one, all of the lodgers were invited into the transformed room and went forth with great friendlinesss and respect for the gentle girl who was so different from them all. And one by one the rooms of all the lodgers began to take on a new atmosphere. Even Mrs. Huggins swept the halls twice a week and once was seen to actually scrub them. Nina helped all with suggestions and with the work of her hands. The two bindery girls spent much of their spare time making things for their room after they were shown how it could be done with practically no expense for material.

In the meantime the new lodger had gone out only two days looking for work before she announced joyously that she had secured a position in a newspaper clipping bureau. To be sure the pay was very small and the work hard and the color faded from her cheeks but she made enough to pay her room rent and live frugally and add a little all the time to the comfort of her own room and of those about her.

And there came to be little gatherings of the lodgers in the various rooms but generally in Miss Hiller's, where there were famous little suppers cooked over the grate fire and to which all contributed their mite. And there came to be talk of books which led to the reading of books. And the girls learned to sew and to make clothes and hats for themselves and—in short, Mrs. Huggins' Boarding house came to be the abiding place of a crowd of well-dressed, well-informed and self-respecting people. And all this happened without essential increase in the wages of the people—excepting that aroused ambition led to better work and Ed Root became foreman in the shop where he worked and Rose became the fore woman of her bindery and there were other advancements which quite surprised those concerned and delighted the little home community.

Also was there marrying and giving in marriage when Ed Root married Madge and set up a home in a little flat around the corner.

Then came one sad day when the Princess who wrought all this magic was carried away. A tall, sun-burned, stranger came and clasped her in his arms before all the company and chided her sternly for hiding herself from her friends and from him. It was quite a romance as the story came out and the Prince had come into his own.

"I would not have missed my experience here for anything in the world," she said, with tears in her eyes as she kissed Mrs. Huggins goodbye.

The spirit she injected into the Huggins lodging house still abides and many there are who called her blessed.

DULUTH BABY WINS PRIZE.

The prize-winner in a recent baby show is the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Detweiler of 1631 Dingwall street. Little Miss Iris Kathleen Detweiler was the winner in the third annual baby show held by the Spim Company of Johnstown, N. Y. The prize winner is picked from the hundreds of photographs which are sent to the company, and the prize of $100 was this year won by the charming Duluth baby.

FROM BASIS OF BELIEF.

Dr. Rice Tells Upon What Prayer Must be Founded.

Last evening another large-sized audience gathered at the First M. E. church. The interest is still increasing. There were many at the altar, five of whom professed conversion at that service. Dr. Rice preached from Mark iv: 24: "And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." In part his discourse was as follows:

"'Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.' That has the ring of interest to me. The man who founds his prayer to be saved from unbelief upon the fact of his belief, has reason for hope. In fact, he only has right to pray who stands in such position. No man can pray out of unbelief. Lord, I don't believe, help me to believe,' that is impossible. You can pray only from the basis of belief. It is that which makes you want to pray. If you didn't believe why did you care to pray? To what would you cry?

"This wonderful cry of a needy man comes up out of one of the wonderful scenes of the early ministry of Jesus. The disciples had failed to do what the man needed to have done. And still determined to make way to the Master himself the father of this afflicted boy awaited the opportunity. Jesus came at last, and hastening before him bearing the much afflicted son came this man calling out 'Master if thou cans't do anything, have compassion on us and help us.' Did you notice that first word as you read, If? That is a poor word to use for a starting point in an effort with Jesus Christ. That was the leadership of unbelief. Unbelief was ahead now, and it always sends out an if. Oh, these ifs of our experience. They have been the high walls over which many hurt ones have never gone. Men never go very far behind an if. Especially is thus true in the Christian's efforts. And Jesus saw at once that this condition must be cared for, so the very first word He uttered was, 'If' also. How He threw this man before himself. That's essential. If a man is ever to be saved from himself he must first plainly see himself. So our Master starts right in on this transaction and throws the whole case right back on the petitioner himself and says 'If thou cans't believe, all things are feasible to him that believeth.' The heart of this whole work here is within the suppliant. Learn that my friend. You who have been perhaps up to this moment trying to approach God this way. So many fail right there. They approach carefully behind an if. The hope of the contact with God, is in the one who prays and not in the one prayed to being adjusted. What traitors to our best lives our unbeliefs have been. If, will only get of for an answer from God. That's all it deserves. We need expect absolutely nothing when we approach God with a challenge on our lips, saying 'Now Lord, here's a chance to prove yourself.' God don't prove Himself to any man for a mere chance of patronage. You can't never see God that way my friend. The great anxiety of this father for his suffering boy made him wait earnestly upon the answer of Jesus and at once he cried out and said in earnestness, 'Lord, I do believe! help thou mine unbelief.'"

THE EXPLORATION.

During the college days of ex-Mayor Bessom of Lynn, he had two of the professors of the college as guests at a hunting camp in the Maine wood, says the Boston Herald. When they entered the camp their attention was attracted to the unusual position of the stove, which was set on posts about four feet high.

One of the professors began to comment upon the knowledge woodsmen gain by observation. "Now," said he, "this man has discovered that the heat radiating from the stove strikes the roof and the circulation is so quickened that the camp is warmed in much less time than would be required if the stove was in its regular place on the floor."

The other professor was of the opinion that the stove was elevated to be above the window, in order that cool and pure air could be had at night.

Mr. Besom, being more practical, contended that the stove was elevated in order that a good supply of green wood could be placed beneath it to dry.

After considerable argument each man placed a dollar bill upon the table, and it was agreed that the one whose opinion was nearest the guides' reason for elevating the stove should take the pool. The guide was called and asked why the stove was placed in such an unusual position.

"Well," said he, "when I brought the stove up the river I lost most of the stovepipe overboard, and had to set the stove up there so as to have the pipe reach through the roof."

He got the money.

The Most Economical

WILL HAVE A HEARING

The County Board of Equalization Will Consider Complaints.

Coroner's Request for Office Rent Stirs Up Discussion.

Personal property taxpayers, who protest that they have been unjustly taxed for property in the possession of others, will be given an opportunity, Feb. 6, of placing their grievances before the county board of equalization, which comprises the board of county commissioners and the county auditor.

The county board at its meeting yesterday afternoon decided a hearing is advisable from the fact that the attention of the commissioners had been called to several instances where it was claimed that persons, or corporations, to escape taxation on personal property, had accredited its ownership to other persons who had no interest in the same when the assessor made his rounds last May.

Two of such protestors, J. W. Fee and John McAlpine, appeared before the board, Mr. Fee in person, and Mr. McAlpine by letter. Both claim that lumber, which was in the Scott-Graff Lumber company's yard May 1 last, and which was credited to them, had been sold to the Scott-Graff Lumber company. Mr. Fee offered to produce his books and contracts showing the actual sale of his lumber, and Mr. McAlpine claimed that the statement by anybody that he owned $67,000 worth of lumber in the Scott-Graff yards last May would be untrue and a mis-statement of facts.

Efforts were made by telephone to reach Z. D. Scott and have him appear before the board with reference to the matter, but he was absent from his office. The commissioners then decided that inasmuch as there were several complaints of a similar nature, it would be best to have a hearing, determine who the lumber really did belong to at the time it was assessed, and put the valuation against the person or persons that did own the property.

The session yesterday was an adjourned meeting for the purpose of receiving bids and awarding the contracts for the printing of stationery and forms for the various county offices, but a few other matters were considered. The bids, some seven or eight in number, had to be figured out and it was found impossible to get the figures ready before this morning. After the discussion had been completed on other business had risen, the board adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning.

A petition from Coroner J. A. Mellen, county coroner, asking that the county pay his office rent by virtue of the office he holds, aroused a protracted discussion. Dr. Mellen explained in his petition and further comment was made by C. E. Adams, his legal representative before the board, that aside from the regular coroner business which required that he have a centrally located office, he has to take charge of the effects of persons who die in the county, without living relatives here and by virtue of his office as coroner acts as administrator until such a time as the court appoints some other person to that office.

As special administrator, Dr. McCuen says he has had a number of estates on his hands with a large aggregation of personal property that must be cared for. He claims that he has all the way from two to as high as ten calls a day from people who are either interested in estates under the coroner's charge or who have business with him in his official capacity, and that the exigencies demand that he have an office that is conveniently located. So McCuen states in his petition that he has been paying $15 per month for down town office rent and that he has presented the bill for $165 to the county to cover the same, but that it has not been paid.

During the discussion the county attorney's opinion rendered last spring, relative to the county's paying office rent outside the courthouse, was recalled. This opinion held that certain county officials were to be provided with office room and then went on to say that if, in the judgment of the board necessity demanded it, the commissioners could authorize the rental of outside offices for the county attorney and the surveyor.

Both those officers are now occupying offices for which the rent is paid by the county and Coroner McCuen holds that if the county surveyor is entitled to free office room he should be extended the same favor. No definite action was taken by the board, the understanding seeming to be that the discussion was to be taken up again either today or at some future meeting.

The commissioners inspected the extensions that have been built to the courthouse recently and the jail, where some improvements have been made by painting the interior.

BORROWED BUT NEVER RETURNED

Manager of "Town Topics" Touched Many Prominent Men.

New York, Jan. 22.—Col. W. B. Mann of Town Topics testified in the Hapgood criminal libel trial that he had borrowed nearly $200,000 from J. P. Morgan, James R. Keene, W. K. Vanderbilt, William C. Whitney and other prominent financiers. Many of these loans never were repaid, so far as Col. Mann could recall, and others were repaid in the stock of the Town Topics company at $1,000 a share. Among others named by Col. Mann from whom he had borrowed large sums were C. P. Huntington, Charles M. Schwab, Howard and George Gould, Thomas F. Ryan and John W. Gates. The largest single loan was obtained from James R. Keene.

HEARINGS BEFORE U. S. SUPREME COURT.

Washington, Jan. 22.—In the supreme court of the United States today a motion was made for the advancement of the hearing of the Senator Burton case. The case comes from St. Louis, where the senator was convicted of receiving money for using his influence with the postoffice department in the interest of a "get rich quick" concern.

The supreme court heard arguments on the petition of the state of Kentucky for a writ of mandamus compelling the restoration of the case of Caleb Powers of Kentucky charged with the murder of Governor Gobel to the jurisdiction of the state courts of Kentucky.

FALLS OFF SLIGHTLY

Price of Copper Drops Fraction of a Cent—Conditions Healthy.

Producing Interests Do Not Want Prices Too High.

Copper is a little lower, but according to George L. Walker, the feeling is that it is a good thing that it is so. With prices too high, consumption is liable to fall off. He says in his weekly letter:

"Copper is dull and a shade lower. Lake is 18½ to 18¾, and electrolytic 18¼ to 18½ cents per pound. While several carloads were sold this week for immediate delivery at 19 cents per pound, this is thought to be slightly above the actual market price at present. It is known that 500,000 pounds were sold last week at 18¾ cents. There is a small lot of Chinese copper offered for resale, and this seems to be responsible for the current unsettlement of the market, as a certain selling agency is endeavoring to purchase the lot at as low a price as possible. Conditions are in every way healthy. There has been no falling off in consumption, and it is declared that it would be an exceedingly difficult thing to purchase as large an amount as 5,000,000 pounds for delivery earlier than March or April.

"It is not improbable that 18 cents may soon be the regular market price of copper, as the advance above that price was forced by a marked scarcity of metal for immediate delivery. While it would not be a difficult matter to maintain the price at 18¾ to 19 cents, the largest producing interests are desirous of having the price low enough to prevent the possibility of any accumulation of supplies in the hands of the smaller producers.

"The scarcity of coke has somewhat restricted copper production in the Southwest, and the fire in the Tamarack mine will probably cut down the Lake Superior output a million pounds or more this month. Other factors may come in to restrict production, but there is nothing in sight that is likely in any way to reduce consumption. The distant future outlook is just as bright now as it has been at any time during the past six months, and there is every reason for hope that the average price of copper throughout the year will be approximately 18 cents per pound.

COPPER SHARES.

"There has been a slight halt in copper share speculation, and prices generally have run off somewhat from the highest reached. The possible influence of the Amalgamated dividend and the sagging quotations reported by the London metal exchange were probably responsible for the heaviness of the stock market. It now seems possible that copper may be allowed to sag back to 18 cents per pound, and a fluctuating market in the copper shares may be expected for a week or more to come. Basic conditions are extremely strong, however, and there is no reason to believe that still higher prices will not be reached in the near future by a large number of the active copper stocks.

"I believe that such dividend payers as Copper Range, North Butte, Utah Consolidated, Calumet & Arizona and Amalgamated should be bought on all reactions. Among the lower priced coppers, Bingham, Arizona, Commercial, Michigan, Mass, East Butte, Shannon and Helvetia look especially attractive at present prices:

Walker gives some figures as to Amalgamated that are of interest. He says:

"December was the banner month in the Amalgamated company's history. Its great Washoe smelter turned out over 16,000,000 pounds of copper, and the Amalgamated group of mines made a total of over 24,000,000 pounds of copper, or at the rate of 288,000,000 pounds annually. This undoubtedly means that Amalgamated now owns an annual production of 230,000,000 pounds of copper on which it is now making a profit of 9 cents per pound, equivalent to more than $20,000,000 annually, or $13 per share on its capital stock. The Amalgamated company was never before in as good shape physically or financially as it is at the present time."

GALLUSES FOR CANNON.

Admirer From South Carolina Sends Gift to the Speaker.

New York, Jan. 23.—Speaker Cannon has received another present from another South Carolina admirer. The gift was a pair of hand-knit home-made galluses. The sender expressed the thought, that inasmuch as the speaker was wearing a suit of hand-spun jeans, it was proper that the trouers should be held up by a pair of old-fashioned galluses.

The galluses were made of white yarn, closely and carefully knit in two separate pieces, with double button holes, for it is expected that they will stretch. The speaker declares that they were just like the ones he used to wear years ago, and he will use them for the purpose for which they were intended.

"They're just the kind worn by the 'One Gallus Brigade,' of which old Governor Oglesby used to call and to whom Champ Clark appeals in his district in Missouri," said the speaker.

PHTHISIS CURE.

Illinois Physcian Discovess Remedy in Gases Raised by Blasts.

Duquoin, Ill., Jan. 23.—If investigations and experiments made by Dr. C. M. Carr, this city, prove to be correct, a new and valuable factor in the treatment of tuberculosis has been discovered. Dr. Carr, who is surgeon for the Illinois Central, physician of Duquoin Children's Home and examiner of many life insurance companies, claims that the gases produced in bituminous coal mines by the process known as "shotfiring" will cure tuberculosis and many other diseases of their passages.

He has found the inhalation of these gases to be virtually a specific for whooping cough, and his investigations have led him to believe that bituminous coal miners are immune from tuberculosis.

A communication from him to the Journal of the American Association showing the results of his experiments and giving the corroboration of his theory of 600 physicians of coal towns in several states has excited great interest in the medical profession.

TO BE HERE WEDNESDAY

T. F. Cole is Expected to Return From the East.

Will Preside at Meeting of Oliver Iron Company.

T. F. Cole, president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, is expected home from the East Wednesday morning, and a meeting of officers of the company will be held Thursday.

Mr. Cole has been gone from the city a long time, and during his absence many things have taken place, all of which he has, of course, been aware of. In every city he visited he was obliged to deny that he was about to float another mining company, for the speculators and people in more conservative lines of business pressed him for inside information on mining affairs.

The head of the Oliver company and many other now famous mining projects expected to be home last week, but was detained in the East by business. He had hoped to be present at the farewell banquet which was given L. W. Powell, at the Kitchi Gammi club Saturday evening, but he will probably meet Mr. Powell on his way to Duluth and hold a final conference with his lieutenant before the latter leaves the Windy City for Bisbee. Mr. Powell left for the Arizona mining camp yesterday, going first to Chicago.

A successor to Mr. Powell will probably be elected at the meeting Thursday, and it is possible that some promotions in the ranks of the concern will result.

CASTRO ACCUSED OF A BIG HOLD UP

By Secret Emissary Who Negotiated for Asphalt Property.

Indianapolis, Jan. 22.—Col. Victor M. Backus of this city is one of the most important witnesses in the Venezuelan asphalt controversy. He was the confidential man sent to Caracas by the asphalt company at the first sign of Castro's hostility to find out exactly what was going on. His story is already in possession of the state department, and will probably become public in full when congress gets from the president full details of the asphalt controversy, as it may do any day.

Col. Buckus says that he represented himself as the emissary of asphalt interests who wanted to buy mines in Venezuela, and as he appeared to have plenty of money it was not long before he got into negotiations with the government ring in Caracas. This ring had an asphalt claim called "La Venezuela." Men close to President Castro had already offered this claim to the New York and Bermudez Co., for $300,000 and a royalty. Col. Backus opened up negotiations to purchase this claim through Senor Arocha, a foster brother of Mrs. Castro, Senor Figuera, and Gen. Barret de Nazaris, Mrs. Castro's secretary. Here is Col. Backus's story of his negotiations at Miraflores, President Castro's palace, as related to a representative of the Indianapolis News:

"Arocha, Nazaris, Figuera and I were in a large room, seated at a table. In an adjoining room was President Castro, and as we talked Arocha would explain to the president, who came to the doorway dividing the room we were doing and made figures, and, in fact, President Castro appeared to be directing the deal.

"The upshot of it was, that I agreed to pay $420,000 for 'La Venezuela' and promised that I would have the money there in thirty days. I had paid some money on the deal and spent a good deal more working it up. In the negotiations I expressed a fear that the courts would sustain the right of Figuera to 'La Venezuela.' Figuera told me that he had been instructed to say to me by Arocha that the supreme court of Venezuela would sustain Figuera's claim, and there would be no danger in making the purchase. So it was demonstrated to me that Figuera was really a figurehead in the affair—that the real owners were President Castro and his brother-in-law and perhaps Nazaris.

"I went back to New York, and President Castro, as is known, seized the property under an old Spanish law that requires the recipient of a concession to do certain work and to pay certain royalties, and he contended that this law had not been complied with. A receiver was appointed, and that receiver is A. H. Carner (former local manager of the asphalt company) with whom I consulted every day while negotiating with Figuera and his silent partners. And Gen. Nazaris is now the financial agent of the Venezuelan government.

"When I got to New York I saw the asphalt people and made a full report of all that had been done. I turned the letters and documents over to De Lancy Nicoll, and most of them are now on file in Washington.

"There is no question but the General Asphalt company owns the asphalt lake, and that President Castro, Gen. Arocha, his brother-in-law, and Gen. Nazaris, the financial agent of the government, are attempting a gigantic hold up. There will be more of this when congress goes into an investigation, and until that time I do not wish to say anything more."

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. MISS ROOSEVELT NOW VERY BUSY Preparing for Her Wedding—Wants All Congress Present.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Although Miss Roosevelt is to be married to Congressman Nicholas Longworth in a month and all Washington is looking forward with great interest to the event, plans for the ceremony are still in a tentative state. For one thing, there is the matter of invitations to consider. Mrs. Roosevelt believes that the personal friends of the two families should receive adequate recognition, and that Miss Roosevelt's hostesses of the past in various cities should not be counted out. Miss Roosevelt has been so extensively entertained that were none but these families to be invited they would fill the allotted space.

Miss Roosevelt's desire is for an official wedding. She is particularly anxious that Mr. Longworth's associates in the house of representatives shall be first considered. She contends that they all will be anxious to see their colleague married and that they ought to be asked.

Miss Roosevelt wishes to be courteous to the foreign powers and to ask their representatives to this country to be present—the ambassadors and ministers, with their wives. She wants the judges of the supreme court also. Of course the membership of the senate would be included with that of the house. Then there is the Philippine party, the members of which Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth naturally want invited for reasons of sentiment.

With a few of the most intimate friends of the bridal couple added, this list would be almost excessive. Just what decision will be reached is a matter of conjecture; but it is safe to say that the wishes of the bride-elect probably will prevail.

The ceremony will be performed in the middle east window alcove of the east room. This will afford the best opportunity possible for the guests to see the ceremony. They will assemble not only in the east room, but also in the red corridor, in the green room and in the main entrance to the White House.

Miss Roosevelt just now is very busy. In the morning she pays flying visits to her tailor, dressmaker and milliner; the afternoon she devotes to calls and shopping and in the evening there is always a dance or dinner. In spite of the fact that every minute is taken up, the president's daughter is looking better than she ever did before.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The Phoenix theater at Pacific avenue and Fourteenth street, Tacoma, burned Monday morning at 5 o'clock. The fire started over the stage and is supposed to have caught from a defective wire. Loss $50,000, insurance $30,000. It will be rebuilt.

Martin Carlson and C. J. Johnson, employed in drilling rock at the excavation being made for the St. Paul auditorium at St. Paul, were probably fatally injured Monday afternoon by the explosion of a charge of blasting powder.

The steamer Rees Lee, one of the largest steamers of the Lee Line, plying between Cincinnati and Memphis sank near Tiptonville, Tenn. No lives were lost. The boat will be saved. It is believed she struck a snag. The Lee carried a heavy cargo, a large part of which will be saved.

A mob of 300 early Sunday took Ernest Baker, a negro from the Trigg county jail and hanged him from a beam on the city scales, near the courthouse in the center of Cadiz, Ky. Baker attempted Saturday night an assault on Miss Mary Gentry, aged 18.

Carl Arthur Johnson, a Minneapolis railroad man, is now under arrest at Charleston, S. C., charged with the murder of Charles O. Bader at the Falls hotel, Dec. 22. He will be brought back to Minneapolis as soon as the necessary papers can be forwarded to a detective, who is already on the ground and watching for him.

In a hotel in Chihuahua Monday, Manuel Algara De Torreros, a member of a distinguished family of Mexico City, shot Senorita Maria Reiga, an actress, and afterward shot himself. Both will die.

In commemoration of St. Petersburg's "Red Sunday," the Socialists of New York to the number of more than 15,000 marched in a procession through the streets of the East side of New York Monday night, and held a mass meeting at Union Square to denounce the Russian government. The parade was participated in by more than 230 Socialist and labor organizations.

The president has sent the following nominations to the senate: Ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary, Luke E. Wright, Tenn., to Japan; David E. Thompson, Neb., to Mexico; Lloyd C. REFORMING THE MONKEY

Adoption of Kitten Completed Great Change in Betty.

Association With Human Beings Had Proved Her Undoing.

New York, Jan. 23.—Betty, a monkey who was in the habit of going on sprees with her former master in her unregenerate days, has settled down to a quiet life at the Society for the Prevention of Cureltv to. Animals headquarters in Jersey City as the foster mother of a black and white kitten.

A girl of 13 entered the building a few days ago with a half starved six-weeks-old kitten in her arms. She said her mother didn't want her to keep the kitten any longer and would the cruelty man please find a nice home for her.

Superintendent Detere promised to look around for a place, and then Betty from her perch on top of a big door leading to the office began to chatter. As soon as the girl had departed she swung herself down from her high seat and walked toward the kitten, who sat washing her face with her paws in front of the desk.

The monkey circled around her several times, and the cat made a playful tap at Betty's stumpy tail. Betty made a few remarks which Detere didn't attempt to interpret and then tenderly took the kitten in her arms.

She climbed back to the top of the door and remained there for hours hugging the cat to her bosom with the tenderness of a mother. When it came bedtime several officers were obliged to do circus stunts to get the adopted baby away, and Betty didn't take kindly to the separation.

She was allowed to have the kitten again in the morning. She promptly carried the furry ball to a pan of milk and held her head down while the cat lapped her fill. Then she cuddled the kitten in her hairy arms and both went to sleep over a radiator.

Since the day Betty adopted her baby she hasn't let the kitten get farther than the length of her chain except when the officers have forcibly removed her. The kitten has apparently taken a shine to her foster mother and seems to be the happiest when snuggling close to her embrace.

Betty was once the property of a Jersey City man who used to take her into thirst cures. He would call for "whisky for myself and another for my friend, the monk." Betty generally made a wry face as she gulped the whisky down, but she was always ready for the second glass.

She invariably got it, and the result was usually disastrous. She became a confirmed inebriate, and her master, whom she at first amused in her intoxicated moments, was obliged to give her away for the sake of his reputation.

Betty passed from one owner to another, and all complained that the house wasn't big enough for themselves and the monkey, and then she fell into possession of President George M. McCarthy of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who has a weak spot in his heart for anything with four legs.

Betty made her presence felt at headquarters at the end of the first hour. She sat watching Deterie at work on his books, and lost no time in trying to imitate him. He left his desk and she seated herself in his chair.

When he returned he found her wielding the mucilage brush with feverish activity. She tore pieces of paper from a small pad, smeared mucilage on them and pasted them on the books and woodwork.

Later Deterle caught her making monkey designs on the headquarters blotter with red ink. She showed a nice sense of discrimination by refusing to touch a bottle of black ink which was handed to her, preferring the brighter color.

Betty's powers of imitation soon got Deterle into trouble with one of the girls at the Jersey City telephone central. The bell jingled merrily, and the superintendent ran in from the back room. He lifted the receiver from its place on his desk and said: "Hello! What is it?"

"What number do you want?" inquired central.

"I don't want any number. What makes you think I do?" replied Detedle.

"Then what are you ringing up for?" asked the hello girl.

"I haven't touched the 'phone," he answered.

"You certainly have. I have been getting flashes for several minutes."

"I think you are mistaken, ma'am."

"I think not, sir."

Then Betty solved the mystery by trying to take the receiver from Deterle's hand. It dawned on him that she had been signaling central by jiggling the receiver up and down. He called up again and said: "I'm sorry, ma'am, but you were right. It was the monkey who called."

"I thought so," sweetly came back the reply.

One day last week a sick cat was brought into the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals headquarters in a feed bag. While Deterle was busy at his books Betty's curiosity got the better of her. She cautiously approached the bag and proceeded to undo the string.

She managed to get the sack open and was reaching in for the cat when the superintendent saw what was going on. He ordered her to her perch, and she scolded him for his interference.

A woman wearing a stuffed bird on her hat walked into headquarters to make a complaint against a man for cruelty to animals. Betty spotted the bright plumage from the door top and jumped on it.

There was a screech and a narrow escape from a fainting fit. The monkey quickly retreated and Deterle felt the necessity of making an apology.

Betty's liking for anything in the animal kingdom made serious trouble a day or two later when a cat wandered into the office and quickly scampered out again with Betty in hot pursuit. The cat climbed a telegraph pole in front of the building and Betty shinned after it.

There was a scrap in midair, and the cat got the worse of it. Betty was so tickled over her victory that she refused to come down, and an officer had to go after her with steel climbers.

President McCarthy is authority for the statement that Betty recently made her escape from the building by unlocking and opening a rear door. Some of the men think that he gives the monkey credit for an almost impossible feat, but the president is positive that the door was locked before she made her exit.

Betty has an abnormal fondness for gas jet mantles and destroys them whenever she gets the chance. She climbs on the gas fixtures over the desk and pulls the flaky white substance out with her forepaws. Mr. McCarthy has vetoed mantles as a steady diet for the monkey, and Mr. Detere is kept busy chasing her away from them.

The children in the neighborhood are much interested in Betty and her antics and make daily calls to see her perform. Since she took a fancy to the kitten and appointed herself its guardian Betty has found little time for tricks. She is extremly jealous of anybody whom she suspects of having designs on the cat, and refuses to be diverted from her duty of protecting her adopted baby.

Dangers of a Cold and How to Avoid Them.

More fatalities have their origin in or result from a a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful, as there is no danger whatever from a cold when it is properly treated in the beginning. For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been recognized as the most prompt and effectual medicine in use for this disease. It acts on nature's plan, loosens the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Sold by all leading druggists.

STORY OF A WILD HORSE

Pine County Has an Animal That Knows No Master.

Sleeps Standing Up and Kills Wolves as a Pastime.

Not to be eclipsed by St. Louis county, which last summer boasted of an animal that was a half cow and half deer, Pine county has come forward with a story of how a long-haired wild horse, which kills wolves as a pastime, answered the call that prompted Jack London's famous dog and is now making its home in the swamps and pine forests to the south of Holyoke.

The tale is brought to Duluth, however, by a resident of this city, who has a family and a reputation for honesty and truthfulness to support. He is C. C. Boyd, a cruiser in the employ of the Boston & Duluth Farm Land company, who says he actually tracked the horse and got an account of its wanderings first hand.

To the average person the only really improbable part of the thing is that the interesting creature has the name of never lying down in the winter time. He sleeps, it is said, standing up, leaning against two trees as his only support, but this part of the story is also vouched for by the Duluth man.

"A hunter and trapper by the name of Brennan tells me that the horse has been running wild for the last three years, to his actual knowledge, and no one knows how much longer a time than that," said Mr. Boyd yesterday. "That it is wild there is no doubt in my mind, for, out of pure curiosity, I followed it for nearly three miles one day, week before last, in an effort to get sight of it, and not once did I succeed, so shy was it. No deer was ever more clever in his methods of keeping out of sight of mankind.

"The supposition is that the animal was left there in the woods several years ago by a logging crew. Sometimes this is done, when a horse is too sick to move at the end of the season. Or possibly it is the offspring of a mare that was turned loose in this fashion, and may be it has never known a master. Be that is it may, the horse is there, and just as wild as any other animal in that region. The country itself is a pretty wild one. From Holyoke to the St. Croix river the only inhabitant is this hunter and trapper. Not even a logging camp is there this winter. Wolves are numerous. The horse stays in township 45-16 most of the time.

"Brennan tells me that he has seen the animal only on two or three occasions, and then only for a moment. From living in the open all winter it has acquired a remarkable coat of hair, several inches long, so that it has a very shaggy appearance. From the track and from the trapper's description I should say that it was a mustang or other small breed, weighing maybe 800 or 900 pounds. Brennan says that all winter long the beast does not lie down, but leans against a couple of trees, like a horse leaning against the side of his stall, when he gets sleepy.

"I believe this part of the story, for, one morning after a snow storm, when last down there, I suddenly came upon the tracks of the creature. I could see it had been standing still for some time, but the queer part of it was there were no tracks leading up to the place. They had been completely snowed under, showing that the horse had been standing there for several hours at least. Leading off in the other direction they were fresh, and I followed them for some little distance, seeing where their maker had dug beneath the snow in the swamps for his breakfast of dried grass, but, though I frightened the animal, I did not get within seeing distance.

"Brennan told me how, last winter, two wolves chased the horse about two miles, finally bringing it to bay. It used its hoofs to such good advantage that it broke the lower jaw of one wolf and a leg of the other. Brennan afterwards tracked them and killed them both, so you see he feels pretty friendly towards the horse."

Taking the Kaiser's Trophy.

The recent yacht race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's trophy was easily won by the American boat, which established a new record between Sandy Hook and the Lizard. A wonderful record has also been established by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in its 53 years' experience; in fact, it is so far ahead of its competitors that there is really no second in the race. You therefore owe it to yourself and family to see that the Bitters finds a permanent place in your home from this time on. You'll find it very valuable in cases of chills, colds, grippe or pneumonia, also that it cures vomiting, heartburn, flatulency, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, insomnia, biliousness, or malaria, fever and ague. We urge a fair trial by every sick man or woman. It never disappoints.

THE PRESIDENT WROTE A LETTER

Which is Held by Beef Packers to Support Their Contentions.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—President Roosevelt has been made the central figure around which revolves the entire case involving the pleas of the indicted packers for immunity from further prosecution by the government on charges of being in a conspiracy to combine in restraint of trade and commerce. Attorney William J. Hynes, for the defendants, in his opening statement yesterday before the jury hearing the immunity pleas, read an excerpt from a letter written by President Roosevelt to Attorney General Moody, in the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe rebate case, which was a part of the communications between the two men called for by congress some time ago. This letter is taken by the packers as an admission by the president that the department of commerce and labor and the department of justice worked together to indict the packers, supporting the contention of the packers upon which they rely for immunity. The defendant packers will endeavor to inject the letter in the shape of evidence, as if the president was present and testified concerning it. The letter was written by the president, June 12, 1905, at the time the federal grand jury was sitting in Chicago on the beef trust inquiry. That part of the letter read by Attorney Hynes, and which will be introduced by the defendants, if possible, as evidence from President Roosevelt follows:

"With my approval, the department of justice, with the assistance of the department of commerce and labor, has for months been endeavoring to find out whether or not they can obtain legal evidence of such willfull and deliberate violations of the injunction by any individual. If the grand jury now sitting in Chicago finds an indictment against any individual conected with the packing corporations, it would be because in their judgment such legal evidence of the violation of the injunction had been laid before them."

The letter is purported to be signed by President Roosevelt, and is taken by the defendants as proof of their contentions.

"That letter is a public document, and we will introduce it as evidence in this case," said Attorney S. Miller, one of the packer's attorneys. "If the government contests it we can, of course, call for the original copy."

The reading of the excerpt of the letter came as a climax to the proceedings yesterday.

SIX MEN KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION

Boiler in Sawmill Near Holcom, Wis., Blows Up.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Jan. 23.—Six men killed, three severely injured and several less seriously hurt are the casualties resulting from the explosion of a boiler at the sawmill of John Lagermaier, even miles southeast of Holcom, yesterday afternoon. The dead:

EUGENE ELLENSON, Cadotte, head blown off.

BERT LAMB, Estella, head and arm blown off.

— SCOTT, head and chest crushed.

EDDIE SEPCH, struck by flying timber and killed.

ALEX FOLEY, Flabeau, crushed to death.

HARRY HICKS, body torn into shreds.

Seriously injured: Arthur Behnke, face blown off, fatally hurt; Jerry Beck, arm broken and internally injured; Joe Johnson, leg broken and other injuries.

The mill was entirely demolished by the explosion, the cause of which is not known.

Bert Lamb was the only married man among those killed. He was a large property holder near Estella and last winter ran a sawmill of his own.

SEVEN WOMEN ARE STABBED AT ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Jan. 23.—Seven women, one 57 years old, and all of whom are employed in various capacities, were victims last night of a mysterious "Jack the cutter," who stabbed each with a sharp, apparently double-edged knife. The assaults all occurred on crowded streets. In several inatances the women did not know they had been stabbed until after they had reached home. Six were stabbed in the lower limbs, and the seventh in the shoulder. The victims are: Miss Clara Von Beyerem, Miss Mary Tilley, Miss Cora Oglesby, Miss Rita Martin, Miss Cora Davis, Miss Maud Hall, Mrs. Martha Young.

A week ago a young woman was stabbe on Washington avenue, in the evening, while accompanying her sister and two other young women along the sidewalk. The assailant escaped. He was described as a young man.

The police are completely puzzled, and have formed the theory that an insane young man is at large. None of the victims of his work last night is seriously injured.

TWO MORE MEN WERE KILLED BY SNOWSLIDES.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 23.—Belated reports from the mountain settlements have added two more names to the list of men killed by snowslides within the last three days. Besides the seven miners killed at Alta and in American Fork canyon, Peter Christensen, a coal miner, was killed near Sunnyside, Utah, on Sunday. From Rigby, Idaho, is reported the death of Chas. B. Counts, a surveyor employed by the Oregon Short Line, who was crushed to death under a snowslide. Counts was a resident of Jacksons Hole, Wyo.

WOMAN FROM SUPERIOR

Attempts Suicide by Taking Carbolic Acid at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—Heart broken because she had been jilted by her lover, and worried over a contested claim, Mrs. Sarah Anderson, 38 years old, of Superior, Wis., fled from the scene of her troubles and came to St. Paul yesterday morning, to take her life. She arrived in the city on the morning train, and proceeding to a drug store, purchased two ounces of carbolic acid. Entering the Sibley street alley, running parallel to the Union depot, the desperate woman raised the bottle to her lips and, draining the contents, fell unconscious among a pile of empty barrels. An employe in the depot baggage room saw her fall to the ground and rushed to her assistance.

At the hospital Mrs. Anderson said that her sweetheart, Nic Ommang, a saloonkeeper at Superior, had jilted her, and that a homestead claim owned by her had been contested by him. The combination was too much, and she decided to take her life. Mrs. Anderson says she has no relatives in this country. She formerly ran a boarding house at 514 Banks street, Superior.

HEARS OF BROTHER'S DEATH

Mrs. Peterson is Heir to Estate of Long-Lost Relative.

D. H. Lawrence of Two Harbors, probate judge of Lake county, was in the city yesterday making preparations to leave for Portland, Or., to look after the interests of Mrs. P. C. Peterson, whose brother recently died at Portland, leaving an estate estimated to be worth over $2,500.

Mrs. Peterson, who has not for some years known of the whereabouts of her brother, August Lind, saw a paragraph in a Swedish paper announcing that a man by that name had died at Portland, leaving an estate and stating that the deceased had a sister living somewhere in this country.

They separated about seventeen years ago, the sister going to Wisconsin, where she married, and Lind going further West. Letters passed between them for some time, when Lind ceased writing, and subsequent efforts of his sister to locate him were unsuccessful. Mrs. Peterson had, years ago, come to look upon her brother as being dead. She is supposed to be Lind's only living relative.

Long Black--Loose—Black Broadcloth Coats, at $25—worth $39.50

Full 50 inches and generous in proportions. Of beautiful Broadcloth lined with a rich black satin, collar and cuffs of black velvet and rich black silk braid—a coat that can be worn for street or evening use.

There has been such a demand for this class of coat that our Mr. Nat Gidding, who is East, pressed the maker to rush them out, and are now on sale.

If we weren't having them made in January, when fine tailors are willing to work for a little less, we'd have to ask a third more for these beautiful garments.

At $29.50—worth $42.50—of rich, lustrious imported black Broadcloth, beautifully trimmed with wide silk braid at neck and cuffs—50 inches long.

At $35.00—worth $47.50—of imported Broadcloth—rich and lustrous—beautifully trimmed in all black braids.

At $42.50—worth $59.50—a magnificent wrap of very finest Broadcloth—richly lined and beautifully trimmed.

Spring Models in Rain Coats.

Not the flimsy thin materials that you'll see in the usual store! Ours are of cravenetted materials that have firmness—and wear, and are made up as walking coats. If you anticipate your needs you can save considerable. We figured with the makers—for January delivery—which means work in a so called dull period, when fine labor is cheaper. Our Nat Gidding, who has been east the past several weeks, selected the newest models—they have just arrived and will be ready tomorrow. Here are the savings:

At $19.50—worth $29.50, of fine weighty cravenetted cloth with velvet collar—and gold ornaments.

At $22.50 and $25—two most excellent styles—plaid back materials—at $12.50 and $16.50. Some splendid models.

The Sale of High Class FURS!

Sets or Separate Pieces.

Baum-Marten, Mink, Chinchilla, Ermine, Black Lynx, White Fox.

Unquestionably the best Fur News of the Year.

The makers' desire to turn surplus stocks, (which on account of the mild weather of the earlier season were heavier than usual) enabled us to buy at very great savings—which we are passing along to you. These are instances:

Dainty Summer Dresses Now—and why NOW, you ask?

Because it's the best time to compare these that you can buy ready to put on—with those you'd have to buy materials for and "fuss" around finding a style that you'd like or is becoming to you!

Come and look at these pretty things—you'll wonder how they were ever gotten out at such prices!

Try them on and see how they become you. No "guessing" as to how they might look if you had them made!

Here are several examples and at special prices now:

WHITE LAWN DRESSES—waist tucked, with insertions of Val. lace—skirt with deep tucked flounce, with lace insertion, $7.50—later price $10.00.

WHITE LINEN SUITS—elaborately trimmed with embroidery—skirt new flare effect—embroidery set in—$10.00—later price $15.00.

WHITE PERSIAN LAWN DRESS—Lingerie waist beautifully trimmed with fine embroidery and lace—skirt with full deep flounce; also trimmed with embroidery and lace—$15.00—later price $20.00.

Also a wide range of dainty Dresses—with short or long sleeves—lace and embroidery trimmed or plain tailored effects.

"TUB" DRESSES—Blue chambray tucked waist—trimmed with tailored straps, piped with white—skirt with new flare flounce effect—tailored straps and piping—$7.50—later price $10.00.

The "Style Store"

It is important to know that whatever you buy here in wearing apparel is absolutely correct—to buy a style now and in a few weeks find that you've made a mistake, is rather exasperating to say the least!

The Gidding establishment and Gidding styles stand for everything that is fashionable in apparel for women and girls!

To the many who have depended upon us for their clothes' wants, this statement is superfluous—but, to those who have not—to those who have, perhaps, bought things that have afterwards proved disappointing, we wish to make this statement clear and emphatic!

No matter where you go—East or West—you'll find that you are correctly attired in our garments. Not only that, but the season's styles are shown simultaneously with those of the prominent Eastern stores—a thing worth noting.

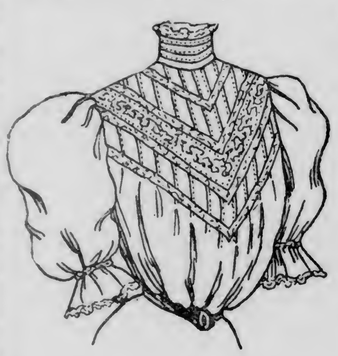

Take as an Example Our Present Early Display of Advance Spring Styles—

We have had one of our buyers in the Eastern markets since the last of December, sending us the new things as soon as they appear. It has been no guess work—and it shan't be. Well-dressed women appreciate this, as is shown by our constantly increasing business, and our busy store even in mid-winter days!

The Early Spring Displays are Worthy of Your Attention—and especially so if you contemplate a trip to any of the fashionable resorts South!

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Man Caught by Indian Agent a Year After Being Indicted.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—A year after eluding the authorities, George La Trace, a squaw man, is in jail here pending arraignment before United States Judge Amidon on a charge of selling liquor to the Indians.

La Trace was indicted a year ago and was released on bail. When his case came up for trial he did not appear, and information obtained by the federal authorities showed that he had gone to Canada. Since then a watch on the border has been maintained, and when word recently was received that La Trace probably would return to his home near Belcourt, Deputy United States Marshal Stout left at once for the place.

In the meantime, however, La Trace had returned and was arrested by the Indian agent of the Turtle Mountain reservation.

City Auditor Gibson has a puzzle he wants solved. The old Sixth ward was recently divided in two. There is one hold-over alderman. The alderman resides in what will now be known as the Sixth. The auditor wonders whether, under the law, the alderman can be regarded as a hold-over of the Sixth or of the new Seventh, the voters of which had just as much to do with his election as those in the Sixth; or whether the alderman can hold over at all. It has been suggested that the alderman should resign and stand for re-election, and that both wards should elect two men, one each for a short term.

There is a lot of agitation in this and other cities of the state since the West hotel fire in Minneapolis, for more safeguards in the larger buildings. In Fargo many of the larger structures are not equipped with fire escapes according to the city ordinance, and some have only one narrow stairway. Local officials are seeking to enforce the ordinance.

Bismarck—J. P. Kenyon is having rather a novel experience in securing a pension. In 1889 he applied for one, but failed to get it. About a year ago the agent at Washington through whom he applied sent him some papers to sign. They included inquiries as to why he had ceased drawing his pension. Much surprised, Kenyon replied that he had never been granted a pension. Further correspondence developed the fact that a man in Iowa, claiming to be J. P. Kenyon, had taken over Kenyon's 10-year army record, had added his own subsequent service in the army to 1896, and secured a pension of $24 a month. This he drew for some years and then stopped. The agent, in going through the records, discovered these facts and laid the matter before Senator McCumber, who has taken the matter up with the department. An official has been sent to Iowa to try and discover the man who took advantage of Kenyon's name and army record.

Walhalla—Because Governor Sarles and his staff cannot be present Jan. 30, the grand fox hunt that had been set for that date has been postponed to Feb. 6, one week later. The governor has promised to be present then with his full military staff, and will assist in making the event the banner one of the mid-winter season. The committee on arrangements has selected Sheriff A. F. Turner of Grand Forks, Sheriff W. E. Hunt of Fargo and Sheriff J. J. Lee of Minot to act as judges, and every detail of the hunt is being carefully worked out. So many inquiries have been received since the first announcement of the affair that it is a certainty that there will be "things doing" in the north country when Reynard is turned loose.

Devils Lake—The action for criminal libel against Editor Bloom of the Journal, this city, and tried in the district court Saturday, resulted in a verdict of acquittal five minutes after the jury retired. This is the first case tried under the Streder law.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—At the term of state circuit court for Bon Homme county, which convened at Tyndall Monday, Judge E. G. Smith of Yankton presiding, the four men arrested on the charge of robbing the bank of Springfield last October will be tried. The prisoners are "Paddy" Carroll, "Jacko" Wilson, Fred Barton and John Burns. The guards have been on constant night duty at the county jail and one every day, to guard against any possible attempt that might be made to escape.

To the vigilance of Chief of Police Zirbes of Aberdeen was due the arrest of Barton and Burns. No more daring robbery is chronicled in the annals of South Dakota criminal history than that for which these four men will be tried. The noise of their operations at the bank attracted several women in a millinery shop across the street, who, pulling the front curtains aside, could see the flash of the successive explosions as the vault and safe were blown to pieces. The presence of two robbers who were on watch outside prevented them from giving the alarm.

The third of the four explosions awakened the daughter of Dr. Glasier, who at once called her father and Earl Craig, who had apartments in the Glasier dwelling. Dr. Glasier looked from his front window, and, seeing the sentry at the corner of the bank and the patrols pass, took in the situation at a glance. Earl Craig was dropped from a back window and he gave the alarm. The fire bell was rung and soon the bank was filled with an armed posse. The robbers escaped in a carriage stolen from Mrs. Greenfield of Avon, with about $5,000 of the bank's funds.

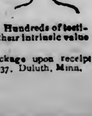

Three of the four prisoners are wanted by the authorities of Miner county, S. D., who charge them with being concerned in the attempted robbery of the First National bank of Howard several weeks before the Springfield robbery.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Last Body of Miners Buried in Newport Shaft Recovered.

Ironwood—The body of James Blynch has been recovered at K shaft of the Newport mine, after having been buried under tons of ore and rock for twenty-four days. This body is the last to be recovered of the eight victims of the cave-in at this shaft on Dec. 23. Since that time crews of miners have worked in six-hour shifts night and day, Sundays and holidays included, to rescue the bodies of the men. Seven of them were recovered during the week after the accident.

Iron Mountain—At a recent meeting of the Baptist State Mission board held in Detroit, the superintendent made a statement that a new church costing $6,000 would soon be erected in Iron Mountain. Many churches throughout the state have promised to contribute liberally to the building fund.

With the secretary of state has been filed the articles of incorporation of the Iron Mountain Gas company with a capital stock of $15,000; the Chippewa Oil & Gas company, Sault Ste. Marie, capital stock, $500,000, and the Chitistone Development company, Houghton, capital stock, $100,000.

From the annual report compiled by Clerk Browning of Dickinson county, it is gathered that on Jan. 1, 1905, there were seventeen bills for divorce pending in the circuit court. During the year five additional bills were filed, making a total of twenty-two suits for separation. During the year seven divorces were granted, one was refused and fifteen are now pending. During the same period 173 marriage licenses were granted. All of which would indicate that marriage is not a failure as far as Dickinson county is concerned.

Ishpeming—Work has been resumed on the Oliver Iron Mining company's new machine shop, the foundation for which was put in early in the fall. The American Bridge & Iron company of Minneapolis has the contract for the erection of the structural iron. Nine experienced men are employed on the job, and more are expected here from the Copper country. The foreman expects to finish his work within a week or ten days, when the company's employes will take charge and complete the structure. All the material is now on the ground.

WHEAT IS VERY WEAK

Decline of Cent or More in All American Markets.

Flax Has Good Advance on Strength in London Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 23.—Wire service was even more restricted today than yesterday, and information on wheat was very scarce. The opening cables showed Liverpool unchanged, but the closing was not received. In American markets wheat was very heavy and declined steadily all morning. The May option lost 1c in Duluth and New York, 1¼ in Chicago, 1-1½c in Minneapolis and ¾c in Winnipeg.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 149 against 74 last year, and at Minneapolis 225 against 259 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 374 against 333 last year.

The visible supply of wheat last year increased 1,941,000 bus, and is now 48,962,000 bus against 39,383,000 bus last year.

The visible supply last week increased 462,000 bus and is now 14,273,000 bus against 11,514,000 bus last year.

Corn was weaker, being ⅜c lower for the May option in Chicago. May oats fell 1¼-⅜c.

There was more interest in wheat in the local market today than there has been for some time past. May wheat opened ⅛c lower at 85⅞c asked, and fell to 84¾c at 9:44, went to 84¾-⅞c at 10:04 and fell to 84¾-⅞c at 1:04 and closed at 84¾c, a loss of 1c over yesterday. Although it was inactive at the opening, there was some trading in July wheat. The high price was 85⅝c and the low 85¼c. The closing price was 85¼c, a loss of 1c over yesterday.

There was quite a flurry in flax at the opening today, and steady trading continued throughout the session, with stronger prices. Flax was 2c higher in London. May flax opened 1¾c higher at $1.19 and advanced to $1.20¾, fell to $1.20, advanced to $1.21, fell to $1.20½ and advanced to $1.20¾, closing at that price and showing a gain of 2¾c over yesterday. July flax opened 1½c higher at $1.20¼, advanced to $1.21⅛, dropped to $1.21¼, advanced to $1.22 and fell to $1.21¼. The closing price was $1.21½, a gain of 2¾c over yesterday. September flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.18, advanced to $1.21, fell to $1.20¾ and closed at $1.20, a gain of 2¾c over yesterday.

Oats were ⅝c off and the other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Large Increase in Visible Supply Causes Depression in Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The wheat market steadily declined all day. A large increase in the visible supply of wheat was recorded, the amount being nearly 2,000,000 bus, and this caused greater weakness in prices. The low point for May was reached at the close, which was 86¼c. The net loss for May was 1¼c.

The corn market closed weak along with wheat. The low point for May was reached at 45c. The close showed May at 45c, a decline of ⅝c.

Grain Gossip.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Latest report from the weather bureau shows the keen edge of the cold snap is past, with better weather in sight. This moderate weather with increase in the visible and indifferent cables tends to give the market a heavy appearance which brought out considerable selling. There must be a large short interest at the present time, which should bring a sharp rally, but any break below this level will be only temporary.

Flax—The market seems to be reacting from the recent break, and prices this morning had a strong undertone. Selling was very limited, foreign cables favorable, and one wire from Argentina confirms the various damage reports from that country, although no definite figures are given. There were large acceptances over night in the United Kingdom. Receipts at Duluth this morning were just a trifle heavy, but that fact seemed to have no effect on the course of the market and it seems to be unlimited and offerings scarce. This is a good, broad, healthy market, with present prices offering great inducement for investment, and we consider purchases made at this time, especially on any recessions from this level, a good business risk.

NOT ON THE BILL.

Pittsburg Dispatch: He was a stout, pudgy individual, liable to be irritated early in the morning, evidently subject to indigestion, and he walked into the dining room in anything but good grace. The hotel was new and the prices not mellowed. Their stiff front "riled" the guest still more.

Turning to the freshly imported, white shirted mummy at his side, he said:

"Haven't you people any conscience here?"

Getting no answer, his face grew red, and he blurted out:

"Conscience! Conscience! Have you no conscience—conscience—conscience here?"

"Eef eet ees not on ze bills eet ess charge extra for," suavely replied the importation.

CIVIC PRIDE.

Last Sunday we chanced to count at one time nine cows around the square, four at one wagon, eating clover hay, three helping themselves at another where some horses were feeding, and the others trotting toward the other assemblies of kine, says the Ava, Mo., Democrat. Monday we heard some one on the streets yelling as if driving a herd of cattle to market, but upon looking out of the window we learned that it was only an old gray whiskered farmer driving the town cows away from his wagon. Other times we have seen women out in the streets throwing rocks at the pesky brutes in order to protect their wagons. If you have never noticed this bad condition, just give it attention some Saturday, and see how the cows go from wagon to wagon and clean up everything in reach. Ava needs to "hit um shined." She is getting big enough to have callers, and if we expect to make a favorable impression we must polish up. But, for the sake of the farmers, something ought to be done with those darned old cows.

WHO HE WAS.

Boston Herald: The colored janitor of one of the biggest and best known banking houses of New York selected Old Orchard Beach as the place to spend his holiday. Before starting he asked permission to wear the uniform which decorated his manly form during his hours of service, on condition that he did not wear his "signifiers."

He was not long in surrounding himself with a coterie of admiring friends. He was nothing if not magniloquent. "Why," said he one afternoon to the crowd, "you folks don' hab any idea ob wat we does. We took de whole of de Spanish-American loan, and den when de Jap war come on we just took a half o' de whole bizness, 50,000,000 yen—dats $25,000,000—and now, when de whole affair is over, we'll take de whole ob de Japan loan, and we'll put on de market most ob de Russian loan, a hundred million kopecks—yessir, a hundred million kopecks."

"But," said the butter-in, "who are you, anyhow? You seem to be puttin' on a lotter lugs. Who are you, anyhow?"

"Who am I? Fo' de Lawd, didn't ye ever hear ob de great bankin' house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. ob New Yawk? Didn't ye?"

"Yes, yas; dat's all right, but who be you?"

"Me? Why, I'se Coon."

Are you usually suspended "between the hammer and the anvil?"—the hammer of too-big-expenses and the anvil of too-small-income? There are many little ways in which, by Herald want advertising, you can reduce the size and weight of the hammer and increase the size and resiliency of the anvil.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Sharp Decline in Prices Soon After the Opening Dealings.

Heavy Buying Resumed After Noon and Recoveries Made.

New York, Jan. 23.—The stock market opened active and irregular. The iron, copper and lead stocks were all lower and the southwestern railroads also showed depression. Anaconda lost 2 points, Canadian Pacific 1½, Lead 1⅛, Atchison about a point and Texas Pacific a large fraction. Reading was rushed up 1½ on running sales, Northern Pacific gained 1½, St. Paul 1¼, Denver & Rio Grande a point and Pacific Coast a large fraction. Reading lost most of its gain within the first few minutes of trading.

Concern over the unseasonable weather prevalent in crop regions and the heavy selling of Reading, which drove it from 164 to 161¾, accounted for the sharp dip in prices, after the opening dealings. St. Paul and Northern Pacific surrendered their gains. Supporting orders and vigorous resumption of pool operations in various specialties rallied the market substantially.

Liquidation in Amalgamated Copper which carried it to a point below yesterday started prices on the down grade again just before 11 o'clock.

The market became feverish after 12 o'clock. Heavy buying was resumed in all quarters again, reading showing a recovery of over 2 points and other favorites a point or more.

Some sustaining effect was shown from the rise in Colorado Fuel of 7¼, Denver & Rio Grande 3¼, the preferred 3. Speculative liquidation was renewed in spots, but prices were held well above the previous low point, except for Reading, which dipped to 153½. Shorts were waiting to cover and there was a vigorous rally. The closing was very active and firm.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Boston Herald: J. Weston, of Oxford county, Maine, tells the following story of a neighbor of his, who had the misfortune to fall from a scaffold in his barn and fracture several ribs.

After a long and tedious illness he was able to walk around, and he wanted to show a friend how he met with the accident. They went to the barn, and he laboriously climbed to the scaffold.

"I was standing right here, and started to cross, at just this place," he said, "and when I put my foot on this board, down I went, and—hellity blazes, here I go again."

It is needless to say that the "last state of that man was worse than the first."

SILAS AND SILAGE.

Boston Herald: A few years ago while I was living in Lebanon, N. H., there was a certain Mr. Bagley there who was noted for trying to use big words, and also for getting his remarks somewhat twisted. On a certain occasion he had been to a farmers' meeting at Hanover, and, while returning, one of his neighbors drove up behind him, and the conversation turned on crops.

His neighbor asked: "How is your hay crop this season?"

Bagley replied: "Well, my hay crop is rather short, but I shall get my cows through the winter all right, for I shall have two solos full of muellage."

WARSHIPS SET SAIL

Two French Cruisers Leave Trinidad Presumably for Venezuela.

Naval Demonstration Not Considered Violation of Monroe Doctrine.

Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, Jan. 23.—The French cruisers Desaix and Jurien de La Gravier sailed from here today, presumably for La Guaira, Venez.

Paris, Jan. 23.—President Loubet presided today at a cabinet council held in the Elysee palace at which Premier Rouvier announced that he had received a communication from Ambassador Jesserand to the effect that the United States does not consider a French naval demonstration against Venezuela to be a violation of the Monroe doctrine.

France, it is pointed out, thus has her hands free, but the situation is unchanged for the moment, as the council will not take decisive action until the report of M. Taigny, the former charge d'affaires at Caracas is received.

The foreign office has received confirmation of the press reports that the dean of the diplomatic corps and other ministers at Caracas have unsuccessfully demanded explanations from the Venezuelan government, with reference to their position after the Taigny incident.

HEAR FROM THE DEWEY.

Drydock Was in Latitude 28, Longitude 44:6, on Saturday.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Rear Admiral Dunlap, commandant of the naval station at San Juan, Porto Rico, under date of yesterday sent the following cablegram to the navy department regarding the dry dock Dewey: "Later information from Maine gives position of Dewey at midnight, 20th inst., as latitude 28 deg.; longitude 44 deg. 6 min. Hosley reports Caesar buried seaman, dead of beri beri."

FAVORABLE REPORT

On the Hamilton Joint Statehood Bill is Submitted.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Representative Hamilton (Mich.) chairman of the house committee on territories today submitted a favorable report on the Hamilton joint statehood bill, which provides for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory as the state of Oklahoma and provides joint statehood for New Mexico and Arizona under the name of Arizona.

MARRIOTT WINS RACE.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 23.—Marriott in a steamer won the one-mile race for the Sir Thomas Dewar trophy in 33 seconds. Edrino was second in 38 seconds.

BROKERS ASSIGN.

Pittsburg, Jan. 23.—E. D. Gartner & Co., stock brokers and members of the Pittsburg stock exchange, made an assignment today. The liabilities will exceed $200,000. Samuel A. Steele of this city was appointed assignee.

RAGPICKER'S HOARD.

London Daily Globe: The little town of Brailleul, in the north of France, has within the last few days been the scene of a singular incident. The premises of a petty marine store dealer had become such a public nuisance to the neighborhood from accumulations of rags of several years' standing that strong complaints were made to the police, and as the owner refused to mitigate the nuisance or to deliver up his keys, the place had to be forcibly entered and cleared.

The contents, in an unspeakable condition of offensive decay, filled twelve carts and underneath all the rotting mass, which was evidently there to serve the double purpose of hiding place and scarecrow, were two great leathern sacks weighing 160 pounds and stuffed full of money, mainly silver, though there was some copper. The old hoarder is almost broken hearted at his secret having been penetrated.

TURN ABOUT.

Los Angeles Times: "The late George W. Catt, who gave his body for dissection, was a sufferer from ill health for many years," said a physician. "Traveling here and there he made almost as many medical friends as Robert Louis Stevenson did.

"Mr. Catt once told me of an odd story about a physician in Paris.

"This physician called at a business man's office one day and said:

"'Pardon, Monsieur X., but, in settling my quarterly account yesterday, you gave me this bad 100-franc note.'

"The business man took the note and examined it. It was bad, undoubtedly. He handed it back to the physician.

"'I'm sorry,' he said. 'I made the mistake unintentionally, believe me. But it's too late to rectify it now.'

"The physician started. 'Too late?' he exclaimed hotly. 'What do you mean? Must I suffer for your mistake?'

"'Why not?' said the other calmly. 'I suffer for yours. And did you ever take anything off your bill in consequence?'"

AN AWKWARD ERROR.

An American at Gibraltar entertained Charles Dana Gibson at dinner in the late fall at the Bristol, says the Los Angeles Times.

When Mr. Gibson rose to reply to a toast, he was a little embarrassed.

"I have not the gift of oratory," he began, "and that is awkward. Indeed, to be deficient in anything is awkward, isn't it? It is especially awkward to be deaf.

"At a dinner at Dark Harbor last summer a deaf old man sat beside a young and beautiful girl.

"'Do you like bananas?' this girl said to the old man during the first course, in a loud, sweet voice.

"He, however, misunderstood her in his deafness. He thought she had said 'pajamas.' And he replied:

"'No, I like the old-fashioned night shirts best.'"

HOLMES ON TEA.

Boston Herald: This story was told by Oliver Wendell Holmes: When the lion of the occasion was leaving the hostess, who had put the cream of her acquaintance on parade and rather expected effusive admiration from the great man, she said, with a confidential smile: "Well, Dr. Holmes, what do you think of afternoon tea?"

He answered in these graphic words. "It is giggle, gabble, gobble and git."

THE ODD EVENTS OF LAST YEAR

One Iowa Home Broken Up by the Pancake Question.

New York, Jan. 23.—Those who may think that life is becoming unduly monotonous and that society is petrifying into a cold and dreary formalism should consider a few of the odd events and the freak record smashers of 1905, as observed and set down by the chroniclers of the period. The incidents cited are but samples and might be multiplied indefinitely. Who can be melancholy when such things are going on?

For instance, one of those rare June days that the poets tell about, a Philadelphia woman willed her sister $250 on condition that she would always allow their father to have "all the cigars he wants and also all the vests he likes to wear."

Pittsburg furnished several episodes that livened things up a bit. A brave woman in that city wore hoopskirts through the streets, causing a crowd to assemble, which impeded traffic and had to be dispersed by the police. Another Pittsburg woman, finding that a telephone company was preparing to string wires about her house and had already dug six holes for poles, became exceedingly wroth. Having six children, she deposited a child in each hole and then defied the workmen to proceed.

Pancakes broke up an Iowa home in the snappy days of February when flapjacks are supposed to hit the right spot. At Sanborn, Mrs. Carrie Fields got a divorce from Dr. L. S. Fields because the husband did not like her make of pancakes and ridiculed them. She testified that the expression on the doctor's face while eating the cakes was such that it might work permanent injury to her health.

The high-water mark in family quarrels was reached in Kansas City. One raw January morning found Mrs. Theresa Schujul and her husband John in the police court, where judicial aid was invoked to shake John loose from his domestic moorings. Theresa had given him $100 to leave her and never return, but he kept his promise only till the money was spent. Then the wife confided to the court that she and John were married in Germany fourteen years ago and had quarreled every day since, which means a total of more than 5,000 quarrels.

The champion ice cream eater of 1905 was not, as many might suppose, a sentimental young woman, but a husky street car conductor of West Pennsylvania. A wager of $7 and a Gargantuan appetite inspired Ray Vincent to the gastronomic feat of hiding away fifteen plates of ice cream, a pork sandwich and a glass of milk to top off with, all within two hours and without a subsequent funeral notice.

THE FINEST MAN IN THE WORLD

Was Charles T. Yerkes, Says Relative Mentioned in Will.

New Yor, Jan. 23.—Ethel T. Yerkes, grandniece of Charles T. Yerkes and beneficiary under his will, recently returned to this country from Dresden, where she has been studying music.

Accompanied by her mother, she came back to this country to visit the tomb of her uncle, and she is greatly pleased that she was bequeathed the life interest in a $100,000 trust fund.

"Uncle was just the finest, greatest-hearted man in the world!" she exclaimed.

She is a brunet, though not of the pronounced type. Her hair, of chestnut brown, clings in ringlets about a forehead of marble whiteness. Her large blue eyes look keenly about as if always in search of something interesting. She has a small mouth through which at times she displays even, beautiful teeth. Her features are small and regular. Everything about her manner, her attire and her personality impresses an observer as that of an up-to-date, vivacious American girl. She seems not more than 19 years old and at times she acts and speaks in an exceedingly girlish way.

"I knew Mrs. Yerkes," she said, "and I have visited her in the beautiful home in Fifth avenue. In fact, I stayed there with Mrs. Yerkes and my uncle for a long time. I also met Emilie Griggsby abroad. I never visited her in her home in New York, but I have seen her several times in London and saw her only last summer in Paris. She is a remarkable handsome woman but she lives so quietly and unostentiously in London that I saw nothing to indicate that she was worth $1,000,000. I was not, however, very intimately acquainted with her.

"My uncle provided generously for me. Why shouldn't he? He was my uncle and took an interest in me several years ago. He told me that he would look after my education and I should not want for funds. I went to Dresden where I studied the violin and German. I intend to keep up my music, as it was a keen wish of my uncle's that I should. I shall continue my work on the violin. Not because I have any professional aspirations. I have not enough talent for that. As for grand opeda, I have no voice.

"It is untrue that I was in a minstrel show several years ago before my uncle took me up." The girl's eyes filled with tears at this. "In 1902 I went with Nat Goodwin in his company in 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' Then I did aspire to go on the stage, and it was against the wishes of my mother that I went with the Goodwin company. I finally persuaded her to let me go. But now my ideas have changed."

NO ANSWER.

Kentok Hori, the Japanese Buddhist priest, was attacking Mohammedanism in Chicago, says the Los Angeles Times.

"The Mohammedans," he said, "answer inquirers' questions with smooth lies. These lies are only on the surface plausible. The slightest reflection shows their tremendous falsity.

"The Mohammedans answer questions as I once heard a middle-aged man answer a boy.

"The two stood before a steamship office, regarding the globe that revolved in the window.

"'Do you mean to tell me,' said the boy, 'that the world is as round as that?'

"'I do,' the man answered.

"'Then,' said the boy, 'I can't understand why the people on the other side don't fall off.'

"The man sneered.

"'You fatigue me,' he said wearily.

ONLY THREE ARE LEFT

Duluth and Superior Rinks Fight for International Trophy.

Last of the Bonspiel Events Nears Final Round.

Two Duluth rinks and one from Superior are left to fight it out for the International trophy, the last event remaining unfinished in the Northwestern Curling association bonspiel.

The D. W. Stocking rink of Duluth had an easy time with the A. K. Smith rink of Superior this morning, and the men from across the bay were defeated by the one-sided score of 15 to 5. Only eleven ends were played, the last end not being necessary, as it was impossible for the score to be tied in one end.

The victory put the Stocking rink into the second round against the J. C. Wall rink of Milwaukee. As Mr. Wall and his curlers had gone home, the game was forfeited to the Stocking rink, which thus goes into the semi-finals against the Macrae rink of Duluth. The winner of this match will meet the Chisholm rink of Superior which is already in the final round of the event. These two games will probably be played off this afternoon and this evening.

Both Stocking and Macrae have already won one trophy, and the Chisholm rink has one second prize to its credit.

The last of the visitors had left the city at noon today, and with the exception of the two games still remaining to be played in the International event, the big bonspiel is now a thing of the past.

THIRD CLASS PRIZE.

Horses With Mark of 2:40 or Slower Will Also Race on Ice.

Horses with a mark of 2:40 or slower will also be given a chance in the weekly races which are being held on the ice at the foot of Twenty-first avenue west.

Three prizes have been offered for a race which is open to all horses with a mark of 2:40 or slower. The first prize is a string of sleigh bells given by the Kelley Hardware company; a pair of quarter boots by J. H. Constantine; and a whip by W. W. Turner.

The race will start at 2 o'clock, and all entries should be sent in to Capt. D. E. Stevens before that time. The committee in charge of the races is composed of Capt. D. E. Stevens, E. L. Toomey, James Henderson, R. P. Dowse and Dr. John McKay.

The second race in the series for the speedier animals will also be held next Saturday.

Norlin Wins at Pool.

Norlin defeated Mergener at the Ideal pool hall last evening by the score of 100 to 55 in the match game in progress there. Norlin will meet Westberg tonight.

GOES TO CHICAGO.

Julius Schneider, General Manager of Panton & White Co., Resigns.

Julius Schneider, general manager of Panton & White company Glass Block store, has resigned and is about to remove to Chicago to accept the position of advertising manager of the largest department store in the world.

Mr. Schneider has been with the Panton & White company three and a half years during which time he has advanced from the position of advertising manager to the executive control of the entire establishment. He has made warm personal and business friends who will keenly regret his decision to leave the city.

Mrs. Schneider has been quietly active in church, social and club circles and her ability and tact have won her many warm friends who will regret exceedingly to see her withdraw from the circles where she made herself so welcome.

Mr. Schnider and family will leave Duluth in about two or three weeks.

FRENCH LOVE LETTERS.

Frenchmen are generally held to be—I cannot say perfect lovers, as Mr. Sutro understands them—but skillful lovers, writes M. Tessier in the London Daily Mail.

Now, everybody knows that letters play a great part in lovemaking, and that more than one woman has been captivated by the poetic and romantic writing of the man she loved.

An amorous Frenchman, writing to Suzanne, for instance, will begin his letter with "Ma petite Suzanne cherie," "Ma mignonne adoree," "Mon petite chat" (cat here has not the same sense here as the English "cat,") or "My sugary Suzanne." Rat, poulet (chicken), canard (duck), but never "goose," are the pet names usually employed.

At the end of his letter, in which he has sworn to love her and be faithful to her forever, or has threatened to commit suicide by drinking a mortal mixture of peppermint and water, the amorous Frenchman will "embrace" Suzanne "with all the strength of his soul," or "devour her with kisses, or send her "a thousand caresses from her wicked X——," and poor Suzanne will immediately answer and yield because she will be afraid of being the cause of a suicide, and above all, because she finds that after all he is a nice fellow.

Ah! if we were allowed to have a look into the letters addressed "poste restante" in Paris, we should be edified, as without exaggeration six out of ten letters sent to all the postoffices in the gay city are love messages.

It is extraordinary how many kisses the postmen carry! It is a kind of modern torture of Tantalus for them.

In France, where breach of promise cases are almost unknown, people have not the same opportunities of amusing themselves over love missives read in court and printed in the newspapers, as often happens here. But a compensation may be found in the "Petite Correspondence" of certain French journals.

The lines printed there are sometimes extraordinary, and it is easy to divine what exciting love adventures or passionate dramas lurk behind these public communications.

A few examples will prove that I do not exaggerate. The following lines appeared in a Parisian paper, and I translate them literally:

"I suffer too much! I adore you, and I cannot think you love another man. Your letter gave me confidence in our future happiness. I am mad! I shall love you forever! If you are happy forget me; but I shall always be yours if you are in trouble. Despairing kiss from your slave.

"X."

Another:

"My darling little love, my golden idol, my all! Thy silence makes me suffer. Art thou ill or unable to write? I want to know what has become of thee, and when thou shalt come and embrace thy loving fool—Rene!"

Fancy what must be the private correspondence of such lovers. It ought to be kept as documents of the history of humanity.

The Riviera being an ideal place for love making, one can sometimes find astounding declarations of love printed in the papers there.

Has not the sun of the South badly struck the brain of the man who wrote the following lines?

"Ideal and captivating unknown goddess whom I meet every morning on the Promenade des Anglais, when will you allow me to lay at your feet my desperate heart—that heart that beats for you alone, that has been bewitched by the unspeakable charm of your eyes, as blue as the immense Mediterranean? The Gentleman With the Gray Top Hat."

Imagine the shock this unknown goddess got when she opened the paper and happened to light on this effusion—after her prosaic breakfast.

Whether this other "petite correspondence" can be called a love message is a matter of opinion:

"Contran, 18 C. D.—I went yesterday evening to the rendezvous. I waited for one hour and a half. I thought you were ill, and was in a state of extreme anxiety when I saw you driving in Mme. M.'s carriage. It's very nice of you, indeed. I know now what your love is worth. Don't endeavor to see me again, because I am • • • disgusted of you. LOUISE."

The clerk who received this advertisement must have enjoyed it thoroughly, although it might have been at the expense of poor Louise.

RAILROADS

TO AVOID THE CRUSH

Stranger is Afraid the Tickets Will be All Gone.

So Bought Two, Thinking it Was a Bargain Sale.

A man entered the Great Northern city ticket office and asked concerning the rates to Colorado points. The desired information was given, and he was told that if he would wait two weeks he would be able to take advantage of a rate which, in comparison with the regular fare, appeared ridiculously low.

The stranger was greatly interested at once. "Can't I get one of the tickets now?" he asked.

"But you will not be able to use it for two weeks yet," said the ticket man.

"I can buy it now, though, can't I?"

"Certainly, but you can just as well wait."

"I'd rather take it now; I'm afraid they may all be gone if I wait."

"There is no danger of that; if the supply runs short we know where we can get some more."

"I know, but still there might be a hitch and they would all be sold out. I think I'll come in tomorrow and get one."

"Just as you say," answered the obliging ticket man.

Next day the stranger came in again, bringing a friend with him. Evidently he went on the principle that buying railroad tickets is much like buying tickets to the theater—the sooner one gets them the better seat one will get, and the better satisfaction one will receive, especially if he attraction is one of any very great importance.

"Are there any of those cheap tickets to Colorado left?" he began.

"Why, yes, we have a few," said the man behind the counter.

"Can you spare me two? I want to take my friend along."

"But I am not sure that I will want to go when the time comes," protested the friend.

"Of course you will want to go. When will you get such another chance? Besides, I am paying for the tickets."

"But what if I find I can't go?"

"You've got to go, the tickets may be all gone if we wait until you decide."

"I am sure we will be able to accommodate you up to the last minute," chipped in the ticket man.

"That's what they all say, but when the time comes they fall down lots of times. Give me two tickets now."

The railroad man did as requested, and the two left the office, the friend still protesting that he might be unable to use the ticket purchased for him.

ISHPEMING LOW RATES.

Will Be In Effect Because of Ski Tournament.

Very low rates, less than one fare for the round trip, will be in effect over the South Shore road on account of the national ski tournament to be held at Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 22. It is expected that a large delegation from Duluth, larger than at any time in the past, will attend the tournament, because of the fact that interest has been aroused locally by the Duluth club.

A good many will also pass through Duluth to attend from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Red Wing. All these cities have flourishing clubs, and probably a special car will be run through from the Twin Cities for their especial benefit. The total attendance, it is believed, will be far greater than it was last year. People will be there from all parts of the country. The slide has been lengthened and it is expected that all existing American ski records will be broken.

WHO IS BACK OF IT?

Question Concerning the Denver, Yellowstone & Pacific Road.

In Western railroad circles it is believed that either the Rock Island or the Burlington is behind the Denver, Yellowstone & Pacific, projected from Denver to the Pacific coast, the preponderance of opinion favoring the Burlington.

Surveyors are at work on the line in the vicinity of Platteville, Colo., where the Union Pacific is to be crossed, this being the first crossing out of Denver. The new road is to run thence to Fort Collins and northwest through Colorado and Wyoming to Salt Lake City, and from there on an air line to San Francisco. The surveyors have finished their second survey out of Denver as far as Fort Collins, and committees of business men from smaller towns along the route have made representations to the officials of the new road, asking that it run through their towns.

The Burlington is arranging to push its present line in Wyoming to Salt Lake City, while its direct competitors, the Northwestern and Milwaukee, are preparing to build on to the coast.

New Trade Mark.

Herewith is shown the new trade mack of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway. It will be used henceforth wherever such a trade mark usually finds a place and will replace the old "Marquette Route" sign as fast as circumstances will permit. It is believed that the new trade mark answers the purpose better than the other, which had no special significance, beyond the fact that it informed the public that a town by the name of Marquette was to be found on the road. Mart Adson, general passenger agent of the South Shore, designed the new mark.

Railroad Personals.

Charles Schaffer, traveling passenger agent for the South Shore road, left last night for Boston and New York on a business trip.

T. H. Smith, of Minneapolis, traveling passenger agent for the Three I system, is in the city today.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, ST. LOUIS COUNTY—SS.
In Probate Court, Special Term, January 15th, 1906.
In the Matter of the Estate of William L. Hoffecker, Deceased:
On receiving and filing the petition of Elmina A. Hoffecker of the City of Elizabeth, County of Union, New Jersey, representing, among other things, that William L. Hoffecker, late of the County of Union in the State of New Jersey, on the 18th day of March, A. D. 1902, at the County of Union, New Jersey, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of Union County, New Jersey, at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this County of St. Louis, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to Elmina A. Hoffecker granted;
It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said court on Tuesday, the 13th day of February, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office, in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County.
Ordered Further, That notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County, and that a copy of this order be served upon the County Treasurer of St. Louis County not less than ten days prior to said day of hearing.
Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 15th day of January, A. D. 1906.
By the Court,
J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.

CHINA'S RULERS.

The world knows as little of the great men of China as it does of that mysterious country itself, says a writer in the London Bystander. We have just received most interesting particulars of the three men recognized in diplomacy as leaders of China in thought and action. They are Chang Chih Tung, viceroy of Hunan and Kupeh; Yuan Shih Kai, who succeeded Li Hung Chang as viceroy of Chibli, and Isen Ch'un Hsuen, viceroy of Canton and Kuangsi. The first viceroy is the first scholar in China. He is about to join the Grand Council of Nonogenarians at Pekin. He was a contemporary force with Li Hung Chang, and it may be said that his day is over. The greatest statesman in China today is Yuan Shih Kai. He is the great advocate of the policy, "Japan, the friend of China." Moreover, he is soldier no less than statesman. For years he has been massing an army of foreign-drilled troops which may be relied upon to settle any future crisis which may arise in internal affairs. But stronger by far than these is the viceroy of Canton and Kuangsi.

LIFE BOATS LOADED WITH WOMEN AND CHILDREN SMASHED AGAINST SIDE OF SHIP, DROWNING SCORES

They Were Attempting to Leave the Wreck of the Steamer Valencia.

Steamship Went Ashore During the Night on Rocks Near Cape Beale.

Many More Are on Doomed Vessel Awaiting the Arrival of Assistance.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 24.—The steamer Valencia, Capt. Johnson of the Pacific Coast Steamship company, with ninety-four passengers on board and a crew of sixty was wrecked to eastward of Capt Beale on the Vancouver coast early Tuesday morning, with a heavy loss of life, greater than that of any other disaster that has occurred near here since the terrible loss of life following the collision of the ship Orpheus with the steamer Pacific when en route from Victoria to Portland. The survivors who have reached Cape Beale consisting of a boatswain and five seamen sent to secure assistance report that at least fifty persons were drowned alongside the steamer when boats loaded with women and children smashed against the steamer's side soon after they were lowered from the vessel. When they left over 100 persons were huddled on the saloon deck of the steamer which was then partly submerged with the inrolling sea washing over the main deck. A southeast gale was blowing with the wind whistling through the cordage of the wrecked vessel at a velocity of over forty miles an hour and a high sea was breaking against the hull, sending spray high over it and huge seas bounded on deck, threatening to break up the wreck. Unless the several steamers which have been secured for assistance can arrive in time to save those who remained on the wreck, it is doubtful if any of them will reach shore for a landing in such a place is extremely difficult if at all possible.

The Valencia replacing the recently disabled steamer City of Puebla, sailed from San Francisco at 11 a. m. Saturday. This was the only clear day and from Saturday evening Capt. Johnson and his officers had to navigate by means of dead reckoning.

As the Valencia was foundering as a result of her impact with the rocks the only possible chance to save any of those on board, was to pull the vessel ashore again with the hope, scant though it was, of landing those on board on the rocky coast.

The loss of life was awful when the boats were lowered.

Two boats filled with women and children were swept against the side of the steamer, smashed and wrecked, all those in the boats being swept into the sea and drowned.

Seattle, Jan. 24.—General Manager Pearce of the Pacific Coast Steamship company, said last night that the Valencia is insured for approximately $150,000, of which amount three-fourths is carried by English underwriters and the remainder in San Francisco.

Mr. Pearce said the first effort of the company would be to render aid to the survivors of the disaster.

SEATTLE PASSENGERS

Who Were Passengers on the Ill-Fated Steamer Valencia.

Seattle, Jan. 24.—Among the passengers on the Valencia, bound for Seattle, are Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Bunker and two children of San Francisco. Mr. Bunker was recently appointed assistant superintendent of Seattle schools and was on his way north to enter upon his duties. His home has been in San Francisco. Miss Van Wyck, another San Francisco passenger, is a sister of Mrs. W. A. Petos, wife of a prominent Seattle attorney. She was to visit her sister who is ill at her home in this city.

E. T. Fondo, another Seattle passenger, is a commercial traveler whose home is in this city.

Charles Samuels, a saw cutter, is also a Seattle man. He has been in San Francisco on a pleasure trip.

W. Lombard is returning from a pleasure trip to San Francisco.

DEADLY RECORD

For Loss of Life Has the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Portland, Or., Jan. 24.—Few places in the world have such a record of marine catastrophes as has the deadly "West coast," as it is known, of Vancouver Island, which has caused the destruction of fifty-six vessels and cost 711 lives within forty years. Within the month past the west coast has wrecked the Valencia and the ships King David and Pass of Melfort, seven lives having been lost on the King David and twenty-six on the Pass of Melfort. Besides those, wrecks in which there have been more than ten lives lost according to the list compiled by the Morning Oregonian are:

Bark John Enright in 1867, 14 lives lost; steamer Pacific in 1875, 26 lives; ship Grace Darling in 1878, 15 lives; bark Malleville in 1882, 20 lives; ship Sierra Nevada in 1886, 13 lives; ship Harvey Mills in 1886, 18 lives; bark El Dorado in 1887, 15 lives; ship St. Stephen in 1887, 22 lives lost; ship Ivanhoe in 1890, 23 lives; steamer Mont Serra in 1894, 20 lives; steamer Keweenaw in 1894, 24 lives; schooner Jane Grey in 1898, 24 lives; British warship Condor in 1902, 89 lives; schooner Triumph in 1904, 32 lives, and ship Lamorna in 1904, 26 lives.

DAMAGED BY FLOOD

Severe Cloudburst in the Southeastern Part of West Virginia.

People Forced to Flee by Sudden Appearance of Water.

Weston, W. Va., Jan. 24.—A heavy wind and rain storm resembling a water spout passed over the southeastern portion of this state yesterday, flooding Cherry, Holly and Elk rivers, and carrying away bridges, houses and many million feet of valuable timber. In Richwood the water rose five feet in the houses on Oakford avenue and three feet in the waiting room of the passenger depot. The total loss will be heavy.

The water came up so suddenly that men, women and children had to wade waist deep out of their homes to the mountain top. The Cherry river Lumber company's yards were under water.

At Curtin, two railroad bridges on the Pardee & Curtin Lumber company's road were washed out.

A barbershop, with all its furniture and tools went down with the current. Over twelve miles of the Holly river and Addison railroad was completely washed away.

A report that fifteen lives were lost was not confirmed.

HUSBAND CHASES WIFE.

Woman Wins Exciting Race Through Sioux City With Child.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 24.—Cracking his whip like a Western stagedriver, "Spieler" Jenkins, in the employ of the Sioux City Transfer company, ran a race of five miles through Sioux City and across the Missouri river bridge into Nebraska, to enable Mrs. Grazelle Babcock of Ida Grove to kidnap her baby. Close behind, in another cab, followed the husband, who had already chased his wife fifty miles from Ida Grove. Each driver had been given big fees to win the race and down the streets they went, careening from side to side, and then across the long bridge. But in Nebraska Jenkins distanced his pursuer and concealed the woman and baby in a deserted house. Later, after her husband had gone, she returned to the city and left again after giving instructions for a divorce suit.

FINE SCHOOL BUILDING BURNS AT SIOUX FALLS.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 24.—The Lowell school burned last night. Loss $60,000; insurance $22,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin. A man was seen running from the building a few minutes before the fire.

FRENCHMEN ANNOYED

By Rumors of Alleged Hesitation to Attack Castro.

Will Demand the Fullest Satisfaction for Insults.

Paris, Jan. 24.—Ministerial circles here are much annoyed over the published reports relative to France's alleged hesitation and nervousness regarding the Venezuelan question. A highly placed official of the foreign office today protested energetically against statements made on the subject, saying:

"France has always been, and still is, determined to obtain the fullest satisfaction for past and present affronts from Venezuela. She, however, will select her own time for action, and will not stir up the wasps' nest to which Castro has shown the way until her general policy leaves her free to do so."

To a question whether a blockade has been ordered, a direct negative was given.

Interest in the Venezuelan affair continues to decrease. The press generally is of the opinion that the question must stand over indefinitely.

Washington, Jan. 24.—So far as informal inquiry on the subject has gone France has ground for the conviction that she will encounter no opposition by any of the other nations having claims against Venezuela in the execution of the naval program which she intends to initiate against that country. Great Britain and Italy, it was believed all along would offer no objection, but the news that Germany is not disposed to side with Castro against France is regarded in diplomatic circles here as encouraging for the French plans. The ejectment of M. Taigny from La Guaira is now taken by France as her main basis for action against Venezuela.

CROOK ARRESTED.

Has Made Over $25,000 in Two Years From Victims.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 24.—Having made $25,000 in two years on a scheme similar to the green goods game, E. M. Behr, an art works importer, was arrested here yesterday by federal officers under the direction of Postoffice Inspector E. E. Frazer of La Crosse. He drew a check for $750 for cash bail and was released to appear before the grand jury. Behr advertised "steel engravings" in a manner which indicated that he had "green goods" to sell. Then he sent cheap pictures at high prices and received from $5 to $45 from each victim and did $25,000 worth of business through the mail here, exclusive of what was transacted by express.

MASTERS AND PILOTS MEET.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The Grand Harbor of masters and pilots of steam vessels of the United States, the supreme body of the steamboat men's association of the United States is holding its annual session here. Delegates representing the steamboat men of every important port in the country and from St. Michaels, Alaska, and Honolulu are present.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON PRAISES THE WORK OF THE CAPITOL COMMISSION IN CONSTRUCTING STATE BUILDING

Makes Public His Findings on Report of Public Examiner's Investigation.

None of Commission Profited Through Contract or Building Material.

Gives Special Praise to Commissioner Seabury for His Share in Work.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson today made public the report of the state public examiner's investigation into the accounts of the capitol commission. Governor Johnson, in a statement of his findings and conclusions, says:

"This examination was ordered because no complete examination had ever been made and the commission having expended $4,500,000, or thereabouts, and their work having practically been consummated, it was certainly proper that an investigation be made that the public might know how the funds placed at their disposal by a state legislature had been disbursed.

"In a work extending over a period of ten years, and in the disbursement of so large a sum of money, an examination would naturally reveal something which might be criticised, and yet my investigation of this report leads me first of all to the conclusion that there was no collusion between the contractors and the commission by which the latter profited to the extent of a single dollar.

"The purchase of fuel seems to me to have been improperly made. Large quantities of coal were purchased without any contract or competition whatever, as provided by law, and as the report states the prices were not as low as some of the prevailing team-delivered prices charged other concerns in St. Paul. The public examiner personally informs me that the closest possible investigation was made of the books of the fuel companies from which this fuel was purchased and nothing there reveals the slightest possible suggestion that any member of the commission profited in any way by this transaction.

"The contract for the elevators and for the fire-proofing seem to have been improperly let, and the state did not receive the best possible value for the money expended. The failure to establish a system of unit values for extras in the original contracts was an expensive and inexcusable omission.

"The building as a whole, however, is a wonderful piece of architecture, and classed among the buildings of its kind in the country, is generally commended as being the best in the country and built at a reasonable cost.

"If I were to criticise those who had charge of the construction, the chief criticism would lie in the fact that the commission when appointed had no idea whatever of complying with the law passed by the legislature; that they never intended to erect a building to come within the limits of the appropriation. Any one accepting a public trust to carry out the provision of any particular law passed by the legislature ought to abide absolutely by and at all times be within the limits of the law.

"I am satisfied now, as our people are generally satisfied, I think, that the state would not wish a building inferior to the one we have.

"It is a monument to the enterprise and industry and culture and the strength of the state, and while I might criticise some of the details of operation in the construction of the building, they are not captious criticisms. On the contrary, I would say this:

"Mr. Seabury of the capitol commission is entitled to a great deal of credit for his share in the construction. I have very carefully inquired into the matters with which he was connected and am pleased to say in his behalf that the correspondence and all the records on file indicate that he was constantly insistent in the demand that there should be no reckless waste or extravagance.

"For him I think I can say that he was the one man who stood between the successful construction of the building at its present cost and any further attempt at an increased appropriation from the legislature.

"And, moreover, the entire record proves that neither he nor any other member of the commission profited through any contract or any material furnished in the construction of the building."

ISLAND TO GO TO CUBA

Senate Committee in Favor of Ceding Isle of Pines.

Treaty Will be Reported to the Senate Without Amendment.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The senate committee on foreign relations today voted to report the treaty with Cuba, ceding the Island of Pines to that republic. The treaty was not amended.

TRADING STAMPS AS CHURCH BAIT

Chicago Pastor Will Use Them to Gather Crowds.

St. Louis, Jan. 24.—Trading stamps as a means of getting children to come to Sunday school, to bring other children with them, and to contribute their pennies to the contribution boxes have proved so successful in the First Methodist Episcopal church South that Pastor Todd will extend the innovation to the church proper and allow the grown-ups to share in his business-like religious enterprise.

Under Rev. Mr. Todd's plan every child who comes to Sunday school regularly receives a 2-cent trading stamp each time she or he is present. For bringing a new pupil a 5-cent trading stamp is issued and a 1-cent stamp is given for each penny contributed to the Sunday school plate. When the child has $2 worth of stamps it is permitted to select a present from a large stock kept by the pastor.

THE NAME BOARD OF SCHOONER PICKED UP.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 24.—Capt. Gaudin, agent of marine, received a telegram last night from Lightkeeper Dakin at Carmanah, that the name board of the sailing schooner Fawn had been found in the surf near there. The schooner Fawn left Bering sea for Victoria last October with 5,502 sealskins and six white men and twenty-one Indians on board.

GAME WARDENS AT ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Game wardens from several states arrived in St. Paul today to attend the national game wardens' convention which begins its sessions in the old capitol building tomorrow. Among the early arrivals are W. T. Scott of Montana, J. C. Porterfield of Ohio, and Tom Marshall of Illinois.

IOWA CONVICT TAKES A BRIDE

Man Convicted of Complicity In Murder Weds Old Sweetheart.

Iowa City, Jan. 24.—Under a penitentiary sentence, his case now on appeal to the supreme court, Matt Maher, convicted of complicity in the murder of John Ezechock here last summer, was secretly married to his sweetheart of a lifetime on Jan 1. The incidents connected with this peculiar romance, which have just come to light, are considered the most remarkable in the history of the county.

Maher is the son of a prominent family which has lived in Iowa City for the past forty years. He had not been engaged in any particular business previous to the crime of which he now stands convicted, though he was about to do so last summer. Following the establishment of his new venture he was to have been married to Miss Elizabeth Hlavka, the daughter of a wealthy Bohemian family of this county.

Last summer, Maher, in company with three other young men, started out to paint the town red. In the course of their celebration, John Ezechock, who had been remonstrating with them, was struck by one of them, fell heavily on the brick paving and died within twenty-four hours. All of the party have since been tried and sentenced to varying terms in the state penitentiary. Maher refused to accept the trial in the county court as conclusive and has appealed his case to the supreme court, members of his family appearing to give his bail.

Since the time the case went to the supreme court it is understood that Maher's attorneys would ask the pardon of the governor and, as an additional reason for as being granted, his marriage with his old sweetheart was quietly celebrated. Since the marriage the couple have been living at Maher's home, where they will remain until the case is settled in the supreme court. In the event that Maher is not released and Judge Bylington sentences him to the penitentiary, his wife will return to her parents to await his eventual release.

THE WARM WAVE IS SWEPT OUT TO SEA.

New York, Jan. 24.—The warm wave which has given this section of the country a touch of April in January was swept out to sea last night by a cold brisk westerly wind, and today winter again prevailed though mildly. There was a drop of 19 degs. in the temperature in the twenty-four hours ending at 10 a. m. the thermometer at that time registered 28 degs. Colder weather was prophesied for tomorrow by the local weather forecaster.

WOMAN IN BLACK CAUSES SCARE

Mystic Being Has Contralto Voice and Glides From Pursuers.

Glasgow, Mo., Jan. 24.—A "Woman in Black" mystery has this city up in arms. There will soon be a dead practical joker or a ghost in captivity, for scouting parties are trailing the apparition with grim determination and with cocked revolvers.

For a fortnight the ghost has stalked about the streets between sundown and sunrise, appearing in crowded places occasionally and escaping by a narrow margin. Those who have had a close look believe it is a man disguised as a woman, judging from the height and clumsiness.

Others declare it is a muscular woman, and say they have heard her contralto voice. Whatever "it" may be, it has been warned by notices to "cut it out" or get some purpose in its actions.

Many stories have been told of the strange black figure. Some declare it does not walk, but glides, and that it is not tangible. All efforts to effect capture have failed, and bricks thrown have passed apparently through its somber contour and struck beyond.

Women of the town have ceased leaving their homes after twilight, for fear of meeting the "woman in black," and complaints have been made of the nuisance.

The authorities are yearning to identify "it," and have discussed a plan for prosecution when capture has been effected.

If it is human it will be charged with disturbing the peace and masquerading, and if it is a spirit and is captured, the charge will be—something else, probably trespassing.

"This foolishness is going too far; it's getting stale," says an officer. "There must be a stop to it. Whoever is trying to impersonate a ghost is having all kinds of success, but is in awful danger of being killed, for if ever I get a shot at him or 'it' or her, or whatever 'it' is, I'll bet the fun stops."

Curiosity over the apparition has reached the stage of excitement. The sidewalks are dangerous for "it" now, and appearances are noticeably fewer, which gives cause for the hope that "it" is some person instead of a specter.

If "it" will just turn out to be a woman who is wearing mourning for a dead relative, or a person who is having "fun," there will be much relief when the fact is generally known. But if "it" doesn't "turn out" at all, the suspense will be a burden to some frightened citizens.

MISS DULUTH HAS MADE ANOTHER CONQUEST.

MANY EVENTS FOR AUTOMOBILES

Clear, Cool Weather and an Excellent Beach at Ormond.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 24.—Clear, cool weather and a hard, dry surface on the beach track, gave promise of excellent racing in today's automobile contests.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's big 250-horse power racer, which thus far has taken no part in the contests, was expected to start today. Mr. Vanderbilt arrived here last night. The races scheduled for today include five long distance events, as follows:

Five miles open championship.

Five miles heavyweight championship for gasoline cars.

Five miles middleweight championship for gasoline cars.

Five miles championship for steamers.

Fifteen miles prize handicap for American touring cars, fully equipped.

If time permits the one-mile middleweight championship for gasoline cars, which was postponed yesterday, also will be run off today.

COTTON COMPRESS IS BURNED; LOSS $250,000.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 24.—The International Compress company's compress on the Elizabeth river here, together with much stored cotton in the warehouses and sheds of Rogers, McCabe & Co., were burned early today. Jacob Addison, a white laborer at the burned compress, was asleep in the building at the time and is believed to have perished. The loss is placed at $250,000.

MEASLES DELAYS THE DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.

Denver, Jan. 24.—Orders were received yesterday at Fort Logan from the war department at Washington, to postpone indefinitely the departure of the Second infantry for the Philippines. The regiment was under orders to start for San Francisco today. The postponement was necessitated by breaking out of measles and mumps among the troops and they will be quarantined at Fort Logan.

FOURTEEN INJURED IN RAILROAD COLLISION.

Los Angeles, Jan. 24.—Fourteen persons were slightly injured in a collision yesterday at Glendora, between the Santa Fe limited west-bound train and a local train. All the injured were passengers on the local.

SEEKS RECOVERY OF MINING STOCK

Butte Man Wants Interest in Several North Butte Claims.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 24.—Adam Gessert has brought suit in the district court against Morgan Strong of the North Butte Mining company. W. D. Thornton, the First National bank of Butte, the Berlin Mining company and others, to recover the value of one-fourth interest in Berlin, Leaf, Augustus and Margetha mining claims, or $37,000 in money and 12,500 shares of stock in the Berlin Mining company.

Gessert alleges that he secured a loan of $6,000 from Morgan Strong, L. M. Strong and Maud B. Strong with a deed of mining interests described and that he is informed and believes they wrongly sold the interests to S. M. Hall, who transferred the contract to W. D. Thornton. The claims involved are controlled by the North Butte company, the controlling stockholders of which are Duluth capitalists.

GEN. WHEELER IS A LITTLE WEAKER.

New York, Jan. 24.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler, who is ill with pneumonia at the home of his sister in Brooklyn, was holding his own today, according to a statement made by Sterling Smith. Gen. Wheeler's brother-in-law, on the authority of Dr. A. J. McCorkle. Gen. Wheeler was a little weaker than yesterday, but his relatives were made hopeful by the assurance of the doctor that the passing of each day improved the general's chance of recovery. All of Gen. Wheeler's daughters are now with him.

MORE CONCESSIONS GRANTED TO JEWS.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 24.—Further concessions, it was announced today, have been granted to the Jews, in the government of Russia where they enjoy the right of domicile, by the addition of 133 places, in the country districts, where they will be permitted to reside without hindrance.

ANOTHER SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Anniston, Ala., Jan. 24.—A man giving his name as Samuel Hart, believed by the local police to be Frank Constantine, Jr., wanted for the murder of Mrs. A. W. Gentry in Chicago, was arrested last night. Hart says he never was in Chicago.

GIRL ACCUSED OF FORGERY.

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 24.—Emilie Schuberg, a girl of 17, who was arrested at Augusta on a charge of forging a check for $25, pleaded not guilty, waived examination and gave bonds there yesterday. The name of S. D. Smith, in whose house she was a domestic, was signed to the check.

She, however, will select her own time for action, and will not stir up the wasps' nest to which Castro has shown the way until her general policy leaves her free to do so."

To a question whether a blockade has been ordered, a direct negative was given.

Interest in the Venezuelan affair continues to decrease. The press generally is of the opinion that the question must stand over indefinitely.

Washington, Jan. 24.—So far as informal inquiry on the subject has gone France has ground for the conviction that she will encounter no opposition by any of the other nations having claims against Venezuela in the execution of the naval program which she intends to initiate against that country. Great Britain and Italy, it was believed all along would offer no objection, but the news that Germany is not disposed to side with Castro against France is regarded in diplomatic circles here as encouraging for the French plans. The ejectment of M. Taigny from La Guaira is now taken by France as her main basis for action against Venezuela.

CROOK ARRESTED.

Has Made Over $25,000 in Two Years From Victims.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 24.—Having made $25,000 in two years on a scheme similar to the green goods game, E. M. Behr, an art works importer, was arrested here yesterday by federal officers under the direction of Postoffice Inspector E. E. Frazer of La Crosse. He drew a check for $750 for cash bail and was released to appear before the grand jury. Behr advertised "steel engravings" in a manner which indicated that he had "green goods" to sell. Then he sent cheap pictures at high prices and received from $5 to $45 from each victim and did $25,000 worth of business through the mail here, exclusive of what was transacted by express.

MASTERS AND PILOTS MEET.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The Grand Harbor of masters and pilots of steam vessels of the United States, the supreme body of the steamboat men's association of the United States is holding its annual session here. Delegates representing the steamboat men of every important port in the country and from St. Michaels, Alaska, and Honolulu are present.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON PRAISES THE WORK OF THE CAPITOL COMMISSION IN CONSTRUCTING STATE BUILDING

Makes Public His Findings on Report of Public Examiner's Investigation.

None of Commission Profited Through Contract or Building Material.

Gives Special Praise to Commissioner Seabury for His Share in Work.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson today made public the report of the state public examiner's investigation into the accounts of the capitol commission. Governor Johnson, in a statement of his findings and conclusions, says:

"This examination was ordered because no complete examination had ever been made and the commission having expended $4,500,000, or thereabouts, and their work having practically been consummated, it was certainly proper that an investigation be made that the public might know how the funds placed at their disposal by a state legislature had been disbursed.

"In a work extending over a period of ten years, and in the disbursement of so large a sum of money, an examination would naturally reveal something which might be criticised, and yet my investigation of this report leads me first of all to the conclusion that there was no collusion between the contractors and the commission by which the latter profited to the extent of a single dollar.

"The purchase of fuel seems to me to have been improperly made. Large quantities of coal were purchased without any contract or competition whatever, as provided by law, and as the report states the prices were not as low as some of the prevailing team-delivered prices charged other concerns in St. Paul. The public examiner personally informs me that the closest possible investigation was made of the books of the fuel companies from which this fuel was purchased and nothing there reveals the slightest possible suggestion that any member of the commission profited in any way by this transaction.

"The contract for the elevators and for the fire-proofing seem to have been improperly let, and the state did not receive the best possible value for the money expended. The failure to establish a system of unit values for extras in the original contracts was an expensive and inexcusable omission.

"The building as a whole, however, is a wonderful piece of architecture, and classed among the buildings of its kind in the country, is generally commended as being the best in the country and built at a reasonable cost.

"If I were to criticise those who had charge of the construction, the chief criticism would lie in the fact that the commission when appointed had no idea whatever of complying with the law passed by the legislature; that they never intended to erect a building to come within the limits of the appropriation. Any one accepting a public trust to carry out the provision of any particular law passed by the legislature ought to abide absolutely by and at all times be within the limits of the law.

"I am satisfied now, as our people are generally satisfied, I think, that the state would not wish a building inferior to the one we have.

"It is a monument to the enterprise and industry and culture and the strength of the state, and while I might criticise some of the details of operation in the construction of the building, they are not captious criticisms. On the contrary, I would say this:

"Mr. Seabury of the capitol commission is entitled to a great deal of credit for his share in the construction. I have very carefully inquired into the matters with which he was connected and am pleased to say in his behalf that the correspondence and all the records on file indicate that he was constantly insistent in the demand that there should be no reckless waste or extravagance.

"For him I think I can say that he was the one man who stood between the successful construction of the building at its present cost and any further attempt at an increased appropriation from the legislature.

"And, moreover, the entire record proves that neither he nor any other member of the commission profited through any contract or any material furnished in the construction of the building."

ISLAND TO GO TO CUBA

Senate Committee in Favor of Ceding Isle of Pines.

Treaty Will be Reported to the Senate Without Amendment.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The senate committee on foreign relations today voted to report the treaty with Cuba, ceding the Island of Pines to that republic. The treaty was not amended.

TRADING STAMPS AS CHURCH BAIT

Chicago Pastor Will Use Them to Gather Crowds.

St. Louis, Jan. 24.—Trading stamps as a means of getting children to come to Sunday school, to bring other children with them, and to contribute their pennies to the contribution boxes have proved so successful in the First Methodist Episcopal church South that Pastor Todd will extend the innovation to the church proper and allow the grown-ups to share in his business-like religious enterprise.

Under Rev. Mr. Todd's plan every child who comes to Sunday school regularly receives a 2-cent trading stamp each time she or he is present. For bringing a new pupil a 5-cent trading stamp is issued and a 1-cent stamp is given for each penny contributed to the Sunday school plate. When the child has $2 worth of stamps it is permitted to select a present from a large stock kept by the pastor.

THE NAME BOARD OF SCHOONER PICKED UP.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 24.—Capt. Gaudin, agent of marine, received a telegram last night from Lightkeeper Larkin at Carmanah, that the name board of the sailing schooner Fawn had been found in the surf near there. The schooner Fawn left Bering sea for Victoria last October with 5,592 sealskins and six white men and twenty-one Indians on board.

GAME WARDENS AT ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Game wardens from several states arrived in St. Paul today to attend the national game wardens' convention which begins its sessions in the old capitol building tomorrow. Among the early arrivals are W. T. Scott of Montana, J. C. Porterfield of Ohio, and Tom Marshall of Illinois.

IOWA CONVICT TAKES A BRIDE

Man Convicted of Complicity In Murder Weds Old Sweetheart.

[illegible] Jan. 24.—Under a pendency [illegible] on appeal [illegible] Mary Mather, convicted of complicity in the murder of [illegible] last summer, was secretly married to his sweetheart of a former romance. The incidents connected with this peculiar romance, which have just come to light, are considered the most remarkable in the annals [illegible]

Mather is the son of a prominent family [illegible] and last night [illegible] Following the establishment of [illegible] it was to have been married to Miss Elizabeth Hawks, the [illegible] wealthy Bohemian family of [illegible]

Last summer, Mather in company with [illegible] started out to paint the town red, and in the course of their [illegible] Hendricks, who had [illegible] with them, was struck [illegible] fell heavily on the brick [illegible] and died within twenty-four hours. All the party have since been [illegible] except Mather, who refused to [illegible] penitentiary. Mather refused to accept the trial in the county court as [illegible] and has appealed his case to the supreme court, members of his family [illegible] to save his life.

[illegible] time the case went to the supreme court it is understood that Mather's friends would ask the pardon of the governor and, as an additional reason [illegible] and his sweetheart was quickly celebrated, [illegible] the couple have [illegible] at Mather's home, where they will remain until the case is settled at the [illegible] In the event that Mather [illegible] not Judge Byington sentences him to the penitentiary, his wife will return to her parents to await his release.

THE WARM WAVE IS SWEPT OUT TO SEA.

New York, Jan. 24.—The warm wave which [illegible] in this section of the country, a touch of April in January was swept out to sea last night by a cold brisk westerly wind, and today winter again prevailed though mildly. There was a drop of 19 degs. in the temperature in the twenty-four hours ending at 10 a. m. the thermometer at that time registered 29 degs. Colder weather was prophesied for tomorrow by the local weather forecaster.

WOMAN IN BLACK CAUSES SCARE

Mystic Being Has Contralto Voice and Glides From Pursuers.

Glasgow, Mo., Jan. 24.—A "Woman in Black" mystery has this city up in arms. There will soon be a dead practical joker or a ghost in captivity, for scouting parties are trailing the apparition with grim determination and with cocked revolvers.

For a fortnight the ghost has stalked about the streets between sundown and sunrise, appearing in crowded places occasionally and escaping by a narrow margin. Those who have had a close look believe it is a man disguised as a woman, judging from the height and clumsiness.

Others declare it is a muscular woman, and say they have heard her contralto voice. Whatever "it" may be, it has been warned by notices to "cut it out" or get some purpose in its actions.

Many stories have been told of the strange black figure. Some declare it does not walk, but glides, and that it is not tangible. All efforts to effect capture have failed, and bricks thrown have passed apparently through its somber contour and struck beyond.

Women of the town have ceased leaving their homes after twilight, for fear of meeting the "woman in black," and complaints have been made of the nuisance.

The authorities are yearning to identify "it," and have discussed a plan for prosecution when capture has been effected.

If it is human it will be charged with disturbing the peace and masquerading, and if it is a spirit and is captured, the charge will be something else, probably trespassing.

"This foolishness is going too far; it's getting stale," says an officer. "There must be a stop to it. Whoever is trying to impersonate a ghost is having all kinds of success, but is in awful danger of being killed, for if ever I get a shot at him or 'it' or her, or whatever 'it' is, I'll bet the fun stops."

Curiosity over the apparition has reached the stage of excitement. The sidewalks are dangerous for "it" now, and appearances are noticeably fewer, which gives cause for the hope that "it" is some person instead of a specter.

If "it" will just turn out to be a woman who is wearing mourning for a dead relative, or a person who is having "fun," there will be much relief when the fact is generally known. But if "it" doesn't "turn out" at all, the suspense will be a burden to some frightened citizens.

MISS DULUTH HAS MADE ANOTHER CONQUEST.

MANY EVENTS FOR AUTOMOBILES

Clear, Cool Weather and an Excellent Beach at Ormond.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 24.—Clear, cool weather and a hard, dry surface on the beach track, gave promise of excellent racing in today's automobile contests.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's big 250-horse power racer, which thus far has taken no part in the contests, was expected to start today. Mr. Vanderbilt arrived here last night. The races scheduled for today include five long distance events, as follows:

Five miles open championship.

Five miles heavyweight championship for gasoline cars.

Five miles middleweight championship for gasoline cars.

Five miles championship for steamers.

Fifteen miles prize handicap for American touring cars, fully equipped.

If time permits the one-mile middleweight championship for gasoline cars, which was postponed yesterday, also will be run off today.

COTTON COMPRESS IS BURNED; LOSS $250,000.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 24.—The International Compress company's compress on the Elizabeth river here, together with much stored cotton in the warehouses and sheds of Rogers, McCabe & Co., were burned early today. Jacob Addison, a white laborer at the burned compress, was asleep in the building at the time and is believed to have perished. The loss is placed at $250,000.

MEASLES DELAYS THE DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.

Denver, Jan. 24.—Orders were received yesterday at Fort Logan from the war department at Washington to postpone indefinitely the departure of the Second Infantry for the Philippines. The regiment was under orders to start for San Francisco today. The postponement was necessitated by breaking out of measles and mumps among the troops and they will be quarantined at Fort Logan.

FOURTEEN INJURED IN RAILROAD COLLISION.

Los Angeles, Jan. 24.—Fourteen persons were slightly injured in a collision yesterday at Glendora, between the Santa Fe limited west-bound train and a local train. All the injured were passengers on the local.

SEEKS RECOVERY OF MINING STOCK

Butte Man Wants Interest in Several North Butte Claims.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 24.—Adam Gessert has brought suit in the district court against Morgan Strong of the North Butte Mining company, W. D. Thornton, the First National bank of Butte, the Berlin Mining company and others, to recover the value of one-fourth interest in Berlin, Leaf, Augustus and Margetha mining claims, or $37,000 in money and 12,500 shares of stock in the Berlin Mining company.

Gessert alleges that he secured a loan of $6,000 from Morgan Strong, L. M. Strong and Maud B. Strong with a deed of mining interests described and that he is informed and believes they wrongly sold the interests to S. M. Hall, who transferred the contract to W. D. Thornton. The claims involved are controlled by the North Butte company, the controlling stockholders of which are Duluth capitalists.

GEN. WHEELER IS A LITTLE WEAKER.

New York, Jan. 24.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler, who is ill with pneumonia at the house of his sister in Brooklyn, was holding his own today, according to a statement made by Sterling Smith. Gen. Wheeler's brother-in-law, on the authority of Dr. A. J. McCorkle. Gen. Wheeler was a little weaker than yesterday, but his relatives were made hopeful by the assurance of the doctor that the passing of each day improved the general's chance of recovery. All of Gen. Wheeler's daughters are now with him.

MORE CONCESSIONS GRANTED TO JEWS.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 24.—Further concessions, it was announced today, have been granted to the Jews, in the government of Russia where they enjoy the right of domicile, by the addition of 133 places, in the country districts, where they will be permitted to reside without hindrance.

ANOTHER SUSPECT ARRESTED.

Anniston, Ala., Jan. 24.—A man giving his name as Samuel Hart, believed by the local police to be Frank Constantine, Jr., wanted for the murder of Mrs. A. W. Gentry in Chicago, was arrested last night. Hart says he never was in Chicago.

GIRL ACCUSED OF FORGERY.

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 24.—Emilie Schuberg, a girl of 17, who was arrested at Augusta on a charge of forging a check for $25, pleaded not guilty, waived examination and gave bonds there yesterday. The name of S. D. Smith, in whose house she was a domestic, was signed to the check.

IS NOT JUST, THE STRIKERS SAY

Boilermakers Make Reply to the Assertions of Employers.

The boilermakers, who are out on strike are meeting today at their headquarters, but just what action they will take cannot be said. They declare that their side of the case is not being presented fairly by the employers, when the latter say that they have tried for several weeks to get a committee appointed by the union to confer with the employers.

The strikers say that the employers have been invited to go to the union headquarters, meet all of the men and have the trouble threshed out there. This, the strikers claim has been an open offer ever since the demand for an increase was made a month ago; and the employers knew that the agreement between the union and the bosses expired Jan. 1.

The strikers also claim that the committee idea did not work satisfactorily a year ago and the employers suggested at that time that when a readjustment was to be made that the employers should meet the union as a whole, just as the union men have been offering

REGISTRATION SHOWS GENERAL AWAKENING

Total for Second Day Nearly Equal to Primary Vote.

Voters Realize Importance of Voicing Sentiments at Election.

With a total registration yesterday of nearly 3,000 voters, all records for the second day of registration for years past were smashed, and the most optimiste predictions of the campaign workers were set at naught.

The registration yesterday came within a few hundred of being as large as that on the primary election day, and already more than 6,000 voters are registered for the approaching election. If the pace can be maintained on the last day of registration, the 9,000-mark will be passed.

Yesterday's total showed the results of the publicity given the situation, and also the individual work of the campaigners. From the small vote on the primaries it looked as if the election would be a very quiet one, and that a very large percentage of the voters would stay away from the polls, but yesterday's figures indicate a general public awakening, and an appreciation of the importance of not allowing the elections to go by default.

In all but three of the wards the registration yesterday was heavier than at the primaries, and in the First ward in particular there seemed to be a general stampede for the polls. Mayor Cullum's own precinct woke up, and 194 voters put down their names on the books, as compared with ninety-five on the first day of registration. The total for the ward yesterday was 516, as compared with 360 at the primaries, giving a total registration of 876, which comes pretty close to being the normal vote of the ward.

The Second ward also turned out well, with a registration of 478, as compared with 431 at the primaries.

The Third ward showed a slight falling off from the primaries, and the Fourth ward was a little ahead of the first day.

The Fifth showed up well, with a gain of forty-seven over the primary day. The Sixth turned out a registration of 288 as compared with 232. This is the only ward in the city where the total is hardly up to the mark, but it will be thoroughly worked on the final day of registration, and if as many more turn out then, the total will be heavy.

Owing to the hot fight in the Seventh at the primaries, the registration on that day was heavy, and the field was a much more barren one yesterday, but in spite of that 226 more names were added to the list.

The Eighth fell a little under the mark set at the primaries, but the total is a very presentable one.

In the following table the registration at the primaries and yesterday are given in separate columns, by precints:

DULUTH TO GET A BOX FACTORY

Charles W. Weinhagen & Company to Establish One Here.

Duluth is to have a new industry. Robert Hartman of St. Paul, a member of the firm of Charles W. Weinhagen & Co., which owns five box factories in as many different cities, is in Duluth arranging for the establishment of one here.

The concern manufactures all kinds of pasteboard and cardboard boxes, and already has a large trade at the Head of the Lakes and vicinity. The members feel, however, that it would be cheaper to make the goods here than to pay freight charges on them from St. Paul, so one will be opened in this city as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made.

It is understood that Mr. Hartman has practically secured a location, but that the deal has not been closed yet. The new factory will probably employ about fifteen persons.

NEW VAULT IS NOW COMPLETE

Work in Register of Deeds' Office is Greatly Facilitated.

The new vault room or addition to the old vault room connected with the register of deeds' office was put into use this morning. The increased room that is given for the records and for the several persons who are usually found at the office to look over records is very marked. New cases are to be added to the equipment and by next month the county will have additional furniture in the way of steel tables and chairs. Wood in any form is to be banished from the vault and every possible precaution will be adopted to make it fire proof.

The records kept at the register's office are most valuable and many, if destroyed, could never be replaced. As a further protection against possible loss or damage no smoking will be permitted in the vault, nor any ink. Persons making abstracts from the records will have to depend on lead pencils.

The vault is built with double walls fire proof. The floor is of thick concrete and the walls of brick and concrete. The ceiling is supported by steel set in concrete. The windows are protected from the outside by heavy steel bars set in brick and concrete and on the inside by steel shutters.

WANTS PAY FOR DAMAGE TO HAY

Fall Lake Settler Sues Boom Company for Overflowage.

The damage action of Jakop Melaka against the Fall Lake Boom company is being tried before Judge Cant. The suit is one in which Melaka, one of the settlers along the shores of Fall Lake, this county, claims that the boom company, by operating a dam at the outlet of the lake in order to raise the water for logging purposes, caused his land to become overflowed for a period of some weeks during the summer weather, causing a loss of a large acreage of hay. Melaka alleges that the boom company has no authority to hold back the water and cause destruction or damage to the lands adjoining the lake, without paying for the injury done.

The testimony this morning by Melaka and others was for the purpose of showing that last July, on account of the dam, the water was several feet deep over Melaka's meadow. It is understood that there are a number of other settlers who claim damage by reason of overflowage and who are awaiting the outcome of the Melaka suit before starting similar actions for damages.

Melaka is represented by A. J. Thomas, of Ely, and the boom company by J. W. Osborne.

MAY NOT BE INSANE.

Biwabik Miner With $719 Says He is Recovering From Spree.

Some doubt was expressed by the county authorities this morning as to whether there will be any necessity of examining Matt Pollari, the Finlander miner of Biwabik, who was brought over here from Superior yesterday, charged with insanity. Since his detention in the county jail Pollari is said to have given unmistakable signs of being rational. He protests to the officers that he is not insane and says that he has undoubtedly been acting in a peculiar manner as a result of a prolonged spree. He claims that he has got over it now and that his mind is all right. Pollari remembers the exact amount of money that was taken from his person, $719.50 and remarks that he is very lucky to have got through his spree without losing all or part of it.

The officers who brought Pollari over from Superior claimed that he had not been drinking over there and that on the car coming to Duluth he made a great deal of trouble.

STATE SHERIFFS ARE IN SESSION

The Twenty-third Annual Gathering is Held at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sheriffs of twenty-seven of the eighty three counties of the state were present today in the council chamber when the twenty-third annual meeting of the Minnesota State Sheriffs' association was called to order by the vice president, Sheriff F. H. Vine of Rochester, Olmstead county. The president of the association, Sheriff J. M. Lundgren of Alexandria, Douglas county, had not yet arrived though it was known that he was in St. Paul. Among the others present were Sheriffs J. W. Dreger, Minneapolis, Hennepin county, secretary of the association; E. S. Tanner, Little Falls, Morrison county, treasurer; John Brown, Mantorville, Dodge; E. K. Blexrud, Preston, Fillmore; P. J. Lundquist, Red Wing, Goodhue; William J. Bates, Duluth, St. Louis

After a few preliminary routine matters of business an adjournment was taken to 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Owing to the fact that this is what the sheriffs term an "off year," that is, a time not after any recent election of sheriffs, the attendance was not so great as at the opening of the convention of last winter. After an election there are always new sheriffs, who feel the necessity of getting acquainted with the others and therefore attend the meetings. Last year the attendance was forty-three. Today the total reached in the neighborhood of thirty-five.

The main purpose of these annual meetings of sheriffs of the state is mutual acquaintance and exchange of ideas. In order to round up criminals in the proper way, it is absolutely essential that the sheriffs co-operate.

This evening the sheriffs will be tendered a banquet.

DIES OF OLD AGE.

Mrs. Catharine Jones, Old Resident of Duluth, Passes Away.

General decline, due to old age, caused the death of Mrs. Catharine Jones, widow of the late W. C. Jones, about 6 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Jones was 74 years of age, and had been a resident of Duluth for more than twenty-five years. She was born at Bath, N. Y., and leaves only one child, Mrs. John G. Howard.

The funeral will be held from the residence of Mr. Howard, 16 West Fifth street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Remnants and Rumpled Goods

Not a yard or a piece of the short ends and odd and soiled goods left from the White Sale will go into our inventory books next week at the rate they are hurrying out. Are you getting a share?

Cottons Remnants of bleached and unbleached sheetings, pillow casings, muslins, cambrics, toweling, India linons, lawns, fancy waistings and dimities from the white sale and also soiled blankets, comforters and pillows from the housekeepers' sale, marked for quick riddance

Linens Remnants of all kinds and widths of bleached and unbleached table damask—some ends of lines measuring up to 2½ yards long; pattern cloths without napkins, odd half dozen napkins and cloths which have been slightly soiled, at 25 to 40 per cent reductions.

Wash Goods We have gathered the remnants of wash goods left from Saturday's sale into one lot and remarked them at a uniform reduction of One Half Silk Warp Eoliennes.

36-inches wide—colors, grey, champagne, navy, two browns and black. These stuffs with their silky, soft, fine finish are almost fully as effective as goods costing twice the price. We have sold yards of it for dainty gowns and waists at 59c a yard. Tomorrow, for one day, we will offer these remaining pieces at—the yard 45c

A Lining Bargain.

Every store in Duluth will ask you 25c a yard for this quality of spun glass lining. It has the taffeta weight and finish which makes it particularly desirable for drop skirts and linings, and is very serviceable. If you want to get it at a bargain, come tomorrow, and pay—instead of 25c— 17½c

Initial Selling of New Spring Skirts.

You'll notice particularly the snug fit of the skirts about the hips and how they spread out easily and gracefully in one perfect sweep below the hips, reaching to the ground all around yet escaping it at all parts. They come in plain colors and mixtures—Panamas, Serges and Voiles. Tomorrow we will offer a group of these new skirts, good values at $6.50—for $5.00

RIDDANCE OF WOOL WAISTS—They are good warm wool waists but their companion waists have outsped them, leaving only a few of each kind behind. So we price the lot at less than half—many sold up to $2.50—choice 75c

KIMONOS AND BATH ROBES—Easy, handsome kinds made of warm flannelette and bath robe materials—they must go now regardless of beauty or goodness. All sorts, all grades, all styles go into the riddance at ⅓ off

Soiled Undermuslins.

Including skirts, gowns, drawers and corset covers—all grades but not all sizes—and also a small lot of slightly soiled flannelette gowns. The first washing will restore the full value and you'll save a full ⅓

15c Flannelettes 10c.

36-inches wide—in dark and light colors, suitable for kimonos and dressing sacques—a dime is scarcely enough to cover the cost of weaving and printing, but for one day, Thursday, we will sell them for 10c

Ribbons, Laces and Veils in the Riddance.

No. 2 SATIN RIBBON for fancy work, etc., in light blue, pink and green—selling regularly at 21c a yard—riddance brings the price down to, yard 12½c

PLAIN TAFFETA RIBBON—3 inches wide—colors pink, light blue, white, mais and lavender—reduced now from 17c a yard to 12½c

TORCHON LACE—Known commonly as "everlasting lace"—an extra good quality, 1 inch wide—12-yard pieces—regularly 25c—marked down to 15c

CHIFFON DRAPE VEILS in black, navy, brown, green, white and the new changeable effects—hemstitched, chenile dots and fancy border—regularly 98c to $1.75—now Half Price

FINE PLAT VAL. LACE—choice of this lot which sold formerly at 6c, 7c and 8c a yard—while it lasts—at, the yard 4c

FUR TRIMMING for children's coats and bonnets—all kinds of fur—this trimming formerly sold up to $1.00 a yard—riddance reduces the price to, the yard 25c

Silberstein & Bondy Company.

It is a lucky thing that most of the people who are trying on beautiful fur-lined coats or a stunning set of furs, before mahogany bound mirrors, do not know that just around the corner out of sight the enterprising merchant is unpacking the first importation of spring things. And although you know it will be months before you can don these ravishingly pretty spring things, unless you are going South or West for the spring months, after you once see them, all conceit and pleasure in winter wearables is gone.

These first things that are being surreptitiously snowed by the proto shoppers presage nicely what the fashions will be in the spring, and the impression one gets is of the most dainty feminine of materials, made up into the most mannish of severe styles. The combination results in an air of indescribable gauntiness and saucy chicness that will appeal at once, and that these things will be an instantaneous success is assured after one glance. They are lovely.

One of the strong things shown in suits that is simply and entirely adorable, is cream white serge and such like materials, made into suits that have a distinctive style for 1906. These serge suits will find especial favor in Duluth. Their immaculate daintiness give an air of clean coolness in the midst of heat, and they will be serviceable throughout the summer. They are made up in little coats, called the pony jackets, which are just a pretty hip length and are made very plain and in most part with the regulation coat sleeve. They are trimmed very often with the cream silk braid, with maybe a touch of gold. And they are the smartest things that have been shown for many seasons. They combine as much needed blending for the women of limited income, in that they are practical in so far as style goes for almost any occasion. One can scarcely think of a place to which one of these suits could not be worn with the charming appropriateness which is the mark of the well dressed woman. Nothing could be lovelier for afternoon wear, church or morning street wear, and yet they would give a well dressed air to the woman who wore one to concerts, theaters or simple evening functions. A style which combines all these possibilities is a rare one, and what is more, it is almost sure to be becoming, if you are not too portly and comfortably rotund-ly.

If you are planning to spend your money right now for some of the things you really do not need, but because the sales are on and things are so cheap, you know, save it and get one of these suits the first thing in the spring. Of course, there is variety offered from the plain cream color. For instance, there is the one with the smudgy but soft black stripes running lengthwise throughout the costume. Then the grays are continuing very good in the early spring things, and one suit shown was of the softest blending of heliotrope and gray that was delicious.

The new skirts are also very interesting, and the number and variety which are shown prove that the day of the shirt waist dress is probably a little on the wane. The skirts are of the most indescribably complex mixtures, the style man saying that they were of manve tones, overshot with mauve. If that gives you an adequate idea of what they are like, you had better leave the business that engages you now and go into the early buying business. The skirts are made of the softest chiffon panama cloth, and are a combination of soft grays, in different shades, all nicely blended with perhaps reseda green in a subdued tone predominating. Others are in black and white and other combinations, which have that most appealing of all virtues, they "will go with anything." They are made in great part of circular cut and trimmed with flat folds of the same.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Entertain at Fine Musicale and Dancing Party.

The musical entertainment and dance given last evening at Masonic Temple by the Knights Templar was one of the most successful Masonic events of the year. Admission was by invitation only, but a very large number attended. The entertainment was given in the Scottish Rite auditorium, and the parquet and balcony were well filled. In short, it was what the women term "a nice party," and fully came up to that standard. Duluth commandery, No. 18, which gave the affair, certainly did itself proud and the committee in charge received congratulations on its success. This committee consisted of Eminent Commander Charles W. Wilson, J. L. Owens and W. A. Aebett.

In the matter of the entertainment quite a remarkable array of talent was offered and thoroughly enjoyed. It would be hard to say, were one to make a choice, which number on the program was the most enjoyable. Each seemed to be equally well received, and each received an enthusiastic encore. Aside from the musical numbers, Miss Mae Wylie was on the program for a recitation, and made the audience laugh with delight at her recital of a story, entitled, "Run, You Coyote, Run." In response to an encore, she recited a little poem, entitled "Encouragement," and dealing with the sable race. One of the best numbers on the program was the quartet, consisting of Mrs. McAuliffe, Miss Bradshaw, George L. Tyler and H. G. Gearhart, who sang "One Morn If I Remember Well," from "Rigoletto." The audience was delighted with this and demanded a repetition, but because it was the last number on the program, and had taken up longer than was expected, an encore was denied. Mrs. Clarence Miller played one of Chopin's compositions on the piano, and acted as accompanist with her usual accomplishment, and Miss Norma Williams gave a delightful number on the violin, and was recalled for another. The vocal solos of Miss Mary Syer Bradshaw, Mrs. James McAuliffe and George L. Tyler proved very popular and pleasing.

Following the entertainment, a dance was held in the hall room, on the first floor of the temple. In which several hundred took part. The floor has been improved, until now it is one of the best dancing spaces in the city, and the dance was very much enjoyed.

OPEN NIGHT.

Gymnasium Classes of Y. W. C. A. Give an Entertainment.

The open night of the gymnasium classes of the Young Women's Christian association which was held last evening at the Y. M. C. A. "gym" was well attended by the members of the classes and their friends. It was a strictly feminine meet, so far as spectators went, but the junior Y. M. C. A. classes played a basketball game that added much to the pleasure of the evening.

A wand drill was given by the children's class and also an interesting gymnasium game. Dumb-bell exercises were performed by a class of business girls, and an esthetic dance or sun dance, an exceedingly graceful and pretty performance, was given by a number of the members. The program, although very informal, was greatly enjoyed by the large number of spectators.

The closing event in the first term of the gymnasium classes of the Y. W. C. A. will be a poverty party, which will be held in the rooms on West Superior street, Wednesday evening of next week. The former members, present members and members-to-be of the gymnasium classes are invited to be guests and the committee in charge are planning for a delightful frolic.

Elks' Charity Ball.

The most delightful social event of this week will be the annual charity ball of the Elks which will be given at the Spalding this evening. The committees in charge of the event have planned for a thoroughly delightful evening and a large number of guests will be present to enjoy the hospitality of these splendid entertainers. The program of dancing music will be played by Flaaten and the affair is expected to be the most brilliant for many seasons.

Browning Class.

The morning Browning class of the Twentieth Century club will meet tomorrow morning at 10:15 o'clock at the club room of the library. The subject of the morning's talk will be "Balaustion's" the hero of two of Browning's poems. The lecturer is Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr.

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

Grandmother's Opinion of Some Advertised Modern Methods.

"I suppose it's all right," said grandmother, shaking her head resignedly, "but some of the things I see advised for women make me believe that those who publish them take us for imbeciles."

Grandmother pared off the apple-skin in the thinnest of rings, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

"Now, I leave it to you, Mary," said she, looking at her daughter, very busy with rolling pin and pie board. "If you would like to go swimming on a piano stool."

Mary rolled wide eyes at her mother.

"What's that?" she said, speaking loud in her astonishment.

"That's it, exactly," said grandmother, nodding her head with satisfaction at Mary's amazement. "A fat woman, too. Supposed to put her stomach on a piano stool and swim with her arms and feet and so get healthier and thinner."

Mary laughed at the picture.

"I think I'll try it and see what it's like," said she.

"Just what I was fool enough to do," said grandmother. "In the parlor Thursday. I thank God nobody saw me at it. I'm not fat, but I tell you it was the worst trick I ever undertook. Gracious me, I feel bad yet from it."

Mary seemed to find her parent's suffering a cause for mirth.

"Now to tell a fat woman to do this," went on the old lady, "would be advising her to do an impossible thing, for a stout woman would be heavy and clumsy and short of breath; and to lie on a piano stool supported only by the stomach, like a turtle on a pin, would hurt awfully in the first place, and she couldn't waggle arms and legs more than once before she would be ready to call for help, and so be hefted up and placed on her feet; and I'll guarantee she would never try it again."

Grandmother nodded her head sadly.

"So I say whoever made up such a thing as that must think we are imbeciles," she repeated.

GREAT REFORM.

Something That Mary Leiter Curzon Did in India.

Lady Curzon, wife of the late viceroy of India, is shortly to visit this country. She is an American girl by birth, most happy in her marriage, and the mother of a number of children. She was a Leiter of Maryland, before her marriage, but was brought up in Chicago.

During her life in India she came in touch with many native mothers and families, and her influence was extended to bring them into Western ways of conducting the home. In certain portions of India it is the custom, where a young child is deformed, to kill it or leave it in the wilds exposed to the attacks of wild beasts. The natives believe that a deformed child has been marked by evil spirits and ought not to live.

Lady Curzon, meeting native mothers who felt that this should be, instituted classes among them with a view to educating them to care for and rear the unfortunately marked children. The work had to be done in the most diplomatic manner possible, for centuries of custom and religious training had taught the native women that what they did was right.

She began the work with an appeal to the instinct of motherhood, the appeal to the thought that although deformed, the child was part of the mother itself. From this argument she passed on to the old injunction of the scriptures, "Thou shalt not kill," and she extended this to the teachings of Christ and his love for the lame, the halt and the blind.

So effective was her work that before she left India she received from more than 2,000 Indian mothers a written testimonial informing her that they accepted what she and her assistants had taught; that life had been made more precious to them, and that from this on they would extend her work for the protection of the helpless child.

THEIR PRETTINESS.

Why Japanese Women Do Not Lose Their Freshness.

"Why are the Japanese women pretty?" asked one woman of another who had just returned from the Orient, relates the Philadelphia Telegraph.

"There's a reason," replied her friend, "and if you go to Japan you will not be long in finding it.

"The Japanese woman, to begin right at the foundation of things, never worries. She never nags and never finds fault. She eats the right kind of food.

"The Japanese bachelor girl is a curious product. She is as pretty as she can be. She realizes that beauty comes first in all the world. She must be handsome or die, and she does not die.

"She takes lots of time to dress, and such a thing as a hasty toilet is unknown to her. When she has a little spare time she makes experiments upon her hair, trying to dress it more becomingly.

"Each day she brushes it, smoothes it, oils it if necessary, and makes it shine generally. It is her idea of beauty that her hair shall shine, and shine it generally does. It is extremely heavy, and she wears it over a big, hard, stiff roll which forms the pompadour which she so dearly loves.

"The Japanese woman never does unwomanly things. She does not work unless compelled to do so. She would consider it a very sad fate if she were compelled to go into an office and toil, and she would bemoan her fate sadly if she were obliged to get out and do a man's task.

"The Japanese woman never makes her body uncomfortable. I envied her the pair of nice, soft, loose shoes she wore, without heels, and the wide and comfortable belt and the loose dress. It was immensely pretty, too, and showed her nice, smooth neck."

MERRELL-SOULE COMPANY SYRACUSE, NEW YORK

IN 2-PIE 10c PACKAGES.

AS WILLED BY FATE

By George J. Pardy.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

He threw the pen down impatiently and arose from the desk at which he had been writing for the last three hours.

"It's no use," he murmured to himself, as he paced up and down the room. "I shall have to let it wait until tomorrow after all. Ethel will be disappointed, but it can't be helped."

Ethel was his 16-year-old daughter, and she was coming home tonight from the school in Paris, where she had spent the last two years. Only two days before he had written to her promising that he would give himself a week's holiday when she came home, and take her about to see all the sights of London. And now here was his novel still lying unfinished and every morning's post bringing imploring letters from the publishers and reminders that the time scheduled for the delivery of the book was long past. He was genuinely annoyed with himself.

His wife had died in giving Ethel birth, and the affection which he had lavished upon the former had been transferred, almost in its entirety, to the living legacy she had bequeathed him. It had been a severe wrench to let the girl go away to school at all, a wrench which, each time she went back again after her holidays, had seemed all the worse to bear. Now that her school days were over at last and she was coming back to him for good, his pleasure was exquisite. He had planned out everything that they would do in the short week's vacation which was all he could permit himself, and had been thinking of it for the past fortnight.

He had expected, of course, to have sent his manuscript safely on its way before Ethel's arrival, so that nothing in the way of work should interfere with the enjoyment of her first week of new life. And here, as ill luck would have it, was the book still incomplete. True, there was only one chapter lacking, but that chapter had been waiting to be written for over a week. Possibly the idea of Ethel's approaching return had unsettled him for work; possibly his mind, aglow with its ever present anticipation of pleasure to come, was unable to contemplate, what for the proper accomplishment of the book it was necessary it should contemplate—a picture of a very different kind.

For the great climax of "Forsaken" was, as he was perfectly aware, a tragedy and a death, and to write in such a vein when he himself was simply permeated with the intense joy of living, was anything but an easy task.

Yet if Ethel was not to be disappointed, the tale must be finished, and quickly too. Even now the mill clock in the center pointed to 5, and the shadows were lengthening across the trim Kept lawn. By 10 Ethel would be at the station.

"Confound it!" he muttered. "I must pull myself together. This nervousness is simply ridiculous."

He stopped for a moment in his perambulations to press the electric bell.

"I shan't want any dinner tonight, Dawkins," he said to the servant who appeared. "I'll have some supper with Miss Ethel when she comes. Don't forget, the carriage is to be round at half-past nine sharp."

"Very good, sir."

The novelist sat down to his desk again, and for a few minutes remained lost in a reverie. At last he dipped his pen into the ink; and it began to move across the white surface of the paper, slowly at first, as though the ideas were tardy in assuming coherent shape, then quicker and quicker still. Suddenly, as it seemed, his mood had changed, his thoughts attuned themselves to the minor key. And as the sunlight died away from the garden and the dusk crept out of the earth, the tragedy of the woman's death spread itself out over the paper, line by line, sheet by sheet, and the book swept on to its appointed end.

Only once in the gathering darkness did he pause to call for lights, and then bent over his task again, to dash on to the page one of those living word pictures which had helped to build up his fame. He felt, even as he wrote, that he had never done better work than this, and wondered at himself that he could do it.

Somehow he had never experienced the fiery thrill of inspiration as he experienced it tonight. He had written of death before, but never had the final calamity of a heroine of his own creating stirred him as it stirred him now. He lived himself every emotion that he described, was wrenched with every pang that his pen painted.

The death of this magnificent creature, with all its attendant agony, assumed for him an absolute reality. He seemed to feel against his cheeks the icy breath of the Dark Angel, the lamp flickered ominously, and strange, fantastic shadows moved in weird procession across the silent room.

As he penned the last word and wrote beneath in neat capitals "Finis" he shivered. It seemed curiously cold for June. He passed his hand over his forehead and the sweat glistened in his palm. An enervating languor possessed his wearied senses.

"The holiday will do me good," he reflected. "I have been working too hard; I'm glad it's finished. And it's good, too, the best I've ever done."

Putting away the sheets carefully in a drawer, he glanced at the clock. It was half-past nine, and the carriage was waiting.

As he descended at the station he noticed that something unusual had occurred. People were running wildly about, questioning officials. Women were sobbing and newsboys yelling in strident tones. One of the latter shrieked hoarsely in his ear:

"Third Extra Special. Terrible accident to the Continental express. List of killed—full details."

Mechanically, with a foreboding sense of horror, he thrust out his hand for a paper.

"Surely—Ethel—"

"Great heavens!"

"Forsaken," was the success of the season. In particular, the extraordinary realism of the death scene in the last chapter was the subject of much comment.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Radishes, 8 cents-a bunch.

Parsley, 5 cents a bunch.

Fresh eggs, 35 cents a dozen.

Spare ribs, 10 cents a lb.

Western fish:

Lobsters, crabs, halibut and salmon.

The market remains monotonously the same. The housewife is presented with an unchanged array of baskets containing potatoes, turnips, and lettuce, boxes of oranges, and piles of nuts, and in the whole array is not a single suggestion for something different. The spring things that will be offered almost continuously from now on are new potatoes, rhubarb and boxes of strawberries at jerky intervals. But say, when strawberries really do come in and after you've had them once or twice just plain with apologetic city cream on them, and then somebody says in a casual tone, "Isn't it about time we had a strawberry shortcake," and then your mother says, why, yes, and then she makes one, rich, just oozing with berries and juice and whipped cream—but what's the use of harrowing up your feelings in the regulation Ibsen way, that iss fully four months off. At present you can have—well, just what you have been having for the past seven weeks.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Ashley Dentist Killed in a Quarrel Over 45 Cents.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—In a quarrel over a bill of 45 cents claimed to be due him, Henry Falkinson, a plasterer, shot Dr. Drake, a dentist of Ashley, Monday night. Drake died in ten minutes. Falkinson walked out of the office where the crime was committed, and has not been seen since. Drake was married and had a wife and child. He was well known and popular. Falkinson only moved to Ashley last summer. Nothing is known of his past. He is single.

Sioux Falls—Late Tuesday night the Democratic state central committee, which met here, announced that it had selected Yankton as the place for holding the next state nominating convention. It will be held on June 5.

It is now more than a month since the disappearance of Grant Dockstader, a well-known resident of the northern part of Minnehaha county, and not the slightest trace of the missing man can be found. His father, W. H. Dockstader, is one of the richest men in the county, and has made persistent efforts to ascertain the whereabouts of his son, but without success.

The old man has just completed the work of paying claims against his son to the amount of about $29,000, and expresses himself as willing to let bygones be bygones if his son will return and resume his place in the family circle. He bears his loss philosophically, and states that he would not mind that part of the affair if he could have his son back and settled down to business as formerly. He expresses himself as being quite hopeful that that his boy will eventually come back.

An effort will be made during the present session of congress to secure an appropriation of $200,000 for the construction of an addition to the government building in this city. The building was erected twelve years ago, at a cost of $185,000, and at that time was believed to be large enough to answer all purposes for at least twenty years. The rapid growth of Sioux Falls, however, has resulted in the building being declared too small.

George Schlosser, for the past four years postmaster of this city, has transferred the position to Albert H. Stites, who some weeks ago was appointed his successor. Deputy Postmaster George A. Wheeler also has retired from office, being succeeded by Jefferson Seals, who for some time was deputy clerk of courts of Minnehaha county.

Sisseton—Ole Jacobson, the young man who attempted suicide at Windom by shooting himself twice through the abdomen, is dead. An official inquiry into the details of the affair reveals the fact that Jacobson planned to kill his sweetheart and the whole Slentz family, with whom he was boarding. Before dying he made a confession of his full intentions.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bowbells—The 3-year-old son of Max Rubaike came near meeting his death in rather a peculiar manner. His parents had gone to visit a neighbor, leaving the child in bed asleep. On returning they were surprised to find the little fellow out in the yard lying face downward in the snow and all but dead. He was clad only in his nightdress and his limbs were rigid as if frozen. A physician hastily was summoned and restoratives applied, but it was some time before the child was out of danger. It seems that the boy had awakened, and, discovering the absence of his parents, had started out in search of them. He had gone but a short distance when he was overcome by the intense cold and lay for some time in the snow before the fortunate return of his parents, who discovered him just in the nick of time.

Fargo—Chief of Police Smith of Kenmare passed through here en route to St. Louis, where he goes to bring back Ada Benfield, the 15-year-old girl, the sensational story of whose arrest there was recently printed. The girl, when arrested, gave the name of Loraine Fairfax, and said she had left her home at Minot because her father did not treat her well. Myrtle Wallace, with whom the Benfield girl went to St. Louis, also was arrested, but later the police released both girls. Chief Smith has a warrant for the Benfield girl, charging her with the theft of $190 from a Bohemian neighbor at Kenmare. He also has a warrant for the Wallace woman, charging her with enticing the Benfield girl from home.

Major J. S. Murphy was on the stand in his own behalf in the case of the state against him on the charge of forging Ward county road warrants.

His direct examination was in the nature of a general denial of the charges against him. He told a plausible story in connection with the road taxes, and explained away many things that were regarded as strong points by the state. His chief contention is that the action was brought as a political prosecution. He claimed that, as agent of a big eastern trust company, he had loaned hundreds of thousands of dollars in Ward county, and the case was for the purpose of discrediting him with the capitalist.

Prominent members of the Order of St. Benedict are establishing a large colony of German Catholics in the Saskatchewan valley in northwestern Canada. H. J. Haskamp of St. Cloud, Minn., who is one of the promoters of the movement, says there are now 5,000 colonists in the valley, the largest colony of its kind on the continent. The Benedictines have ten churches there, and will early begin the work of erecting a college. The plans call for a stone building 80x240 feet in size. This work is in charge of Father Alfred, formerly of the Assumption church, St. Paul. The new college will be located at Muenster, a thriving town in the center of the colony.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Much Copper is Missing From the Hatch Smelting Plant.

Sault Ste. Marie—Five hundred dollars worth of copper is missing from the Hatch smelting plant, and the authorities are trying to find a clue that will lead to the capture of the thieves. So far they have not been successful. It is believed that the metal will be melted over and sold to junk dealers, but whether it has been disposed of has not been learned to date.

Houghton—James C. Thomson, agent in Houghton for the Anchor line, has received the news of the death in Chicago of his brother, William H. Thomson, formerly of Houghton and one of the best known men of that place during his residence there. Mr. Thomson died in St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, Saturday morning after a long illness, the exact nature of which has not been explained to his brother. The message stated that his illness had taken a contagious form toward the last, and had made necessary his prompt burial Sunday morning.

South Range—John Niemi of South Range, who was brought to Houghton last week on a petition from his wife for examination as to his sanity, has returned home. Judge Bailey of the probate court did not consider an examination necessary. Niemi was supposed to have become demented by brooding over the accidental death of his son. But it is now the belief of the officers their family dissensions contributed to his condition.

Calumet—Mrs. Michael Dwyer of Calumet has been informed of the demise of her brother, John Malvey, of Park City, Utah. Death was the result of an accident, the details of which have not been made known. The deceased was formerly a resident of Hancock.

VILLAGE ENJOINED.

Brooten Cannot Engage Any Longer in the Flour Business.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 24.—The village of Brooten in Stearns county cannot engage any longer in the flour business, Judge Searle of the district court has made permanent the injunction sought by L. L. Nesbeim, owner of the flour mill at that place, and which has been fought for several years through the district and supreme courts.

About three years ago a dispute arose between the miller and some of the business men of Brooten. As a result the village officers allowed the use of the village hall as a storage room for flour and used the town marshal to run the flour business. The flour was sold at cost for cash to everybody who traded in the village, to the detriment of the miller's business.

The court now says the plaintiff is entitled to a permanent injunction, and that the village of Brooten has no right to use the village hall and the services of the marshal in the way it did.

HELD ON MURDER CHARGE.

Isaac Syfe Suspected of Killing Kaden, a Rosebud Settler.

Norfolk, Neb., Jan. 24.—Isaac Syfe, suspected of threwing Peter Kaden, a Rosebud settler, into a well three weeks ago, is in jail at Bonesteel charged with first degree murder. He was arrested yesterday on order of the county commissioners.

A note left on Kaden's table, stating that he intended committing suicide is believed to have been written by Syfe. The two had trouble over a trade. Syfe is reported to have threatened Kaden's life, and Kaden was last seen alive with Syfe. Next day Kaden's dead body was found in the well, and four days later Syfe came to town to arrest Kaden, claiming ignorance of his death.

SIMPLE EVENING DRESS.

Braided Trousers and Pleated Bosom Shirts Bad Form.

London, Jan. 24.—The attempt to introduce some variety into men's evening dress by the adoption of braided trousers, double coat cuffs and pleated shirt fronts has ended in failure. Fashion is now compelling a change to the old and simple style.

"The best way to dress in the evening is to avoid anything which departs from the settled rule," says Men's Wear. "Braided trouser legs are not so frequently seen as they used to be. Waistcoats are either black or white according to taste—if the latter, made of rich corded silk—but in any event single breasted.

"The use of gray evening waistcoats may be justly classed as an extravagance of taste, but it is not observed in the better class of high society.

"Pleated fronts are not common this year; a dull patterning on the stiff front is sometimes seen, but a plain linen front with a single stud (gold or pearl) is more correct.

"Double coat cuffs are no longer worn by any man careful of the mode, nor yet double shirt cuffs, and the correct collar is a round polated wing."

Mrs. Sargent Praises Duffy's

The dear old lady was given up to die by the family doctor, but she is now strong and well, without an ache or pain, thanks to the great life-giving tonic-stimulant, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

MRS. SARGENT.

"I have not had a doctor since my sickness and I think Duffy's is the best medicine I can take for my old age, and for anyone else, young or old."

"Before using your Pure Malt Whiskey I was sick four springs running, and our family doctor did not think I could live any time; but since using your Malt Whiskey I have not been sick a bed once, and am up and around and quite smart. I have not had a doctor since my sickness, and I think Duffy's is the best medicine that I can take in my old age, and for anyone else, young or old."

MRS LUCINDA SARGENT, Lynn Mass.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has enabled hundreds of old men and women to pass the century mark and to enjoy the blessings of a healthy and vigorous old age. Duffy's is endorsed and recommended by ministers of the gospel and prescribed by doctors as the most nourishing, purest health-giving tonic-stimulant and invigorator known to medicine. It purifies the blood, quickens the circulation, repairs and builds up the weak and deranged nerves and tissues, and keeps every organ of the body in a strong, healthy condition, so as to resist the attacks of disease.

It is absolutely free from fusel oil and is the only whiskey recognized by the government as a medicine.

Duffy's is the only positive cure and preventive of consumption, pneumonia, dyspepsia, indigestion, grip, malaria, diseases of the throat and lungs, and all bowel and stomach troubles.

BEWARE of dangerous imitations and substitutes. They are positively harmful and are sold for profit only by unscrupulous dealers. CANNOT GET COMMITTEE

Boilermaker Bosses Say They Have Been Asking Adjustment.

No Move Made to Settle Boilermakers' Strike Yet.

The strike of the Boilermakers' union, which began yesterday morning on both sides of the bay, has not yet been settled, and it is claimed that so far, no attempt has been made to settle it. The boilermakers have been receiving 33 1-3 cents an hour for a 9-hour day, and now they ask 36 cents an hour for the same length of time. About 150 boilermakers are out, and about fifty or seventy-five helpers are also thrown out of work because of the strike. The shops involved are the Gogebic Steam Boiler works, the National Iron works, the Northwestern Boiler works of Duluth and the Northwestern Boiler works and National Boiler works of Superior.

This morning J. H. Oppermann, secretary of the Northwestern Boiler works of Duluth, said that the strikers have not yet appointed a committee, so far as he knows, to see the employers. He claimed that ever since the matter was first broached, about two weeks ago, the employers have asked for a committee from the union with which to confer, but nothing has yet been done. Mr. Oppermann says he believes that if the union will appoint such a committee the matter can be adjusted, but, of course, unless this is done nothing but a complete surrender on one side or the other will settle the strike. It is expected that meetings of both sides will be held today to find out the situation accurately and see what steps should be taken. It may be that committees from each side will confer today or tomorrow, but nothing has been done in this line yet so far as known.

Members of the union are employed in the Great Northern shops at Superior, the Duluth & Iron Range shops at Two Harbors, and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern shops at Proctor, but up to the present have not acted in this matter. They have been receiving 34½ cents an hour for their work.

A MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY IN SKY

Witnessed in the Red River Valley on Sunday Afternoon.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Red River valley, or many portions of it, where the blizzard was not raging to such a degree to make the sight impossible, witnessed one of the most wonderful phenomena for nearly three hours Sunday afternoon that was ever seen, and that surpassed any display of the aurora borealis that was ever visible, even in this section where periodically wonderful displays have not been very uncommon. It was nothing more or less than gigantic sundogs, first and secondary, the brilliance of which was sufficient to cast fantistic shadows and create in the minds of the superstitious a fear that some dreadful calamity was impending. Sundogs are common in this region, but such a display has never before been seen here. The display became apparent about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and increased in intensity till 3 o'clock, remaining at about the same degree of brilliancy till the sun sank between the fiery horizon in the West. The sundogs, as they usually appear at the right and left of the sun, and equidistant, were in evidence and were a dregree less bright than the sun itself. In addition there were equally bright sundogs above and below the sun and the four were connected by a gigantic circle of light which was but a trifle less brilliant than the dogs and in which the prismatic colors were shown wonderfully distinct.

Radiating from the primary sundogs at the right and left of the sun there was a brilliant circle of light, which extended to the right and left around the entire horizon meeting directly in the east, where another brilliant sundog was apparent, and intersected by two others equally brilliant one in the north and the other to the south.

Directly overhead the heavens were lighted up by another gigantic circle of light in which the prismatic colors were shown in more brilliance than in any rainbow ever seen. The effect of the whole was something beyond the powers of description.

KILLED BY DYNAMITE.

Nels Erickson Badly Mangled by Explosion at Alborn.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 24.—Nels Erickson, 40 years old, died at the Rood hospital from injuries received while at work for the Drake & Stratton company on railroad construction at Alborn. Erickson, who was employed at common labor, was shot by a blast of dynamite and severely injured. He was brought here and his wounds dressed. Both eyes were destroyed and nearly all the skin was removed from his face by the gravel thrown by the shot. The left hand was shattered so that amputation was made, and several toes were taken off the left foot, and the left leg was broken near the ankle.

GIRL ASSAULTED.

Tower, Minn., Jan. 24.—While on her way to her home, east of town, early last evening, Nora Sullivan, aged 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sullivan, was assaulted by an unknown man. Only the approach of a team along the lonely road saved the girl from outrage. The assailant fought with the girl several minutes, striking several blows before he was frightened away by the noise of an approaching team.

DEATH AT EVELETH.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 24.—Henry G. Skramstead died yesterday after several days' illness from diabetes. He lived in Eveleth eleven years, and for the past four years has been watchman in the employ of the Drake & Stratton company. He leaves a family consisting of Mrs. Skramstead and three boys and one girl.

CONVICTED OF PERJURY

Timber Cruiser Straw Found Guilty of Fooling Land Seekers.

Criminal Calendar is Cleared and Civil Suits Nearly Done.

The jury in the case of Edward J. Straw, tried during the past few days in the United States court for perjury in connection with final proof on public land, returned a verdict last night of guilty, but recommended clemency from the court. Sentence will be passed today by Judge Amidon.

The charge was that Straw took two St. Paul school teachers up into the Sturgeon lake country, northwest of Hibbing, and showed them a fine body of timber, telling them that that was their land; that after they had proven up they found that the land they had actually filed on and proven up on was sparse so far as timber was concerned. The evidence established to the satisfaction of the jury that while Straw pretended to show the teachers 10-61-21, he had actually shown them 5-60-21. The case went to the jury at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and fifty minutes later the jury had returned its verdict.

It is probable that Judge Amidon will return to his home in Fargo, N. D., today, as there is nothing further in the criminal part of the court, and the civil suits are almost over.

Before Judge Morris yesterday the defendant's motion for a direction of verdict in the suit of Robert O. Johnson against F. A. Patrick & Co., asking damages for injuries received in falling down an elevator shaft at the defendant's building at the corner of Commerce street and South Fifth avenue west, was granted. The damage suit of Lucy Sims, as administrator of the estate of William F. Sims, against the Northern Pacific Railway company, began yesterday afternoon, jurors being drawn for it.

TAX NOTICES ARE SENT OUT

County Treasurer Ready to Receive 1905 Personal Property Taxes.

Personal property tax notices for 1905 are now being mailed by County Treasurer W. A. Holgate, and it is expected that the collections will begin very shortly. The tax notices are usually sent out a little earlier in the year, but owing to the confusion and inconvenience at the treasurer's office, due to the extension work on the office the delay has been unavoidable. Even had the notices been sent out sooner the treasurer and his clerical force would not have been able to handle the collections with convenience as the clerks have been scattered in the various other offices throughout the courthouse while the building improvement has been going on.

The extension that has been made to the treasurer's office is just about completed and the room will be occupied by the time the taxes commence to come in. The additional room will give greatly added space for counters, and the applications of taxpayers who appear to pay their taxes can be attended to with greater facility than ever before. There have been times when the narrow space outside the counters in the treasurer's office was crowded with people to pay their taxes and but few clerks could stand at the counters to attend to their wants.

Persons receiving tax notices must pay up before March 1. In case they neglect to attend to the matter the collection will be turned over to the sheriff on or about the middle of April and that officer will proceed to take judgment and make seizures of personal property of a sufficient value to liquidate the tax.

SELLWOOD IS CHOSEN HEAD

Is President of the Cass and Bradford Mining Companies.

Joseph Sellwood was re-elected president of the Cass Mining company and also named to head the Bradford Mining company, at the annual meeting of those corporations in his office in the American Exchange bank building yesterday. J. W. Rhodes of Pittsburg, Pa., was elected president of the La Rue Mining company, to succeed him.

J. C. Gilchrist of Cleveland, Ohio, was elected vice president of the La Rue company, which declared a dividend of $5 a share, which was $50,000 on a capital stock of $1,000,000. The La Rue mine is located at Nashwauk and is now controlled by the Cherry Valley Iron company. Mr. Sellwood has disposed of his interest in the property. The La Rue shipped 158,505 tons of ore during 1905.

Capt. John Mitchell of Cleveland was elected vice president of the Cass Mining company. The Cass property is located at Biwabik and shipped 61,581 tons of ore last season. J. H. Berto of Cleveland was elected vice president of the Bradford Mining company, which controls the Morrow mine at Hibbing. This mine shipped 55,000 tons in 1905.

WILD CAT AT ST. PETER.

Patrick Martin Has Exciting Experience Before Killing Brute.

St. Peter, Minn., Jan. 24.—This town is crowding Duluth for wild animal honors. Monday evening a full grown wild cat was shot and killed well inside the city limits. It was brought down by Patrick Martin, who lives in the outskirts of St. Peter, and his experience was somewhat exciting. Several times of late he has missed chickens and other poultry and Monday evening when a great commotion arose in his barnyard he ran out to learn the cause of the trouble.

As he entered the chickenhouse he saw a large animal slink away into a remote corner. While still on the threshold, the beast sprang at him out of the darkness, but his quickness enabled him to slam the door and make a prisoner of the cat. Returning to his dwelling he selected a shell charged with heavy shot and dispatched the catamount, which was found to measure seven feet and eight inches from the top of its head to the tip of its tail.

RECEIVED BLOW IN SOLAR PLEXUS

Boy Boxer in State of Coma for Many Hours.

New York, Jan. 24.—In a coma from which it has been impossible to rouse him, since early yesterday, is another victim of the mushroom boxing clubs, which conduct contests between mere boys. He is in the Seney hospital, Brooklyn, and is Lawrence Tighe, 16 years old, of 272 Bond street, Brooklyn.

After surgeons had worked for hours over the body, Dr. William Bliss, head of the hospital staff, said his condition was such that the outcome might be fatal. Tighe was struck on the solar plexus. Joseph Rivers, 16 years old, who, it is said, struck Tighe; Rivers' alleged manager, William J. Gilfoyle, and William McDonald, the alleged referee of the bout, are prisoners, charged with felonious assault upon Tighe.

No policemen were present, it is said, at the boxing contests of the Sir John club, at 405 Third avenue, Sunday night. About 100 men attended. There had been two fast even rounds and the final round was half over when Rivers, it is alleged, sent his right to Tighe's body, striking squarely above the nerve center called the solar plexus. Tighe crumpled up and, as he fell, his opponent drove hard to the jaw. Tighe's seconds could not rouse him and he was taken from the ring unconscious. After a physician had failed to revive him, the boy was removed to the hospital.

FRANK FARLEY KILLED.

Former Resident of Crookston Killed by the Cars.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 24.—Frank Farley, who was killed by the cars yesterday in Cincinnati, was a former resident of Crookston, employed for the past few years as brakeman on the Iron Range railroad. He was 25 years of age, single, and his brother Zan is a business man here.

FRENCH PEOPLE DYING OUT?

Birth Rate for 1905 Lowest Yet, With Higher Death Rate.

Paris, Jan. 24.—Never before was the crop of French babies as small as in the year 1905, and the French provincial papers are liberal in their quotations of President Roosevelt and race suicide. Only 810,000 babies were born during the year, a falling off of 8,500 as compared with the previous year. Meanwhile the death rate shows France even worse "to the bad." Economists and political writers are more worried over this than they would be over the loss of an army or a navy. One set of figures shows that while for 10,000 inhabitants the increase in France is only 19, the increase for the same number in Germany is 142 and in America 127. From this it is argued that so far as population is concerned France is burning the candle of life at both ends.

FINED $50 EACH.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 24.—A. M. Ross, colored, and Mrs. Maude Brant, white, who were arrested in a room over a Chinese restaurant yesterday morning, were fined $50 each by Judge Brady on a statutory charge.

PICKED TWELVE LOVELY GIRLS

Large Salaries for the Most Beautiful Chorus Girls.

New York, Jan. 24.—Swathed in sable, ermine and just plain Alaska skunk, about 250 girls lined up outside the Lyric stage door in an answer to a notice from the Shuberts that they were ready and willing to pay $50 a week to the twelve most beautiful women in New York who would appear for three minutes a day in their production of "Mexicana."

Such an embarrassment of beauty poured in that Jacob Shubert, who sat in judgment in the center of the stage, was almost bowled over. There were tall girls and short girls; girls with "magnificent embonpoint," as one of them termed it; girls as thin as laths and pocket edition Venuses.

"I work for the joy of working," remarked a girl as she swished in and cuddled down by Mr. Shubert to give him her name and tell him all about it. Another girl with an automobile veil and the gift of garrulity floated in and "braced the management for a touch" at once, saying there were some things she wanted to get before she entered the contest. A show girl de luxe, with near blonde hair and conspicuously carmine lips, toyed with a golden pencil which hung from a bag on her wrist, and began to jot down expenses.

"I pay my chauffeur $25 a week, my maid $15, and there's $75 for my hat," she sighed. "Fifty doesn't go far, but it helps some, and, besides, I am engaged to a millionaire and wear a jade frog for luck. So I don't have to worry."

The fashion writer who sagely remarked that stockings would play an important part in the winter fashions would have gone mad with joy had she been present for the tattooed openwork hosiery was much in evidence as the haughty show girls held up their fluffy, frilly skirts and stalked about the stage.

"I want to know what the musical director is like before I decide to stay," said a girl got up like a queen of Sheba. "If he's the sort who stirs us girls up when we are taking a quiet little sleep while the comics are doing their turn there's nothing doing with me."

"Why didn't you wear a tiara?" inquired a rival with withering humor, as she cast a critical eye on the queen of Sheba's "gilt junk."

"Perhaps you don't think I've got one," was the reply. "I could make Mrs. Astor look tired if I wanted to with my jewels, but I don't believe in display."

"You got to show me," said the other, skipping away.

Meanwhile, Mr. Shubert, who posed as the modern Paris, was having troubles of his own in selecting the fortunate twelve. He at last decided on these for "Strolling on the Avenue," as their song is called. Dorothy Waldron, Mabel Brooks, Amelia La Fontaine, Sadie Endicott, Gertrude Betts, Celia Hirsfield, Florence Martin, Florence Seamen, Marie Grass, Malvina Maurice, Frances Ayres and Rose Clifford.

POLICE HOLD GIRL.

Mary Roddin Says She Was Driven From St. Michael Home.

Milwaukee, Jan. 24.—Charging that a farmer of St. Michael, Minn., drove her from home, Mary Roddin, aged 15 years, was picked up by the police here yesterday. She says she was visiting at his home when one day he gave her $10 and told her to go as far as the money could carry her. The police are mystified over the girl's different statements. An effort will be made to find her parents.

'BE SOBER'

Says President Roosevelt

"It is of incalculable consequence to the man himself that he should be sober and temperate, and it is of even more consequence to his wife and his children; for it is a hard and cruel fact that in this life of ours the sins of the man are often visited most heavily upon those whose welfare should be his one special care."—President Roosevelt to the Miners at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

The World of Sports

STOCKING WINS OUT

Duluth Rink Captures International Trophy From Superior.

Game Was the Final Contest of the Big Bonspiel.

The International trophy went to the Stocking rink in the final game played last evening with the Chisholm rink of Superior.

During the afternoon the Stocking rink defeated the Macrae rink in the the semi-finals by a score of 13 to 6, and the victory left Stocking and the Chisholm rink of Superior to fight it out in the final round for the possession of the trophy won from the Canadian curlers in the match played last Wednesday.

The game was one of the most exciting of the bonspiel, the final score being 10 to 9 in favor of Stocking.

At the close of the tenth end the score stood 8 to 8 and it was anybody's game.

On the eleventh end Chisholm added one, and the prospects for Stocking looked dark when Chisholm started off the last end by getting a well guarded stone close to the button.

Chisholm laid one on the head, until Stockings last stone, which cleared the shot out of the house, and left Stocking lying two, giving the game to the Duluth skip.

The victory gave the Stocking rink two first prizes in the bonspiel. It won out in the Meyers event and in the International. In addition to taking the third prize in the St. Paul Jobbers event. The rink is composed of Gilbert Cutler, W. L. McLennan, George F. McKenzie and D. W. Stocking.

Duluth rinks captured four of the six first prizes in the bonspiel.

Yesterday's games completed the program of the bonspiel, and the last of the visitors have left the city.

E. W. Nettletson of St. Paul, who acted as secretary and manager of the bonspiel, is in St. Mary's hospital, suffering from an attack of pneumonia contracted during the spiel. He caught a heavy cold on Saturday or Sunday, and Monday morning he was very ill, although he managed to be about the rink throughout the day, and see all of the events but one safely out of the way. Monday evening he went to the hospital, and it was seen that he was suffering from a rather severe attack of pneumonia. His condition is serious, but good hopes are entertained for his recovery.

TO HOLD CLUB TOURNAMENT

Duluth Ski Club Makes Plans for a Second Meeting.

At a meeting of the members of the Duluth Ski club, held last evening in the St. Louis hotel, it was decided to hold a club tournament at some date between Feb. 10 and Feb. 22, to be decided upon later.

The tournament of the St. Paul club will be held on the former date, and the national tournament at Ishpeming on the latter date. The Duluth club will be represented at both events, and also at the tournament of the Ashland club which will be held on Jan. 31.

The committee in charge of the Duluth tournament is composed of the following members: John Heltman, Frank E. Adams, Dr. G. H. Jones, Fred Merritt, P. C. Wright, John R. Heino, C. Puck, John J. Waagenstein, J. Wannebo and L. A. Larson.

The club tramp will hereafter be held on Wednesday evening each week in place of Tuesday evening, and the members will meet this evening in front of the St. Louis hotel, for the hike to the hill, where refreshments will be served.

Norlin Wins at Pool.

Charles Norlin defeated Charles Westberg by the score of 100 to 91 in the pool contest played last evening at the Ideal hall. Norlin has now won three games and lost one, while Westberg has won two and lost two, and Mergener has lost two.

THE CLUB TROPHIES

Will Again Occupy Attention of Duluth Curling Club Members.

Contests Delayed by Late Opening of Season and Bonspiel.

With the bonspiel out of the way, the members of the Duluth curling club will again begin play on the club trophy contests, which have been delayed about two weeks by the big event.

The season, moreover, was late in opening, and the different trophy contests are not as far advanced as is usual at this season of the year. The games will have to be hurried through if the trophies are to be awarded this year.

The St. Louis trophy contest is the farthest advanced of any, and is nearing the semi-final round. In The Herald contest, one of the squads has about finished its games, but the other three squads have scarcely begun, and it will be two or three weeks before the squad winners are known.

The drawings for the Manley-McLennan agency trophy have not yet been made. This is looked upon as the most important trophy of the year. It was won from the Superior and West Duluth clubs in competition, and is now being played for by the different rinks in the Duluth club. The rinks are divided into squads, and the winners of the four squads play off in a final round.

The drawings have not yet been announced, but they will probably be made by the secret games committee within a few days.

Play will also be continued in the Caledonia trophy contest, and the rink winning this contest is entitled to represent the club at the Winnipeg bonspiel which will be held early next month.

Duluth will be represented at the Winnipeg bonspiel by at least one rink, and two if possible. The generous manner in which the Winnipeg rinks patronized the Duluth bonspiel, leaves the local club under obligations to return the compliment, and an effort will be made to get a good representation to attend the big event of the year in Canadian curling circles.

The skating rink at the Duluth club has been turned over to the skaters again, and the curlers will have to content themselves with five sheets of ice for the remainder of the year.

SAVES TWO TRAINS.

Track Walker's Daughter Discovers Heavy Boulder on Rails.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 24.—Two passenger trains on the Northern Centarl railroad yesterday were saved from being wreecked by Mary McCall, aged 16 years, the daughter of a track walker, living at Clarks Ferry. The girl saw a huge boulder roll from the mountain side onto the tracks, near her home. Taking a lantern she ran down the tracks and stopped the Erie express within a few yards of the obstruction. She then hurried in the other direction and stopped the Erie fast train. The tracks were later cleared of the rock by a wrecking crew.

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY

THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE

WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

Close of white sale.

This week is the last of our big white sale—the most successful yet.

Better come during

The next three days.

3000 new style white shirt waists in a sale of absorbing interest, beginning Thursday at 8:30 a. m.

While our Cloak buyer was in New York last week, he found one of the large makers very anxious to dispose of his entire balance of this spring's stock of white Shirt Waists, because they were in the way of advance orders for summer. Our buyer offered him spot cash for the entire lot, a price about

One-third less than the regular manufacturers' price

Which he at first declined, but two days later he accepted the offer a few hours before the buyer was to take the train for Duluth.

As soon as the offer was accepted the entire purchase was rushed on by express. We have been busy assorting these beautiful waists into lots for several days and we assure you, they panned out even better than we expected when we closed the deal with the maker, so that, at our prices, every waist will be a distinct and sure enough bargain.

It will be the first time on record that any house in Duluth has been able to offer advance spring styles in shirt waists for less than the advance price.

And as all this class of merchandise is steadily going up in value and price, the advantage to you of our big purchase and generous offer ought to insure

A big crowd when the sale opens on Thursday morning.

The entire 3,000 waists, none reserved, will be placed on sale in 5 lots. In each and every one of these lots the values will be at once appreciated by discerning women.

Lot No. 1.
White waists worth $1.50
98c
Beautiful white linene waists in new spring styles, box pleated or embroidered fronts, with neatly embroidered stock collars. These waists have the new long cuffs, which are pleated and cut to match the front. The materials are strong and durable, and the waists are well made and easily worth $1.50.

Lot No. 2.
White waists worth $2
$1.25
All white linene waists with fronts of five groups of fine French cluster tucking and with box pleated panel. These waists have stock collars with cluster tucking to match in back and front—some have plain hemstitched and tucked fronts—all have the new long cuffs and puffed sleeves and are excellent $2.00 values in any sale.

Lot No. 3.
White waists worth $2.50
$1.49
Linen finished waists with wide panels down the front, which are daintily silk embroidered. In addition they are tucked and pleated in both front and back—the collar is the stock pattern, tucked to match fronts—sleeves are the new puffs and long cuffs—every waist worth $2.50.

Lot No. 4.
White waists worth $3
$1.98
These are very handsome waists, real linen fronts, embroidered all over with silk embroidering in eyelet designs—also box pleated and tucked front and back—with tucked collar to match—every waist the equal of any waist possible to be found in Duluth at $3.00

Lot No. 5.
Linen waists worth $4.50
$2.98
Genuine Imported Irish Linen Waists in the most popular soft finished effects. The fronts are daintily HAND EMBROIDERED in a large variety of beautiful designs, with tucked collars and backs. They button in the back and have a French tucked yoke in addition to the embroidery fronts. $4.50 would be a fair price for them—so you can be sure they're great bargains.

Up to $6.50 Hats—$1.89.

Ladies: Here's a "last call" in Millinery that ought to be of interest to you—more ways than one. A table of 21 beautifully trimmed hats, all this year's styles, new stylish and attractive, made of silk velvet and trimmed with wings of late ornaments. There are no blacks in the lot at this price, but they're hats we've been selling for up to $6.50. You'll want one Thursday, the price is only $1.89

Ginghams at 3½c.

Seems like an awfully little price for apron check ginghams, don't it? Well, it is—but it gives big satisfaction and that's the point. They are all sizes of checks in blue, green, red and brown and you may take all you want

3½c is the price per yard only 3½c

$1.25 Peau de Soie 75c

Have you been looking for new black silks? Here's your chance to buy black silks that will compare favorably with any $1.25 material you ever bought. This will rival any of the best bargains of the past "Rummage" period—and it's brand new. Be one of the early comers Thursday morning and get some of this big "snap" at, per yard 75c

MANY MEN DISCHARGED FROM THE NAVY YARDS.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Because of the refusal of congress to include in the urgent deficiency bill $1,000,000 asked to cover the cost of repairs on ships in need of overhauling, Secretary Bonaparte was compelled to issue and order reducing by 44 per cent the force of employes under the bureau of steam engineering at all yards and stations. This will hinder and may stop altogether the work of overhauling the armored cruiser New York, as well as the repairs on the Indiana and Columbia and other ships which through constant service, are in poor condition, and cause the discharge of about 1,000 men.

DAVIS MUST STAND TRIAL.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Judge Kavanagh yesterday overruled the motion made by the attorneys for William J. Davis to quash the indictments charging involuntary manslaughter in connection with the Iroquois theater fire. Under the decision Mr. Davis will now be compelled to stand trial in the criminal court. Immediately after the announcement of the decision of Judge Kavanagh, the attorneys for Mr. Davis declared that they will attempt to secure a change of venue to another county. This motion will be argued within a few weeks.

"WORKED" RICH MEN

Col. Mann Tells How He Got Hundreds of Thousands.

Many Prominent Men Were "Immunes" From Town Topics.

New York, Jan. 24.—The trial of Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, charged with criminal libel by Justice Joseph M. Deuel, a city magistrate, as a result of the publication of a paragraph concerning the latter's connection with Town Topics, is nearing an end.

After the examination of Col. W. D. Mann, editor of Town Topics, was concluded yesterday morning the defense introduced a number of witnesses and upon adjournment last evening counsel for Mr. Hapgood announced that they would probably finish their case today.

Col. Mann, then told of the beginning of his connection with Town Topics and how W. K. Vanderbilt came to be a stockholder of the paper. Col. Mann said:

"In 1878 I was connected with the Pullman Car company. When the crisis came on Wall street, or I might say the conspiracy," said the witness, "I found myself suddenly changed from being a millionaire to owning not a dollar and being $100,000 in debt. It was at this time I became interested in Town Topics and I went to W. K. Vanderbilt and asked him for a loan. I think he gave me about $25,000. I told Mr. Vanderbilt that I wished to get off debt and wanted him to help me. He told me that what I owed him I need not worry about. I went to Mr. Vanderbilt and told him I needed more money and I asked him to take some Town Topics stock as collateral security. Later he returned my notes and the stock and said he did not care to loan me any more money, but he said he hoped I would get out."

Asked how he became sufficiently acquainted with J. P. Morgan to borrow $25,000 from him without security Col. Mann said: "I met and I knew his father. I think I knew him well enough to ask him.

"Will you tell the jury," asked District Attorney Jerome, "what reason there was for Thomas F. Ryan to lend you $10,000?"

"Well that was three or four years ago. As I remember, Mr. Whitney introduced me to Mr. Ryan. He said I was a friend of his. He said: 'Mr. Mann is a gentleman, and an honest man, and any time you can do anything for him, or lend him any money, I want you to do it.'"

Col. Mann was then questioned by Attorney James W. Osborne of Mr. Hapgood's defense.

"Do you remember that scandalous paragraphs were written about E. C. Jones?" the lawyer asked.

"I do not."

"After you got the $10,000 did you write pleasant paragraphs?"

"Possibly then and possibly before; why should I not?"

"Why, of course, after you got the money," said Mr. Osborne.

Col. Mann said that B. N. Baker had refused to buy stock in Town Topics. Being shown a paragraph of Town Topics after referring to Mr. Baker, the witness discussed the question of scandal in the paragraph, without expressing his own opinion on the matter.

Clarence Jones, he said, loaned him $10,000.

Col. Mann was questioned about a story written by Edwin Lefevere and entitled the "Great Refuge." He said he did not remember the story, but the title sounded familiar to him.

"Don't you remember speaking to J. P. Morgan about it?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"I do not."

"The story was about two great financiers?"

"I don't remember," said Col. Mann.

Col. Mann left the witness stand at this point.

Edwin B. Jorkman, a reporter, who was the next witness, said that Justice Deuel told him that he (Deuel) was the censor of Town Topics.

The witness said that when Col. Mann was away he (Deuel) was the editor-in-chief and at all times he was consulted by Col. Mann.

The next witness was Robert A. Irving, editor of the New Yorker, who is under arrest on a charge of libel brought against him in connection with a story in his own paper.

He was questioned by Mr. Shepperd of counsel for the defense. Mr. Shepperd then brought acknowledgements from the witness that Melville E. Stone of the Associated Press, Thomas W. Lawson, Harry Lehr, Stuyvesant Fish, Henry Flagler, Creighton Webb, John E. Mallon, Reginald Ward and August Belmont were on the "immune list."

Editor Wayne told of the card index used in the office of Town Topics.

"Had Town Topics a list of immunes?" asked Mr. Shepperd.

"Yes," I remember some of them. Russel A. Alger, James Hazen Hyde, Perry Belmont, James R. Keene, W. A. Vanderbilt, G. J. Gould, J. P. Morgan, Chauncey M. Depew, A. M. Case and about fifty others."

A PROPER VIEW.

Austin Transcript: Let those who own the lands that need draining in the northern part of the state pay for the draining. If they were still government lands and the cost of drainage could be added to the price when sold, it would be all right to drain them at public expense. As it is, the public funds should not be used strictly for private benefit.

Here is another Southern Minnesota newspaper opposed to state drainage, whose opposition is based wholly on a misunderstanding of the proposition, and will of necessity disappear as soon as the facts are made clear. The Herald has explained this many times, but since the Austin Transcript is a new member of The Herald's exchange brotherhoood, it seems necessary to explain it once more.

Those who own lands in Northern Minnesota in need of drainage should by all means pay for the draining, as the Transcript says. If by putting in a dollar or two an acre the lands can be drained and made fit for use, when they are now idle and worthless, and their value advanced from little or nothing to $10 or $12 an acre, the Transcript would no doubt agree that it would be a good business proposition for the owner to drain them.

Now the state owns several millions of acres of swamp land, practically every acre of which can be made tillable by drainage, and the campaign for state drainage is simply to have the state drain these lands. Not one dollar of state money is asked for the drainage of lands owned privately. That must be done by the counties at the expense of the owners, according to the county drainage law. But since the state cannot sell its swamp lands in their present condition, and thus add to its school funds that help educate the children of Southern Minnesota as well as those of Northern Minnesota, and since by draining them it can sell them at a price six, eight or ten times the cost of drainage, it ought to make that investment, in order not only that the state may profit by the sale, but by the addition of thousands of home builders and taxpayers to her population.

The Minnesota Drainage league was formed for the purpose of making this clear to the people of the state, in order that they may send to the next legislature men willing to vote money for state drainage, not as a contribution for the benefit of Northern Minnesota and her people, but as an investment that will yield large profit to the state and its citizens. That is the whole story of state drainage.

A SAD FAILURE.

Not long ago interest was aroused by the failure of a man down in Indiana who had run a string of grocery stores "as Christ would run them," to use his own words.

His business principles were founded upon faith in humanity, a faith great enough to enable him to let people help themselves, to take what they wanted and to pay when they chose. He is left, after a period of apparent prosperity, with bankruptcy proceedings to undergo, and a bunch of outstanding accounts that is appalling. His faith, apparently, was misplaced, for people took advantage of his methods right and left, and robbed him without mercy. At first the plan went swimmingly. Starting out with one store he spread out until he had eighteen or twenty. Then, when his prosperity seemed at flood tide, and his experiment seemed to be a thorough success, the bottom fell out, and his failure was as conspicuous as his success had been.

This man will get the sympathy there always is for those who "mean well," but have poor judgment. It is pity, rather, pity as much for his poor discernment as for the misfortune that resulted from it. He assumed that if Christ were conducting a grocery store—rather an irreverent assumption in the minds of many—that he would not conduct it on ordinary business principles, but would give his goods freely to whoever called, trusting to their good faith and integrity for the pay. There is nothing in religion to warrant this method of doing business, and there is a lot in life to prove its inadvisability. True, it is a pretty mean man that would cheat a nature so confiding, but those who have been around much will all admit that there is no lack of mean people in the world.

And there is a question if this quixotic grocer did not do serious injury to his fellowmen by subjecting them to the temptation to which so many succumbed. Every patron of his stores was on his or her honor. If they went into a store and took a ham, they could pay what they chose for it, and pay it when they wished. A lot of people did not choose to pay much, and a lot more chose not to pay at all. The result was a financial failure, and the failure of his experiment in new business methods.

HONORING A MALEFACTOR.

The civil war is over, and even its aftermath of sectional division, perpetuated and aggravated by the horrors of political reconstruction, has been largely obliterated. Yet perhaps there is nothing that would have so strong a tendency to revive the division as the proposal of the Daughters of the Confederacy to erect a monument to Capt. Wirz, the infamous commander of Andersonville prison, who was properly executed by the federal government at the conclusion of the war, after having been proved guilty of the series of unprecedented horrors that marked his care of the federal prisoners confined in that Confederate hell.

The Atlanta News recently published at some length the reasons for the proposal to erect a monument to the memory of Wirz, and a careful reading of them shows nothing more substantial than an allegation that the North was to blame for the sufferings of federal prisoners in Confederate prison because of its refusal to exchange prisoners. This is a very flimsy excuse for perpetuating the memory of Wirz by a flattering monument. The only thing that commends this monster to the memory of man is his infliction of unspeakable horrors upon the unarmed and defenseless prisoners under his charge, and this earned him perpetual execration rather than such honor as is proposed.

The refusal of the North to exchange prisoners was a hard but necessary exigency of war. The North had plenty of men, while the South's supply was largely in the field or in prison. To release Confederate prisoners was to prolong the war, which had settled down into a test of endurance, with the odds all on the side of the North. The North could spare the men it left in Southern prisons and the men that were sacrificed at Cold Harbor and in the Wilderness, but the South could not get along without the men it lost through imprisonment and slaughter, so it failed.

But that was no reason why Wirz should have starved and maltreated his prisoners, so that the very name of Andersonville calls up memories of horrors unprecedented in history, horrors that not even the savagery of the American Indian ever accomplished. It was not the South that was guilty of these outrages, but such men as Wirz, who were a disgrace to the chivalry and manhood of the South. To honor the black memory of such a man with a monument such as is proposed is to dishonor the South, and to discredit the gallant Southern warriors who lost their lives not through criminal punishment for horrible atrocities, but fighting bravely for their beloved though mistaken cause.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

A marriage license law having been proposed in the New York legislature, the Brooklyn Eagle opposes it as a thing that civilization has outgrown, stating that it is a useless form since the state has no authority to prevent marriages anyway, and that it therefore amounts only to a tax on the marriage ceremony.

Now the experience of Minnesota, which has had a marriage license law for years, in comparison with Wisconsin, where for years there was no license law, leads to the conclusion that the requirement of a license is a thoroughly wholesome restriction. Perhaps a mere license, without any restrictions whatever, serves no useful purpose, yet in the days when that was all Minnesota had, and Wisconsin did not even have that much, Wisconsin was a sort of Gretna Green for Minnesota people who contracted marriage hurriedly, who wished to avoid the publicity involved in securing a license, and who therefore hurried over to that state, got married in haste, and repented at leisure.

One result of this is that during all that time, and for several years after, eight out of ten marriages resulting in divorces in the Duluth courts were contracted in Superior. The absence of all restriction and publicity in Wisconsin led many couples to enter marriage relations on the spur of the moment, when if they had had to go to the trouble of securing a license they would have given it a second thought and would have abstained. Now Wisconsin has a license law, which requires that licenses must be taken out five days prior to the marriage, and that state is no longer Minnesota's Gretna Green.

Within a few years, however, Minnesota has added certain restrictions to her marriage license law that are healthy and effective, and that prove the value of the requirement. Parties taking out licenses must swear that they have not been divorced within six months, and that they are not afflicted with insanity or epilepsy. Before these requirements were made, it was not an infrequent thing to see people hurry from the divorce court upstairs in the courthouse down to the clerk's office, there to take out a license to marry somebody else. That can no longer be done in this state, and it is the license system that prevents it.

Marriage is a solemn thing, to be entered upon with caution and deliberation, and any restriction that compels consideration is as wholesome as any law restricting freedom of divorce could possibly be.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Ocean travel in the second cabin has increased greatly since the big new liners of the Baltic type have been put in service," said F. C. Stewart of New York at the Spalding. "Deck room is larger and and many of the discomforts of the old second cabins have been eliminated. In most cases the people in the second cabin get the same sort of amusement through the voyage as do people of the first cabin.

"The veteran anecdotes of the smoking room are as much at home aft as they are amidships. On some lines the second cabin has its own concerts, and if it has been a year of bad business at the theaters, or if the vaudeville stage happens to have sent a light or two aboard, the array of talent often surpasses that which the purser has mustered farther forward.

"The audience is ten times more responsive, and it gives its bit toward the segment's orphanage quite as generously in proportion to its means. In one respect, in its diversions, the second cabin differs from the first. Even where a considerate company has provided it with a little library, even when it brings its own magazines and novels aboard, it reads, or pretends to read, far less than does the first.

"The patrons of the second cabin are the people who are 'strapped,' and usually they are a pretty good sort, and it is they who usually make the life of the second cabin so lively that any one with a responsive soul forgets its material discomforts. At all seasons, too, there is a sprinkling of the ever-economical, but they make uncomcenial traveling companions. It is the stage folk who have had a bad season, the gay society man who has spent more than his means warrant, or the sport who has gone broke at some game of chance or other that furnish the most entertainment. It really isn't at all unpleasant as a trip to look back on, this traveling second cabin. I tried it once, and I ought to know."

"It may surprise you to know it," said a bartender in one of the local hotels, "but hot drinks appear to be falling off in favor during the winter. Time was—and I remember it well—when we had to keep the big kettle of water going all the time to supply the trade, but now a quart or two of water is apt to boil for a dozen hours without replenishing, so scant is the demand for hot drinks.

"Half a dozen years ago hot toddies, Tom and Jerries, hot whiskies and other potables of that same description were called for repeatedly. The Tom and Jerry bowl was always in evidence on the bars, but now it isn't such a common sight. The demand is so slight that it doesn't pay to keep an outfit going. Christmas or New Year's day there is generally a revival of interest in the old drinks, and Tom and Jerries, etc., are in steady demand.

"On other occasions, however, the cold drinks are in favor, and really I think it is best, for the heat of the hot drink, combined with the heat naturally imparted by the alcohol, puts a man in such a state of perspiration that going out into the cold night air after partaking of one is a pretty dangerous thing. Maybe it is a growing knowledge of the principle of hygiene that causes the unpopularity of the hot drink. This winter has been too warm for them, anyway, but in previous years I have noticed a falling off in the demand, that was in no wise due to the state of the weather."

Exploiting Pure Foods.

Philadelphia Record: "If any consumer is troubled about adulterated food products the fault lies with him when 325,000 retailers are anxious to furnish an exceptional dietary at marvelously low cost," observed the American Grocer.

And if any of those 325,000 retailers who really deals in pure foods fails to get his due share of the trade the fault lies with him when every nook and corner of the United States is adequately covered by newspaper circulation.

Too many virtuous grocers expect the public to discover their virtue by accident. Honest dealing in a trade in which there is a great deal of dishonesty ought to be made a matter of newspaper boast.

Tried and Found True.

Cass Lake Times: In these days of independent voting there is no doubt that when a man has been tried and found honest and capable of filling a position, the people will hesitate long before giving him up to risk the chances of some one whom they have not proven. The endorsement of President Northrup, though not political, carries with it a ponderous budget for thought, and when the voter permits thought to govern, politics go glimmering down the dark corridors of the past and are forgotten. An honest man in the gubernatorial chair is such an anomaly in these times, and the tenure of political graft is so weak, that though the politician may build hopes of official greatness, there will always exist a feeling in the breast of the honest voter that an honest governor, capable and strong, will better serve them than the trickster and political gerrymanderer. If Governor Johnson is re-elected—and we believe he will be—he may accord to the versatile president of the state university a large share of his success.

THE WEATHER

Yes, it was right sharp this morning, and for the first five minutes in the open air one had to hang on to his ears pretty closely with occasional loving attentions to his nose and cheeks. But the thermometer did not get so very low, 10 degs. below being the bottom, while elsewhere in the Northwest temperature of twice that many degs. below zero were fairly common. Yesterday's highest run was 6 degs. above. Milder temperature, with snow—a little of which fell in the night—are outlined for tonight and tomorrow by the weather man, who says of conditions:

"The cold wave is central over western Ontario with temperatures 20 degs. below zero at Port Arthur, and it is some what colder in all districts east of the Mississippi river. The severe cold in the Northwest has moderated considerably, due to the disturbance over British Columbia which has also caused an increase in warmth over most sections west of the Mississippi river and some rain or snow in the far west. Snow fell during yesterday or last night over Minnesota, the lake region and northeastern states. Conditions favor snow and rising temperature in this locality tonight and Thursday."

North Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Thursday. Rising temperature.

South Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Thursday. Warmer in east and central portions.

BOOSTING NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Ada Index: It is not yet necessary to go to the North Pole or to those regions where irrigation is necessary to secure homesteads. That there is still good land to be obtained in Minnesota is proved by the fact that there were 176 homestead entries at the Crookston land office alone during the last three months of 1905.

Eveleth Star: Every stump removed makes it possible to produce more wealth.

Crookston Times: John W. White, in his report to President Roosevelt of the conditions in Northern Minnesota, says that he considers this portion of the state "a most fortunate selection as a national forest reserve." It is also a fine place for homes for the million. The forest reserve idea is all right, but it must quit trying to hog everything. We shall be glad to have a forest reserve, but we want most of Northern Minnesota for people, not trees.

Crookston Times: The merchants and the newspapers have joined hands in this campaign for the peopling and development of Northern Minnesota, and Duluth newspapers are being made the agency through which the work is to be accomplished. Crookston cannot afford to hold back, but must lend every possible ounce of aid. This city's newspapers, too, must cover every part of the field, and the support of the business men of Crookston must be prompt and complete. Northern Minnesota is Crookston's opportunity.

Eveleth Star: An investment in Northern Minnesota lands will bring sure returns.

Sauk Center Herald: The drainage movement, if honestly, wisely, economically carried out, will confer more benefits to the state than any other measure ever proposed. The men who conceived it were geniuses, the men who are pushing it are public benefactors, and the men who can formulate a plan whereby it can be speedily and successfully completed will be statesmen of the highest order.

C. D. I. in Cass Lake Times: They say salvation's free. The salvation of Northern Minnesota will be free to all when drainage and good roads are in practical operation.

Clarissa Independent: Drainage seems to be the crying need of Northern Minnesota, and drainage it will have. The average Northern Minnesota citizen has the utmost faith in the injunction, "Ask and thou shall receive," and he will continue to yell drainage until his cry is answered.

Crookston Times: Twelve months ago Bovey, an iron mining town north of Grand Rapids, consisted of a few scattered huts; today it is demanding a $40,000 school building. The fact is an indication of the possibilities of Minnesota's iron ranges.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: One actual settler on north country land is worth a hundred "reserve" pluggers in the Twin Cities or anywhere else.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Tribune: Will the Republican senators and congressmen who are opposing and scheming to defeat the plans of the president see their mistake in time to save their party as well as the country from experience with the Democratic party that is sure to bring regret?

Northfield News: The Eveleth Star says that the two principal officers of the State Drainage league have collected some $3,000 to be spent in lobbying. What are our senators and congressmen for if not to look after such matters, without toying with the gin rickey and the terrapin?

Stillwater Gazette: The Fairmont Sentinel, Democratic, favors President Roosevelt for re-election. So do the people, irrespective of party, save and except a few of the politicians and the corporations who have poor success in their attempts to control him.

Walker Pilot: Alcohol from the wood, turpentine from the stumps, and big crops from the soil. Diversified farming right from the start.

Crookston Times: Many candidates for office tremble at the thought of stating their principles for fear they might get their wires crossed, burn out a fuse and lose a few votes.

Mankato Free Press: A successful man is one who is able to persuade others to accept him at his own valuation.

Stillwater Gazette: The fellow who keeps his name and his brains before the public every day in the year is the fellow who gets the business and has pie for dinner.

Virginia Enterprise: If the State Drainage league has any money left in the treasury, it might be used in an honest attempt to further the drainage proposition. But the establishment and maintenance of a lobby at Washington with the alleged idea of securing federal aid for the drainage of state swamp lands is disgustingly funny to one who realizes the prospective benefits of drainage to Northern Minnesota.

Hinckley Enterprise: The way some of the papers in the northern part of the state talk state drainage would carry the impression that that issue will be the only one before the people next fall.

Ripple Compass: Forest reserves are sweetened preserves to the people who do not know the difference between a plow and a beer pump. The fertile Big Fork valley was once desired as a forest reserve by the same blonde-fingered crowd who are now branding large areas of Cass and St. Louis county lands as "unfit for cultivation."

Minneapolis Telegram: Why is it that a dead beat is looked down upon, when a tax dodger can boast of his own cleverness?

Madison Independent Press: In these days of political push the fellow who sits down and waits for the office to seek him out generally remains seated while the other fellow draws the salary, and that's what counts, and is the one thing the whole patriotic bunch of willing Willies is after.

Preston Times: Uncle Joe Cannon and Schoolmaster McCleary had better make haste to get out of the way of the deluge. The people will not stand for being fooled indefinitely.

What He Prays For.

Kansas City Journal: They are telling in Washington of a Kansan who, with his little boy, visited the senate gallery while in the capital recently. Among the persons the boy was interested in was Edward Everett Hale, a magnificent looking old man. His father told him that was the chaplain. "Oh, he prays for the senate, doesn't he?" asks the lad. "No," replied the Kansas man, "he gets up and takes a look at the senate and then prays for the country."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Yes, indeed, he has one trait that makes him an ideal witness."

"What's that?"

"He is very hard of hearing."

Chicago Tribune: "Hasn't the poor fellow any friends who will see that he has a fair trial?"

"No; he isn't a thug or a murderer. Don't waste any sympathy on him. He was caught in the act of stealing a ham."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Why are you here," asked the constituent, "if the party leaders won't let you do anything?"

"Oh, they let me draw mileage," explained the congressman warily.

Washington Star: "That congressman insists that he doesn't know the meaning of the phrase 'standpat,'" said one statesman.

"Yes," answered the other, "but I refuse to be beguiled. Never engage in any game of chance or skill with a person who affects great ignorance concerning it."

Philadelphia Press: "I must confess," he said in a sudden burst of confidence, "that I'm an old man. I long to be different—"

"Oh, this is so sudden," exclaimed Miss Passay, throwing herself upon his neck, for she, too, was odd and longed to be even.

Cleveland Leader: Youth—What do I have to pay for a marriage license?

Clerk—Well, you get it on the installment plan.

Youth—How's that?

AN ABUNDANCE OF SEED WHEAT

In the Red River Valley for Coming Wheat Crop.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—"There is an abundance of seed wheat in the Red River Valley for the coming crop. The farmers have at least 15 per cent of last year's crop in their granaries in excess of the amount that will be needed for seed." The above statement was made by W. L. Beaton, superintendent, for the Duluth Elevator company, who has headquarters in this city, and who has just completed a circuit of his territory, giving special attention to securing figures upon which to base an estimate that would be fairly accurate. Continuing, Supt. Beaton said regarding conditions generally throughout this section:

"Never before in its history has the Red River Valley shown greater recuperative powers than during the past six months. The farmers are in good shape and I consider it a remarkable fact that during all my travels I hear of partically no complaint. The conditions that prevailed throughout a large acreage of the Northwest last fall are well-known and it cannot be denied that the farmers lost heavily in being unable to save one of the best crops raised in many years in many instances.

"On account of the changed methods that have been adopted, however, they weathered the storm without serious inconvenience and are, generally speaking, in the best of spirits now. This is conclusive evidence that their faith in the Red River Valley in unshaken as they are looking forward to better times than have ever before been experienced. Their faith is firm, and as their methods are changing to meet the changed conditions with which they are confronted, I think there is good reason to feel optimistic regarding the future.

"There is plenty of good seed wheat in sight with the exception of a few localities, and these will be supplied by elevators wherever necessary by wheat shipped in from Dakota points, where a big crop of the finest kind of wheat was harvested last year. We will handle whatever seed wheat is demanded and other elevator companies will do the same.

"Regarding the acreage that will be seeded, the character of the spring will determine that to a great extent. There is a large amount of plowing to be done in some sections, while in others the ground is pretty generally prepared for another crop. If the spring is dry and early a full average wheat crop will be seeded, but if it is late and wet the acreage in wheat will be short and the acreage in the course grain larger than usual, with the total acreage somewhat under the average."

CUPID SCORES VICTORY.

Edward Marks' Search for Betrothed Rewarded at the Altar.

Minneapolis, Jan. 24.—Love laughs at conspiring sisters as well as at locksmiths.

Miss Anna McNaughton, who was induced by her relatives to desert her affianced husband on the eve of their wedding, is now the happy bride of Edwin Marks, the determined lover, who would not let family opposition come between him and his love.

After Anna was taken to the McNaughton farm on the Silver Lake road in Ramsey county, Marks was distracted over the loss. He was certain that Anna had been abducted and was forcibly restrained. He could find no trace of her and appealed to the authorities of three counties to help him. Word was finally given out by the McNaughtons that Anna had gone to her parents in Canada, but Marks, ever vigilant, kept his eyes on the farmhouse on the Silver Lake road, and was finally rewarded by meeting Anna face to face. Marks already had the license, and arrangements were soon made to go to Minneapolis and have the long-delayed ceremony performed.

Where Mr. and Mrs. Marks may be now no one knows, but it is certain that their honeymoon is none the less sweet because of the difficulties that were overcome.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

METROPOLITAN—Baltimore Beauties.

COMING ATTRACTION.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, Joseph Santley in "A Runaway Boy."

BALTIMORE BEAUTIES.

The Baltimore Beauties will give a matinee for ladies at the Metropolitan tomorrow afternoon and, following a custom established by the management, two weeks ago, the Thursday evening performance will be especially for ladies, as well. Souvenirs will be presented to all members of the fair sex attending either performance and for their comfort no smoking will be permitted.

The two burlesques, "A Scotch Highball" and "A Busy Night," together with the star olio of vaudeville acts, are making a hit with the patrons of the "Met" this week.

JOSEPH SANTLEY.

Simplicity and unaffectedness are most marked in the young and successful boy actor, Joseph Santley, who is starring this season under the direction of Max H. Meyers. The youngster has been uniformly successful in everything he has done, and this is the fifth big part he has played. Ever since he was four years of age, young Santley has been constantly behind the footlights, and being of an absorbitive nature, he has picked up the technique of the stage very thoroughly and his masterly manner of playing a scene, and looking after the details, shows him to be a better master of his art than many who have grown old in the service of Thespis. His new play this season is a melodramatic comedy-drama, and it offers him the best opportunities he has ever had. Young Santley will present "A Runaway Boy" at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday afternoon.

DUPED HIS VICTIMS.

"Fortune Teller" Gets Away With Much Valuable Jewelry.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 24.—Willmer Smith, clairvoyant, told his patrons to put their jewelry and money into black silk bags, which he charmed and sealed and hung around their necks. They were told to come back Saturday and have their fortunes told. On Saturday Smith had gone and the patrons found he had taken their jewelry with him. He had substituted "phony" rings and money and his dupes patiently awaited for him to open their sacks. The police to date know of $500 worth of diamonds and $1to in money Smith obtained.

A SON-IN-LAW OF BUSCH ENDS LIFE.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Arthur Julius Magnus, vice-president of the A. Magnus & Sons company, dealers in brewer supplies in Randolph street, and a son-in-law of Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, shot and instantly killed himself last night in his home in Fullerton avenue.

Magnus, who was 45 years old, had been in poor health for years and had been despondent over his condition. This, his family asserts, could have been the only reason for committing suicide.

SMALL BOY RESCUES THREE FROM FLAMES.

Menasha, Wis., Jan. 24.—Left alone with two small children, aged 2 and 4 years, and an invalid grandfather, 90 year old, while his parents drove to the city, Charles Gear, aged 9 years, saved the lives of every inmate of the house. Shortly after they were left alone, a kerosene lamp in the second story of the house exploded and the flames spread about the room. The boy carried the two small children down the stairs and into the open air and then returned and aroused his grandfather from slumber, after which he returned to the second story and extinguished the flames with clothes from a nearby bed.

TO EDUCATE TWIN CITES

Drainage and Forest Reserve Questions to Be Investigated.

Duluth and Twin City Commercial Clubs Plan Junket.

H. V. Eva, secretary of the Commercial club, and F. A. Patrick will represent Duluth in the party of men chosen by the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth Commercial clubs to make a trip into Northern Minnesota next week for the purpose of acquainting the business interests of the three largest cities of the state with conditions as they actually exist in the northern section, particularly as regards the forest reserve and drainage questions.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson and P. E. Hanson, secretary of state, will be with the party to point out to the business men just what has been done in the way of drainage during the last few years. Representative A. L. Cole of Walker, who has been one of the prime movers in arranging for the trip, will also be along. He is an authority on forestry in Northern Minnesota, and is violently opposed to the reserve near Cass Lake. Mr. Cole will point out the evils of forest reserves in Northern Minnesota as he sees them.

The delegates from the St. Paul Jobbers' union are J. H. Beck, J. W. Cooper, G. M. Tibbs and George Sommers. The following will represent the Minneapolis Commercial club: W. G. Nye and B. F. Wilson. Thomas Cooper, land commissioner of the Northern Pacific railway and John Abercrombie, engineer of the state drainage board, will accompany the party, which will leave Monday for Brainerd. At that point the party will be met by a special on the Minnesota & International road, which will take them to Bemidji, where they will breakfast Tuesday morning. They will then proceed to Ripple, on the Big Fork river.

The trip is planned more for the benefit of Twin City business men than anyone else. Duluth already has taken such an interest in matters of reforestration, drainage and the like that her business men, thanks to the public affairs committee of the Commercial club, are already pretty thoroughly acquainted with conditions as they exist. While Duluth has been shouting and working for drainage, and in a way standing out against the establishment of forest reserves where the country is better suited for farming, the Minneapolis and St. Paul clubs have taken a stand that is opposed to the drainage of state lands, and have appeared to favor forest reserves, no matter where established.

But the position of the Twin Cities on the drainage question has been particularly exasperating to those who have had the best interests of Northern Minnesota at heart. The latter convinced that Minneapolis and St. Paul took the stand they did only because they did not thoroughly understand the true situation, decided that a trip such as is planned for next week would be necessary to educate the business men of these two cities as to resources and possibilities of Northern Minnesota.

TEACHERS TO HOLD CIRCLE

St. Louis County Educators Will Conduct Reading Conference.

The winter meeting of the St. Louis County Reading circle, which is comprised of the teachers in the district schools all over the county, will take place Saturday.

Owing to the large area covered by the reading circle membership, and the fact that it would be impossible to get a large attendance of the teachers at any one place, the county has been divided up into seven sections, and the sections each include from three to twelve districts, depending on the convenience of location and the frequency of school houses.

Section No. 1 includes twelve districts, and Duluth will be the place of meeting, next Saturday. L. A. Sulcov is the section chairman.

The other places of meetings and the section chairmen are as follows:

Section No. 2, four districts, Burnett school, Nellie Trolander; section No. 3, five districts, Catherine McCurdy, Kelsey school; section No. 4, three districts, Lillian Belland, Allen Junction school; section No. 5, three districts, Samuel Ritsey, Flooodwoood school; section No. 6, four districts, chairman not named, Ashawa school; section No. 7, three districts, David Winton, Pike Lake school No. 1.

County Supt. of Schools Gilpin has announced that the text for discussion at the Saturday meeting will be "Seeley's School Management." At subsequent dates during the school year other reading circle meetings will be held, the subjects to be announced by the county superintendent later.

Mr. Gilpin says that the county reading circle now has a large membership and is in a flourishing condition. Under the scheme of having the meetings held by sections, and directed by competent persons, there is left no excuse for the rural teachers that they are unable to attend because of the inconvenience of distance. The reading circle work is made an important factor in casting up the teacher's qualifications when the state school authorities have to consider the issuance of certificates.

BABY'S TORTURING SKIN HUMOR

Ears Looked as if They Would Drop Off—Body Entirely Covered—Face Mass of Sores—Three Doctors Could Not Cure—Child Grew Worse—Face and Body Now Clear

CURED BY CUTICURA IN TWO WEEKS FOR 75c.

Mrs. George J. Steese, of 701 Coburn St., Akron, Ohio, tells in the following letter of another of those remarkable cures of torturing, disfiguring skin humors daily made by Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, after physicians, and all else had failed: "I feel it my duty to parents of other poor suffering babies to tell you what Cuticura has done for my little daughter. She broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, they all claimed they could help her, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away; her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars, instead of seventy-five cents, which is all it cost us to cure our baby, after spending many dollars on doctors and medicines without any benefit whatever."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humor, from Pimples to Scrofula, from Infancy to Age, consisting of Cuticura Soap, 25c., Ointment, 50c., Resolvent, 50c. State Teachers' Examinations.

Teachers' examinations for first and second grade state certificates will be held in this county Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, beginning at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning. In order to accommodate the teachers in the various parts of the county who wish to take the examination, arrangements have been made by S. W. Gilpin, county superintendent of schools to have them conducted simultaneously at Duluth and four of the range cities and towns. The examinations will be conducted as follows: S. W. Gilpin, Duluth; Supt. Young, Hibbing; Mrs. D. P. Cuppernul, Virginia; Mrs. Fred Miles, Tower, and Supt. Newberry, Ely.

SNOW CRUST AID TO THE WOLVES

Hungry Animals Are Exterminating Deer in Some Localties.

Farmers and trappers from some of the outlying unorganized towns of the country who have brought in wolf pelts during the last two days for the bounty, claim that the wolves are playing havoc among the deer in a number of localities since the cold weather set in.

The farmers says there is plenty of snow in the woods and that the warm thawing weather of a week ago, followed by a sudden drop in temperature, resulted in the formation of a light crust over the snow that will hold up a wolf but the deer break through. Progress under such circumstances is made with difficulty by the deer while the wolves, running easily over the crust, overtake the deer and kill them. When the snow is deep, without any crust the deer can easily escape the wolves, but with the handicap of a light crust they are at the mercy of the wolf packs and, it is claimed, a great many are being exterminated.

Stories are frequently heard at the auditor's office of the boldness that the wolves display when driven by hunger and the bones of deer and even moose that are found by the cruisers and settlers are mute witnesses of the havoc that the hungry animals are doing among the deer.

Several farmers who have been at the courthouse on business recently have told of hearing wolf packs pass their homes at night in full cry, presumably after a deer. They claim that to leave stock outside the barns or sheds at night means almost certain loss.

During December and the first part of January there was quite a flurry in the wolf pelt business, but not many applications have been made for the bounty lately.

Over in Douglas county, Wis., one family near Solon Springs is said to have presented some fifteen or twenty wolf pelts to the county clerk for bounty this winter. At $15 per pelt the farmers are making more money exterminating wolves than they would at almost any other winter work.

On April 18 the following examinations will take place: Assistant, patent office; civil engineer, department service; civil engineer, Philippine service; civil engineer and draftsman; computer, coast and geodetic survey; computer, supervising architect's office; engineer, Indian service; farmer, Indian service; farmer with knowledge of irrigation, Indian service; fish culturist; forest assistant; pharmacist, public health and marine hospital service; scientific assistant, department of agriculture; superintendent of construction, supervising architect's office; teacher, Idian service; trained nurse, Indian service; trained nurse, Isthmian canal service; trained nurse, Philippine service; and veterinary inspector, department of agriculture.

Sheriffs Hold Convention.

Sheriff W. J. Bates has gone to St. Paul to attend the annual convention of the County Sheriffs of Minnesota, which opens today. There are eighty-two sheriffs in the state, and about one-third of these usually attend the conventions. Topics pertaining to the duties of their office and legislation needed are discussed. The sheriffs will inspect the state penitentiary at Stillwater.

Wife Charges Desertion.

Mrs. Maggie Delaske has applied to district court for a divorce from John Delaske, on the ground of desertion. They were married in Duluth about twenty years ago, and the desertion is alleged to have occurred more than a year ago. The couple have three children of the respective ages of 12, 14 and 16 years. Mrs. Delaske asks the custody of the children.

VESSEL MATTERS.

Grain Loading and Wrecking of Boats Still in Progress.

Grain is being loaded into vessels at the Nye, Jenks & Co. elevator at Itasca in order that the elevator may be emptied of grain enough to receive a large consignment which it is said, will soon be due. The Heffelfinger is loaded and will probably be moved from the elevator today or tomorrow. The Phillip Minch and Widlar are to be loaded. Ice cutting around the boats is necessary to allow of the shifting which must be gone through with in order to get the vessels loaded.

Capt. James Deid, of Sarnia, who has been at work on the steamer Manila on Encampment island, has matters in such shape that within a few days he will skid the boat off into deep water. After that is done and the Manila brought here, he will turn his attention to the steamer Mataafa, stranded on the Duluth beach. He believes he can get her off this winter as she is in a good deal better position for work on her than the Crescent City at Lakewood. The Crescent City will have to be left until spring when she will be jacked up and re-launched.

It is the plan of the Pittsburg Steamship company to take the steamer Ellwood to some lower lake port for repairs as soon as she is fully lightered in the spring.

STEVENS FAVORS A LOCK CANAL

Thinks it Will Meet All the Needs of Commerce.

Washington, Jan. 24.—A lock canal at $147,000,000, and not more than eight years to build, or a sea level canal at a cost of about $250,000,000 and from twelve to fifteen years to build, were the two problems discussed yesterday by the senate committee on interoceanic canals. The lock type was favored by Chief Engineer John F. Stevens in charge of the construction work on the Isthmus of Panama, who was before the committee all day.

Informal expressions of the members of the committee favor Mr. Stevens recommendation.

The examination of Mr. Stevens was conducted in executive session, as the committee had before it the majority and minority reports of the board of consulting engineers of the type of canal, which reports have not been acted upon by the isthmian canal commission, nor by President Roosevelt.

The opinion was expressed by Mr. Stevens that a lock canal would supply all the needs of commerce and that practically the only argument that could be made in favor of the sea level type is in the time that would be saved in conveying ships from ocean to ocean. The construction of a central lake to receive the waters of the Chagres, it is said, would permit steam vessels of the largest type to pass through the lake under their own power and thereby make up most of the time lost in passing through the locks.

It is the saving of time and money in construction that appealed to Mr. Stevens in his argument in favor of a lock canal. He estimated that the canal may be built in seven years and made the positive assertion on his reputation as an engineer that the construction would not take more than eight years at the outside. He said, too, that a lock has its problems in sight and that they have been taken into account in the estimates that have been furnished. It was suggested by Mr. Stevens that there may be problems in the construction of a canal on the sea level of a more serious character than can be foretold. This suggestion was not offered to place obstacles in the way of building a sea level canal if that should be determined on, he said, and added that it is only fair to foreign engineers who constituted the majority of the consulting board, to say that they made their estimates carefully and that about $250,000,000 probably is very near the amount that the canal would cost if built on the sea level. It is expected Mr. Stevens will complete his statement and that he will return to the isthmus Thursday.

JUDGE QUARLES

Urges Grand Jury Against Discriminating in Rich Man's Favor.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 24.—"You must deal with the rich as you deal with the poor. It is not a discredit that a man is poor, and you must not discriminate because another is rich."

This was the language used by Judge Quarles of the United States district court in charging the grand jury. The judge especially urged the jury to use caution in returning indictments, and warned it not to judge its work by the number of indictments returned.

"Look up first whether there is an intent to do wrong. You are to take no account of malice in your acts. You must deal with evidence," he said.

The trial of the long list of Milwaukee politicians indicted by the grand jury on graft charges will be resumed before Judge Williams today or Thursday, when the case of the state against State Senator Barney A. Eaton is called. The case against Charles S. Havener, the baseball magnate, will follow the Eaton case, after which will come the trials of supervisors and former supervisors.

Lawson in Court

Lawson's enemies have been trying their best to get back at him ever since he began his merciless attack upon the "System", twenty-one months ago, in Everybody's magazine.

Malicious vilification threats of suits, traps laid for him at every turn—with the Rockefellers, Addicks, and big insurance men (Perkins, McCall and McCurdy) all arrayed against him. All attacks have failed.

The last was a suit for criminal libel—quashed by the Grand Jury of Boston after a very few minutes deliberation.

Lawson's story of the court-scene, is one of the greatest dramatic bits of writing you have ever read.

NOTED WOMAN IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Baroness Burdett-Coutts Was Intimate Friend of Queen Victoria.

London, Jan. 24.—The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, one of the foremost English women philanthropists and an intimate friend of the late Queen Victoria, is seriously ill.

The baroness is of a very advanced life, and some years ago created a considerable sensation by marrying a young diplomat, a brother of the late E. Ashmead Bartlett, M. P., who was quite poor, but who later took the name of Burdett-Coutts, and who is still alive.

The union has proved a very happy one, but the baroness who is a British peeress in her own right, has never relaxed her charitable work, and her name, in connection with a philanthropic effort, has been always a hallmark of success.

The baroness is particularly beloved by the Whitechappel costermongers in the East end and has done much to improve the care of the clever quick donkeys. These hawkers drive through the most crowded streets of London at a great pace.

As a rule the baroness resides at a large, handsome mansion on the fringe of Hampstead Heath, barely a stone's throw from a model yacht pond, and the celebrated old world inn known as the Spaniards, where it is reported the highwayman, Dick Turpin, who did that memorable ride from York to London, took refuge.

By repute the baroness is a millionaire in English sovereigns, and the principal partner in the famous old banking house of Coutts & Co., who for years past have acted as private bankers of most of the royal houses of Europe, and is supposed to be as strong in its way and fastidious in its methods as the Bank of England.

ROBERT WEISS IS DEAD.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 24.—Robert W. Weiss, aged 55 years, one of the best known mining men of the Northwest, is dead, the result of a sudden stroke of paralysis. Weiss was the discoverer of the Moorcraft(Wyo.) oilfields. He was identified in the promotion of several mining projects in British Columbia and was owner of valuable claims at Butte.

DEAD OF LOCKJAW.

St. Cloud, Jan. 24.—After suffering the most intense agony for the last ten days, Bernt H. Moe, a well known farmer of Roneby, died Monday night from tetanus. He was hurt about a month ago in a threshing machine. The wound was a slight one, and was neglected. Ten days ago symptoms of tetanus set in, and since that time the man has passed through the most horrible torture, during which time he realized constantly that he was doomed.

URIC ACID GRAVEL

IS CAUSED BY THE KIDNEYS BEING UNABLE TO CARRY THE POISONOUS WASTE MATTERS OUT OF THE BLOOD.

The urine of persons suffering from uric acid or gravel is generally scanty, and after it has stood a while, a reddish sediment like brick dust forms in it. In advanced stages the uric acid sometimes appears as fine sand, or large crystals.

Those who pass gravel in any considerable quantity are usually troubled with inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gout and rheumatism.

CURED BY WARNER'S SAFE CURE

"I have used Safe Cure for chills caused by uric acid poison in my system and I have been perfectly cured. It has done for me what I have never known any other medicine to do. It cures people in the South who suffer much from malaria, which always affects the kidneys. If all the doctors would prescribe Safe Cure instead of quinine for cases of malaria there would be less bad after effects, as quinine does not remove the disease germs from the system like Safe Cure. I take 'Safe Pills' when I need a gentle laxative."—Mrs. M. E. DEAN, Treas. Lotus Club, Chattanooga, Tenn.

THIS TEST WILL TELL:

Put some urine in a glass or bottle. After it has stood 24 hours, if it is cloudy, or contains a reddish-brown sediment, or if particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased and unable to do their work, and if not attended to at once, Bright's Disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, uric acid, inflammation of the bladder, gallstones or urinary troubles will develop and prove fatal in a short time.

Safe Cure is the only absolutely safe and certain cure for all these forms of kidney, liver and bladder diseases. It is purely vegetable, free from harmful drugs found in many so-called kidney cures, contains no sediment and is pleasant to take.

For sale at all drug stores, or direct, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the Medical Department, Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS.

They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

District Attorney Says Packers Are Not Entitled to Immunity.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—District Attorney Morrison continued his statement to the jury in the packers case today. Mr. Morrison declared that the packers are not entitled to immunity because they did not claim it at the time Commissioner Garfield was conducting his investigation in the beef packing industry and were not sworn when they gave evidence. District Attorney Morrison then declared that he wished the jury to disregard the fact that many of the defendants in the case are men of wealth and position.

"We are not prosecuting these men because they are rich," He said. "The government admires a rich man who has profited honestly. A man like Marshall Field, who was buried while the attorneys for the defense were telling of the honest money made by these packers, commands the admiration of the nation. It is the man with "tainted" money that the government is after."

WOULD MEAN BIG SAVING

Ejectors Will Cut Cost of Park Point Sewer in Two.

Engineer Will Ask to Try Experiment on Lake Avenue.

Permission to expend about $1,000 in installing an experimental sewer ejector in the Lake avenue sewer will be asked of the council by the city engineer, and if it proves successful, it will result in a saving of nearly $50,000 to the people of Park Point, when they install their sewer system.

Estimates have been completed by the department of the cost of the proposed Park Point sewer system. According to the estimate of the engineer it would cost $56,274.70 to install the so-called Shone system on Pork Point. Some method of propelling the sewage is necessary, as the grade is not sufficient to allow the sewage to flow by gravitation. The Shone system involves the installation of an additional set of pipes, as the sewage is propelled by compressed air. There would also be a continual expense for maintenance, as power is necessary to furnish the compressed air, and the machinery would have to be kept working night and day like the pumping machinery at Lakewood.

A second estimate has been prepared for the laying of the system with the patent sewage ejectors, which were invented by the city engineer, Axel Wilson, the assistant, and Charles Rigdon, the plumbing inspector. The system could be installed for $17,794.70 with the use of these ejectors, or about half the cost of the other system.

The ejectors were invented last spring, and the council furnished a small appropriation for the construction of a model of the apparatus, which is automatic, and works from power furnished by the city water mains. A patent has been applied for, and is expected at any time, but all the ejectors required by the city for all time to come will be furnished without royalty and at actual cost.

It is estimated that seven of these ejectors would be required on Park Point. The ejectors raise the sewage to a higher level, and it then flows on to the next ejector by the force of gravitation.

The engineering department is loath to recommend to the council, that the ejectors be installed on Park Point before a thorough test has been made, as the seven ejectors would mean an expense of about $6,000. The model which was constructed, worked beautifully, but a test by a model is not always considered conclusive, and the engineer is anxious to have a full sized ejector installed before recommending them for the entire Park Point system.

Lower Lake avenue has been selected as the best possible site for a test. The city has always had trouble with the Lake avenue sewer, and at times the stench from it is very disagreeable and unsanitary. The city engineer proposes to install one of the jectors in this sewer, and if it works properly, the entire Park Point system will be provided with them, effecting a saving in the actual cost of construction of about $19,000.

Park Point is not the only part of the city which will be benefited if the experiment proves a success. When the time comes to install a sewerage system on Rice's Point the same difficulty will be encountered, and the use of the ejectors would cut the cost in two, in addition to doing away with all charges for maintenance and operation. The ejectors work automatically, and beyond occasional attention from the inspectors, no work would be required on them.

The ejectors could also be used in many parts of West Duluth, and if they prove to be the success expected, they will result in the saving of many thousands of dollars to the property owners of the city.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU.

Few People Realize the Importance of Good Digestion Until It is Lost.

Many people suffer from dyspepsia and do not know it. They feel mean, out of sorts, peevish, do not sleep well, do not have a good keen appetite, do not have the inclination and energy for physicial or mental work they once had, but at the same time do not feel any particular pain or distress in the stomach. Yet all this is the result of poor digestion, an insidious form of Dyspepsia which can only be cured by a remedy specially intended to cure it and make the digestive organs act naturally, and properly digest the food eaten. Bitters, after dinner pills and nerve tonics will never help the trouble; they don't reach it. The new medical discovery does. It is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is a specific for dyspepsia and indigestion. It cures because it thoroughly digests all wholesome food taken into the stomach, whether the stomach is in good working order or not.

Stuart's Dyppepsia Tablets, by digesting the food, instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, gives it a much needed rest and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

When you are nervous, run down and sleepless, don't make the common mistake of supposing your nervous system needs treatment, and fill your stomach with powerful nerve tonics which make you feel good for a little while only to fall back farther than ever.

Your nerves are all right, but they are starved, they want food.

Nourish them with wholesome everyday food and plenty of it, well digested, and you can laugh at nerve tonics and medicine.

But the nerves will not be nourished from a weak, abused stomach, but when the digestion has been made perfect by the use of this remedy all nervous systems disappear.

Who ever heard of a man or woman blessed with a vigorous digestion and good appetite, abundance of energy, and capacity to enjoy the good things of life.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will certainly set your stomach and digestive organs right; they nourish the body by digesting the food eaten, and rest the stomach.

You get nourishment and rest at one and the same time, and that is all the worn out dyspeptic needs to build him up and give new life to every organ and an added zest to every pleasure

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a god-send to the army of men and women with weak stomachs and nerves and justly merits the claim of being one of the most worthy medical discoveries of the time.

One of the Ohio Coal company's bobsleds, heavily laden with coal, slid widely into the alley behind the Lyceum theater on Fifth avenue west this morning and hit the corner of the well-known amusement place with a thud. It was some time before the sled could be budged, but finally, with the combined efforts of horse and man, it got under way again.

Favorable reports come from E. W. Nettleton, the manager of the recent bonspiel, who is suffering from pneumonia in St. Mary's hospital. Mr. Nettleton is believed to have contracted the disease during the bonspiel week by failing to properly protect himself against the weather while going back and forth from the hotel to the rink.

Mike Maloney, the victim of Saturday's stabbing affray, has recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital and return to his home.

For the first time in many months, the Lyceum box office was closed all day today, and decorators were at work in the little room where the tickets are sold. It will be reopened tomorrow for the advance sale of "The Runaway Boys," and on Saturday, the sale for "The Liberty Belles" and Kubelik will open.

The members of the Women's Mission society of the Hope church will be entertained tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Kehtel, 201 East Third street.

Revival services are being held every evening this week at the Duluth Heights Presbyterian church. Tonight the pastor, Rev. W. J. Lowrie, will speak on "Getting Right with God" and Charles Towner of West Duluth, will sing. Last night, Rev. Mr. Colwell of Minneapolis spoke on "Deep Convictions."

The first meeting of the newly elected board of Y. M. C. A. directors will be held this evening, at 7:30 o'clock in the association building.

With $739.50 in gold and silver coin in his pockets Matt Pollari, a Biwabik miner, was arrested yesterday by the police, and taken to headquarters to await an examination before the probate court. He suffers from an illusion that some one is pursuing him and about to kill him for his money.

Plans are being made for a new 70-foot tug to be used by the United States engineer's office in connection with the new pier work at Superior entry and other harbor improvement work.

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Skull of Chisholm, were lodged in the county jail yesterday afternoon to serve 90 days each for resisting an officer. They had the alternative of paying a fine of $90. Justice of Peace Richard Baten sentenced the couple.

Steven Nelson and Mary Anderson, of Superior, Wis., were united in marriage by Probate Judge Middlecoff, yesterday afternoon.

The Big Duluth will sell tomorrow any Necktie in the house for 35c or 3 for $1.00. Limit six ties to a customer.

Dr. E. S. Bigbee, of Minneapolis, who makes professional visits to Duluth from time to time, has suffered the loss of his mother, and this will delay him in reaching the Head of the Lakes.

The value of The Herald want advertisements has been demonstrated again by the receipt of a communication from a feminine subscriber who writes that on Monday she expended 21 cents for an advertisement for her purse, which she lost on Lake avenue, and on Tuesday evening it was returned to her with its full contents by another reader of this paper.

Members of the Board of Trade today elected William Dalrymple to the board of directors to fill the vacancy there caused by the election to the vice presidency of Julius S. Barnes. As vice president Mr. Barnes is still a director, however.

Edward J. Straw, the land cruiser convicted of perjury in connection with the claim of Miss Berenice Farrell in United States court, was today sentenced to three months in the county jail of Ramsey county and to pay a fine of $300.

Rev. A. K. Madsen will preach at the Norwegian Trinity Lutheran church, 401 East Fifth street tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. There will also be a program.

The Assembly of Palestine lodge will give the next dance of its series next Friday evening at the Masonic temple.

Another union meeting of the West end churches, the second in a series to extend into next week, will be held this evening at the Salvation Army hall, Seventeenth avenue west and Superior street. The meeting at the Norwegian M. E. church last night, at which Rev. Kling preached, and which was led by Rev. Madsen, was well attended.

FIVE MILE AUTO RECORD SMASHED.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 24.—The world's five-mile automobile record was lowered to 2 min. 54 3-5 sec. today by Lancia.

Hemery later beat Lancia's new five-mile world's record by 20 3-5 sec., going the distance in 2 min. 34 sec., unofficial time, in a 200-horse power gasoline car.

Marriott made a five-mile record in the official time of 2 min. 47 sec. He drove a steam car. Fletcher went five miles in 3 min. 2 sec. Immediately after Hemery's fast five miles it was announced that he had been ruled out of the races and would not be allowed to race again in the present meet, because he had refused to run over again a new start heat.

BEDE OPPOSES ADMINISTRATION

Will Vote Against Jointure of Arizona and New Mexico.

Washington, Jan. 24.—All the noses have been counted in the statehood fight but no one is able to say just what the result will be. Early last week the statehood insurgents counted upon several members from the Northwest to bolt it as now known will stand with the administration and the house organization.

In the Minnesota delegation, for example, it was expected that three of the nine members would vote against the omnibus bill. Only one of the representatives, Bede, can be counted upon for a certainty.

"I will vote against the rule proposing consideration of the bill providing two states out of the four territories if I am the only man in the house to do so," said Mr. Bede. "Judging from my correspondence, the majority of the people in the Duluth district are opposed to the jointure of Arizona and New Mexico."

Representative Stevenson declines absolutely to indicate what he will do when the statehood proposition comes up in the house. He is opposed to the union of Arizona and New Mexico, but is hovering apparently between his own judgment and his unwillingness to break with the house organization and the national administration.

"I am with the president on the railroad rate bill, joint statehood of the four southwestern territories, and in fact am in harmony with him on all questions now up for consideration," said Representative Davis. "I shall stand with the president on all of these reform measures. It is my belief that the president is at heart for tariff revision and I shall use my influence to the best of my ability to induce him to carry out at the proper time for such legislation."

THE PASSING OF THE HARLEM GOAT

Mr. Grindleton Laments Extinction of a Once Familiar Species.

New York, Jan. 24.—"Only yesterday," said Mr. Grindleton, "I was reading an article about the disappearance of the buffalo, the great American bison, but I haven't seen so much as a paragraph about the disappearance of another well known American animal, the Harlem goat.

"There was a time when this goat roamed the upper end of Manhattan in numbers; now, I guess, you would have to hunt some to find a single specimen.

"I have seen native goats on Manhattan Island as far south as Fifty-seventh street; goats quite at home and looking proudly and calmly down from the tops of rocky cliffs. And, north from Fifty-ninth street, I have seen plenty of goats all along the winding old Bloomingdale road, later known as the Boulevard, now a part of Broadway.

"But these mid-Manhattan animals were not the true Harlem goats, only a sub-species; the true Harlem goat had its home in that region lying to the north of the upper boundaries of Central Park, above One Hundred and Tenth street, in Harlem, and in the region beyond, as far north as the bordering waters of Spuyten Duyvil creek.

"And throughout that territory the Harlem goat once roamed free and unrestrained. It swept over the Harlem plains and climbed the precipitous face of the rocky ridge now known as Morningside Heights to descend from the Claremont end of it into the Manhattan valley, through which runs Manhattan street. And it clambered thence to the high and rocky backbone ridge that characterizes the island beyond this valley, descending occasionally to the lower ground beyond, at old Fort George.

"It was at once a hardy as well as a numerous animal and its existence as well as its fame, seemed secure. Many people made from a safe distance jokes about the Harlem goat, and the goat, like the joke, seemed a fixture. Who would have thought, then, that a few short years would witness the passing of the Harlem goat?

"But where is the Harlem goat now? Where once it roamed and where once shanties dotted the landscape are now not blocks alone, but miles on miles of sightly and luxurious dwelling-places of men.

"I have been told that when the automobile first burst upon us some museum managers hurriedly secured specimens of the horse, which they caused to be stuffed and mounted, but I have not heard of anybody securing specimens of the Harlem goat. I do not attribute this to any lack of enterprise, but rather to the fact that this goat has gone out so silently that its passing has been, as one might say, unbeknownst.

"But it may not be too late. I have not myself seen a goat in Harlem in more than two years and a half. But it might be that somewhere in some back yard could still be found at least one goat. And if there is one such it is to be hoped it will be found, so that there may be preserved at least one specimen of the Harlem goat."

A Modern Miracle.

"Truly miraculous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Mollie Holt of this place," writes J. O. R. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn., "she was so wasted by coughing up pus from her lungs. Doctors declared her end so near that her family had watched by her bedside forty-eight hours; when, at my urgent request, Dr. King's New Discovery was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began and continued until she finally completely recovered, and is a healthy woman today." Guaranteed cure for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 at all druggists. Trial bottle free.

DIET REGULATES DREAMS.

Fruit the Best Kind of Food for Perfect Visions.

London, Jan. 24.—A theory in the occult world which evidently had its foundation in the old idea of the connection between Welsh rarebits and dreams is just interesting London. Mr. B. A. Cochrane, who is an authority on the subject of dreams, discussing the theory this week said:

"I have discovered that no clear dream is possible on the ordinary diet. No meat or similarly heavy food or anything containing alcohol must be taken if the right kind of dream is to come.

"Fruit is the best kind of food for the perfect dreamer. Such a diet will enable people to get into real touch with the spirit world and they will be able to recollect their dreams on awakening. Coffee and tobacco must absolutely be abolished if one is to have perfect dreams.

"Every night I put under my bolster a plain card and a pencil, and the instant I awake I write down a summary of what I have dreamed. After breakfast I write it out fully. Thus I have a record of my dreams for the past ten years."

OLD PEOPLE CONSTANT SUFFERERS IN WINTER

Most old people are great sufferers in Winter. They are seldom free from pains or ailments of some description, because they are not as able to withstand the severity of the climate, with its damp, changing weather, as are their younger, more vigorous companions. Cold weather starts the old aches and pains; they suffer with chilly sensations, cold extremities, poor appetite and digestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other afflictions peculiar to old age. With advancing years the strength and vitality of the system begin to decline. The heart action is weak and irregular, the blood becomes thin and sluggish in its circulation, and often some old blood taint that has lain dormant in the system for years begins to manifest itself. A wart or pimple becomes a troublesome sore or ulcer, skin diseases break out, or the slight rheumatic pains felt in younger days now cause sleepless nights and hours of agony. There is no reason why old age should not be healthy and free from disease if the blood is kept pure and the system strong, and this can be done with S. S. S. It is a medicine that is especially adapted to old people, because it is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, selected for their purifying, healing and building-up properties, and is very mild and gentle in its action. S. S. S. warms and reinvigorates the sluggish blood so that it moves with more rapidity, and clears it of all impurities and poisons. As this rich, healthy stream circulates through the body every part of the system is built up, the appetite and digestion improve, the heart action increases and the diseases and discomforts of old age pass away. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, and all troubles arising from diseased blood.

FIRELESS COOKING

Thorough Test is Being Made at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Cooking Can be Done With Troops on the March.

Junction City, Kan., Jan. 24.—The first thorough test of fireless cooking to be made in an official way in the army was made in the kitchen of the Fort Riley guardhouse. The test was made by Capt. M. S. Murray, commissary of Fort Riley, and it was witnessed by the regular kitchen forces of the guardhouse, besides a number of officers of the garrison and officers who have been sent here for a course in the cooks and bakers' school, among the latter being Capt. F. J. Koester of San Francisco and Capt. H. T. Ferguson of Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., both officers of the commissary department.

Enough food was cooked for 100 men. Corned beef, cabbage, bean soup, potatoes and custard pudding were the articles that were prepared in the fireless cooker. First the food was placed in vessels on the kitchen range and heated to the boiling point. The corned beef was heated fifteen minutes, the cabbage five minutes, the bean soup ten minutes, potatoes five minutes, and the custard pudding cooked five minutes en casse-role (in one vessel enclosed by another). After these foods had reached the temperature of 212 deg. they were placed in the fireless cooker, where they were allowed to remain three hours and ten minutes. When they were taken out of the cooker the temperature of the beef was 192½ deg., one vessel of cabbage 190 deg., another vessel of cabbage 196 deg., bean soup 194 deg., potatoes 188 deg., custard pudding 174½ deg. The six degrees difference in the temperature of the two vessels of cabbage is accounted for by reason of the fact that one was in the middle of the cooker and the other was in a corner where it was exposed to two outside surfaces. The food was well cooked and palatable when served on the table. About eighty-five prisoners in the guardhouse were served with this food, and it was so well done that the officers and men who witnessed the experiment remained and partook of the dinner, too.

On Wednesday of last week Capt. Murray roasted ten pounds of beef in the fireless cooker and was very successful in this experiment. The roasting was done on casserole, and when the meat had been sufficiently cooked it was found to be in just as excellent condition as it would have been had it been roasted in a range under the care of a competent cook. Next Monday Capt. Murray will try the experiment of roasting chickens in the cooker.

This fireless cooker is a patent arrangement that was designed and constructed especially for army use. If it proves to be a successful and practicable arrangement it will be employed in the army for use on marches. Food for the noonday meal can be heated to the required temperature at the same time the breakfast is cooked. The food can then be placed in the cooker and loaded into a wagon with the dinner cooking while the troops are marching. The cooker looks something like a soldier's locker. It is about four feet square and about three feet deep. It has six compartments for as many different kinds of food. It is built of wood and the compartments for the food are insulated from the sides of the box and from each other by about an inch and a half of specially prepared paper and felt. The compartments for food are covered by heavy layers of felt and the whole is covered by a felt-lined lid that makes it as near airtight as possible. Dinner pails constructed on the same principle will be introduced at Fort Riley soon for the benefit of the laborers who are employed there on the construction work.

BRITISH DISLIKE FUEL OIL.

Say it is Inferior to Welsh Coal for Speed.

London, Jan. 24.—In naval circles it is stated that the tests of oil in connection with the British navy have proved satisfactory in some cases and unsatisfactory in others. The tests were made on three specially fitted ships of the Majestic class with the channel fleet during the last cruise. Naval officers are reticent, declining to discuss the matter until the official reports are made. The purpose of the tests was to demonstrate the efficiency of oil and coal burned in conjunction. It was found that a thin fire of north country coal sprayed with crude petroleum under great pressure developed high calorific powers and maintained steam well. As far as can be ascertained at the present time, however, the experts still think that oil fuel, either by itself or mixed with any other species of coal, remains distinctly inferior to Welsh steam coal. However, a considerable degree of success has attended liquid firing of late in the navy, and it is being very generally adopted for auxiliary steam purposes. In cruising at economic speed it is very useful. One great difficulty consists in the regulation of the combustion so as to overcome the dense noxious fumes given off. One naval engineer who has given a great deal of study to the subject said:

"At high speed oil is altogether inferior to Welsh coal which, in the opinion of most naval experts, will never be beaten. The idea which has been mooted that the introduction of oil throughout the fleet would mean a saving of 50 per cent to the taxpayer in the matter of fuel is absolutely erroneous. Oil, as the matter stands today costs relatively more than coal. Of course, new inventions may change all of this, but dealing with conditions as they are today the economics are all on the side of coal. Therefore to save 50 per cent on the naval coal bill as has been suggested by putting on 60 per cent in the shape of oil fuel would appear to be the queerest kind of queer economy."

HAS WRITTEN A BIBLE.

One of Many Peculiarities of a Man Adjudged Insane.

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 24.—John Channell, a Crescent township farmer, has been adjudged insane and taken to the asylum at Norman for the third time within five years. Channell's case is a peculiar one. He has written a Bible of several hundred pages, the inspiration for which he claims to have secured direct from God. He gets his pointers from dark objects or spirits which he sees in the clouds, and has ridden several horses to death in trying to overtake these spirits. He also has a glass house, constructed for a workshop, and through the glass of this he says he studies the stars at night. His farm is inclosed with a thirteen-wire fence, and at one time had a gate built so that when it was opened the person entering would be confronted with a double-barreled shotgun, pointing directly at him. It was Channell's custom to compel his family to listen every morning to his reading of several chapters from his Bible.

OLDEST CELLARS ON CONTINENT

Brothers Have Geologist to Back Up What They Say.

Tilden, Me., Jan. 24.—Eastern Maine has a few old houses that date back to the days before the Revolution, but there is none that has been built for more than 200 years. Meanwhile George and Nathan Saulsbury, who reside in adjoining homes on the banks of Beech Hill stream, boast of living above the two oldest cellars on this continent.

"I know of what I speak," said George Saulsbury, "for Prof. Smith of the United States geological survey has told me the full history of how these two cellars were built.

"He says that a long time ago, when Adam was nothing but a barefooted boy, there came a cold winter in Eastern Maine, which lasted a long time and covered the hills and fields with ice more than 100 feet thick.

"Nobody could do anything at lumbering because it was so cold, and the roads stayed blocked up for weeks, for the reason that no one dared to break them out. Along in April, when the spring thaw set in, the water rose and covered Waltham, Otis and Martaville and most of the county.

"After it had rained for weeks and most everybody was living upstairs, because the lower doors of the houses were flooded, the ice sheets broke up and went floating across the land as icebergs. Some of these big ice cakes were more than 100 feet thick and covered acres.

"Whenever the great lumps of ice floated over the top of a hill they rubbed hard, tearing off great pieces of ledge and taking them along frozen hard to the sides and bottoms of the icebergs. After a time every iceberg in Maine was sailing around, carrying stone enough as ballast to build a mile of stone wall.

"Then, as the water drained off into Union river, the icebergs ran aground and punched great holes in the mud, where they remained until they had thawed out and melted away under the heat of summer. Of course, as the flat stones which the icebergs had gathered up from rubbing against ledges remained on the outside of the ice they were left in the same relative positions as when held by the ice, after the big bergs had thawed and run away as water.

"So there you are with holes in the ground that have their sides and bottoms lined with stones which have been ground smooth and pounded together until they fit as well as the masonry work did in Solomon's temple. These old holes, from which the ice has melted, are found all over Northern Hancock county, and no man can see them without thinking of cellars.

"That's what they are—natural cellars, all stoned up and flagged and ready for men to build houses on. When Nathan and I came here and took up new farms from the woods forty years ago we didn't have to be told about what to do with them.

"We just cut away the trees growing in the hollows and used them to build houses, and then put our new log houses right on top of the cellars, which were dug by icebergs long before any of our folks came to Maine."

DEATH ENDS SUFFERING.

Demise of Mrs. McDonald, Mother of Senator Clapp's Wife.

New Richmond, Wis., Jan. 24.—Mrs. William McDonald, one of the pioneers of St. Croix county, died at her home just outside of the city after suffering many months from cancer. Mrs. McDonald is the mother of the wife of United States Senator M. E. Clapp of Minnesota, Attorney E. E. McDonald of Bemidji, Minn., and Attorney W. H. McDonald of St. Paul.

THE WAY OF DAN LAMONT

Cleveland's Secretary Always Appeased White House Callers.

Lije Halford Was Also Something of a Diplomat.

Washington, Jan. 24.—It would, of course, be impossible for the president—for any president—to greet all the people, some of them obviously queer, and others simply pigheadedly determined, who appear at the White House and announce to the attendants that they are going to "sit right there till the president does see them." The late Col. Dan Lamont, when he was secretary to President Cleveland, was a great hand at gently nudging the insistent and impossible ones toward the outer air.

He was once passing out of the main White House door when his attention was attracted to a colloquy between a couple of doorkeepers and a sharp voiced spinster of most seveere aspect This woman had just been removed from her post as a school teacher in Washington for criticising the public school system of the District of Columbia in a series of extraordinary letters to the Washington press.

She had developed an acerbity of temper which made it impossible for her to get on with anybody including her pupils; and so she had to go. She had come to the White House that day to lay her case before President Cleveland.

"I'm going to see him whether you want me or not," she was saying to the doorkeepers as Mr. Lamont passed by on his way out. "He's nothing but a servant of the people, and I'm one of the people. I'll see him if I have to stay here a thousand years and wait," and she plunged herself into one of the big chairs in the outer corridor and arranged her skirt with great elaboration.

Mr. Lamont walked over to the spinster with the grievance.

"I'm sorry, madame," he said, "that it isn't possible for the president to see you because he's not in the White House, nor, in fact, in Washington. He went down Chesapeake bay this morning on a little hunting trip, and won't be back for two or three days," which was the truth.

"All right, then," said the determined spinster, never budging from her chair, "I'll wait right here in the White House till he gets back."

"But," said Mr. Lamont, rubbing his chin thoughtfully and smiling, "would that be exactly proper, do you think? I sleep here nights during Mr. Cleveland's absence, and there is no lady living in the building at present. And I observe that you are unchaperoned, are you not?"

"The Goddess of Justice will be sufficient chaperon for me, sir," replied the spinster, although she was plainly mollified by the secretary's courteous tone and deferential manner.

"True, true," said Mr. Lamont. "but—er—who could I get to—er—chaperon me, I wonder?" This in a thoughtful tone.

"Oh, well, never mind—I'll return when Mr. Cleveland gets back," said the spinster, rising from her seat, and the trick was done.

The woman went her way almost smiling.

On another occasion he was called from his office by the sound of a wordy conflict in the corridor outside. People visiting the White House did not have to run the same long gauntlet in those days that they do now, and the woman making the noise in the corridor had got that far by stating with great propriety upon her entrance that she had an appointment with the president, and it was near the president's hour for receiving general visitors with appointments.

Once in the corridor outside the president's offices, she had become violently angry when restrained from walking right in upon Mr. Cleveland, and had turned loose upon the doorkeeper the stream of denunciation which summoned Mr. Lamont into the hall. Her husband, a postmaster in a little Maryland town, had, it seemed, just been removed by the remorseless ax of Headsman Adlai Stevenson, who was then in the postoffice department, and she had come to see the president about it.

Mr. Lamont found her in the hall tossing her arms wildly and shooing the somewhat alarmed looking attendant into a corner.

"Madam," said Mr. Lamont, soothingly, "will you kindly tell me what I can do for you?"

"And who are you, runt?" flashed out the woman regarding Mr. Lamont contemptuously.

Mr. Lamont wasn't any son of Anak in stature, but a little thing like that was never any sore point with him, and he laughed pleasantly over the angry woman's shot.

"Well," he said, good naturedly, "I work here, and it's part of my job to do anything I can to oblige visitors. If you would be good enough to state your case I'd be obliged, and—"

"Well, I came here to tell Grover Cleveland what I think of him, that's what," broke in the woman.

Mr. Lamont tugged reflectively at his grizzled, chopped off mustache.

"Madam," he said, "tell me. Tell me what you think of him. Between you and me, he gets me guessing often enough."

The good natured tone of the bantering words appeased the woman instantly. She climbed right down, and in a few words, when Mr. Lamont had informed her who he was, she narrated her grievance, and the secretary promised to take it up with the president.

There was justice in her husband's case at that, and Mr. Lamont did take it up and the president restored the woman's husband to his little postmastership. But Mr. Cleveland, from his office, had heard the little talk between his secretary and the angry woman, and Mr. Lamont was twitted for some days by his chief upon the runt feature of that interview.

Hardly less capable, as a diplomatic handler of the difficult White House visitors was Elijah—"Lije"—Halford, Mr. Harrison's secretary.

He was swooped upon in his office one day by a milde aged man of naturally violent temper who had recently been dismissed from one of the government departments for what used to be called pernicious activity in politics. The man had got by the doorkeepers by exercising the crafty coolness which in the old days enabled many of the most impossible visitors to make their way almost to the door of the president's office.

As he stormed into Mr. Halford's office the typhoon of warth that was raging within him over what he regarded as his unjust dismissal from his clerkship broke forth.

"You're Halford, ain't you—the fellow Lije that we read so much about?" he opened up upon the exceedingly mild mannered secretary, who beamed upon him from his desk chair with great cordiality.

"Ah—me—that lightweight?" was the secretary's instant disclaimer. "Mr. Halford? Where did you get that idea? My name's Spinks, and I'm just a clerk here. Halford's out of town. Say don't call me Halford that way again. I don't like it.

"So you, too, know what an ass he is, hey?" chimed in the wrathful visitor. "I came here to tell him what I think of him. He's the scoundrel who's been laying hold of all the papers in my case that I've been sending the president, so that the president has never seen one of them."

"That so?" said the secretary, innocently. "Well, that's Halford for you. He's doing that all the time. Lot of complaint about it. Thinks he's the whole works. Makes a specialty of holding things back from the president that the president ought to know about. But, man, don't tell me your troubles. You come back when Halford's in—he'll be back week after next—and tell him. And, say, let him have it good. I'd like to be by when you give it to him. He and I don't get along a little bit. Meantime tell me about your papers, and I'll look 'em up, and write to you about 'em."

The violent man quickly settled down, and Spinks made a few notes on his blotting pad, and the visitor departed appeased. Mr. Harrison looked into his secretary's office a couple of minutes later and there was a smile on his face.

"Halford," he said, "how do you reconcile it with your conscience when you tell those brazen ones? You told that man your name was Spinks."

"Why, I thought I said Sphinx," replied the secretary, bending over his work.

When the late Lucius Quintius Curtius Lamar, of Alabama, was secretary of the interior in the first cabinet of President Cleveland, he had an experience with a visitor that gave him a moment of mingled amusement and chagrin every time he thought of it to the end of his life.

Mr. Lamar, who was one of the courtliest and most affable men that ever came to Washington, and who served for many years in the senate and on the bench of the United States supreme court, was greatly bothered when he entered President Cleveland's cabinet by the horde of impecunious persons from his own state, men with whom he had no sort of acquaintance, who tried to haunt his office with the purpose of attempting to borrow money, obtain office in the face of the then civil service rules or ask for other favors.

In self-defense he had finally to give orders to the black messenger at his door to admit nobody, even during the hours of the general daily reception, who did not previously send in a card. When the card bore the name of some man he didn't know, or, knowing too well, didn't want to see, Mr. Lamar would send out word by the messenger that he wasn't in.

One day the secretary's messenger appeared before Mr. Lamar and told him there was an insistent old gentleman out in the hall who refused to send in a card, but stated that he merely wanted to make the secretary a little friendly visit. The secretary was firm. The visitor would have to send in a card and name his business.

The visitor told the messenger that he only wanted to see Mr. Lamar about a little claim he had before congress for cotton destroyed by Federal troops during the Civil war. Claimants of this kind were the bane of Mr. Lamar's life. Mr. Lamar sent out word by the messenger that he was out.

The messenger went out and told the visitor that the secretary had left the building. The visitor was a neat looking old gentleman in black clothes, with a long white beard. He smiled at the messenger's statement.

"Well," he said, with twinkling eye, "Ah reckon there'll be no objection if Ah sit heah and wait till the sec'etahy returhns," and he sat down in the black messenger's chair.

The messenger went in after a while and told Mr. Lamar that the old gentleman from Alabama, who refused to give his name, was still sitting out in the hall and "actin' right patient, suh," as the black messenger expressed it.

Mr. Lamar couldn't help the patience part of it. He couldn't be seen by strangers with cotton claims any more.

When the secretary went out to luncheon there was the old Alabama man sitting in the messenger's chair. Mr. Lamar nodded to him. The old man nodded back, apparently without recognizing the secretary.

The next day the old man was back again during the forenoon. Again the secretary refused to see him. Again the old man, on being told that the secretary was out, reckoned that he'd sit down and wait; and wait he did for several hours. And when the secretary passed out and in of the office he nodded to the old man, who nodded back as if to a stranger.

This went on for six days. On the sixth day Mr. Lamar was passing out of his office for his luncheon when the old man rose from his chair, stretched out his hand to the courtly secretary and said:

"Loosh, yo' certuhnly are losing yo' memory and getting old a heap fastuh than Ah am. And yo' don't even know me yet. Loosh!"

The secretary of the interior looked at the old man keenly, and then with two strides he had him by both hands. They had been boys and law students together, and the old visitor was one of the most prosperous and influential men in the state of Alabama.

He had simply been "waitin' fo' Loosh to recognize him," but the secretary had been unable to do it on account of the old gentleman's newly grown long beard, and so, rather filled with the humor of the situation until it became monotonous, he had been cooling his heels in the messenger's chair outside the secretary's office for a week.

Secretary Lamar abrogated his card rule from that day, and saw everybody.

KILLED HIS WIFE'S LOVER.

But Major Was Imprisoned for Leaving His Post.

Constantinople, Jan. 24.—The last act of a remarkable tragedy in real life has just been played before a court-martial in Bucharest, according to advices received by the Roumanian colony here. As the story goes, a colonel living in a village near Bucharest became intensely jealous of his young and beautiful wife. Recently he was called away on duty for twenty-four hours. Becoming suspicious he deserted his post and made his way home. He found the doors locked and could obtain no answer to his knock. While waiting he happened to glance up and saw that the lights in one of the rooms were being extinguished. Hurling himself against the door in fury and anger he succeeded in breaking it down. In the darkness as he rushed upstairs he did not see his wife, who escaped him and gained the door. A slight noise, however, revealed the woman's lover. In a fury of passion the husband caught his revolver and began firing in the dark. His shots were answered with groans and it was later found that the lover was a young Russian student who was killed by the colonel while firing into the dark room. The officer gave himself up and was tried by court-martial. A peculiarity about the entire case was that he was acquitted on the ground of killing the student, and was accorded an immense ovation by the crowds at the capital of Bucharest. He was, however, sentenced to two months' imprisonment for the military offense of deserting his post.

To Get More Strength from Your Food

LOTS of people are starving with a full stomach.

You know, it's not how much we Eat, but how we Digest that makes us Strong, or Brainy, or Successful.

When the Bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved for want of Food.

Because, food that stays too long in the Bowels decays there, just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

Well, when food decays in the Bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the Bowels and Intestines then draw Poison from the decayed Food, instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood and, in time, spreads all over the body, unless the Cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That Cause of Constipation is Weak, or Lazy, Bowel Muscles.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them.

There's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowel-Muscles.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

Cascarets act like Exercise on the Muscles of the Bowels, and make them stronger every time they force these Muscles to act naturally.

The stronger these Muscles propel the food, the stronger does the friction of the food act on the flow of Digestive Juices.

The more of these Juices that act on food, the more Nutriment does that food turn into, and the richer nourishment do the little Suction Pumps of the Intestines draw out of it.

It needs only one Cascaret at a time to stimulate all the Bowel-Muscles enough, without purging, discomfort or loss of nutrition.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six-mile walk in the country would give you, (without the weariness) take one Cascaret at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

One Cascaret at a time will properly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

A coming Headache can be warded off, in short order, by a single Cascaret, and the cause removed.

Heartburn, Gas-belching, Acid-risings in the throat, and Colicky feeling are sure signs of Bowel trouble from food poisons, and should be dealt with promptly.

One Cascaret will stop the coming trouble, move on the Bowel load, and free the Digestive Juices, if that one Cascaret is taken as soon as the first signs are noticed.

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascaret Box with you constantly.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

FREE TO OUR FRIENDS!

We want to send to our friends a beautiful French-designed, GOLD-PLATED BONBON BOX, hard-enameled in colors. It is a beauty for the dressing table. Ten cents in stamps is asked as a measure of good faith and to cover cost of Cascarets, with which this dainty trinket is loaded. 717

Everybody Knows What Constipation Is

But Not Everybody Knows What Hunyadi Janos Is.

A large proportion of humanity suffer to a greater or less extent from constipation in one form or another. How really few there are who do not know the distress, pain and general discomfort resulting from failure of the bowels to move regularly. And does not this suffering seem foolishly unnecessary when we realize it is due simply to ignorance of the proper and simple remedy—HUNYADI JANOS—the great Natural Mineral Laxative Water, not only the most inexpensive. The cost of a large bottle is but a trifle and it contains many doses. One dose in a tumblerful drunk on arising in the morning. The result is always certain, quick and thorough. A pleasant and natural relief without griping or purging. Try it. At all Druggists.

WHEAT IS VERY SICK

After Some Early Strength it Closes Three Quarters Lower.

Flax Again Strong With Foreigners Responsible for Strength.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 24.—Wheat is very sick and seems to be utterly without strength. This morning it was fairly firm during the early part of the day, but after the noon hour it fell away quickly and finally closed with a considerable decline. Wire service was again interrupted, though better than yesterday. Liverpool was ¾ to ⅞d lower. Foreigners are bidding well for Manitoba wheat and it is not to be had to offer them in very large quantities. Winnipeg was down only ⅛c t day in spite of the much larger losses i. American markets. The May option was ⅞c lower in Duluth and New York, ⅝c lower in Minneapolis and ¾-⅞c off in Chicago.

Bradstreet reported an increase of 430,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was an increase of 1,130,000 bus., and in Europe and afloat a decrease of 700,000 bus.

Corn was a shade lower in Chicago for the May option and ½d higher to ½d lower in Liverpool. May oats in Chicago were a shade lower.

A fair activity in wheat developed at different times in the Duluth market today, but it was generally dull. May wheat opened ⅛c lower at 84c and advanced to 85⅛c at 12:40. The price fell at 12:58 to 85⅛c and closed at 85⅛c and closed at 85¾c, a loss of ⅛c over yesterday. There was no activity in July wheat, which closed at 81½c, a loss of ¾c over yesterday.

Flax was up 1¾c in London and its strength abroad advanced the local flax market. Exporters worked some flax for foreign shipment, but have difficulty in getting flax in quantities of any size to offer. As soon as the exporters go into the market to buy, the offerings seem to be withdrawn. May flax opened 1¾c higher at $1.22, fell to $1.21¾, advanced to $1.23¾, fell to $1.21⅞ and then rose to $1.23. The price after that ranged from $1.22¾ to $1.22⅝. The closing price was $1.22⅝, a gain of 2½c over yesterday. July flax opened 1¾c higher at $1.23¼, advanced to $1.24, fell to $1.23½ and advanced to $1.24, at which price it closed, showing a gain of 2½c over yesterday. September flax opened 1¾c higher at $1.21¾ and advanced to $1.22⅝. The closing price was $1.22½, a gain of 2½c over yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Decreased Receipts and Good Demand Lends Wheat Upwards.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Decreased receipts in Northwest and a good demand by commission houses sent May wheat to 86⅝@86⅞c on early trading today. Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 228 cars against 466 cars last week and 317 cars one year ago.

On good demand by commission houses and small local receipts, the corn market was firm, May selling to 45⅜@45¼c. Local receipts were 149 cars with 4 of contract grade.

Trading in oats was very active and the market was steady. May was up a shade at 31⅝c. Local receipts were 62 cars.

May pork was up 7½c at $14.20. Lard was unchanged at $7.60 and ribs were up 2½c at $7.40.

Grain Gossip.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat shipments, just as at this time a year ago, were unusually heavy today. Cash wheat in first-class demand. Millers are taking all they can get. Minneapolis stocks increased 690,000 bus for four days. The volume of business on the average is unchanged. There was some covering by shorts early. We think, all in all, this looks like a very strong place upon which to make purchases, as the price is bound to ultimately go higher. In the meantime it is subject to frequent setbacks. Wheat, however, should not be extensive. On any of these declines we would advise traders to average their lines, as these dives at the market are for the purpose of shaking out the weak holders of long wheat.

Flax has been doing well the past week. On the advance to $1.23½ it is doubtful if the foreigners took anything at much over $1.26, the balance of the advance being due to short coverings and speculative buying. On the decline it so happens that the wires were not working well and bids were not on time, and very little export business was worked. On the advance of the last two days we have had wire trouble, with practically no communication with Liverpool or the continent, so at this time this foreign element should enter into the situation very strongly. There was considerable local liquidation on the recent decline and it is probable that nearly all lines were cleaned out, which accounts for the ease and rapidity with which the market advances on the slight demand. With these facts in mind, it would seem that the market was bound for decidedly higher prices, of course, subject to frequent setbacks. We consider flax a good purchase at the present prices.

Corn—In the course of the dullness in wheat, there was a firmness about the speculative corn market that was surprising to both bears and bulls. There is a better chance for a bulge than a break.

EMMET DESCENDANTS.

William Jenkins Emmet, grandnephew of Robert Emmet, the martyr of the Irish rebellion of '98, died in New Rochelle, Friday, at the age of 80, says the Kansas City Journal. He was son of Judge Robert E. Emmet, eldest son of Thomas Addis Emmit, brother of Robert. His son, Robert, possesses the seal ring which the Irish patriot took from his finger before mounting the scaffold, desiring that it should be an heirloom to be held by the Emmet who should bear his name. William Emmet was a business man, and the only one among the grandsons of Thomas Addis Emmet. He leaves five sons, all well placed, and three daughters, all of whom are artists, and one, Mrs. Rosina Sherwood, noted in her work. The family is a prolific one; when William's brother, Richard Stockton Emmet, was buried three years ago, fifty persons bearing the name attended the funeral.

RUSSIAN WAR LOSSES.

Some striking figures are published by the Novoe Vremya as to the forces at the disposal of the Russian commander-in-chief in Manchuria at the close of the late war. When peace was concluded Gen. Linevitch had at his disposal 12,500 officers, 917,000 men and 270,000 horses. But from the beginning to the end of the war there had been carried to the front 20,000 officers, 1,270,000 men, 230,000 horses and more than 1,600 guns. Subtracting these figures and making allowance for the 80,000 men already on the spot when war broke out, the Russian losses appear roughly 7,500 officers and 433,000 men.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Quick Rise in Low-Priced Stocks Was the Feature.

Heavy Unloading of the Pacifics Caused a Weak Close.

New York, Jan. 24.—Opening dealings in the stock market today showed further progress in the recovery which had set in when the market closed last night. There were a number of buoyant advances, with Union Pacific the feature, 10,000 shares selling at 159 and 159½, compared with 157⅝ last night. Colorado Fuel rose an extreme 2 points; Canadian Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande, 1½; Amalgamated Copper, 1⅜; Brooklyn Transit and Allis-Chalmers preferred, 1¼; Smelting about a point and St. Paul, Northern Pacific, Sugar, Allis-Chalmers and United States Rubber, large fractions. The advance in Anaconda was 5¼.

Slight irregularity in the high-priced active stocks incidental to realizing on the advance did not discourage heavy buying of a number of the low-priced stocks. Some of the advances recorded were Federal Mining, 10; Colorado Fuel preferred, 4⅝; Great Northern preferred, 2½; Allis-Chalmers and American Car, 1¾; St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Lead, 1 to 1¼. Chicago Great Western preferred fell 1⅜.

The feature of the market was the quick advance in low priced stocks, both railroads and industrials, most of them paying no dividends. Large buying orders appeared in first one and then another. Union Pacific rose 2¼ to a new record at 159⅜, and Reading ran off a point to 160 but the movement generally in the high grade stocks was narrow. Colorado Fuel rose 3¼. Bonds were irregular at noon. The movement shifted in the high priced industrials. Anaconda rising 10⅜ and Copper and Sugar 2⅝. The general list was inclined to pause, but held firm.

There was very heavy unloading of the Pacifics due to disappointment over an adjournment of the Union Pacific executive committee without action on the dividend. The earlier rise in Union Pacific was wiped out. The closing was weak and very active.

FIRST TEST OF STRENGTH

Over Joint Statehood Bill Is Won by the "Regulars."

Said to Be Certain That Administration Measure Will Win.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The "Regulars," as opposed to the "Rebels" in the lower house won in the first test of strength today over the joint statehood bill. The rule proposed by the rules committee governing procedure in considering the joint statehood bill was adopted, 192 to 165. The rule against which the "Rebels" were arrayed provided that general debate in the statehood bill should cease at 3 p. m. Thursday next, and immediately thereafter, without debate, intervening motion or appeal, a vote shall be taken on the bill to a final passage. The rule adopted is said to make it certain that the regular measure providing for the admission of two new states will go through.

BOOTHMAN IS DEAD AT AUBURN

Whiteman's Partner Succumbs to Bright's Disease in Hospital.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Joseph Boothman of the Knox-Whiteman gang of forgers, is dead at Auburn prison, where he expired shortly after noon Saturday of Bright's disease.

Boothman was taken to Auburn Dec. 9 last to serve a sentence of five years and eight months for his share in the swindling of the Fidelity Trust company here by means of a raised draft. He had been in the prison hospital for several weeks almost daily during the last two weeks.

News of Boothman's death came to Buffalo in the form of a message to his counsel, Rowland B. Mahany, asking what disposition should be made of the body. Mr. Mahany has made arrangements to have the body brought here for cremation.

Boothman was a clever, well-educated Englishman, a smooth talker and a man who had evidently traveled widely and observed keenly. He had a great fund of good stories. He was said by local judges and lawyers to be the cleverest witness who ever faced an Erie county jury.

BLACKMAILING SCHEME EXPOSED

When Steamship Man Patronized Town Topics Persecution Ceased.

New York, Jan. 24.—Bernard N. Baker of Baltimore, was the first witness today in the trial of Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, on a charge of having criminally libelled Justice Joseph M. Deuel. Mr. Baker said he was president of the Baltimore Trust company and was president of the Transport company from 1889 to 1900. An item in Town Topics of Dec. 15, 1898, referring to the "blossoming forth" of Mr. Baker's family into Baltimore society was read to the jury. After reading the item, Mr. Baker said he visited Col. Mann, editor of Town Topics.

He said he wanted the articles appearing in Town Topics stopped. Col. Mann told him, he said, that other steamship lines had advertisements in Town Topics and that his company ought to secure one. I told him that if he wanted our advertisement he ought to say so, said Mr. Baker. Mr. Baker authorized the insertion of an advertisement. "Did the articles referring to you and your family cease, after the insertion of the advertisement?" asked Mr. Shepard.

"I think so," said Baker. The witness said the advertisement continued to be published in Town Topics for about a year.

BIG BEQUESTS IN FIELD WILL

Three Grandchildren Get $40,000,000 Each and $8,000,000 to Museum.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—What purported to be a resume of the principal bequests of the late Marshall Field was made public yesterday afternoon, on the authority of a member of the family, who was present when the will was read to the family last Saturday.

According to the report, the principal beneficiaries are the following:

Field Columbian museum, $8,000,000.

Mrs. David Beatty, only daughter, $8,000,000; three grandchildren of Marshall Field—Marshall 11), aged 11; Henry Field, aged 9, and Gwendolyn Field, aged 4, each about $40,000,000.

Nieces and sisters of Marshall Field, each $100,000.

Smaller sums were left to various charities in which Mr. Field was interested. Old family servants also were remembered, it is reported.

The Field estate at once takes first place among the biggest family fortunes in the United States. Attorneys now are busy estimating its size, and formal announcement of the contents of the will has been postponed until an accurate valuation shall have been reached. Whether the lump sum is $100,000,000 or $150,000,000, it certainly takes rank with the Gould, Astor and Vanderbilt fortunes.

The chief beneficiaries of the will are as yet only children.

It is believed that Mr. Field included all three of his sons' children in the trust deed, because of the impaired health young Marshall, the natural heir, has suffered.

The boy was thrown from a pony in the Berkshire Hills some two years ago and afterward was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism, which at one time threatened to terminate his life. It was believed then that even if he should recover he would be a cripple for life.

A few months ago at Lakewood, N. J., however, under the direct personal care of Dr. Frank Billings, the boy was restored to health, and last fall he was a familiar figure along Prairie avenue playing with his little black dog.

Henry Field, the second child, is strong and is said to be a lad of great mental alertness. He is at present in school at Southboro, Mass.

Little Gwendolyn, who is now one of the country's great heiresses, is a particularly attractive girl and was the favorite of her father. She inherits the good looks which always have belonged to the Field family.

With young Marshall, Gwendolyn is now at Lakewood with her mother, Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., who was formerly Miss Albertine Huck, daughter of the late Louis Huck of Chicago.

"Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

PEOPLING COLONIES

How England Has Solved the Problem of the Unemployed.

Many Families Are Sent to Canada by Lord Rothschild.

London, Jan. 24.—Never before in the history of the British empire has there been a time when the air was as full of emigration schemes and emigration propositions as at the present. Go where one will these things are being discussed with an earnestness and a vigor which augur to bring results. Possibly it is the fact that never before has the problem of the unemployed pressed home with so much force upon imperial, official and charitable England. And colonization schemes and emigration projects may be regarded as only one form for a relief of the pressure of population—one outlet forced by the iron law of necessity.

The queen herself has led in this work of trying to find work for those without work—homes for those without homes. So serious was this march of the unemployed through the streets of London that it is supposed not in official circles that it was for that these conditions, not the fancies of Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, committed him which caused Mr. Balfour so willingly lay down the reins of office as conservative prime minister of the empire. But not even the absorbing questions connected with the general elections have caused a letup in the discussions of emigration and colonization. Indeed, it would appear as if the political situation had only intensified the eagerness on the part of some of the members of the "submerged tenth" to leave this country which is shared by the so-called upper classes, who are equally anxious to have them leave.

It would appear as though every one which Great Britain possesses has its colonization society or emigration organization hard at work. Even Ireland has been swept from end to end by a storm of indignation raised by the report that the English were about to use that "island" as a dumping ground for the "scum" and "offscouring" of London. Talk of an Anglicised Ireland is certainly interesting on both sides of the "Irish sea." There there are "baby colonies," designed to take children to Canada—almost without number. One thing which has not been disputed regarding the sending out of these children to the colonies is the fact that almost invariably they do grow up to make useful citizens.

The latest offer prompted by the distress prevailing in the Tottenham district just beyond the boundary of the administrative county of London appears to have merit in it in more ways than one. Lord Rothschild, whose bounty is as proverbial as his great wealth, has just offered to send 200 families from this district to Canada, and finally supplemented this offer by 100 more, making 300 in all. The vicarage of St. John's church and the house of Rev. A. N. Guest, the curate, have been besieged by thousands anxious to take advantage of Lord Rothschild's offer. From the Canadian and colonial point of view the situation has merit in it, even in this respect. The applicants have been so numerous and so persistent that the local committee has announced that the "pick of the flock" will be sent to Canada. Only able bodied men—men who might almost be a credit to any police force in the world—will be allowed to go. Consequently it will be Tottenham's real loss and Canada's real gain.

PROSPERITY IN EGYPT.

It is Pronounced Along All Lines Except Cattle Raising.

Cairo, Jan. 24.—The prosperity of Egypt is one of the really remarkable things of the century. This prosperity has not been due solely to the extension of the railways and the increase of business on the canal—it has been pronounced along all lines except in the business of cattle growing, where the recent plague has caused a depreciation in values, and the ravages to cotton caused by the "boll worm" in Upper Egypt. But except in these minor details, even Sir Vincent Corbett, financial adviser to the Egyptian government, says that the rapid advance in the prosperity of Egypt which characterized 1905 and 1904 has to all outward appearances, at least, been maintained.

It is just thirty years ago in the Khedival palace in Cairo that Gen. Stanton, the British consul-general, and the unhappy Ismail Sadyk Pasha, nicknamed "The Mufettish," then Egyptian minister of finance, signed the contract by which the viceroy's shares passed into the possession of Great Britain. From that transformation the whole modern change in Egypt has been gradually and consistently evolved. It led to the bombardment of Alexandra, the stricken field of Omdurman, the drastic crisis of Fashoda, and finally the poetic denouement of the Lansdowne-Cambon convention of last year.

In his annual note to the budget Sir Vincent Corbett even goes on to show how the prosperity of Egypt has caused a scarcity of all labor, skilled and unskilled. He says: "I learn from the irrigation authorities that the cost of construction of earthworks has risen within the last three years by at least 60 per cent."

This boom in all things Egyptian has recently been so pronounced that Sir Vincent sounds a note of warning: "With a full sense of the responsibility attaching to an expression of opinion which cannot but have something of an excathedra character I desire to sound a note of warning to those who look on Egypt as an Eldorado for investors—to speculators who hope to find here a field for money making."

Even in the matter of real estate it is noted that real estate has boomed in the city of Cairo, almost to the foot of the pyramids. Real estate boomers with modern methods have taken possession of the town, and many and startling have been the changes. It is possible that the appeal to the historic has a peculiar fascination for some speculators but it is a remarkable fact that inquiries from all over the world have reached Cairo regarding Egyptian real estate and mining.

In the matter of mining Sir Vincent has this to say:

"The department of mines has been formed for the purpose of issuing mining leases and licenses and generally controlling the mineral industry within the country. The extent of the regions in which ancient mining centers have been found is such as to induce the expenditure of large sums of money within the next few years for further exploration and development work, most of which money will be derived from sources outside the country and spent in it. The department has been placed under the charge of an inspector general who will be assisted in his duties by other inspectors, and a special staff of desert police."

"There's a Reason."

RAILROADS

SUCCESS IS FLATTERING

H. S. Bryan Talks of the New Northern Railway Club.

Interesting Papers for the Meeting Next Friday Night.

The official proceedings of the December meeting of the Northern Railway club are now in pamphlet form and ready for distribution. The booklet, prepared in the office of Secretary C. L. Kennedy, shows a decided improvement over the first attempt, in that it is larger, and has some attractive advertising between its covers.

The next meeting of the club will be held next Friday evening, Jan. 26, at the Commercial club. J. E. Goodman, master mechanic of the Northern Pacific railway, will read a paper on "Increase in Variation in Height of Couplers." All members are expected to pose themselves on the subject and enter into the general discussion which will follow the reading of the paper. W. W. Walker, general freight agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic will read a paper, which promises to be interesting on, "Co-operative Departments."

A new departure Friday night will be the introduction of the musical program. This, with cigars, will add to the pleasantness of the occasion. As the affairs of the organization progress, more time and attention will be devoted to the social side, although the business end will by no means be forgotten. Club officials feel highly elated at the great success with which the club has met with so far. H. S. Bryan, second vice president, who acts as superintendent of motive power for the Duluth & Iron Range road, says:

"I feel very much encouraged to think that the club starts out in such a very prosperous condition and with so many present. I notice quite a contrast between railway clubs as organized nowadays and several years ago. The first club of the kind I belonged to was the Western Railway club of Chicago, and at its first meeting we had three members present, one master car builder, one master mechanic and a supply man.

"It was very hard to get the management of the railroads to think it was beneficial for the employes to organize clubs, or to spend their time attending club meetings, but all that has changed. I know it was several months after the Western Railway club was organized before we could get a dozen members to attend any meeting, but by perseverance and by the presentation of subjects that were beneficial to the railroad companies, and the discussion of them, the management soon began to think there was something in it, and began to encourage employes to attend the meetings and exchange ideas, so the idea that it was not beneficial was soon done away with.

"After the organization of the Northwest Railway club of St. Paul and Minneapolis it was a long time before we could get more than a dozen present at a meeting, and to find as many present at those meetings as there were in attendance at our first two meetings—we have held only two—would be considered something marvelous. Only an annual meeting or a banquet would draw such a number of members.

"It pleased me that there should be so many at the meetings, and it seems to me there is a great future for this club. We have the right sort of people as members. The management of the railroad companies expect the men holding subordinate positions to give their best time and attention to the duties they have to perform, and a one-idea man must be relegated to the background. These meetings secure the interchange of ideas, and will be found very beneficial to all who participate in them. There is no one so far advanced in transportation matters that he has not room for new ideas, and it is only by getting together in this fashion and discussing matters of general interest in our particular line of work that we can give the best service possible to the companies which employ us."

PATRONIZE HOME INDUSTRIES

Workingmen and Business Men Should Pursue This Policy.

Build Up Your Own City, Not Those of the East.

"New industries, new pay rolls, new prosperity for Duluth."

The above appeared in The Herald's issue of Jan. 12, under the caption, "The Field Survey," and certainly speaks volumes for Duluth, if the people will only display a little more city patriotism, by purchasing none but home-made articles whenever possible.

It has been publicly announced that a new industry, the American Carbolite company, is to be established in our city, which certainly is welcome news.

But one important factor that we, the cigarmakers of Duluth, desire to call the attention of the public to, which plays a prominent part in inducing new industries to locate in our city and to upbuild our present industries, is the question of patronizing none but home industries.

We cannot expect capitalists to come here and invest their money in establishing new industries if the people do not patronize the industries that have already been established here.

Take, for instance, the cigar industry. As we have already stated, our union today comprises a membership of about 110, with a weekly pay roll of about $2,200 (just the cigarmakers alone), and we dare assert that if the people of Duluth would smoke none but home-made cigars exclusively, there is no doubt whatever that there could be employed at least 500 cigarmakers in our city, which would mean a weekly pay roll of at least $10,000 for cigarmakers alone.

If this change for the better can be accomplished in the cigar industry (and we believe it can be), then the same can be done with all of our industries, if the people resolve to purchase none but home-made goods; it would not only build up our present industries, but it would create an incentive to the capitalists to establish new industries in our city.

Our merchant is, to a great degree, really more to blame than the individual consumer, for he is in a position to know that the money he receives from the consumer is sent to Eastern markets, in place of remaining here at home, thereby giving the working class an opportunity to regain a part thereof in the form of wages.

We have been informed that recently one particular merchant purchased from an outside manufacturer 10,000 cigars, which means at least eight weeks of employment for one man, or rather, technically speaking, the depriving of one man from earning a livelihood for eight weeks. Now, does this merchant stand in a position where it can be consistently said that he is assisting in the upbuilding of our city? Not much. And the cigarmakers keep mum, publicly, for the time being, but they have their eyes upon him especially when they wish to dispose of some of their weekly earnings. The same can safely be said (with but very few exceptions) of all our merchants; but remember, Mr. Merchant, that a day of reckoning will surely come, if you persist in your present tactics towards our home industries.

In conclusion, we request that when you purchase a cigar, see that the union label (or blue label, as it is sometimes called) is on the box from which you are served, for it is a guarantee against tenement-house, Chinese and cheap labor cigars. It means that the cigars contained in a given box bearing this label are made by a member of the cigarmakers' union, an organization devoted to the upbuilding of the home and fireside, and the amelioration of the entire working class.

Respectfully,
CIGARMAKERS' UNION.

WEST DULUTH

It is understood that the American Carbolite company will take possession of the old car works on Feb. 1, at which time the company's chief engineer will be here. After that time the machinery necessary for the plant will be brought in and the work of putting it in position will begin.

This work will take up some considerable time, and it will have to be started soon as the contract of the company with the Great Northern Power company requires it to use the power, or at least pay for it as soon as it is turned on, and that is expected to be July 1. The plant will have to be in readiness by that time.

The carbolite company is also behind on its contracts, and wants the plant in shape as soon as possible to permit them to catch up.

Another Director Appointed.

A. J. Lindgren returned last evening from Red Wing, Minn., where he was in attendance on the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Minnesota Scandinavian Relief association, of which there is a branch lodge in West Duluth. Mr. Lindgren is a member of the board of directors, and during the meeting of yesterday, A. Hagberg of West Duluth was also elected a director. The association is in splendid shape, Mr. Lindgren says, and the annual reports are very encouraging.

C. O. F. Installation.

The regular meeting of St. James' court, No. 614, C. O. F., was held last evening in Gilley's hall. The event of the evening was a jubilee installation of the officers of the court for the ensuing year. The ceremonies were in charge of State Chief Ranger P. H. Martin and the following officers were installed: Chief ranger, F. J. Roeller; vice chief ranger, F. Chaurette; past chief ranger, J. J. Moran; recording secretary, A. Murphy; financial secretary, William J. Doherty; treasurer, J. Bellmeur; trustees, J. Ryan, J. McCormick and John O'Connell; senior conductor, William Ehr; junior conductor, N. J. Buckley; inside sentinel, J. A. Bethune; outside sentinel, Joseph Fountain. After the ceremonies a short social session was held in which the Lady Foresters joined.

Next Tuesday a large number of the members of the local court will go over to Superior and join in the installation of the officers of Allouez court. This event is always a most important one in Forestry at the Head of the Lakes and the courts on this side of the bay make arrangements to attend it. A chartered car has been secured for the occasion and members of the order and their friends will go over and attend the ceremonies.

West Duluth Briefs.

C. W. Nelson will leave this afternoon for Spooner, to look after his interests there. He has a general store and a bank at that place.

The first game for the Hurst buttons was played last evening at the curling rink between the rinks of A. G. Macauley and E. J. Zauft. The former won by a score of 14 to 10.

Miss Tess Brophy will return this evening from Abbottsford, Wis., where she has been nursing a sick sister.

Harry Garbison of the blast furnace has gone to Chicago for a few weeks' visit.

Leonard McDonald and William Allen are down from Ball Club, where they have been working. They will leave today or tomorrow for Washington state.

The American Lumber company, which has just started business in West Duluth, shipped its first car of lumber today.

SEASONS NOT CHANGING.

Records Show They Are the Same as in the Past.

Glasgow, Jan. 24.—The Glasgow Herald is discussing the perennial question, "Are our seasons changing?" From the reports of its correspondents, the statistics presented, and the reports as far back as they can be obtained with any reasonable degree of accuracy, the Glasgow Herald concludes that it is safe to answer the question in the negative. Among other things the Herald says:

"One hears the statement that 'this is not like the weather of the good old times; we had sharp and bright winter weather then.' But when the speakers are asked to specify the years in which the winter weather was ideal they can only say, 'It was when we were young.' When the records are examined they make it evident that our seasons are behaving now just as they did in the ages that are past. Great frosts and phenomenal mildness come without any evident order of succession, and it is just as difficult now as it was 200 years ago to predict whether the weather will be of the most ordinary type or quite abnormal. The diary of John Evelyn makes frequent reference to the weather of his youth, and the impression one gets from reading his notes from 1640 to 1700 is the same as the records of the last half century."

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures, quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

BRAND OF TAILLESS PIG.

Montana Pioneer Recalls Feat of Sharpshooting in Pioneer Days.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 24.—"Looking over a brand register the other day reminded me of an event which occurred at Fort Benton in 1865," said the Montana pioneer to a group of friends. "The story serves to illustrate two things—first, the unerring accuracy of Al B. Hamilton's aim, and again the expedients that are resorted to in order to produce an original brand.

"Hamilton was the first justice of the peace in Northern Montana. His commission was issued by Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher, the leader of the famous civil war Irish brigade, who was then acting as governor of the Territory of Montana. Hamilton had charge of the American Fur company's post at Fort Benton, and the feat to which I shall refer may have had something to do with his election as sheriff of Chouteau county in later years.

"I have heard of cattlemen using a frying pan, railroad fish plates and other unusual shapes in metals as branding irons, but, after all, I think Hamilton's was perhaps the most original.

"The company by which Hamilton was employed had about thirty-five head of hogs that were continually getting mixed up with the porkers belonging to others, and he determined to put a brand upon his animals that would prevent any chance of mistaken identity.

"With some difficulty Hamilton got all of the company's hogs in an enclosure, went to the office, secured his 44-caliber revolver and a supply of cartridges and seated himself on the fence surrounding the pigs. Without getting closer than ten feet to a single one of the animals, Hamilton in the course of about fifteen minutes had shot the tail from each. He did not waste more than half a dozen shots in doing it, nor was a single hog injured save that its tail had been clipped off clean. That feat gave him the title of champion shot of the territory."

Week-End Excursions---Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad.

TWENTY HALF DROWNED PERSONS ARE RESCUED FROM A LIFE RAFT

BUT THIRTY-FIVE IN ALL SAVED FROM VALENCIA

One Hundred and Nineteen Souls Lost Their Lives on the Ill-Fated Ship.

Survivors Relate Awful Experience After Leaving Steamer on Frail Raft.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 25.—At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the steamer Valencia, ashore near Cape Beale, went to pieces, sweeping to death those few men who had survived the terrible hours of privation, chilled and numb to the limit of human endurance by clouds of spray which swept over them.

Of the 154 people on board the steamer when she struck, near Klanaway rock, at 11:45 o'clock on Monday night and met disaster, but thirty-five were saved. The dead number 119, the greatest loss of life in the North Pacific since the Pacific was lost in 1875. The fifteen survivors who reached shore in boats are: F. F. Banker, Carl Samuel, Miss Hone, R. Brown, Thomas Shields, F. Campbell, J. R. Richley, J. Fasoda, T. J. McCarthy, B. N. Ledhos, Albert Wells, John Marks, W. Gosling, T. Lampson and C. Brown.

Seattle, Jan. 25.—A special representative of the Post-Intelligencer wires from Port Angeles, at 3:30 a. m., that the rescue ship City of Topeka picked up a life raft at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, six miles off Cape Beale, with eighteen survivors of the Valencia on board. The men were in a pitiable condition and almost dead from exposure. The rescued are: G. D. Harden, passenger; P. O'Brien, waiter; M. Tarpey, quartermaster; W. Raymond, messman; W. D. Johnson, coal passer; J. Cegals, fireman; G. Fleeme, baker; Frank Lehn, first freight clerk; Joseph McCaffery, passenger; J. Welch, waiter; A. Hawkins, passenger; P. Peterson, second officer; J. Podent, waiter; John Johnson, third cook; C. Allison, passenger from St. Paul; John Cidegas, fireman; W. Doherty, fireman; Thomas Garlick, first assistant engineer; C. Willis, passenger; P. Primer, fireman.

The condition of the survivors was pitiable. They were half frozen and practically unconscious from the exposure. The raft was sighted about 12 o'clock, but owing to the thick weather it was supposed to be nothing but a log. At last, by the aid of a powerful glass, its true nature was determined.

A terrible sea was running. One minute the raft was poised on top of a wave and the next it would be lost from view in the gully formed by the mountainous breakers.

The eighteen men together on their frail support battled bravely with a pair of oars to reach the City of Topeka, which, owing to the dangerous coast, could not run in any closer to them. Within half a mile from the raft a boat was lowered from the Topeka in charge of Second Mate Burke, who with much difficulty succeeded in making fast a line to the raft.

The spectators on the Topeka watched the struggling of the gallant seamen breathlessly. At last they succeeded in bringing the raft to the side of the steamer. The sight of the poor creatures on the raft brought tears to the eyes of the sailors on the vessel. In the stern of the raft sat an old man, his white hair and pallid features creased, and torn by the flying spray, but the instinct of life was strong in him and he held on bravely to h's place. Three others were lying in a senseless heap in the rear, washed by every swell and retained solely by the bodies of the other men who were closely packed.

Time and time again great seas swept over them, sending a shudder through the onlookers who feared to see them swept away. The work of rescuing them was dangerous. The men were too exhausted to even tie a rope about themselves.

When the raft was sighted a cry went up from the steamer's deck. Orders were shouted and men on the raft screamed and called fruitlessly for aid. For a minute it looked as though the old man, with gray hair, was gone when the raft gave a sudden lurch, but the prompt work of Mate Burke and his men in the boat finally got him on deck. This man no sooner was safe when another fainting form was swept away and was only rescued by quick work on the part of the boat's crew. The next man to be swept from the raft managed to grasp a line and cling to it until he was hoisted half way up the ships side, when his strength gave out and he fell back. He was picked up by the boat.

The raft put out from the wreck, yesterday morning on sighting the steamer Queen and attempted to reach her but before they got within sighting distance the vessel put about and headed to the strait.

When the Topeka hove in sight the raft was once more manned and again put forth. The survivors told terrible tales of the wreck of the vessel. When they left the ship there were about ninety people on board most of them clinging to the rigging. Men, women and children were being swept by every sea. As soon as the men got aboard Dr. B. F. Whiting, assisted by two nurses and members of the crew hastily administered stimulants and put them to bed.

After picking up the raft the steamer went in search of another raft which the rescued men said had left the ship earlier in the day. The vessel ran fully twenty-five miles the other side, looking for the raft but no sign of it

MOST DEGRADED PAPER IN THE UNITED STATES

Is the Way Town Topics is Characterized By Publisher of Collier's Weekly.

New York, Jan. 25.—In the Town Topics libel case against Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, Robert J. Collier, manager and publisher of Collier's Weekly was the first witness today. Mr. Collier said:

"In October, 1904, a copy of Town Topics was delivered at my house. I saw it in an article referring to Miss Alice Roosevelt, only by her first name. When I went down to the office I called Hapgood's attention to that article and told him I thought it was the vilest article ever printed in any newspaper and suggested that he write something about it. He did so, an editorial headed "The Most Degraded Paper in the United States." Hapgood in his article, however, did not name the paper, but when I read the proof I wrote in the name of "Town Topics" telling Hapgood at the same time that my action would doubtless involve us in personal abuses."

After the arrest of Charles Ahle, the solicitor, Mr. Collier said Mr. Hapgood wrote another editorial and while he was doing so Mr. Collier told him to say in it that it was a disgrace for any judge to be connected with Town Topics.

Under cross examination by District Attorney Jerome, Mr. Collier said that before the article about Miss Roosevelt appeared in Town Topics a series of articles containing unpleasant things about the witness was published in Town Topics. Mr. Collier said he was indifferent to what Town Topics said about him. The meaning of the editorial on which the complaint of libel was based, he said, was that Town Topics was engaged in the business of "blackmailing. "Paul and Fancies" he said brought that aspect

DETECTIVE SAYS HE WAS TOLD TO KILL AN ELECTION OFFICIAL

St. Louis, Jan. 25.—Former Detective Andrew Gordon (colored) who yesterday called on Circuit Attorney Sager and related to him that while a member of the police department he was ordered by a high official to kill Oliver J. Beck, a judge of election and John S. Wheeler, a negro editor, called on Mr. Sager again today and was at once conducted before the grand jury presumably to retell his story. He told Attorney Sager that he had kept still about the matter until he found that since his dismissal from the police force his efforts, according to his statement to secure work, were being carefully thwarted.

THE LIFE OF GEN. JOE WHEELER HANGS BY A SLENDER THREAD

New York, Jan. 25.—Dr. McCorkle called Dr. John A. Longmore into consultation in Gen. Wheeler's case last night and the two physicians remained with the patient all night. When Dr. Longmore left the sick man's chamber this morning he said Gen. Wheeler's life was then hanging by a thread. The general was only half conscious at that time and it was believed that death might ensue at any moment. Oxygen was administered to the patient this morning for the first time.

Dr. McCorkle said shortly before 10 o'clock:

"Gen. Wheeler has one chance in twenty of recovery. His condition is very low and his strength is being kept up on stimulants, but nevertheless he has a fighting chance."

SHOE MANUFACTURERS

Meet in Boston to Consider Advance in Price of Leather.

Boston, Jan. 25.—Governor Guild welcomed the delegates of the National Shoe Wholesalers association of the United States, who assembled at Hotel Somerset today in annual convention. The special subject of the meeting was that of whether the material advances in leather and consequent necessary advances in shoe prices are to be permanent or whether, like several similar advances in the past twenty years they will be temporary. The convention was attended by many manufacturers who were present yesterday at a special convention of New England shoe manufacturers called to discuss the question of raising the price of shoes and at which it was unanimously agreed that prices must be advanced to keep pace with the rapidly increasing cost of leather, or that the corresponding amount must be taken out of the value of the shoes to sell at present prices.

JUDGES OF DISTRICT COURT NAME COMMISSION WHO WILL SUPERINTEND BUILDING OF COUNTY COURTHOUSE

Morcom, McInnis and Patterson Selected From County Board.

William C. Agnew and John Miller Chosen From Outside.

Appointments Filed With County Auditor and Clerk of Court.

WILLIAM C. AGNEW, Duluth.
JOHN MILLER, Duluth.
ELISHA MORCOM, Tower.
NEIL McINNIS, Eveleth.
EDWARD M. PATTERSON, Duluth.

The above mentioned men constitute the board of courthouse commissioners for the county of St. Louis, whose duty it will be to superintend the building of a new courthouse to cost about $400,000.

The appointments to the commission, made this morning by Judges J. D. Ensign, William A. Cant and Homer B. Dibell, of district court, were filed with County Auditor Halden and with J. P. Johnson, clerk of district court.

The judges were authorized by the board of county commissioners, under the new law, at the annual meeting, held the first part of January, to appoint the special commission, and the appointments have been watched for with great interest all over the county. In view of the time that has elapsed since the judges were notified to appoint the special commission, it has been known that they were proceeding with great care and deliberateness to select the best men possible in their judgment to have the handling of the funds for the new courthouse, and the selection made, so far as it was known this afternoon, gave general satisfaction.

The order of appointment filed by the judges was as follows:

"The county auditor of the county of St. Louis, in the state of Minnesota, having forwarded to the undersigned judges of the district court within and for said county certified copies of a resolution therefore adopted by the board of county commissioners thereof, wherein said board declared that the existing courthouse of said county is inadequate for its needs, and that a new structure is necessary for the purposes of a courthouse, for county offices and for jail purposes, and fixing a sum in their judgment sufficient to cover the cost of a new building and equipment for such uses adequate to the needs of the county, all as provided by chapter 232 of the laws of Minnesota for the year 1905.

"Now, therefore, pursuant to the provisions of said chapter, and having confidence in the integrity and ability of William C. Agnew, John Miller, Elisha Morcom, Neil McInnis and Edward M. Patterson, who are legal voters of the said county, we do hereby nominate and appoint the said William C. Agnew, John Miller, Elisha Morcom, Neil McInnis and Edward M. Patterson to be a board of courthouse commissioners for the said county of St. Louis.

"Dated January 25, 1906.

"J. D. ENSIGN,
"WILLIAM A. CANT,
"HOMER B. DIBELL,
"Judges of the District Court, Eleventh Judicial District, State of Minnesota."

The new board is comprised of three members who are members of the board of county commissioners and two members from outside the county organization. This is in accordance with the requirements of the law passed by the last legislature. The appointments also confirm to the provision of the law which says that no two of the county commissioners selected shall reside in the same city, village or town. While Duluth has three representatives on the courthouse commission and the range has two representatives, only one of the county commissioners from the city appears on the board.

The commission appointed will serve without pay, but the memberss will be paid the necessary expenses that they may incur in the performance of their duties.

The personel of the new courthouse commission is taken to mean a confirmation of the decision of the county board to select a down town site to be approved by the courthouse commission. It is understood that every member on the courthouse commission will be in favor of a downtown site for the new building.

Of the new commission the members who are on the board of county commissioners are already well-known to the taxpayers. Mr. Agnew is a widely known mining man and Mr. Miller is at the head of the John Miller Company, a grain commission firm, and a member of the Duluth Board of Trade.

Under the law creating the courthouse commission each commissioner, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall file an oath of acceptance with the county auditor and shall take and subscribe an oath before one of the judges of the district court that he will faithfully and honestly perform the duties of his office and will not knowingly permit any fraud, dishonest practice or cheating by any contractor or other person doing work in or about the construction of the new courthouse or who has to do with the furnishing of the building.

The commission will organize at a meeting that may be called by any three members after five days' notice in writing to the remaining members. At this meeting the board shall adopt rules for its procedure and elect a president. The records of the board shall be public records and shall be preserved in the office of the county auditor.

The commissioners appointed shall hold office until the courthouse is completed and furnished, any vacancy to be filled by appointment by the judges.

The duties of the commission are, in general, as follows: to superintend the erection and construction of the courthouse, furnish and equip the same, choose an architect and a superintendent of construction if one is deemed necessary; let all the contracts; purchase all the material; employ all the workmen except where the work is done under contract.

THE STATEHOOD BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE

Administration Measure Goes Through by a Vote of 194 Yeas to 150 Nays.

Washington, Jan. 25.—By a vote of 194 yeas to 150 nays, the statehood bill was passed by the house at 3:22 o'clock.

Washington, Jan. 25.—With twenty members in their places the house, at 11 o'clock today, took up its special order on statehood.

As an echo of yesterday's battle, Mr. Lloyd (Mo.), the Democratic whip, made an explanation regarding the thirteen Democrats who were absent when the vote was taken on the statehood rule.

"A report is current," he said, "to the effect that some of the Democrats yesterday got away without voting, and did so corruptly."

He then proceeded to give the cause of the absence of the members in question. The three reasons—business, politics and sickness—covered all the cases.

FRANK ROCKEFELLER, OIL MAGNATE, DEFIES HADLEY

Refuses Point Blank to Testify Before Hearing Instituted by Missouri.

Cleveland, Jan. 25.—Frank Rockefeller refused to appear before Attorney General Hadley and testify today in the hearing in connection with the action of the state of Missouri against the Standard Oil company.

A deputy sheriff served a subpoena on Mr. Rockefeeller last evening. This morning the deputy reported that Mr. Rockefeller had said: "I won't appear. I can't appear and there is no use talking about it. They may send me to jail if they want to." No service was obtained on John Teagle, W. E. Judd, W. F. Lowe, or W. P. McKee. Lowe is of the Navarre Oil company and Judd and McKee of the Republic Oil company.

THE SUCCESSES OF THE LIBERALS CONTINUE UNBROKEN IN ENGLAND

London, Jan. 25.—Sir Edward Grey, the new foreign secretary, has been returned for Berwick-on-Tweed division of Northumberland by the largest majority he ever had. This is typical of the general result of yesterday's elections which practically were an unbroken series of Liberal successes. Out of twenty-one returns this morning the Liberals take 17 seats, 12 of which were captured from the Unionists. The others were divided, Unionists 3 and Liberals 1, making the total: Liberals 328; Unionists 142; Irish Nationalists 81; Laborites 48. The new house of commons already contains thirteen Jews with several constituencies to be heard from. This is a larger number than previously recorded.

There is an interesting contest today in the Aylesbury or middle division of Buckinghamshire, where the Rev. Silas Kitto Hocking, the novelist, is having a stiff fight in the Liberal interest against Lionel Walter Rotchschild, Unionist and Free Trader, supported by the popularity and wealth of the Rothschilds, who have held the seat without a break since 1865.

Another well-known writer, R. C. Lehmann, the oarsman, who is well known in the United States, is contesting the Southern or Market harbor borough division of Leicestershire for the Liberals against C. Harvey Dixons, Unionist.

The campaigning in the Orkneys and Shetlands is proving dangerous, in consequence of the prevailing storms. Candidates are frequently obliged to abandon meetings because the fishermen decline to undertake the risk of crossing between the islands. The polling there, Feb. 6 and 7, will close the elections.

THE FOREIGN COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES

Very Near to the Three-Billion-Dollar Mark Last Year.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Special to The Herald. The foreign commerce of the United States approaches surprisingly near to the $3,000,000,000 point in the calendar year 1905. The total imports and exports of merchandise, as shown by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, is $2,895,000,000, against $2,507,000,000 in 1900, an average increase of $100,000,000 a year in the five-year period. If to the $2,896,000,000 of foreign commerce in 1905 were added the figures of trade with Hawaii and Porto Rico, formerly foreign territory and included in our statements of foreign trade prior to 1900, the total would approximate $3,000,000,000, or about $500,000,000 more than five years ago, and $1,200,000,000 more than ten years ago.

Another notable characteristic of the year's foreign trade is the fact that the exports in the month of December were practically $200,000,000, the preliminary figures of the bureau of statistics being $99,700,000, exclusive of the trade with Porto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska. It was only in 1901 that exports first reached as much as $100,000,000 in any single month, the earliest month at which they crossed the $90,000,000 line being October, 1899, when the total was $102,877,223. This total of more than $100,000,000 a month continued only during the months of October, November and December, 1899, and January, 1902, and was not until late in 1896 that the $90,000,000 line was again crossed. In 1895, 1897 and 1899 the closing months of each year showed a monthly exportation of over $80,000,000, and beginning with the year 1900 the monthly total has in all cases exceeded $100,000,000, except during the months of June, July and August of 1902, 1903 and 1904, when they fell slightly below that sum. The largest month's exportation in any year prior to December, 1905, was that of December, 1904, when the total was $117,845,566, but that record is surpassed to the extent of $25,000,000 by the record of December, 1905, which, as above indicated, is $142,767,068.

The import record for 1905 is also in excess of that of any preceding year, being for the twelve months ending with December, $1,179,358,846, against $1,025,509,180 in 1904, the first calender year in which the imports crossed the billion-dollar line. The growth of imports, while not rapid, has been steady and continues to be so, keeping pace, approximately, with the growth of population. Imports in 1875 were $363,000,000; in 1885, $587,000,000; in 1895, $801,000,000, and in 1905, as already indicated, $1,179,000,000. The character, however, of imports has somewhat changed in recent years, the percentage which manufactures' materials form of the total having steadily increased and supplying in 1905 about 48 per cent of the total, against 40 per cent a decade ago, in 1895.

The growth in exports during the year amounted to $175,000,000 and the growth in imports to $153,000,000. While the December figures are not yet sufficiently analyzed to determine the precise share which the various groups form of the grand total, the eleven months' figures, combined with that portion of the December figures now available, seem to justify the statement that of the $175,000,000 increase in exports in 1905 about $100,000,000 occur in agricultural products and something over $60,000,000 in manufactures. Of the $153,000,000 increase in imports the eleven months' figures indicate that approximately $80,000,000 occur in manufacturers' materials, about $50,000,000 in manufactures ready for consumption, articles of voluntary use, luxuries, etc., and the remainder in foodstuffs, chiefly sugar. Of the approximately $100,000,000 increase in exports of agricultural products something between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 occur in breadstuffs, about $25,000,000 in provisions (by which term is meant meats, butter, cheese, etc.), and about $25,000,000 in raw cotton. The largest increase in the value of manufactures exported occurs in cotton cloths, in which the increase in the eleven months ending with November, 1905, is $21,000,000, while iron and steel and manufactures thereof show an increase of about $11,000,000, copper about $8,000,000, and leather and manufactures thereof $3,500,000.

The commerce with the noncontiguous territory of the United States also makes a new high record for 1905, and will amount to about $120,000,000 in value, against a little less than $100,000,000 last year.

"SEE AMERICA FIRST" IS SLOGAN

Of Conference to Devise Plans to Attract Tourists.

Salt Lake, Jan. 25.—The conference arranged by the Salt Lake Commercial club and intended to devise plans for attracting tourists to the scenic portions of the United States in preference to Europe, opened here today. It has been designated the "See America first conference." Delegates were present from all parts of the country, and represented cities, states, commercial bodies and other organizations. Today's program included the call to order by Former Governor Heber M. Wells, chairman of the Commercial club's special committee; addresses of welcome by Hon. O. W. Powers and Governor John Cutler, a response by Governor Chamberlain of Oregon, and the induction of Governor Chamberlain into the office of temporary chairman.

CHINESE COMMISSION TO INSPECT ANNAPOLIS.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The members of the imperial Chinese commission left this morning for Annapolis where they will inspect the United States naval academy. They were accompanied by the Chinese minister, Chief Clerk Denby of the state department, Prof. Jenks of Cornell and a number of naval officers who will be their escort for the day.

The Grip.

"Before we can sympathize with others, we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip, however, may be avoided by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy, not one case has ever been reported that has resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered. For sale by all leading druggists.

GETTING FACTS AT CLEVELAND

Former Standard Oil Employer Tells of Formation of Republic.

Cleveland, Jan. 25.—The taking of testimony of Cleveland independent oil men in the case of the state of Missouri against the Standard Oil company was begun before Notary Frank W. Schwentner here today. Louis H. Turrell of Detroit, Mich., a former accountant of the Standard Oil company in St. Joseph, Mo., and other cities was the first witness. Mr. Turrell testified to facts concerning the formation of the Republic Oil company of Cleveland, which Attorney General Hadley of Missouri holds to be a Standard Oil concern. Turrell stated that in 1903, while in St. Joseph, he was called to the Standard Oil company's offices in New York and was asked to become a director and stockholder in a new oil company, which afterwards proved to be the Republic Oil company. He stated that he was induced to sign articles of incorporation as F. A. Turrell, instead of Louis H. Turrell, and was asked to say nothing about being a Standard Oil employe.

DECATUR IS DISMISSED

Great Grandson of Famous Commodore Fired From the Navy.

No Indication of End of Prosecutions at the Naval Academy.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Stephen Decatur, great grandson of Commodore Decatur, first class midshipman, United States naval academy, was today dismissed from the navy by Secretary Bonaparte in conformity with the sentence of the courtmartial in his case on the charge of hazing.

Annapolis, Jan. 25.—The trial of Midshipman Richard R. Mann, presidential appointee, was continued today. Several additional witnesses for the defense were examined.

There is not the slightest indication that the end of the hazing cases is in sight. Charges have been filed against Ned Leroy Chapin, a first classman, from Pasadena, Cal., and George H. Melvin of Genesee, Ill., all of third class.

Midshipman Mann was called to the stand and denied absolutely all the facts alleged in the specifications.

James H. Munroe made the argument in defence of Mann, after which the court was closed for the consideration of a verdict.

RAILROADS ARE OVER-CAPITALIZED

Prof. Marks Says Capitalization Exceeds Real Properties.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Immediately after the senate met today Mr. Tillman presented and had read a letter from Prof. William D. Marks of Philadelphia, regarding the over-capitalization of railroad corporations in which the writer expressed the opinion that "Not more than half of the railroad securities represent real properties nor actual investments in cash." He placed the actual cost of the equipment and construction of all the roads in the United States at $5,000,000,000 while the aggregate capitalization exceeds this sum by about 7,000,000,000. He analyzed the report of the railroad commissioner of Massachusetts to show that in that state the total capitalization is about $52,000 per mile, while he said the cost of building and equipping railroads in that state could not exceed $25,200 per mile.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN ON THE VALENCIA

I. J. Bruer a Passenger on the Ill-Fated Steamship.

Minneapolis, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—I. J. Bruer of 2621 Garfield avenue south was aboard the ill-fated steamer Valencia, which went ashore off Vancouver island, Monday night. This information was telegraphed to his family in Minneapolis by Albert Meyers, a friend in San Francisco with whom Mr. Bruer spent the evening before the Valencia sailed. Mr. Bruer left Minneapolis, Jan. 2, for a pleasure trip along the Pacific coast, expecting to remain away from home until spring. Mr. Bruer is 50 years old, and was born near Hamburg, Germany.

Seattle, Jan. 25.—At the offices of the Pacific Coast company, operating the wrecked steamer Valencia, it was stated that information had been received that a life raft and a lifeboat, yet unaccounted for, had gotten away safely from the Valencia. On the raft were eight women, it is stated, while no one knows how many men were in the lifeboat.

Victoria, Jan. 25.—The steamer Salvor, accompanied by the steam whaler Orion, which has guns from which lines can be shot, left Bamfield at 8:40 a. m. for the scene of the wreck of the Valencia. The wind has abated and the sea gone down. If anything of the steamer remains after tonight, it is considered doubtful if any chance exists of any person remaining alive. A rescue party left Bamfield at about 8 a. m. to bring in the survivors already reported at the Darling river telegraph office, where, at last reports, they were camped unable to cross the river, which was in flood.

TESTIMONY IS DIRECT

Republic and Standard Oil Companies One and Same Thing.

Former Accountant of Companies Gives Important Information.

Cleveland, Jan. 25.—L. B. Turrell, former accountant for the Standard Oil company, at the hearing here today, gave a complete history of all the transactions in the organization of the Republic Oil company. He stated that he subscribed to 300 shares of stock, for which he did not pay a cent, and that he was made secretary and treasurer and a director of the company, and was given charge of the accounting system of the Cleveland field. He testified as to meetings of directors of the Republic company at the Standard company's offices at 26 Broadway, New York, on several occasions, and said that everything done was upon suggestion and order of H. M. Tilford, one of the executive heads of the Standard Oil company.

He was present, he said, at the final settlement for the property of Scofield, Shurmer & Teagle, which was later transferred to the Republic Oil company. He stated that the settlement for the Scofield, Shurmer & Teagle property took place in the office of Virgil P. Kline, a Standard Oil attorney in Cleveland, and that the firm of Scofield, Shurmer & Teagle received in payment a check and notes signed by the officials of the Republic Oil company. The witness said he signed the check and notes in his capacity as secretary and treasurer. Mr. Turrell said he was instructed not to use any of the forms of the Standard Oil company in his accounting system, so that it would not become known that the Standard had anything to do with the Republic company. He further testified that all of his communications were directed to 72 New street, New York, which was the back entrance to the Standard building at 26 Broadway.

The witness declared that he was instructed to do all he could to create the impression that the Republic company was an independent company, and to deny all reports that it was controlled by the Standard Oil company. In proof of this a letter signed by Walter C. Teagle, vice president of the Republic company, was produced, asking various agents to send other letters to dealers assuring them that it was not true that the Republic company had sold out to the Standard.

"The reports were true, however," said Mr. Turrell, "as everybody in our office know and the letters were sent out in any effort to hide the truth."

Taking the Kaiser's Trophy.

The recent yacht race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's trophy was easily won by the American boat, which established a new record between Sandy Hook and the Lizard. A wonderful record has also been established by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in its 53 years' experience; in fact, it is so far ahead of its competitors that there is really no second in the race. You therefore owe it to yourself and family to see that the Bitters finds a permanent place in your home from this time on. You'll find it very valuable in cases of chills, colds, grippe or pneumonia, also that it cures vomiting, heartburn, flatulency, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, insomnia, biliousness, or malaria, fever and ague. We urge a fair trial by every sick man or woman. It never disappoints.

BAD WEATHER FOR AUTO RACES

Unless There is Change the Events Will be Postponed.

Ormond, Fla., Jan. 25.—The outlook for good racing at the Ormond-Dayton automobile races was poor today. In addition to bad weather conditions, with a light rain falling, four of the leading drivers were working over broken-down cars this morning and there was danger that they would not be able to make repairs in time to start today. The blowing out of the cylinders of Fletcher's car was the worst of these breakdowns and it was feared that he might not be able to race during the remainder of the meeting. Lancia and Christie were each busy repairing their cars and the Vanderbilt car which has not yet started, lacked several finishing touches to put it in racing trim. Hemery's suspension which still continued in force was felt as a loss to the interest and excitement in the races.

On today's program there were eight events as follows:

Fifteen miles handicap for American touring cars fully equipped.

Ten miles, Corinthian championship.

Ten miles, middleweight championship, (all powers.)

Ten miles, Corinthian handicap.

Five miles, championship for steam cars.

One mile, middleweight championship, for gasoline cars.

One mile, record trials, for lightweight gasoline cars.

One mile, record trials, for middleweight gasoline cars.

At noon it was announced that unless the weather cleared before 2 o'clock there would be no racing today.

OLD BANK CLOSES.

San Luis Obispo, Cal., Jan. 25.—The bank of San Luis Obispo, the oldest institution of the kind in the city, closed its doors this morning by order of the bank commissioner. Cashier S. W. Wilson, who is acting under instructions, will not give any information. The bank has large and valuable property holdings here which, it is thought, will more than offset the liabilities.

Put Down Deep Holes.

Cole & McDonald are drilling about twenty-five miles southwest of Grand Rapids, in the neighborhood of section 11-142-25, and they are said to have broken the record for deep surface drilling on any part of the Mesaba range. They went down a depth of 502 feet through gravel, hard pan and clay, and then struck the granite, but are not certain whether it is a solid ledge or a boulder. It is reported that another drill is doing work in 138-28, north of Whitefish lake, and at a depth of 200 feet struck the green slates of the green stone.

There is an arrangement being made at the present time by Minneapolis people to send a drill farther north in that section of the country.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Butte, Mont., Jan. 25.—Gen. John S. Harris, long a prominent resident of this state, died here today of uraemic poisoning. He was born in Vermont, 81 years ago. He came to Montana as surveyor general of the territory in President Arthur's administration. He served in the United States senate as a member from Louisiana from 1869 to 1873 and also was prominent in California. He was a pioneer of Chicago and removed from that city to Milwaukee, where he lived a number of years.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 25.—Dr. E. B. Kephart of Annville, Pa., died of heart disease last night while on a visit to Indiana Central college at Indianapolis. He has been bishop in the United Brethren church for twenty-six years. For many years he was president of the Western college at Toledo, Iowa.

FRENCH AND GERMAN DELEGATIONS MEET.

Algeciras, Jan. 25.—Herr Von Radowitz, head of the German mission, and M. Revoil, chief of the French delegation to the Moroccan conference, had for the first time today a long private meeting which was much commented upon as a move forward in the adjustment of the Franco-German differences. Although the results were not disclosed the meeting produced a distinct feeling of optimism among the delegates. Heretofore the German and French representatives had maintained only ceremonial relations.

The conference met again this afternoon, to consider the financial questions.

TAKES HINT AND RESIGNS.

Poultney Bigelow Relinquishes Place as Lecturer at Boston University.

Boston, Jan. 25.—Dr. Huntington, president of Boston university, in commenting upon the action of Poultney Bigelow, whose resignation as special lecturere on international law at the university has been sent to Dean Bigelow, now at Ann Arbor, Mich., said:

"I had not been informed of the formal resignation, but I knew that it was coming. I received a letter from Dean Bigelow within the week, in which he implied that he was exasperated with Mr. Bigelow's indiscretions and eccentricities, and that he would hint to him that he had better resign. I heartily agree with the dean.

"Mr. Bigelow has done and said eccentric things and brought wrath upon the university long enough. He called himself a professor of Boston university when, as a matter of fact, he was not. He was merely a lecturer. His habit of making wild statements and then bringing the name of the university into the question is displeasing, to say the least. It is better for the university and all concerned that Mr. Bigelow's resignation be accepted."

JANUARY BARGAINS FOR THE BOYS AND CHILDREN

Our special prices put the regular prices in the background.

When we decided to cut the prices on all remaining winter overcoats for big boys and small boys, and clipped a big slice off the prices of most winter suits, it seemed wicked; they look so good, young, fresh and strong; they still have all these good points, and about half their prices.

Here is an attractive bunch of newly selected bargains in the Children's Furnishing Department:

Collars at 5c.

Boys' former 10c and 15c collars—broken lots of Cluett and Arrow Brand collars—all go at 5c.

Children's Sleepers, 38c.

Dr. Denton's sleeping garments for children. All sizes. Worth as high as a dollar. Now 38c. We have decided to close out the entire lot.

Blouses, 79c, $1.29 and $1.79.

Flannel blouses for boys and children. Sizes 2½ to 16. Former $1 ones now 79c, former $1.50 ones now $1.29, and former $2 ones now $1.79.

Silk Mufflers, 19c.

Shaped Silk Mufflers, also knitted woolen ones for boys, children, misses and girls. Your unrestricted choice of all for 19c.

Girls' Tams and Caps, 48c.

All of our ladies' and misses' Angora Tams and "Alice Roosevelt" caps for 48c. They were $1.

Boys' Caps, 10c and 48c.

Former $1 and $1.50 Caps, cloth and fur lines, now 48c. Odds and ends in 25c to $1 caps. Yours for 10c.

Sweaters at 69c.

Red, blue and combination colors. Sizes 26, 28 and 30. Regular price was $1. Special price is 69c.

Sweaters at 78c.

Another lot of sweaters. These are all white and worth $1. Also sweater vests, sizes 28 and 30, and worth $2.50—all now 78c.

Athletic Sweaters, $1.78.

This is an extra heavy sweater in navy blue and red, also in grey and red colors. All sizes 28 to 34. Regularly $2.50—special price $1.78.

Nelson Stockings.

The famous home-knit heavy woolen stockings for children of the Nelson make go at one-fifth less than before.

"Black Cat" Hose, 29c.

Woolen Hose in sizes 6½ to 9½. They were 50c—now 29c.

Tam-o'-Shanters, 48c.

Children's pull-down tam-o'-shanters, worth $1 and $1.50. Corduroy, brown, grey, royal blue and red cloth. All now 48c.

COLUMBIA CLOTHING CO.

About 50 pairs of $2.50 and $3.50 Boys' Shoes at $1.48.

Women's $2.50 to $5 Slippers, small sizes, now 98c.

NORTHERN PACIFIC TRAIN WRECKED

Three Cars Derailed Near Trinidad---Express Messenger Drowned.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the office of General Manager Horn of the Northern Pacific railroad a confirmation was obtained of the reported wrecking of the Northern Pacific passenger near Trinidad. The information here is very meager, although the cause of the wreck is given as a rock slide. The report received here says that the three coaches were derailed and not in the river. Express Messenger Murray is reported drowned, although it is not stated how he happened to be drowned. The report also says that eight or ten persons received slight injuries.

GIFT FOR MISS ALICE

By the French Nation of Rich Gobelin Tapestry.

Paris, Jan. 25.—The Matin understands that the French nation will present to Miss Alice Roosevelt as a wedding gift some magnificent Gobelin tapestry. It is noteworthy that this tapestry cannot be obtained commercially. The gift suggested would be a unique compliment. Premier Rouvier and M. Dujardin-Beaumets of the department of fine arts, it is said, together chose the tapestry.

Miss Roosevelt's present is a reproduction of Charles Frederick Hermann's painting, "Le Manuscrit," of which a duplicate hangs in the national library. It is four meters high. Herman was born in Dresden in 1802 and was a pupil of the famous Peter von Cornelius.

GEN. WHEELER IS SINKING RAPIDLY.

New York, Jan. 25.—Gen. Wheeler was very low and sinking rapidly shortly before 2 p. m. today.

OPERATORS AND MINERS CONFER.

Indianapolis, Jan. 25.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America called to order the joint conference between the miners' organization and the coal operators this afternoon. On motion of F. L. Robbins of Pittsburg, president of the operators, John Mitchell was made temporary chairman. C. L. Scroggs of Chicago was made temporary secretary. The committee on credentials was then announced.

WEATHER BREEDERS.

The questions of the electrical and radiant effect of rain and snow and other forms of moving water on the atmosphere, are assuming increasing importance with the advance of knowledge regarding the more subtle meteorological forces, says the Kansas City Journal. It has been known for some time that very considerable electrical changes are produced by waterfalls and falling rain, and still more recently it has been discovered that radio-activity is also considerably modified by these phenomena. Some years ago Lenard showed that around the foot of large waterfalls very considerable electrical disturbances could be noted. The water, after its fall, was found to be positively charged, and the air negatively charged. Experiments during rainstorms, to which this discovery led him, showed that the splashing of rain negatively electrified the surrounding air, and the breaking of waves on the shore positively electrified the air. The difference in result was found to be due to the salts contained in sea water. Prof. McLennan last year investigated the effect of waterfalls on radio-activity. His instruments set up at the foot of Niagara falls, showed a very considerable decrease of the regular induced atmospheric radio-activity. He also found that falling rain produced little change in the radioactive power of the air, but snow very markedly reduced it. The latter fact leads, he says, some support to the theory that atmospheric radio-activity is due to an emanation from the earth, which the snow blanket shuts in.

SYMBOLS.

Aunt Sally Freeman's education had not been forced, and when she was on her first visit to Boston, a short time ago, and was shown the sights, the public library was not overlooked, says the Boston Herald. Just inside the entrance she spied the brass figures of crabs, fishes, bull, etc., in the floor. After looking them over for a few moments, she asked the policeman on duty why they were put there.

"Well, madam," he replied, "when I first came here and saw them, I thought they must have been sent by the meat and fish handlers' union, but I hear that they call it the sign of the Soda Act. What that token is I don't know, but they have one like it in Washington that they use in making up weather reports, though how they do it beats me."

WARM WEATHER AFFECTS MARKET

Stimulates Finished Material But Weakens Demand for Pig Iron.

Cleveland, Jan. 25.—The Iron Trade Review says: The long continued mild weather is having effects on the market. It has greatly stimulated the demand for some of the finished materials, especially wire products and materials used in building operations. On the other hand, it has made the coke and scrap markets very much easier.

Conditions in regard to pig iron vary considerably in different selling centers, but on the whole the market is not so strong. While the demand is brisk in the East and has improved in Chicago, prices are somewhat softer in the central West, sales being freely made on a basis of $14 for No. 2 Birmingham and $17.50 valley for No. 2. Opinions differ somewhat as to the extent to which buyers are covered for the first half of the year.

An inquiry for a large tonnage of pig iron from the leading cast iron pipe interest developed unexpected eagerness to take the business and such a low quotation was made on No. 4 foundry that the buyer decided to cover for the month of April only and to wait developments before contracting for later months.

Labor troubles have caused some hesitancy in the placing of orders for structural shapes, but a large amount of new business is in sight.

The prices of coke are much easier, purchases having been made for prompt shipment as low as $2.20 for furnace coke and $3 could probably be shaped for foundry coke.

Quotations on scrap continues to decline.

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

Examinations Will Take Place in Duluth on March 21.

Civil service examinations for railway mail clerk are announced to take place in Duluth on March 21. This will interest quite a number as always here there are a large number of applicants for railway mail service jobs. Those who have it in mind to try for a place in this service will do well to see A. Grabarkowicz, superintendent of carriers at the post office and get a copy of the rules and regulations covering these examinations. He is secretary of the civil service board for Duluth and says he will be glad to give all the information possible to those desiring to take part in the examinations.

The age limit for the examinations is between 18 and 35 years and a medical certificate must be furnished. Applicants must be at least 5 feet 6 inches in height without shoes or shoes, weigh not less than 125 pounds and have no physical defects. If an applicant fulfills these requirements and passes the mental examination, a salary of $800 a year is waiting for him as soon as he is appointed to a "run." The mental examination consists of close inquiry into the acquaintance an applicant has with spelling, arithmetic, letter writing, penmanship and copying from plain copy to show speed and accuracy. The applicant will be questioned also as to railroads particularly in his own territory, which in the case of Duluth will be the tenth division. Another test which is considered very important is the quick reading of postal cards with various kinds of writing on them.

RETURN TO LAKES.

Steamers Sent to Seaboard Three Years Ago Coming Back.

Bills of sale have just been filed in the office of the collector of the port, in which the steamers Minnetonka and Missewaska are transferred by their present owners to the American Shipbuilding company. Just what this transfer signifies is not known here as the bills of sale came by mail from Cleveland and no explanation is attached.

These steamers were formerly registered here but were never enrolled as from this port. Three years ago they were taken to the seaboard and plied there in trade. Now it is evident that they are about to be returned to fresh water.

HER AUNT

Formally Introduced Miss Whitney to Society at Dinner Dance.

New York, Jan. 25.—Miss Dorothy Whitney, the daughter of the late Wm. C. Whitney, was formally introduced to society Monday night at a dinner dance given for her by her aunt, Mrs. Charles Tracy Barney, at No. 67 Park avenue.

The entertainment was one of the most elegant of the season, and the Barney home was a fine setting for the party. There were beautiful floral decorations in all the rooms, and in the large dining room, with its lofty ceiling, were clusters of orange trees in full bloom and Japanese trees loaded with blossoms.

From the conservatory were specimens of horticulture rare and choice, including all the varieties of roses and early spring flowers. These were with unsparing hand placed in the various rooms on either side of the main hall. Clusters of cut flowers were used to decorate the ballroom, while in the dressing room and dining room were quantities of lilies and American beauty roses, hyacinths and grandiflas.

The dinner was served at small tables, arranged in the dining room and conservatory. Each board was decorated with a centerpiece of pink and white roses.

Miss Whitney, in a gown of white lace, chiffon and satin, received the guests, assisted by her aunt, Mrs. Barney, whose gown was of silver gray satin and chiffon. Before the dancing was begun a number of young people, who had dined at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Payne Whitney, arrived.

The cotillon led by Mr. Worthington Whitehouse, with Miss Whitney as a partner, was started about 11:30 o'clock. The favors consisted of paper flowers, and inexpensive trifles. Following the cotillon, for which some extra guests were asked in, there was a buffet supper.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

G. Barber, city treasurer and assistant cashier of the People's State bank, of Albia, Iowa, was arrested Wednesday for an alleged shortage of $2,000 in city finances. The shortage is secured by an indemnity company in Chicago. The bank finances are not short, it is said.

Harry Seinfeldt, the well known third baseman, was signed by President Charles Murphy of the Chicago National league baseball club.

J. E. Hershey was Wednesday arrested at Council Bluffs on complaint of James Doyle of Denver, on a charge of improperly influencing jurors in the Doyle-Burns suit last spring involving $600,000 in Portland Gold Mining company shares. Hershey at once began suit against Doyle for $10,000 damages and as a consequence Doyle and Hershey were cited for contempt of court. All hearings are set for this week.

SKI RUNNER BEATS CAR

Olaf Larson Races Trolley to Ninth Avenue.

Gains Lost Ground on Long Hill and Wins Out.

Some idea of the speed with which an expert ski runner can get over the ground, may be gained from the feat of Olaf Larson, the second captain of the Duluth club.

One evening this week, Mr. Larson left Woodland park in the wake of one of the large cars. He had spent the afternoon on the hill, and was returning home in the evening.

The recent heavy snow, followed by the thaw and then a hard frost, has left the road between the car tracks a perfect run for a ski rider. The snow is packed hard and is almost as smooth and slippery as a sheet of ice.

The car was coming in light, and made but very few stops on the way from Woodland, running at a high rate of speed.

Mr. Larson chased the car the entire distance in from the end of the line. Coming down the long hill from Twenty-first avenue east to Twelfth avenue, he made a great burst of speed, gaining up ground which he had lost on the level at the top of the hill. He gradually overhauled the car, in spite of the fact that it was dropping down the hill at top speed, and at Tenth avenue east he had overtaken it. He shot past it between Tenth and Ninth avenues east, and turned down Ninth avenue before the car reached the corner.

The exciting race was witnessed by only a few passengers on the car, and the conductor, but it was one of the most exciting and novel contests ever seen in the city.

As long as the conditions remain as favorable as they are, the feat of following a car in from Woodland is likely to become a popular method of trying their skill among the ski runners.

POLICY HOLDERS BARRED

From Attending Meeting of Mutual Reserve Insurance Company.

New York, Jan. 25.—At the annual meeting of policy holders of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company yesterday, the following directors were re-elected: John W. Bowden, Charles W. Camp and W. T. B. Milliken.

Before the meeting much excitement was created by several policy holders, who attempted to attend as the holders of proxies and who were barred by a rule of the company.

John J. Jordan, an attorney, who appeared as proxy for several policy holders, said that in many cases no notice of the annual meeting had been sent to policy holders and that he would use the rejection of his proxies as the basis of a legal action against the company.

Later the board of directors met and re-elected the officers. These included: President, Frederick A. Burnham; vice president, George D. Eldredge; second vice president, George Burnham, Jr.

LADIES AND YOUNGSTERS

Next Ski Tournament Will Include an Event for Them.

Chance for Fair Ski Runners to Show Their Skill.

Ladies and boys will have an opportunity to take part in the next tournament of the Duluth Ski club.

At a meeting held Tuesday evening, in the St. Louis hotel, plans were made for another tournament to be held some time between Feb. 10 and Feb. 22. On Feb. 10 the St. Paul tournament will be held, and on Feb. 22 the national tournament at Ishpeming will take place. The Duluth club was anxious not to conflict with either of these events, and the tournament here will probably be held about midway between those dates.

The committee in charge of the event is planning to open it to ladies and boys under 15 years of age.

Since the run at Woodland was put in shape it has been used freely by small boys and ladies, and some of them have become quite expert in the use of skis. Regarding the boys, there is no question about being able to secure plenty of entries, as the sport is even more popular among them than it is among the men, and the event which will be open to boys under 15 years of age is likely to surpass all the others in the number of entries.

Among the ladies, however, there may be some difficulty in securing enough entries to make it possible to hold a competition for them. The sport has been very popular with the fair sex, but few of them are expert enough at it to enter a tournament. An effort will be made by the committee, however, to secure eight or ten entries, and if this number will enter, the tournament will certainly have this feature in connection with it.

The boys and ladies will not take the big jump, as it is too dangerous, and none but the most expert among the men care to attempt it. They will take some of the smaller jumps, however, and prizes will be given for style and "form" rather than the length of the jumps.

The ladies who have any intention of entering the tournament have at least two weeks yet in which to prepare themselves, and much can be accomplished in that time by diligent practice.

In other cities the ladies take an active part in the tournaments, and the Duluth club is anxious to increase the interest among the gentler sex in Duluth.

SKATING RACE.

Charles Rankin and Carl Alroth Will Settle the Championship.

The skating championship of the Head of the Lakes will be settled Friday evening at the Central rink when Charles Rankin of Duluth will meet Carl Alroth of Superior in a match race for two mile heats out of three.

Alroth has claimed the championship of the Head of the Lakes for the last nine years, and during that time the only man who has beaten him is Norval Baptie, the speedy North Dakota skater.

Rankin has won first place among the Duluth skaters, and he has challenged Alroth.

The race will be for a purse of $20 and the championship of the Head of the Lakes.

CASS LAKE POSTOFFICE.

C. M. Johnson Becomes Postmaster With J. L. Grady Deputy

Cass Lake, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to the Herald.)—The local postoffice has at last changed postmasters, after a considerable wait in order that the postmaster would receive his commission. C. M. Johnson, who was appointed postmaster some two months ago, has assumed his duties, and F. W. Smith has retired. Mr. Johnson will make several changes in the personnel of the working force at the office, looking to the betterment of the service, which, however, will not all be arranged until towards spring. Miss Clara Minkler, who has officiated in the position of deputy during the past year, has resigned, and accepted a more lucrative position. She expects to leave Cass Lake Feb. 1. J. L. Grady, who has been superintendent of the government dam at Winnibogishish lake for several years, will act as deputy after the departure of Miss Minkler. Mr. Smith, who was appointed to fill an unexpired term, served the balance of that term and was re-appointed on the recommendation of Judge Page Morris, who was congressman at that time. Mr. Smith is an attorney and will hereafter devote his entire time to the practice of his profession.

FOUND CHICKENS

Where Officer Had Left the Crate of Stolen Eggs.

New York, Jan. 25.—Detective Griffin of the Tremont station told Magistrate Baker, in the Morrisania court, of an experience he had with a crate of eggs which had been held as evidence against Eugene Briggs of No. 109 East One Hundred and Eighth street, who was arraigned in court on the charge of having stolen the eggs from Stephen Jollen, a grocer, of One Hundred and Seventy-first street and Third avenue.

Griffin told the magistrate that he arrested the prisoner on Saturday afternoon while carrying the crate of eggs. Griffin put the eggs on a steam radiator in the station house, and he says that yesterday his attention was called to the crate by a chorus of "peeps" issuing from it. When the cover was removed he was astonished to find that a dozen of the eggs had hatched.

Magistrate Baker said it was certainly very interesting, and held Briggs in $500 bail for trial.

MADE MANY BEQUESTS

Marshall Field Enriches Relatives and His Old Employes.

Gives $8,000,000 for Field Columbian Museum in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—By the will of the late Marshall Field, which was filed in the probate court late yesterday, the city of Chicago was made a beneficiary to the extent of $8,000,000. This sum is to be used for endowment and maintenance of the Field Columbian museum, now situated in Jackson park. This bequest, however, is made on the express condition that within six years from the death of Mr. Field there shall be provided for the museum without cost to it, lands that shall be satisfactory to the trustee as a site for the permanent home of the institution. If within the six years the site has not been provided, the $8,000,000 is to revert to the residuary estate. In addition to the sum left for the museum, various bequests aggregating $17,568,000 are made to relatives and friends of the testator.

With these exceptions, the entire estate is to be kept intact until one of the two sons of Marshall Field, Jr., grandsons of the testator, shall have reached the age of 50 years. They are now 9 and 12 years, respectively.

Marshall Field, Jr., died on Nov. 27, 1905, of a bullet wound accidentally inflicted while handling a revolver.

The executors of the will are the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, a bank in which Mr. Field held a large amount of stock; Chauncey Keep, an old friend of Mr. Field's, and Arthur B. Jones, who for many years has been Mr. Field's secretary and confidential man. In one instance the United States Trust company is made trustee for a fund of $3,000,000; the Illinois Trust and Savings bank and the Northern Trust company are also included among the trustees, but the bulk of the estate is to be managed by the three trustees first mentioned.

The business of Marshall Field & Co. is to be maintained as a portion of the residuary estate. That portion of the will relating to it reads as follows:

"My executors and residuary trustees are directed to recognize and promote the performance of any contract that may exist at my decease and may have been made by me for the continuance in the business of Marshall Field & Co., incorporated, or any part of my resources therein."

Because of the failure to file a petition for the appointment of administrators, the value of the estate was not furnished to the court and even the executors themselves are not able at this time to estimate it with accuracy.

The failure to file the petition with the will is because of the great extent of the property held by Mr. Field and because much time will be required for its appraisement. It will probably be several weeks before the probate court is officially informed of its value.

The will provides not only for the specific manner in which each particular bequest is to be paid, but states exactly what is to be done with the funds of any particular trust if the beneficiary shall die before or after his or her legal heirs. As an instance of the care with which the will is drawn in this particular it may be stated that the residuary estate which is to go to the two grandsons of Mr. Field is covered in all details of management and disposition down to the grandchildren of the two boys.

The bequests given by Mr. Field are as follows:

To the Merchants' Loan & Trust company, in trust for Mrs. David Beatty of England, daughter of Mr. Field, $1,000,000.

To the United States Trust company of New York, in trust for Mrs. Beatty and her appointees, $3,000,000.

To the Northern Trust company, Arthur B. Jones and Chauncey Keep, in trust for Mrs. Beatty and her appointees, $2,000,000.

To Mrs. Marshall Field, widow, in addition to the provision made for her in a marriage settlement, dated Sept. 5, 1905, $1,000,000, together with the Field family home, at 1905 Prairie avenue, with all its furnishings and equipments of every kind for and during her life. No mention is made in the will of the amount given to Mrs. Field at the time of the marriage settlement.

To the Northern Trust company, in trust for Mrs. Laura F. F. Dibblee, and two daughters, sisters and nieces, $500,000.

To Mrs. Bibblee, $250,000; to Bertha Bibblee, niece, $100,000; to Frances Bibblee, niece, $100,000.

To the Northern Trust company, in trust for Mrs. Helen F. James, sister and three children, $500,000.

To Howard James, nephew, $500,000.

To Philip James, nephew, $250,000.

To Dwight James, nephew, $20,000.

To the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, in trust for Miss Nora Scott, sister of Mr. Field's wife, $200,000.

To Miss Nora Scott, absolutely $200,000.

To the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, Chauncey Keep and Arthur B. Jones, in trust for Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., and descendants, $5,000,000.

To Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., absolutely, and to the Northern Trust company, in trust for her, a sum sufficient to make what she will receive from her husband's estate an aggregate of $1,000,000.

To the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, in trust for Gwendoline Field, granddaughter, $1,000,000.

To Grace C. Gillette, niece, $100,000; to Stanley Field, nephew, $100,000; to Norman Field, nephew, $10,000; to Mrs. Maud F. Clegg, niece, $10,000.

To Mrs. Laura F. Clegg, niece, $10,000; to Mrs. Josephine F. Christey, niece, $10,000; to Mrs. Minna F. Gibson, niece, $10,000; to Florence Field, niece, $10,000.

To each of Mr. Field's family servants, not specifically named in the will, and who at the time of his death had been in his employ for five years, each $2,000.

If both grandsons die before the final division of the estate, leaving no issue, the entire trust estate to go to any other surviving children of Marshall Field, Jr., and to their respective issues. This could only apply to Gwendolyn Field, sister of the two grandsons, who would inherit the bulk of the estate.

HEIR TO TITLE

Secretly Wedded in California to a Louisville Girl.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 25.—News of the clandestine marriage, Oct. 14 last, in Madera, Cal., of Miss Louise Lewis, daughter of John C. Lewis, one of the richest men of this city, to William S. Robertson, a great grandson of the Duke of Gordon of the Scottish nobility, has reached here. Mr. Robertson is next in line to the title of Duke of Gordon.

The young couple were twice married, first by a Methodist minister, in Madera, and again, November 20, in Fresno, Cal., by the Very Rev. Dean Harvey Hanson of St. James church. Their intention was to keep the wedding secret until spring, but it became known to the bride's sister, Mrs. Brenton J. Metzler, whom she was visiting. Mrs. Metzler promptly insisted upon a second ceremony. Monday the marriage was announced by the father of the bride, the information having reached him through a long delayed letter from his son-in-law, heir prospective to one of Scotland's richest peerages.

Miss Lewis left for the West a year ago, and among the first people she met was young Robertson. The two fell in love, although Miss Lewis was engaged to another man. It seems that this first love of Miss Lewis appeared in Fresno early in October, whereupon the young Englishman suggested a secret marriage, which was agreed to by Miss Lewis. Mr. Robertson's title to nobility comes through his mother, who is a first cousin of the present Duchess of Gordon.

John C. Lewis, the father of the young bride, is one of the most prominent men in local business and social circles. Miss Lewis claims descent from the family of Washington.

WILL BE FREE

Sanitarium for Consumptives to be Established at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 25.—Pittsburg millionaires, among whom are Henry Phipps, the former partner of Andrew Carnegie, and William McConway, Mr. Carnegie's personal representative in many undertakings in Pittsburg, will shortly open a sanitarium here for the free treatment of tuberculosis.

Mr. McConway has given his former residence, a magnificent place on Herron Hill, as a temporary hospital, and if the venture proves successful he will deed it to the board of directors. The hospital is to be incorporated under the name of the Pittsburg sanitarium.

Primarily the object of the hospital is to treat patients who have not the means to go away to more moderate climates. It is thought by physicians that under proper care and diet, that tuberculosis can be fully fought in Pittsburg, and that the spread of the disease can be checked by the opening of such an institution.

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

The sixth annual charity ball given by the local lodge of Elks was held last evening at the Spalding hotel, and was, if possible, even more successful than any in the previous history of Elk balls. The Spalding dancing hall was beautifully decorated. Graceful lengths of ground pine were festooned from the ceiling to the sides of the room, and from the center of the garlands magnolia wreaths depended, and to the wreaths graceful loops of the purple and white ribbons, the true Elk colors, were tied. About the sides and at the ends of the hall quantities of green were used, and the room has seldom looked more beautiful.

The annual balls of the Elks are remembered longer than others of the year. They are given during January. During the hardest stress of the winter, aid is given by the liberal-hearted Elks. During the Christmas season there is little real want that is not more than supplied by the people, who are at this time in the most thoughtful and generous mood of the year. After the passing of the holidays people forget, however, and it is at this time that the Elks come forward with their help. And for six years this brilliant ball has been given as a delightful social function, with the underlying motive kept well in mind.

The program of dancing music was played by Flaaten's orchestra, and several hundred guests were present. A large number of beautiful gowns were worn, and the affair was an exceedingly delightful one. The committees in charge of the ball were:

Executive—H. W. Andridge, H. I. Gooch, Verne Culbertson, A. C. Le Richeux, Charles Goodrich, A. J. Lyle.

Decoration—R. M. Edwards, Prescott Wyman, W. L. Gorrie, G. E. Dixon, James S. Ray, George S. Munsey.

Floor—F. M. Anderson, J. H. McFadzen, M. A. Ryan, O. N. Lundberg, L. W. Farmer, Charles Beugler, H. I. Gooch, J. T. Black, J. W. Kreitter, A. V. Oulette, G. H. Young, C. W. Benson, E. A. Tessman, H. B Knudsen, F. J. Patton, Edward Hazen, C. H. Dorrance, F. G. Bradbury, M. J. Seabrook.

Reception—J. T. Armstead, H. W. Andridge, J. L. Fuller, Cook Ely, W. S. McCormick, A. H. Kreiger, W. H. Alexander, J. B. Cotton, George H. Cresby, Jesse R. Sharp, John Cox, Fred Reynolds, P. E. McTague, A. H. Smith, A. E. McManus, Charles Goodrich, Alexander Marshall, R. R. Wells, W. A. Allen, Rev. R. J. Mooney, H. F. Williamson, Jr., B. G. Segog, W. H. Wilson, C. H. Bagley, W. M. Burgess, John Panton, C. W. Erieson, E. G. Hilliard, G. A. Eaton, I. D. Burgh, D. R. Black, S. F. McLeod, J. G. Harris, J. C. Fisher, H. S. Davis.

Breakfast Tickets.

The tickets for the mid-winter breakfast, which will be given by the Women's Council of the city, Monday, Feb. 12, at the Spalding hotel, will be limited to women who are club members until Feb. 5, after which date the sale will be open to any woman who desires to attend. It is desired that every club woman of the city who so desires may attend the breakfast, and as the number of tickets is necessarily limited, they will have the first choice. The club members are urged to attend to the matter at once.

Events of Interest.

The Evening Art History class will meet at the club room of the library this evening at 7:30 o'clock. "Gothic Architecture" will be the subject of the evening's study. The leader of the class is Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour.

A SCOTTISH PARTY.

Description of One Held on the Old Sod.

An Indianapolis woman writes of a party which she attended in Scotland, says the Indianapolis News, and the affair is of special interest today, the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns:

"There were just a dozen of us, a 'mixed' crowd. The men were invited to come from business—about half past six. The ladies arrived at the hostess's house about 3 o'clock, and talked and did fancywork until 5, when tea was served in the dining room.

"An oblong table was spread with a white damask cloth. The oblong centerpiece was of yellow satin edged with a ruffle of white lace. In the center of this was a tall vase holding a miscellaneous bouquet. At each corner was a small vase of similar design, holding similar bouquets. All the edibles were in place on the table. In front of each guest was a tea plate, on which was placed a small knife, and at the side of which was a teaspoon. There were no water glasses, water being served as requested from a water bottle or siphon on the sideboard. Neither were there any napkins or serviettes, as the Scotch call them. The teacups, silver teapot with yellow satin cozy; silver hot water pitcher, sugar and cream were in front of the hotess. The maid passed the tea to each one and then retired. After that the service was informal.

"Everything here seems to balance or to come in pairs. The table was no exception, the dishes being in pairs, two plates of butter, one fresh, one salt, at either end of the table; two plates of bread, two of cakes, two dishes of jelly, etc.

"There were white and graham bread, fresh and salt butter, scones, tomatoes served whole (the creamiest ones that just melted in your mouth) tea, strawberry jam, orange marmalade, macerooms, jelly cake, sandwiches, fresh strawberries and tiny cold (!) pancakes. When the meal was about half over the hostess served the berries from a large bowl on to dessert plates—small soup plates.

"We were at the table fully an hour and then went back to the parlor to do some more talking and await the arrival of the men, who came about 7 o'clock, and who got their tea in the breakfast room. Later they joined us and there was general conversation, then music, both instrumental and vocal, solo, duet, quartet and chorus.

"At 9:30 o'clock supper was announced, and we went to the dining-room, the hostess telling us who we were to go out with. The centerpiece was the same as at tea, except for the addition of lighted candles placed between the small vases. The host sat at the end of the table, the hostess at the other, and each served a meat and a vegetable. The meats and vegetables were served on one plate (dinner, of course) and passed by the maid. To the left of each plate was a bread and butter plate and small butter knife. To the right were an empty glass, a bottle of lemonade, a bottle of pop and the knife and fork. There were hot beafsteak pie, Finnan haddie, cold tongue, mashed potatoes, cauliflower, celery, cheese, white and graham bread, scones, fresh and salted butter, jelly, marmalade, strawberries, bananas, English walnuts and fruit cake.

"When we were ready for the fruit and nuts, the maid removed the dinner plates and the bread and butter and placed the fruit plates in front of the hostess, who served the berries. The guests passed the other dishes.

"After supper we went back to the drawing room and played cards"

New York Paper's Discussion of Matrimonial Market.

The New York Evening Sun has an interesting discussion of the "Matrimonial Market" which reads as follows:

*Ex dividend. No sales.

There was a vigorous continuation of arrists in the market today. Transactions reached a very large total, and although at the close there was a falling off in D. L., otherwise there were general advances. Rumors of squeezing the market were met with the usual prompt denials.

G. C. Stock was scarce, and all shares offered were greedily snapped up. A bear raid on S. Y. T. met with disaster, the S. Y. T.'s declaring that they thought the bears were horrid.

P. A. stock was strong and firm as usual, the dealings showing the strength and value of this favorite security. The census report, which came over the Washington wires at 11 a. m., showed still further preponderance of male population, and as a result the market went up several points.

W. common were buoyant, and the preferred also showed their usual robustness.

Just before the tap of the closing bell Intellectuals fell off again on the publication of the Weekly Husband Statement, which showed that this stock could not sew on buttons or make old-fashioned buckwheat cakes with rings around them.

Lavish With Gifts.

Miss Alice Roosevelt chose that her betrothal gift should be, of course a mystic circle, which symbolizes eternity, but not a ring. The token is a magnificent necklace of diamonds, with a pendant of diamonds and pearls. The jewels, the size of the ordinary solitaire, are set in dull gold and hang from a fine wrought wire.

Since the giving of the necklace and the public announcement, Mr. Longworth has given his fiancee no less than three rings. The first was a circlet of Tuscan gold with five large diamonds embedded, and within it bore a date sacred to the young lovers. He had known Miss Alice as a child of 7 or 8, but it was on a day in October, 1902, that he met her for the first time since she had grown to womanhood.

The second ring was a large sapphire set in Roman gold, and was the engagement symbol of the prospective groom's grandmother and a revered relic in his family. Mr. Longworth, who is showing almost oriental generosity toward his fiancee, purchased for a Christmas souvenir a ring with three glorious pigeon blood rubies surrounded by diamonds. Thus Miss Alice may be said to have become betrothed with one diamond necklace and three beautiful rings.

Mrs. Longworth gave her son's sweetheart a jeweled belt buckle, and she has received some handsome gold ornaments from his sister, the Marquise de Chambrun, and from his aunt, Mrs. Bellamy Storer, wife of the American ambassador to Vienna.

Bachelor Maids.

There are at least twenty women in New York, unmarried, who support the luxury of private establishments, costing upward of $20,000 a year, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Helen Gould pays very much more, and Miss May Van Alen spends her income of $60,000 a year on three private houses, one of which is located on Manhatten Island. Miss Evelyn Van Wart is said to be under an expense of $50,000 in maintaining her bachelor houses. She has a fine place here, and two more in Europe, where she spends most of her time. Miss Margaret Astor Chanler has a three-story house in West Seventy-fourth street, and she is content to live the single life at the rate of about $20,000 a year. Miss Faith Moore is another bachelor maid with a large income. She spends yearly $40,000 to maintain her city and country places. Miss Olive Trowbridge struggles along on about $20,000 a year. It is almost impossible to count the number of rich widows who support great establishments. The number surely runs in the hundreds. Besides this there are perhaps thousands of self-supporting women who pay yearly $5,000 to keep up homes of their own.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Rabbits, 20 cents each.

Squash, 4 cents a lb.

Sweet potatoes, 5 cents a lb.

Lettuce, 5 cents a bunch, or 20 cents a head.

This is the proper season for rabbits, and if you can contemplate eating the poor things that look so dead as they hang limp and kind of sorry loooking in front of the frosted window, now is the time for you to get busy. Some people like them, and when they are roasted they should be served with sweet potatoes and parsnips, or baked squash and stewed turnips and currant jelly. The season for them lasts only until the first of February, and although they may be found in the market after that, they are not so good, so if you must have rabbits, get them now.

The Courtship of Kodasura Kinnosuke

By Robert Wilkes.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Kodasura Kinnosuke, like all students from the Flowery Kingdom, was a most industrious and intelligent scholar and was pointed to with pride by the faculty of the university who held him up as an example for the less conscientious occidental youths. While perfectly polite to his fellow students, Kodasura never forgot that he was a Prince in his own country and that behind him was a noble pedigree running back for thousands of years and he maintained a reserve towards the young Western barbarians which was wholly in keeping with his race and its traditions.

The American girl appended to Kodasura as a strange and wonderful being. As to the men he could understand in a faint sort of way their heathen attributes but the women were utterly beyond and apart from his traditions and his understanding. Therefore it clearly became his duty to study this strange phenomena. He went about this duty in the same grave, intent manner with which he devoted himself to other studies.

He sought as wide acquaintance as possible with the young women of the college town and indulged, so far as he was able, in the social pleasures of the students. Making little progress in this general campaign he decided to select an individual specimen for investigation and analysis. Whereupon, after due consideration, he decided upon Miss Florence Maynard, familiarly known to her intimates as Flossie, a most pert and vivacious little Miss whose blue eyes and red lips had been the cause of a long string of broken hearts.

Kodasura figured it thusly: Miss Maynard was exceedingly popular, therefore she must be a good specimen of the most attractive of her species. She was bright, intelligent and well-informed, hence the time spent in her company would not be wholly lost as regards his other investigations. Besides which she was very pretty and the young Japanese felt it would be a pleasure as well as a duty to make the investigation in her companionship.

So the quest was begun and it occasioned great comment and much joking. Miss Florence demurely accepted the friendly advances of the young foreigner and thought it a great lark. He was well informed, a model of courtesy and comely to look upon. Besides he was different. He was in fact a distinct novelty. So they were much together and talked of many things serious and trifling as they walked or rode or sat in the Maynard drawing room.

From the first Miss Florence fathomed the purpose of the Japanese and she accepted the conditions with a mischievous twinkle in her blue eyes. And she led him a merry chase in his investigations. In fact no sooner had he reached a conclusion along a given line than she smashed it all to smithereens. So the end of the term arrived with the investigator more bewildered regarding the American girl than when he began.

One thing, however, he had learned, and that was that the eternal feminine abode in the American girl even as in her Japanese sister. He found that she was an object of affection and desire. The realization of this came to him when he was about to leave college and return to his island home.

"I have highly passed," he soliloquized, "in all the information which I arrived to seek—with the exception that of the American girl I do not know peas."

Then as he rolled his cigarette he thought of his home-going within the week and of the termination of his investigations of Miss Maynard. And curiously enough what disturbed him most was not that he had failed in his quest of knowledge but the thought that he was to see her no more.

"What is this?" he asked himself in stern self analysis. "This emotion of unrest which my bosom is within? Why do I of joyfulness partake when I consider that I am with Miss Maynard in this evening to foregather? Also of what reason does my heart beat more forcefully when I reflect upon the consideration that I will see her not any presently and what is the foundation of the emptiness that inflicts my chest?"

Long and closely did he ponder upon these questions until finally it came to him that he was in love with the fair barbarian.

"Of much astonishment is it," he cried "that I—I a Prince of the house of Kodasura, of four thousand years in its pedigree, should with favor inspect this woman whose family was born yesterday. But of truthfulness it is. Even as I felt toward O Gin San and the other maidens of my own race I now feel in the direction of Miss Maynard. It is of strangeness incomprehensive."

He pondered long over the situation but every period brought him back to the dancing blue eyes and the red cupid lips and the roguish dimples of Florence.

"Why is it not?" he finally said determinedly addressing a bust of his great-grandfather on the mantel, "I am a Prince and it is that I should my desire have gratification of. It is not her fault that she is old only a few hundred years. And of certainment her feet are those of the Japanese and her eyes. It must be that the spirit of a Japanese has lodgment found in her divine form. I will forget my ancestry. I will marry Her."

With a sigh of virtuous self-sacrifice he donned his hat and went to inform his lady love of his decision. Of her attitude he never thought at all. In his country the decision of the male of proper degree was sufficient providing the father could be assured of the financial expediency of the match.

When she came into the drawing room he stood grave and heroic in the center of the floor. Before she could speak he said:

"It is of the grave mission I have arrived to see you today. I have determined to marry you.

The girl caught her breath in amazement.

"Yes," Kodasura went on, "I have great ponderment given it and it is my judgment that I shall my rank and station waive and will make my wife you."

The flush of indignation in the girl's face faded into a smile, then into downright laughter.

"When was this important decision arrived at," she asked dropping a courtesy.

"This afternoon," he replied with dignity. "Why do you laugh?"

"Oh it's so funny," replied Miss Florence. "Pray have you determined upon the details of the wedding."

"It is not of humorousness that I speak," replied the Prince. "It is of love that I talk. I, Kodasura Kinnosuke, love you and will make you my wife. Of the arrangements of the marriage I have no thought. Your customs I do not have knowledge of. Only that I must sail within the month."

This brought forth a fresh peal of laughter from the girl. Kodasura gazed at her intently. Then his expression of grave exaltation faded and his lips curled a trifle while his eyes blazed with a fire no American ever had seen in them.

"I see," he said. "The understandment you not. I am sorry. It is a mistake of the judgment which I have encountered. It is not the reincarnation as I had thought. It is a joke. I now observe the humorousness."

He gazed steadily into the fireplace for a moment and the feeling vanished from his face.

"I make the apology," he said. "I did not at first see the humor. We are not a humorous people. I came to present my adieux and to make my thanks for the courtesy you have shown me."

Bowing low he withdrew, leaving the girl standing in a trance.

Kodasura Kinnosuke returned to Japan with the mystery of the American girl unsolved.

TWENTY HALF DROWNED PERSONS ARE RESCUED

was to be seen. It is the general impression that the raft foundered.

All the other boats were smashed to splinters when they attempted to lower them. Two of the life boats were capsized shortly after launching. One escaped the breakers and put to sea with about eight or nine people aboard.

The following is the story of G. Willets, one of the passengers rescued:

"The ship struck at 12:07 o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, Jan. 23. I was on deck at the time, smoking a cigar, and was looking at my watch when the first crash came. In an instant all was excitement. There were the shrieks of the frightened men and women the wail of little children and the hoarse orders of the officers of the ship. The vessel reeled like a drunken man slid over the reef and struck again.

"The command to back her off was given, and she went astern at full sped, but it was too late. The water was pouring in like a mill race, and with a sound which drowned all else. The wind swung the vessel's stern to the beach and her head to the waves. This saved many lives, as she was then swept back to the shore, and struck once again in such a position that she remained partially above the water and on an even keel.

"Every wave now washed clear over her, and many people who hastily rushed on deck went to their deaths without time to murmur a prayer.

"The order was given to get out the boats. Two of them on the weather side were launched and were smashed like egg shells as soon as they struck the water. Then came the attempt to get out the lee boats.

"Purser O'Farrell took charge. Four women and a number of men went into the boat. I do not know how many, but she was practically full. Just as they were lowering the other, the davits broke, and the stern of the boat fell to the water while the bow hung in the air.

"Every one was precipitated into the sea and swept away in an instant. For a second or two I caught a glimpse of an agonized face, then another, and yet another, as they were washed by me. It was awful. The waves dashing over the ship started breaking her up. They swept the deck loose, and every swell lifted it. We clung to the rigging and deck house. Then an attempt was made to get a line ashore. A fireman, named Cigales, agreed to swim ashore. He was in the water fully half an hour, but was unable to make the beach. The ship struck in a bad spot. She is directly at the foot of a precipitious bluff that comes sheer to the water's edge. One man was swept ashore and succeeded in landing on a small rock. We got a line to him, and then he tried to climb the cliff, but fell and was killed before our eyes.

"One of the most pitiable incidents was that of a little boy, about 5 years old. His father, mother and two little sisters put off in one of the boats. The boat capsized and all were drowned. The little fellow waded around the deck crying for his parents. The last I saw of him he was clinging to the rigging. There were many similar cases. A lame officer from the Concord accompanied by his two sisters was also in the rigging. By Wednesday morning the ship was rapidly going to pieces. Every swell carried away a portion of the ship and the decks rose and fell with every breaker and it was impossible to stay on deck without clinging to a support. The ship was sunk to about the level of the hurricane deck.

"In the morning another sad calamity occurred. About fifteen or twenty persons among them one or two women, had taken refuge in the foretop mast. They appeared to be in the safest place as it was removed from the wash of the waves, although the flying spray dashed over their heads. Suddenly, and without warning, the mast tottered and there came a shriek from those on it and, next moment it fell with a crash, carrying its load of human freight to a terrible death. I do not think there was a single one saved. Their bodies were washed from the ship and we could see them dashed against the rocks.

"To add to our misery, the last of our food was washed away. We had no water to drink, save the bitter cold sleet. The wind and rain, combined with the sea, soon numbed us. Every little while one of those in the rigging would lose their hold and be swept away to the sharp rocks.

"When we saw the Queen in the morning we thanked God for saving us, but when she, in company with the tug, sheered off and sailed away, she was followed by nothing but curses. I suppose it was too dangerous for them to attempt to save us.

"When the Topeka finally hove in sight we determined to make an effort to reach her on the raft left. Few of the men cared to make the attempt as it appeared to be certain death to even thy to cross the breakers. But eighteen of us were willing and we started. With only a pair of oars, the struggle against the wind and sea was almost too much for us.

"Part of the time we were under water and were almost drowned. But we were impelled by desperation and fought and fought against the elements like demons.

"We held one man upright in the center of the raft and had him wave a shirt on a pole. When we saw the steamer turn we thought she had overlooked us and was going away. If she had we would have died right there.

"The waving of the shirt on the raft reminds me that when the Queen was first sighted the women in the rigging even removed portions of their clothing to wave as a signal for help from their positions in the rigging.

"When we left the ship on the raft, we tried to get some of the remaining women to go, but they refused. No help can now reach them before morning, and the ship will have then gone to pieces. She was breaking up when we left her. She could not possibly have held the ground more than an hour or hours afterward. She lies directly in such a position that there is no hope of anyone reaching shore. If the two boats which we saw get away and put to sea, are picked up, they and ourselves will be the only ones saved.

"Capt. Johnson lost his bearings and ran the ship ashore. It was a dark and stormy night and nothing could be seen. The ship struck while running full speed. We all thought we were to the southward of Flattery, and after striking Capt. Johnson proved himself a hero. He made the statement that he would never leave the wreck alive, and I believe it. The chief engineer is also carrying a revolver with which to blow out his brains when the critical moment comes.

"There were many deeds of heroism and many acts of cowardice but, on the whole, the people behaved well and met their fate like men."

Second Mate Peterson, who was in charge of the raft, sustained severe injuries. He substantiated the story, as did also every one of the men rescued.

The Topeka at daylight returned to the scene of the wreck to render whatever aid is possible.

There Is One Reason Why You Should Purchase Your Piano Here

That Reason is One Price

There is a definiteness, an absolute certainty about buying a Piano at a one-price house. No matter who prices a Piano the price is the same. No matter what salesman quotes a price on a Piano it is the same. You can depend on another thing about this one-price business, that our one price is bound to be our low price. We can't change our price under fire, as it were, as is possible with the old many-priced private-mark systems in vogue in most piano houses. You get the same price here on pianos that you would get in Chicago or New York, for you get the minimum cash price—and get it the first time. If you are interested in the purchase of a Piano come in at any time and become acquainted with our splendid, high-grade, standard make instruments and our one-price system of selling them. You'll find the French & Bassett Piano Store in a position to save you many dollars on your purchase. No money easier earned than that saved on such a purchase. Here you have the choice of these splendid, well-known makes: Knabe-Angelus, Emerson-Angelus, Autopiano, Hardman, Blasius, Vose & Sons, Bush & Lane, Behning, Crown, Regent, Kohler & Campbell, Cable-Nelson, etc.

Our One-Price System is coupled with a

MOST LIBERAL CREDIT PLAN.

A first payment of from $10 to $25—according to the price of the piano selected—and the balance from $5 to $15 a month. Thus the French & Bassett store, through its one-price system and its easy-payment plan, makes piano buying easy and profitable.

NEW CONVENT WILL BE ERECTED IN DULUTH

Sisters of Order of St. Benedict Will Build Handsome Structure.

New Institution Will be Established Near Hunter's Park.

Work will be started soon by the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict of the Roman Catholic church on a handsome stone convent and headquarters for the order, to be located on an 80-acre farm tract, just over the brow of the hill, opposite Hunter's Park. The new structure will cost, when completed, about $250,000.

German & Lignell, architects, are preparing plans for the new institution of learning, and one contract, that of furnishing the stone, has already been let. It went to J. F. Fredin. The architects are still at work upon the specifications and final arrangements for the beginning of the work on the new building will not be made before the end of the week, anyway, as the mother superior is out of the city.

The entire convent will not be built this year. It is proposed to expend about $50,000 now and erect one section of the $250,000 structure, the rest to be built at a later date. When it is finished the new convent will be about 200 feet long, and will be several stories high. It will be built almost entirely of stone, and will be beautiful, architecturally. Inside, all the modern improvements will make it one of the best equipped schools in this part of the country.

The new building will stand on an admirable site, in the center of the improved farm which the order maintains, just over the top of the hill, on what is known as the Catholic cemetery road. There will be ample grounds for gardens, walks, tennis courts and other requisites of a school for girls, and the length and breadth of the tract insures the seclusion that an institution of the kind must necessarily have.

The chances are that the farm buildings, which are already on the land, will not be disturbed, and that the agricultural pursuits will be continued on that part of the land not utilized by the convent. The convent grounds may be separated from the rest of the farm, however.

German & Lignell expect to turn the completed plans over to the mother superior upon her return to the city, the last of this week, and it is expected that general contracts for the erection of the first section of the building will be let very soon thereafter.

The order of St. Benedict is a very strong one, and owns many valuable and profitable properties throughout the Northwest. Among the institutions which were built and maintained by the order are St. Mary's hospital, in Duluth; a hospital at Brainerd, one at Grand Rapids, and the Sacred Heart school in this city.

IMPLEMENT DEALERS

To Hold Seventh Annual Convention at Crookston Next Week.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The seventh annual convention of the North Dakota and Northwestern Minnesota Implement Dealers' association will be held in Crookston on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 1 and 2. The business sessions are to be held in the council chambers at the city hall, and the social session, which will include a grand banquet and entertainment, will be held Thursday evening in the Masonic Temple.

The program includes but five set papers, by J. J. Dougherty of Park River, N. D.; W. L. Walton of Neche, N. D.; George P. Schultz of Minneapolis, W. R. Wooden of Battle Creek, Mich., and B. B. Clark of Madison.

This is the first annual meeting of the association ever held in Minnesota, the former meetings having been held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the North Dakota Hardware Dealers' association, which this year is held at Grand Forks just prior to the meeting here, so that the vast number who belong to both associations will have but a few miles' travel to attend this convention also. An exceptionally large attendance is certain from the Minnesota territory, as the new branch lines of the Great Northern and Soo have resulted in many new men engaging in the business in this section.

MORE ANARCHISTS

Are Arrested in Pennsylvania With Incriminating Papers on Them.

Monongahela, Pa., Jan. 25.—Constantina Levy and Peter Foracika, secretaries of the anarchistic organization, whose headquarters at Baird, Pa., were raided early Tuesday morning and the president and a member of the band captured, together with much literature threatening the assassination of prominent men, were arrested today in a miner's shanty near West Elizabeth, Pa. Many additional incriminating letters, a shotgun, two rifles and a number of revolvers were also found. The men were lodged in jail here today. Officers are searching the surrounding country for members of the band and say that others will be arrested soon.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Farmer and Son Remain Unconscious From Gas for Two Days.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Linton—John Munn and his son, who live on a farm near here, had a narrow escape from asphyxiation recently, and did not become aware of it until told by a neighbor that they had omitted to water their horses one day. The men were in the habit of watering at the neighbor's well, and one morning got up rather late, feeling somewhat ill. They went to the well, where the neighbor asked why they had omitted to water on the preceding day. Munn and his son denied that they had, and only after much discussion were they convinced they had slept two nights, a day and well into another day. Investigation later showed that a stove in the room where they slept was defective, and that the men had been unconscious from breathing the poisonous fumes of lignite coal.

Fargo—The committee of the Y. M. C. A. are doing some lively hustling these days to raise the balance of the $60,000 needed for the new building by the end of this month. The first $20,000 was raised last year with little difficulty, and the canvass was practically dropped till just before the holidays, when the young men of the city raised about $8,000 when the team committees began their canvass. The total subscriptions now amount to about $40,000.

Fargoites are more afraid of the Red river water now than formerly, as typhoid is reported at Wahpeton. The fact that the Wahpeton sewers empty into the Red river, from which Fargo and Moorhead get their city water supply is what causes the uneasiness. At present the stream is frozen over to almost half its depth, and this leaves little more than a covered ditch. Chances for pollution under the circumstances are good. It is only fifty-four miles by air line to Wahpeton, though a much greater distance by the river. Those who do not use artesian or spring water are boiling the water.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—A team of horses belonging to Lee Gamble, a young farmer, plunged over the river bank here at a point where the bluff is forty-five feet high. The team was hitched to a wagon to which was tied another. Both wagons went over and were smashed over the horses. When extricated, the animals were found to be uninjured.

The ice harvest has begun here, almost a month later than last year. The river still remains open for a stretch of about five miles and the ice men will have to do without channel ice this year unless severe and continued cold weather comes.

Aberdeen—A posse of Ashley, N. D., residents is on the trail of Fulkinson, the murderer of Dr. Drake. The man was traced ten miles southeast of Ashley, and his capture is expected within a few hours.

The quarrel leading to the murder was over a bill of 35 cents Fulkinson presented to Drake. After a discussion lasting several minutes, Fulkinson left Drake's dental office, vowing he would get square. He returned a few minutes later with a loaded revolver which he deliberately leveled at Drake and fired twice. Both shots took effect, one in the stomach and the other in the right breast. Drake died ten minutes later. Turning from his victim, writhing on the floor, Fulkinson walked from the office and escaped without apparent haste. He is a plasterer and went to Ashley last summer.

Dr. Drake had long been a resident of Ashley and was popular. Citizens are aroused over the murder, and are making every effort to capture the man.

MAKES CHARGE OF BOYCOTTING

Minnesota Farmers' Grain Exchange Attacks Duluth Board of Trade.

Minneapolis, Jan. 25.—The Duluth board of trade is charged by the Minneapolis Farmers' exchange with boycotting grain from their elevators, and shutting it absolutely out of the Duluth market.

Complaint has been filed with Attorney General Young, who has taken the matter under consideration, to see whether it continues a violation of the anti-trust law.

The Minnesota Farmer's exchange is the big co-operative organization formed to dispense with middlemen and to enable the farmers to market their products and buy their supplies direct. The exchange has a line of country elevators, but no terminal. Its grain comes to Minneapolis and is bought by members of the chamber of commerce. This is not permitted in Duluth, the complaint charges.

Members of the board will no longer handle their grain and there is no way whatever for the exchange to sell at the Head of the Lakes. The exchange claims this is an unlawful discrimination in restraint of trade.

With reference to this members of the Duluth Board of Trade say the idea of the existence of a boycott is absurd. Whether or not the concern in question can sell on the Duluth board of trade is a matter of individual option with members of the Duluth board. The members of the board are always ready to do business with financially responsible people, but are entitled to decline to do business with anybody they do not desire as customers. The only refusal to do business with anyone has been with members of the Superior board of trade and it is pretty generally known by this time that it was because of the malicious attacks of that organization upon the Duluth institution and the Minnesota inspection department that measures as drastic as that were taken.

RAILROADS

PULPWOOD SHIPMENTS

The Season's Total is Estimated at 5,000 Cars.

Car Situation Allows Easy Handling of Shipments.

It is estimated that 5,000 cars of pulpwood will be shipped over the range roads and through Duluth this winter, practically all of it going to Fox River, Wis., points. This will mean about 60,000 cords, which is considered an average output for Northern Minnesota for a single season.

The movement of pulpwood is now fairly under way, and will continue for two or three months, maybe longer. The product has been handled nicely by the railroads so far, and the expected car shortage will not, it is said, seriously interfere with the shipment of the wood. The car situation is now in much better condition than it has been for several months past, and most railroad men regard the shortage as being at an end for the winter. The leading lines have caught up on their orders, and are handling all shipments, it is claimed, without delay.

In addition to the pulpwood, the movement of lumber out of Duluth continues quite heavy. The amount of coal being shipped is smaller than usual, and consists entirely of anthracite, except for that used by the roads themselves. The soft coal piles on the local docks have become so small that it has been found necessary to bring a all-rail coal from the outside, although not much has come all-rail as yet. The heaviest movement of coal was in October and November, and the shipments then made a heavy drain upon the supply of available cars.

The straightening out of the car situation has been rather rapid. Contractors who expected to meet with great difficulty in getting enough cars to handle their forest products find, in many cases, that they will have no trouble at all, and that the railroads will be able to easily handle all the pulpwood they desire to ship. In other instances, of course, the cars ordered will not come along so quickly, but it is believed that all the wood hauled to the tracks of the different railroads will be shipped before the end of the season.

The most trouble, so far as the contractor is concerned, will be in getting his pulpwood to the railroad, for conditions for hauling in the woods are anything but ideal. It is on this fact the movement out of the forests of the product has been slower than usual, and probably will be for a while yet, giving the railroads all the more opportunity to cope with the situation.

REPORTS OF RAILROADS.

Decrease in Earnings of Duluth & Northern Minnesota Line.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—The state auditor yesterday received the two first reports of railroads on the business done for the past year. The Duluth & Northern Minnesota reported freight earnings of $183,770.65, switching receipts of $5,586.24 and passenger earnings of $5,976.20, amounting to $195,343.10, which is a decrease from the earnings of $225,055.05 reported the previous year. The taxes paid at the rate of 4 per cent, amount to $7,813.32.

The Split Rock Northern reported gross earnings of $16,748.58, on which they paid $839.64 taxes. The gross earnings in 1904 were $41,364.68 and the tax $227.20.

BUILDING WILTON SPUR

Of Great Northern is of Great Importance to Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to the Herald.)—The construction of what is known as the Wilton spur of the Great Northern, running from Wilton on the Duluth line of the Great Northern to Island Lake is probably of greater importance to Crookston than any piece of road ever built in the northern part of the state, as it means that the immense sawmill of the Crookston Lumber company in this city will have food for its saws as long as there are any logs in that section of the state available.

The sawmill is by far the biggest institution Crookston has, employing hundreds of men the year round. As the supply of logs that could be banked on the Clearwater or other tributaries of the Red Lake river began to show signs of being exhausted, feelings of apprehension were felt lest the Crookston Lumber company, which owns many other saw mills, and a very large one at Bemidji, which was much easier of access for logs that had to be rafted in, might see fit to close the saw mill here in the course of a very few years. This would be a serious blow to this city.

ROUTE OF MILWAUKEE.

President A. J. Earling and Officials Go West to Determine It.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 25.—President A. J. Earling and party of officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company went West today to inspect and determine the route of the Milwaukee railway's extension to the Pacific coast.

President Earling was delayed by a wreck just out of Chicago and in order to catch his train out of St. Paul a special train was made up and carried the party from La Crosse to St. Paul. The special was scheduled to make the run from La Crosse to St. Paul ninety minutes faster than the fastest passenger train.

Great Northern Dock Work.

About 100 men are now employed on the superstructure work of the 1,000-foot extension of the Great Northern ore dock at Allouez. Schmidt Bros. of Superior, have the contract for the work, and they expect to have it completed in May. Whitney Bros., who have sub-contracted for driving the piling at the dock are furnishing employment to an additional force of fifty men. One hundred more men will be required for the dock work within the next week or ten days. The extension will make the entire structure 2,500 feet long, so that it will practically be a duplicate of No. 2, known as the largest ore dock in the world.

Great Western Dividend.

Great Western road directors will meet Jan. 31 in St. Paul to consider the dividend on preferred "A" stock. It is expected that the full semi-annual rate of 2½ per cent will be declared. The company has not yet paid dividends on this issue since February, 1904.

In 1903 a 4 per cent dividend was paid, and up to February, 1904, 5 per cent was the rate. The estimated figures indicate a surplus of $500,000 after the dividend is paid and $125,000 for a special renewal fund.

Railroad Notes.

Richard H. Ashton, formerly assistant general manager of the Chicago & Northwestern road, has been appointed general manager to succeed W. A. Gardner, who has been made vice president.

Uniform switch and frog blocking will be considered by the state labor department at a meeting to be held Feb. 20 with the superintendents of maintenance of ways.

Frank S. Elliott has been appointed superintendent of the Rio Grande & Western road, with headquarters at Salt Lake City.

The International Association of Ticket Agents will meet Sept. 6-8 at Milwaukee. A trip through the Yellowstone park is planned to follow the meeting.

G. H. Walton of St. Paul, traveling passenger agent of the Milwaukee road, is in the city today.

D. S. Carried of St. Paul, traveling freight agent of the Commercial Dispatch, is in the city.

WEST DULUTH

The body of C. J. Gustafson arrived last night from St. Paul where he died in a hospital of cancer. He has been sick in the hospital there for four months.

He was a brother of Gustave Gustafson of 4728 Magellan street. The latter went to St. Paul to attend his brother in his last moments and arrived here last night with the body. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Finnish church on Fifty-fourth avenue west and interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

Successful Lecture.

Rev. Roderick J. Mooney gave an illustrated lecture on "The Sign of the Cross" at Holy Apostles Episcopal church at Fifty-seventh and Elhor last evening and was listened to by a large audience. The singing was rendered by Misses Alice Cooley and Florence Hyland and was of a very superior quality. The music was of necessity entirely of a sacred kind and as some of the finest compositions of the masters was given, the musical part of the entertainment was superb. The lecture itself was good and Dr. Mooney had evidently spent a great deal of time on it. The audience seemed to appreciate it very much.

Fire Causes Damage.

A blaze which cost several hundred dollars occurred last night in a bundle of clothes left too close to a stove pipe in the house at 207 North Sixtieth avenue west, occupied downstairs by John Engman and family, and upstairs by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Johnson. The department was called and succeeded in keeping the blaze confined to the upstairs part of the house. The damage was considerable.

West Duluth Briefs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gilligan of St. Thomas, Ont., are in West Duluth today visiting friends.

Dr. R. E. Cavanaugh, after an absence of seven years from West Duluth has returned and will open an office in a few days over Olander's drug store. Dr. Cavanaugh was well known here and after practicing in various towns, concludes that West Duluth is the best of all.

William Stewart has resigned as patrolman at West Duluth and will take charge of Butler's saloon.

Henry Braden has gone to Carlton to take charge of a livery out there.

Carl Weaver has returned to St. Paul after visiting here for a few days.

The Democratic committee of the Eighth ward will meet tonight at Alderman Getchell's office.

NEVER INTENDED.

Man Prevents the Intent of Providence

We do not believe that Providence which placed us in a world filled with countless delights, ever intended that we drug ourselves, bring on diseases and live cheerless, unhappy and pain-filled lives.

On the contrary, the joys of each day should make us look forward with pleasant anticipations to the coming of the next: without health this is impossible.

We have, to an extent, the power to command that health.

A lady writing from Meadville, Pa., says that for twenty years she was a great sufferer from headaches (which were frequent, and confined her to her bed for twenty-four hours at a time) and kidney troubles; that she employed numerous physicians from time to time and took much medicine but got no help; that one doctor said her spine was afflicted, another that her sufferings came from female weakness, a third that her eyes brought it all on her, etc., but that when the truth was reached it was found that her coffee-drinking habit was alone responsible—that she was 'coffee poisoned.'

So the good samaritan told her about Postum Food Coffee and she determined to quit using the old kind and see what the new would do for her. She consigned the medicine bottles to the trash barrel along with the coffee canister and began to drink Postum.

"At first I did not like it," she says, "but when I learned how to prepare it I found it a most agreeable and refreshing beverage. I soon began to feel better, the headache grew less and less frequent and severe, my sleep became natural and restful, and now, after two years' use all my troubles have disappeared, including the affection of the kidneys, of which I was at one time most apprehensive.

"My weight has increased twenty pounds.

"I wish to speak within moderation, but I tell you the truth when I say that life looks bright to me now, and I could not if I would, and would not if I could, give up Postum and go back to the old kind of coffee again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

DOING LESS READING

Circulation of Library for Year Shows Slight Falling Off.

Nearly 4,000 New Books Are Added to the Collection.

The circulation of the Duluth public library showed a slight falling off last year, according to the annual report of the librarian, Miss Lydia M. Poirier, which has just been completed.

During the year the number of books taken from the main library was 120,381 and from the West Duluth branch, 7,564, making a total of 127,949. This is a decrease of 3,499 from the year 1904.

The average daily circulation during the year was 418.

Books of fiction constituted a very large percentage of this number. Of the West Duluth circulation, 80 per cent were works of fiction, and out of the 120,384 books loaned from the main library, 88,042 were works of fiction, 62,419 being taken from the adult department, and 25,593 by juveniles.

The juvenile department showed up well in the number of books on other subjects, borrowed from the library.

The children showed their fondness for poetry, especially, and while the total circulation of the juvenile department was only about one-third that of the adult department, the number of books of poetry read by the children was almost as great as the number taken out by the older people. The children borrowed 1,117 books of poetry, while the older people read 1,475.

The children also showed their interest in works on geography and travel, borrowing 777 books on this subject while their parents took out 1,872.

The following table shows the number of books taken from each department, on the various subjects other than fiction:

	Adult.	Juvenile.
General works	2,381	277
Philosophy	1,201	25
Religion	965	162
Sociology	1,875	321
Fine arts	1,482	248
Poetry	1,475	1,117
Drama	936	109
Geography	1,872	779
Biography	2,402	520
History	2,069	875

Nearly 4,000 books have been added to the library during the year, and the total number of volumes is now 45,175. In addition to these there are 1,495 pamphlets and 3,582 documents of various kinds accessible.

The number of books in the library is increasing at the rate of about 4,000 per year. In 1904, 4,206 books were added, and last year, 3,582 were either purchased or received as gifts.

The report also contains a table showing the circulation in detail. It shows that the largest circulation is during the months of February, March, April and May, and there is a considerable falling off during the months of June, July, August and September.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Woman Finds Brothers and Sisters After Ten Years Separation.

Menominee—Miss Della Aschen of this city has just succeeded in finding some members of her family from whom she has been separated for the past ten years. The Weir family was broken up ten years ago at the old home in Kent county. Della was adopted by John Aschen of Menominee, who, on his death, left her nearly $6,000. She never heard of her brothers and sisters until two weeks ago, when she found a 17-year-old brother at Saginaw, and others near Grand Rapids. Her 15-year-old sister, Hazel, is still missing.

Rev. C. H. Rutledge of Ishpeming, a representative of the anti-saloon league, has caused the arrest of two more Menominee county saloon-keepers on the charge of keeping open on a legal holiday.

Rev. N. J. L. Bergen state missionary for the Swedish Baptist church of Michigan, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the church at Marinette.

St. Ignace—In accordance with action taken recently by the Mackinac county board, authorizing the purchase of bloodhounds for use in detecting and capturing criminals and for all other necessary purposes, a committee of supervisors has secured from a fancier at Lexington, Ky., two full-blooded English bloodhounds which are warranted to fill the bill once they are broken in, a matter of only a few weeks.

There have been much sneak thieving and petty burglarizing at St. Ignace the past year or more, and it is proposed to run down the culprits if possible.

Houghton—Ignacio Diaz, of Santiago, Chili, son of the Chilian secretary of the interior, has entered the Michigan college of Mines at Houghton as a special student. He has been sent here by the government of the South American republic. He has been in the Copper country the past three months, studying mining methods, previous to which he visited the Pennsylvania coal and oil regions, and on finishing a six months' course at Houghton will spend considerable time in Montana and other Western mining fields.

Escanaba—Two murder cases are on the calendar for the term of the Delta county circuit court which opened this week at Escanaba. James Brennan is charged with killing W. W. Dimmock at Masonville on the night of June 28, and Alfred Salter is charged with murdering George Elie at Nahma Oct. 10 last.

Newberry—A deer which was being chased by dogs near Newberry, took refuge in town, stopping in the center of Newberry avenue to fight off the animals, which were close on its heels. The deer was exhausted after its long run and was easily captured. It was turned over to the insane asylum and placed among the other deer in the park at that institution.

Sault Ste. Marie—Ex-Railroad Commissioner Chase S. Osborn of Sault Ste. Marie has been confined to his home most of the time since Christmas. A bronchial attack was followed by the grippe and a nervous breakdown. His doctors have ordered him to drop all business and take an ocean trip. In accordance with this advice he will leave for the Mediterranean as soon as he is able to travel.

Ironwood—John Jackson, a Finnish trammer was killed by a fall of ground in "A" shaft of the Newport mine at Ironwood. He was working with a crew on the fourteenth level, when some ore fell from the hanging walls side of the stope, breaking down the timbers, Jackson being caught and crushed under the mass. The deceased was twenty-nine years old, and is survived by a widow and two children.

CANNOT REACH AN AGREEMENT

Lawyers Still in Conference Over Facts in Packers' Case.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—The efforts of the lawyers in the packers case to reach an agreement upon the facts in the case were fruitless up to noon today, but the conference was still in progress.

The packers base their claim for immunity from prosecution on the fact that they were compelled by Commissioner Garfield to testify against themselves. They have claimed through their attorneys that they were promised immunity by the commissioner. The attorneys for the packers offered today to agree that no promise of immunity had ever been made to them by Commissioner Garfield and that such a promise, if made, would not have had any bearing on the case. This offer was declined by the government lawyers. District Attorney Morrison declared to the attorneys for the packers that he was willing to agree that the evidence secured by Commissioner Garfield was used by him during the investigation by the federal grand jury which resulted in the indictment of the packers.

"I used the report of Mr. Garfield," he declared "merely to verify the statements of witnesses. I could see no harm in that when the very report that I used was a statement of the beef industry made by the packers themselves and used by them as advertising matter."

The packers, through their lawyers, were willing to agree to a statement of fact that none of the defendants was served with a formal complaint or ever produced testimony under oath before the commissioner. They declare that the commissioner said that he purposely withheld the oath in order to administer it if he so desired, after he had procured the evidence. The government refused to admit the last allegation.

GILDED MEDALS

Used in Attempt to Impose on Carnegie Hero Commission.

New York, Jan. 25.—Behind the announcement made by the Carnegie hero fund commission that no awards would be made to persons claiming recognition for services rendered in the Slocum disaster is the discovery that some of the Slocum heroes have tried to impose on the Carnegie commission by gold-plating silver medals given them by the United States volunteer life-saving corps and other organizations in this city.

Gold medals were awarded only to those who exhibited the highest degree of heroism, silver ones to those less praiseworthy, and bronze ones to those of the third class.

BROTHERS SAVE BROTHER.

Rochester Fireman, Who Was Scalded in Collision, Will Live.

Rochester, Minn., Jan. 25.—That George Brewer, a railroad fireman who was badly scalded in a collision, and whose life for a time was despaired of, will soon be able to be about again is due largely to the self-sacrifice of two brothers. Brewer was so badly scalded that it was necessary to graft large patches of skin onto him. His brothers immediately offered to sacrifice the necessary cuticle and came here from their home in the South to undergo the operation. Large stripe of skin have been removed from their bodies and grafted into their injured brother, with the result that he will soon be able to leave his bed. The younger of the brothers was a boy of 15.

THE FIELD WILL.

The details of the will of the late Marshall Field, filed in Chicago yesterday, will arouse great public interest, largely because such a prodigious distribution of tangible wealth has never before been recorded. The Field fortune, judging from the magnitude of the bequests, must be considerably larger than had been supposed, and while no statement of its value has been filed, it will probably run considerably above $150,000,000. And, in sharp contrast to many other fortunes of as great or greater size, it is all good, clean money, too.

People whose dealings with dollars run in much smaller figures will follow the list of bequests with a certain fascination that always attends the consideration of real money in such large quantities.

The bequests cover a wide ground. The relatives, near and far, come in for shares running all the way from a few thousands up to a few millions. The quality of the man who has gone to his rest is shown by his appreciation of the services of those who had worked with and for him in his busy career, all of whom are remembered in a very substantial manner. The servants who had been in the Field family for more than five years received from $2,000 each upward. His personal employes were bountifully remembered, his secretary receiving $100,000.

Duluth will note with interest that a former resident of this city, Howard James, a favorite nephew of Mr. Field, is left a fortune of $500,000. While every immediate relative is amply provided for, margin was left for a generous distribution of money through a long list of remoter relatives, friends and employes, and for several notable public bequests. Employes of Marshall Field & Co. who have been with the house twenty-five years or more will participate in the distribution of $100,000.

It is an honest fortune, amassed by shrewd business methods and farsightedness, and distributed in a manner that shows the discriminating generosity of its owner.

THE IRON INDUSTRY.

The fact that more iron has been mined and consumed in the past fifteen years than the world mined and used from 1890 back to the first discovery of the uses of the metal is leading to discussions of what is to come when the iron ore is all exhausted.

While the present generation need feel no alarm on this subject, our resources of iron are not inexhaustible, and the time is coming when the last iron mine will give up its last ton of iron ore. What then? The world has come to a use of iron and its products undreamed of in former years. Its use in building has been exhausting the supply very rapidly, and it is coming more and more into that use. In all probability the use of iron will increase in arithmetical progression, while the supplies diminish accordingly.

In a week we are now using more than our ancestors of the middle ages used in a century. Last year more iron was mined than in any previous year. While the time cannot be definitely fixed, there must be coming a day when the iron ore will be all gone, and the world will be put to the necessity of working over the old supplies or using something else.

In the iron country of Lake Superior no attempt has been made to definitely fix the time of the exhaustion of the supply. In fact the discovery of new deposits, which have not been so frequent of late, constantly upset any attempt to make such calculations. While it might be possible to set a limit on the supply of high grade ores, there are in Minnesota millions of tons of ores that cannot now be used because of their low grade. Undoubtedly, long before the high grade ores are exhausted, a method of treating these low grade ores will be found that is practicable. In the Gunflint region of Cook county there are great deposits of such ores, and no doubt the Cuyuna range, if it has nothing else, has plenty of this sort.

The exhaustion is far enough ahead so there is no need of present worry. So long as the supply of high grade ores is equal to the demand, there is no strong incentive to the invention of a process for treating the low grade ores. When these are all there are left, somebody will surely hit upon a method of making them useful.

SENATORIAL TRAITORS.

The announcement having been made that David Graham Phillips is to contribute articles to the Cosmopolitan magazine under the title of "The Treason of the Senate," a contemporary proceeds to chuckle over the ridiculousness of the caption, and to show that its intemperance destroys in advance any value the articles may have.

As to that, there is ample room for disagreement, and The Herald disagrees most heartily. It is time for calling spades spades, and traitors traitors. It is time for calling things by their right names, and for telling what is going on instead of speaking about what ought to be going on.

If the actions of certain United States senators, who appear to be a controlling influence in the senate, do not constitute treason of the basest sort, it is hard to give them a name. There are powerful members of the upper house of congress whose sole purpose in public life is to betray the people into the hands of their enemies, and who are sent to the senate and kept there for no other purpose.

When the people seek relief from railroad and trust oppressions, and senators who have been elected to serve the people and have taken an oath of loyalty conspire to defeat that effort, what is that but treason?

When senators elected to represent in congress their states and their country and their fellow citizens adhere to the cause of oppression, plunder and inequality of privilege, and sell their constituents to the railroads, the trusts and the organizations for political and social corruption, what is that but treason?

When every effort to equalize prosperity and to relieve public needs at the expense of those who have more than any man could have honestly is opposed, openly or secretly, by United States senators, what is that but treason?

There will come a day when common consent, unopposed by the faintest voice, will emblazon the names of these senators upon the roll of infamy in close company with that of Benedict Arnold. He sought to betray an army for a price. These modern traitors not only seek to betray a whole people and a great country, but succeed, and when the revolt that is coming throws open the doors that now shut in the proceedings of these senators and their masters, it will be seen that they, too, have done it for a price.

REGISTER SATURDAY.

The Tuesday registration was good. It exceeded the calculations by the politicians by half. It showed that the people of Duluth realize their duty to themselves and to each other, and that they are determined to run no risk of letting the city's affairs drift into the hands of politicians.

But there should be another heavy registration Saturday to make it sure, and to establish for the city the valuable credit of making a good showing for its citizenship.

If you have not already registered, by all means do it Saturday, which is positively your last chance.

If you are not registered you cannot vote.

When you fail to vote through carelessness or neglect, yours is the responsibility if things go wrong.

Affairs in the nation indicate that the people intend to resume the reins of government, which have been used by self-seeking politicians for their own profit and for the despoliation of the people.

Duluth should take a strong position in this fight, and it should begin now by registering all of its voters and casting a full vote next month.

Register Saturday.

See that your relatives and your friends and your employes and your business associates register Saturday.

Show the quality of your citizenship and your interest in public affairs, which are the affairs of every citizen and taxpayer of the community.

Register Saturday.

THEY ROB THEMSELVES.

At the recent convention of grain growers in Fargo there was a repetition of an ancient complaint of the farmer against the city handler of grain, and as it appeared possible to distort it into an attack upon the Duluth board of trade the Superior papers have taken it up and are making the most of it as a part of the Superior attempt to tear down the Duluth market in the hope that out of the crash some benefit may come their way.

The complaint is against the mixing houses, and farmers loudly proclaimed that they were being robbed because grain for which they had been paid on a basis of a low grade had been taken into private elevators and manipulated so as to command a better grade and better prices. The farmer sees in this a robbery of the farmer, but if there is any robbery, he robs himself through his failure to do the things the city handlers do to make the grain more valuable.

For instance, a farmer in Western Minnesota or North Dakota ships a car of grain to Duluth or Minneapolis. It is dirty, full of smut and other deteriorating matter, and as a consequence it is not only docked for the weight of the dirt contained in it, but it is given a low grade and sold on the open market accordingly. A mixing house buys it and takes it into its warehouse. There it is cleaned of dirt and other foreign substances and mixed with other grain, and the grade is perhaps raised several points. The mixing house then sells it at a higher price than it paid for it, and the farmer thinks he has been robbed.

As a matter of fact, the farmer that shipped that grain has robbed himself. He has paid freight to the market on a lot of dirt that he could have cleaned out himself with an ordinary fanning mill, and has lost further by letting the grain go out in a condition that ensures it a low grade. If somebody in the city has business sense enough to do what the farmer overlooked, and by cleaning and mixing the grain after he has purchased it and made it his own property increase its value, that is his privilege. If the farmer wants to send his grain to the market in a dirty condition, when by cleaning it he could make this profit himself, that is his privilege. But he should not complain of being robbed, nor should Superior papers that are familiar with these facts use his complaints to deceive the public which does not know them.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Republican politicians are pretty mad at Governor Johnson because he has failed to provide them with anything to make campaign talk about.

"Why should not the next state convention be held in Duluth?" asks the Minneapolis Telegram. Why should it be held anywhere else?

The Tuesday registration showed that the people of Duluth are awake and will handle their own affairs instead of farming them out to politicians. Another big registration Saturday will lay the foundation for a full expression of public sentiment.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Marshall Field, the world's merchant prince, who recently died, had great faith in the future of Duluth as a city," said P. S. Lerch of Chicago, at the Spalding. For some time past Mr. Lerch has been connected with the Field interests as traveling salesman.

"A few months before Mr. Field's death," he continued, "I heard Mr. Field express himself on this very subject. He came up to me in the Chicago house one day and, with the friendly manner he always manifested toward employes, asked concerning my health. I remarked that I was rather tired and worn out, having just come in from a long and hard trip on the road. Incidental to the talk I said that I had just arrived from Duluth.

"The merchant showed interest in the city right away and began asking about it. He said he had watched Duluth's growth, and that he was interested in properties in and about Duluth, and made the statement that the city is so situated that it is bound to become a great metropolis, a sort of second Chicago, so to speak. The opinion was given with an earnestness of manner that precluded all possibility of a doubt as to the sincerity of the man in speaking in the way he did.

"Mr. Field was the most public-spirited citizen of Chicago. He was always a willing contributor to any cause that would be of benefit to the city, and was also free with his money in a charitable way. He was among the foremost movers and largest contributor in the various public projects undertaken by the Commercial club. These include the acquirement of the land on which Fort Sheridan stands, the old Chicago manual training school, and the boys' home at Geneva, Ill.

"A story is told by the backers of the Chicago World's fair of Mr. Field's interest in the proposition and the substantial financial assistance given by him just prior to his departure for Europe in 1892. At that time the outlook for the fair was none too promising, and Mr. Field, like many others, was disposed to regard it as exceedingly doubtful.

"Mr. Field went to the vice-president of the fair organization, and after some talk in which he referred to the unpromising situation declared that Chicago could not afford to have the plan fail, and authorized the use of $500,000 of his money if necessary, to help the matter through. About $350,000 of that sum was used, but the remaining half was not touched."

"The department has been revising its methods so far as the sale of Indian lands is concerned," said A. F. Cornish of Calumet, Mich., at the St. Louis, "and it has required considerable work in Northern Michigan to ascertain what was best to do in this connection and what the timber and land was worth.

"A few years ago these lands were selling for from $200 to $300 for eighty acres, and there seemed to be such a demand for them that the commissioner made up his mind to look into the proposition to find out if the timber was not worth more. As a result, competent timber estimators were put on the reservation and a careful estimate of all the merchantable timber was made. Now sales are made which bring the Indians from $700 to $1,000 an eighty.

"The sale of the land was postponed until a correct estimate could be made, and some of the lumbermen put in a protest, but results show that the plan worked out most advantageously for the wards of the government. The government, you will remember, last year made a disposition of the timber on one of Minnesota's reservations and the stumpage price was about the largest ever received. The price obtained, of course, was in nearly all cases higher than this."

"The railroad surveys through different sections of Northern Minnesota are going to be of immense value to the men who have in charge the work of making the preliminary survey for a comprehensive system of drainage of the swamp lands," said W. O. Ross of Bemidji at the St. Louis. "If you will look at a railroad map of the state you will see that the lands through this region are crossed and recrossed by different lines of railroad, and then the map shows only a part of the surveys, for several have been made that have never been made any particular use of.

"There are two or three lines that were projected that were never built, and other roads, used for logging for the most part, that have been abandoned. All of these meant surveys, and the records of such surveys have been kept on file. The first step of the engineer in charge of the new work was to obtain the consent of the railroads to make use of these surveying records, and I understand that consent was given in all cases. The figures and information regarding the lay of the land would be about the same for the building of a railroad or the construction of a drainage ditch, so you see, where such railway surveys were obtainable, the state was saved thousands of dollars.

"Of particular value were the records in the offices of the Minnesota & International road, which extends north from Bemidji. One of the main ditches will probably be dug through practically the same region that the Minnesota & International runs, so the engineers in charge of the work knew just where they were at without doing any surveying on their own hook."

A Social Sunday at Portland.

Portland, Ore., New Age: Where is Brother Charles Sykes' religion that he so forgot himself as to start a fight in a saloon on Sunday night? For shame.

The Waiter's Tip.

Utica, N. Y., Press: A Brooklyn waiter who broke his leg by a fall on an icy sidewalk sued the city for $10,000 damages. The evidence showed that while he received only $5 per week as wages, he derived a weekly revenue of $54 from tips, so that his earnings averaged $60, which is a good deal more than that of men who are engaged in business and professional pursuits. The "tip" is the thing that puts the waiters on top.

THE WEATHER

The cold wave was switched off, and while Duluth wishes no hard luck to other places, she is content that this is so. This morning was much milder than yesterday, the thermometer remaining above zero, and it was cloudy and the air had the "feel" of snow. During the forenoon a few flakes came scattering down. The ice field which the cold weather developed in the lake did not have a chance to get thick enough to stick, but was broken up by the wind last night.

Last night's lowest temperature was 12 deg. above, and yesterday's highest was 14 deg. above. Partly cloudy weather and rising temperature are indicated for tonight and tomorrow, according to the weather man. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The disturbance over extreme Western Canada remained about stationary, but it caused a continuance of rain or snow over Washington and Oregon and a further rise in temperature throughout Mississippi valley states and the Northwest. A high pressure area has developed over Wyoming, causing a little colder weather in that state, South Dakota, Nebraska, Northern Kansas and Colorado. The lake region high pressure has moved its center to Eastern Ontario, attended by colder temperature in North Atlantic states. The easterly movement of these several pressure areas will likely cause partly cloudy weather in this locality tonight and Friday, with rising temperature and fresh southerly to easterly winds."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Roseberry on Blind Partisanship.

From his preface to a book on "Great Japan": It is the curse of our country that so many, especially in high places, should worship party as a god. * * * Its operation blights efficiency. It keeps out of employment a great mass of precious ability. It puts into place, not the fittest, but the most eligible, from the party point of view—that is, very often the worst. Efficiency implies the rule of the fittest, party means the rule of something else, not the unfittest, but of the few fit, the accidentally not unfit, and the glaringly unfit.

Work for Drainage League.

St. Peter Free Press: While the Duluth Herald agrees with the Free Press as to the advisability of preparing a comprehensive statement concerning the needs and advantages of draining the swamp land in the northern part of the state and have it circulated among the people, parties apparently having a speculative interest in the undertaking look at the proposition from a different point of view. They appear to have raised quite a lump of cash with which to pay the expenses of an emissary sent to the capital to work the drainage scheme directly and take the home support for granted as a matter of course. This may be all right as far as it goes, but it certainly falls short of covering the one point suggested by the Free Press. If the people of the state are expected to assist with large appropriations in draining land they should be given such itemized facts and figures as to enable them to get at a correct conclusion in the premises. The mere assertion that the draining of those swamps is a good thing may not be accepted as sufficient to get a large appropriation.

Duluth the Coming City.

Grand Rapids Independent: There is nothing that Duluth can do that will prevent it being one of the largest cities in the United States. Conditions there are similar to those that have made Chicago the second city in America, should make her the third metropolis. Duluth's territory is largely undeveloped, is seemingly indivertible, and is now right at the beginning of a great industrial expansion. The city of today is the city of commerce, and many cities, larger than she at the present time, though continuing to grow and increase in material welfare, are destined in time to be subordinated to the city at the Head of the Lakes.

Already the mines of Minnesota and the wheat fields of Western Canada are largely hers. The rich farming lands of our own state, and those of the Dakotas, will year after year pay more tribute to her splendid location. The stock men in Montana will find in Duluth their Chicago. In fact all on this side of the Rockies will be influenced by her. The railroads see it, and that is why so many new roads are pointing her way.

Sneak Method of Publicity.

Nebraska State Journal: A free "Washington letter" is the latest device for smuggling anti-rate regulation editorials into Nebraska. One paper only seems thus far to have fallen into the trap, and in this case the name of the author was printed at the bottom of the article. This name tallied so well with the name of a Nebraska railroad press bureau as to serve all the purposes of a bray in showing the nature of the animal under the lion's skin.

The Daily Task.

Like the star
That shines afar,
Without haste
And without rest,
Let each man wheel, with steady sway,
Round the task that rules the day,
And do his best.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Give a man a good daughter and the world can have the beauty.

A pretty girl is always pretty, but much more so when you are telling her so.

The grafters will have to stop stealing when there is nothing left to steal.

It's awful hard to get used to doing the good things your wife tells your children you are always doing.

You can do more to get a girl to listen to you by sending her a little bunch of flowers than you can by reading her all the sermons that ever were preached.

Boston Town.

Household Companion: In the seventh century a Roman Catholic monk of the name of Botolph, or Botholph (boathelp), founded a church in what is now called Lincolnshire, England. Gradually a town grew up around the church, and was called Botolphstown, which was afterward contracted to Botholphston, and then shortened to Botoston, and finally to Boston. From that town of Boston in Lincolnshire came to America the Rev. John Cotton, who gave the name to the New England capital.

Frank B. Smith writes from Jacksonville, Fla., that he arrived there safe and that the trip was much more tedious than he anticipated.

P. M. Graff, George B. Haycock, S. D. Allen and O. L. Johnson have become members of the board of trade.

E. E. Sherwin spent Sunday in Eau Claire visiting his parents.

George C. Greenwood has returned from a Michigan visit.

J. D. Porter left this morning for Amherst, N. S., on a visit.

Mayor Sutphin and Alderman H. C. Kendall returned from the Twin Cities yesterday. They interviewed the city fathers of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and a revolution in our city government may be looked for soon.

Peter Pastoret came down from Tower Saturday and returned today with a carload of cattle which he will take overland to Agate Bay and thence by the Duluth & Iron Range to Tower. The beeves are consigned to Smith & Grube, the pioneer butchers of Tower.

Miak Hoppa, one of Uncle Sam's letter carriers, surprised his friends today by quietly joining the benedictine order. The blushing bride's name was Michalina Iguasiak, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoppa are receiving congratulations.

John Nowak, a crippled peddler, complains that Albert and William Andzejeski and Michael and John Kwapin, made an assault with a knife upon him last night at the Polish settlement on Rice's Point and inflicted injuries sufficient to confine him to his bed. The quartet will be arrested.

Fred Puhler, formerly of Duluth, is now running a newspaper at Ada, Minn.

There are now handled at the Duluth postoffice ten bushels of letters daily, besides the papers and packages.

John Roy has arrived from Bay City, Mich., and will open a wholesale and retail tea house here.

William C. Sargent has been appointed receiver of the Duluth Iron company by Judge O. P. Stearns. He will enter upon the duties of the position at once.

The Duluth Snowshoe & Toboggan club now has eighty-nine members. James A. Boggs is captain of the marching club, Fred Reynolds is first lieutenant and S. W. Perry second lieutenant.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Walker Pilot: The good die young. That's one reason why so many old men hold political jobs.

Minneapolis Telegram: Honest Injun, is there a more shameful deed than that of the man or the corporation that reaches his hand into the pockets of his mother country and steals the pennies she is saving to pay the living expenses of herself and "family"?

Mankato Free Press: News that no changes will be made in the tariff schedules by this congress is received with a storm of applause in the ranks of the trust magnates.

International Falls Border Budget: The New York senate converted Depew from a degenerate statesman into a gentleman.

Rochester Post and Record: There is much talk of an early state Republican convention, but may be a good thing, but the Post and Record doubts it. A month or two is plenty long enough to keep the state in an uproar politically.

Hutchinson Leader: The Dolliver rate bill is called the administration measure—which seems rather hard to understand—as Senator Dolliver has never been known as a friend of rate reform—and the president is supposed to be uncompromising. Many would like to know more about this.

Fairmont Sentinel (Dem.): If Frank Eddy will come down into the Second district and run for congress, the Sentinel will agree to give him a most sincere and cordial support, regardless of what ticket he runs on. Frank is right on the tariff question; he is with Roosevelt in the railroad rebate fight; he is in favor of taking the government out of the hands of the corporations and restoring it to the people. We will support any man, regardless of his party label, who is sound on the main questions.

Virginia Virginian: The Eveleth Star heads a column "Editorial Jaggles." That's suggestive.

Cannon Falls Beacon (Rep.): John A. Johnson is an able politician in the best sense of ability; he is such a winner on the stump as to amount almost to a phenomenon. He is popular; why, he is so popular that he is popular in his own party, in his own state, which fact also marks him as a marvel.

Aitkin Republican: The Grand Rapids Independent last week opened the campaign for Mr. Bede with a half column leader. It characterized the Eighth district congressman as a remarkable man and the opposition as "looking very much like the chronic kicking of a lot of disgruntled politicians." The opposition is evidently hibernating in the vicinity of Grand Rapids and we may not get a chance to see what it looks like until after the spring thaws set in.

Brainerd Tribune: It has been proposed to chloroform all men who have reached the age of sixty. It has also been proposed that we chloroform incorrigible criminals. And now we are asked to chloroform incurable invalids. Let's chloroform a few reformers.

Anoka Herald: Be what you are. A new fraud is discovered every minute. You may be the next. Hedge and be natural.

Epigrams From the Bigfork.

A. M. Greeley in Ripple Compass: Prayer that merely consists of working the muscles of the mouth is about as effective as profanity.

The square deal is still weaker than the round dollar.

A stout heart proves fear to be a liar.

Co-operation will never be a success without harmony, and the trusts teach us that self-interest is the strongest stimulant for harmony.

A smart man does not let his keenness cut out his kindness.

The lust of money, the lure of politics and the liking for strong drink are the devil's triplets.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Chicago Tribune: Visitor (from Upcreek)—Don't you people get tired of the everlasting toot of the automobile horns?

Citiman—They don't say "toot" to me. They say "scoot."

New York Sun: Stern Parent—What time did that young man leave?

Pretty Daughter—Just when you got home from lodge, ma returned from her bridge party, and Bridget came back from her night out.

Philadelphia Ledger: "You may not remember me, Miss Summer," he said, "but I was engaged to you once."

"Indeed!" she replied coldly; "you have quite a memory for faces."

"No," he replied, glancing at her fair hand, "but I have for the rings I buy."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I believe you favor a more elastic currency, George?"

"Yes, I do."

"Well, I think you carry it too far."

"How so?"

"You seem to think that the $7 you gave me last week will stretch over the whole month."

Philadelphia Press: "So she married that awful Jack Rounder? Why, didn't she know that he had been blackballed by every club in town?"

"Yes, that's why she took him. She thought there'd be some chance of keeping him at home evenings."

New York Sun: Suitor—Is your sister Stella the eldest of the family?

Tommy—Nope; she was just born first.

Philadelphia Ledger: The audience was at the bated breath period.

Suddenly was heard an ominous crackling.

Incipient panic reared its horrible head.

At that instant the heroine advanced to the edge of the stage and glanced toward the gallery.

"If you'se fellows can't eat peanuts quietly," she said, "you'd better buy 'em already shucked."

Only a few words, but the press agent is authority for the statement that they did the business.

A Precious Possession.

Washington Post: A Paris physician furnishes a certificate that "Andy" Hamilton, the legislative agent of the life insurance syndicate, has "a grave affection of his nerve center." That's certainly serious. A man whose nerve center is capable of producing $235,000 in a couple of years cannot be too careful in protecting it from affection.

BRAVE GIRLS FIGHT A BULL

And Rescue Boy Who May Die From Injuries.

Connersville, Pa., Jan. 25.—Two young women, Misses Daisy and Leah Gilmore, who live on their father's farm in Bullskin township, near this place, battled with a maddened bull, and after a most desperate encounter succeeded in rescuing Thomas Means, a 14-year-old boy, who was being gored and trampled by the enraged beast.

The boy was walking through a field on his father's farm, when the bull attacked him with lowered head. The boy was tossed into the air, and then the bull struck him with his feet and gored him with his horns.

The two Gilmore girls were returning from church, and witnessed the boy's danger. Securing heavy clubs they attacked the animal, which left the boy and started after his new enemies. For almost half an hour the battle lasted, the girls holding their ground and finally succeeded in driving off the infuriated animal. One of his horns was broken off in the conflict, and he was otherwise injured. Both girls were seriously injured, although they kept on their feet during the battle, thereby escaping almost certain death.

Young Means was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried to the home of his father, Thomas Means, Sr. He is very badly injured, and it is feared cannot recover.

TO ARREST THIRTY-ONE ANARCHISTS.

Monongahela, Pa., Jan. 25.—Warrants were issued yesterday for the arrest of thirty-one foreigners, believed to be members of a band of anarchists whose headquarters at Bair, Pa., were raided by the police early Tuesday morning and a mass of literature threatening the life of Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania, Governor Pattison of Ohio, and other prominent men in different parts of the United States was found. According to the police, the members of the organization are scattered over a large area and it will take several days to serve the warrants. Secret service officers from Pittsburg and other points are here today to assist in the apprehension of the foreigners.

Several officers left for Finleyville, Pa., where they expect to arrest the secretary and one other member of the organization, both of whom are employed in a coal mine.

John Spiba, the alleged president of the band, and George Parli, who were taken into custody refused to discuss the affairs of the organization.

APPLICATION REFUSED.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—The state timber board had a special meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the application of Mr. Morrill of Duluth for an extension of his timber permit. Merrill has bought some timber from the state to be cut this spring. He finds that he cannot cut it all this winter and the law compels him to pay even for the timber that he does not cut. The board could not find any provision giving them authority to extend the permit and refused the application.

GAVE BOGUS CHECK.

Virginia Man Charged With Getting Money Under False Pretenses.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 25.—Charles Staus, one time steward of the Commercial club, was arrested yesterday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, upon complaint of Louis Song, a local restauranteur, who accused Staus of giving him a bogus check on the First National bank for $35. It was presented, Song alleges, in payment for a bill of about $3. The ex-steward received cash in exchange. When Song took the check to the bank he learned Staus had never had any funds deposited there, and at once swore out a warrant.

SHE WILL DIE

If Removed and County Officals Are in Dilemma.

Palmyville, Ohio, Jan. 25.—Will the Lake county commissioners commit murder by placing the new courthouse and jail upon the site of Miss Hattie Young's present home?

This is the curious question which is agitating the people here. The county commissioners threaten to condemn the woman's property and purchase it for a new jail. She and her friends claim that such action would result in her death, as she cannot be moved. She has been an invalid all her life. Her friends say the commissioners would be guilty of legal murder.

STAPLES A CANDIDATE

To Succeed Himself on the Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—C. F. Staples of the state railroad and warehouse commission, yesterday made the announcement that he would be a candidate for re-election. It has been rumored that he would be a candidate for governor, but all these mutterings are now quieted by his formal announcement that he will try again for his old office. He says he knows of no opposition to himself at present and that he is perfectly willing to trust to his record to secure him another term. Mr. Staples was elected in 1900 to the two-year term and re-elected in 1902 for a four-year term.

Legacy for Insane Man.

Barney Antis, who was committed to the state insane asylum at Fergus Falls from Mount Iron, this county, Dec. 1, 1899, is said to be heir to a small legacy bequeathed by a relative of Monroe county, Wis. Probate Judge Middlecoff has received notice of the legacy from the Monroe county authorities, and a guardian will be appointed for Antis, to take charge of the money. Antis is said to have a brother in the Wisconsin insane asylum.

Refuses to Keep Insane Woman.

Notice has been given Probate Judge Middlecoff by the superintendent of the Wisconsin insane asylum at Winnebago that Helma Swanson, an inmate of the institution, is a resident of this county, and will be delivered here within a few days. As soon as the woman arrives another investigation will be held to determine whether she is a resident of St. Louis county and should be taken care of at the county's expense.

BEQUEST IN FIELD WILL

Howard James, Former Duluthian, Gets Half Million Dollars.

Is Now Manager of J. J. Hill's Pacific Steamship Line.

The will of the late Marshall Field of Chicago is of interest all over the country, but it is made somewhat more interesting to Duluthians who have lived here ten years or more because of the fact that an old friend of every Duluthian who met him, is one of the beneficiaries. That is Howard James, formerly of Duluth. While here it will be remembered Mr. James was purchasing agent for the Great Northern road and the Northern Steamship company. At present he has the management of the Great Northern Steamship company, Mr. Hill's great line of Pacific steamers.

Mr. James was a nephew of the late multi-millionaire and was one of Mr. Field's favorites. In the will, which has just been made public, Mr. James is down as beneficiary to the extent of $500,000. Mr. James' mother, sister of Mr. Field, and her three children benefit to the extent of $500,000, which is held in trust for them by the Northern Trust company. Mr. James' two brothers also received benefits in the will, Philip getting $250,000 and Dwight $50,000.

Mr. James will be remembered by many Duluthians. He was one of the best fellows and at the same time one of the hardest workers among the business men of the city. He made good, as shown by his progress in Mr. Hill's employ.

OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

No Changes Are Made in Management of the Y. M. C. A.

No change was made in the management of the Y. M. C. A. at the annual meeting held last evening in the rooms on East Superior street.

Last year's officers were re-elected for another term and the association will continue under the same management for another year.

The call for branch buildings in the West end and West Duluth was recognized by the board, and it was understood by all that work would be commenced securing these buildings as soon as it was deemed compatible with the best interests of the work generally in the city.

The annual report of Secretary Bevis showed a gain in the membership of thirty-six for the year, the total now being 988. The boys' department has an additional membership of 371.

The report also reviewed the religious, physical, educational and social work done by the association during the year.

The building committee presented its report, which was adopted, and the board decided to have a number of copies of the statement printed for distribution.

During the coming year no radical changes will be made in the association work, but the board will adopt a conservative policy and direct all its efforts toward completing the building project.

IN PERSONAL DAMAGE.

Two Satisfactions and a Dismissal Filed In Federal Court.

In United States court, last term, verdicts for the plaintiff were given by juries in the following cases: That of Michael Senase against the Drake & Stratton company for $7,599; and that of Alden Anderson against the same defendants, for $6,500. Satisfactions of these judgments were filed in court today.

In the suit of Andrew Anderson against the Drake & Stratton company, a personal injury suit, which was on the calendar for this term and was continued when the term opened, a dismissal has been filed in United States court.

For Oppressed Jews.

A play based on the Spanish inquisition will be presented at the Bijou theater Sunday evening, Feb. 4, under the auspices of Jewish residents of Duluth to raise funds to aid the oppressed in Russia.

Among those who will take part are Samuel Kassmir, Samuel Kernor, Isadore Kernor, Harry Kernor, Sarah Kassmir, Eva Kassmir, Selma Kassmir and Esther Kassmir.

Rehearsals have been going on for some time and the amateur actors and actresses declare that already they are "up" in their parts and ready to give a creditable performance.

PILES CURED QUICKLY AT HOME

Why Suffer Agony Any Longer When You Can Get a Quick, Sure Cure for Your Piles by Simply Sending Your Name and Address?

Trial Package is Sent Absolutely Free, in Plain Wrapper to Everyone Who Writes.

Surgeons themselves consider a permanent cure of piles by a surgical operation as very doubtful, and resort to it only when the patient has become desperate from long continued pain and agony. But the operation itself is every bit as excruciating and nerve-racking as the disease. Besides, it is humiliating and expensive, and rarely a success.

The wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure makes an operation unnecessary. You cure yourself with perfect ease, in your own home, and for little expense.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives you instant relief. It immediately heals all sores and ulcers, reduces congestion and inflammation, and takes away all pain, itching and irritation. Just a little of the treatment is usually sufficient to give a permanent cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared in the form of suppositories so they can be applied directly to the parts without inconvenience, or interrupting your work in any way.

We are sending a trial treatment free of charge to every one who sends name and address. We do this to prove what we say about this wonderful remedy is true.

After you have tried the sample treatment, and you are satisfied, you can get a full regular-sized treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents. If he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send you the treatment at once, by mail, in plain sealed package.

Send your name and address at once for a trial of this marvelous quick, sure cure. Address Pyramid Drug Co., 10469 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

GET READY FOR CONVENTION

Duluth Retail Grocers' Association Selects Twenty Delegates.

At a meeting held last evening in Axa hall, the Duluth Retail Grocers' association elected twenty delegates to attend the annual convention of the State Grocers' association at Rochester, Minn., Feb. 13, 14 and 15. The delegates selected are Andrew Borgen, Henry Folz, J. W. Lent, Clarence Campbell, M. R. Bush, P. A. Sjoselius, O. Olson, Martin Rustad, C. Nelson, R. Dinham, Charles Franson, J. E. Lawrence, Robert Leuck, C. S. Raymond, R. H. Rathbun, D. D. Rush, T. W. Walker, H. H. Oppel, J. E. Roos and F. W. Erickson.

Simon Clark, president of the state association, and George H. Ebert, president of the local association and a director of the state association, will accompany the delegation to Rochester.

The Duluth grocers will work for the national pure food law and endeavor to land the next state convention for Duluth. Simon Clark and G. H. Schulenberg, the latter of whom is vice president of the local association, are attending the national convention of grocers at Niagara Falls, N. Y., which closes today.

REVIVAL SERMON.

Dr. Rice Argues on the Forgiveness of Sins.

At the special revival services last evening at the First M. E. church, the sermon was one of great power. Dr. Rice preached from John i, 9: "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The preacher's words in part were as follows:

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. We have a very clear statement here. This is some more of the essential doctrine of our religion, so it comes in clearest form. No room for argument here. We have struck the bed-rock of Christian character. It is so essential as to be axiomatic to every one's experience. Men may try to argue it down, but it will not down. Confession, forgiveness, cleansing, these three must enter into the character of satisfaction. In some form or other all the teachings of the scripture center about these things. They are the end and the aim of all the wonderful work of our God for us. The purpose of His word, His love, His sacrifice, His loving call, are all bound up here. Here stands out the great effort of God for us. He cares for and labors for the full salvation of all men. God is not trying to accomplish the destruction of anybody. He is trying with all the powers He can command to save men. The chief fact about you, my unsaved friend, is your future. Your past? Oh how it rises now a mountain of mistake. Your present! What a tangled mass of blunders and sorrows it is. These things are each so plain and condemning to you that they seem to monopolize your whole thought and soul. But God stoops to you now and says: 'Hear me! your past and your today are not the great thing about you. Your future is the great thing. As long as you have today, if you will hear my voice and harden not your heart I can work within you so that your future shall be made the adamant of my kingdom. Let me tell you what to do with today. Instead of making it a time of careless flinging away of all your best powers; instead of even making it a time of sorrowing and tears of imperative regret, act positively, confess your sins and I'll forgive and cleanse.' Now that is down to a working basis.

"The great unchangeable first step that must be taken when you start out to seek the satisfaction of a Christian experience is confession. This is the result of the last analysis of divine interest, and there is no use in any man trying to change it. This is a real genuine price to pay and some here are hoping to succeed in getting the result without paying the price. Confession of the mouth and contrition of the heart go together and whenever you will be willing to meet that fairly and squarely, then you shall be saved."

FORESTERS' RALLY

Present Mrs. Oppel and H. H. Oppel With Valuable Gifts.

The Independent Order of Foresters held a rally at Elks' hall last evening, at which nearly all of the members of the order and the companion courts were present, there being in all fully 200 gathered there. The event was a sort of reunion and jollification and was one of the heartiest affairs of the kind ever experienced in Duluth.

The members carried out the idea of fraternity in most pleasurable style and the event was made all the more delightful by presentations made to two of the hardest workers the order has had in the city, to show appreciation and gratitude for the services rendered. Mrs. Mary A. Oppel and H. H. Oppel were the recipients of these gifts.

Mrs. Oppel has served for five years as chief ranger of Companion Court, Pride of Duluth, and is now past chief ranger of the court. She has worked hard for the benefit of the court and her success has been marked. Last night the members of the court presented her with a handsome diamond ring and a parlor chair. H. H. Oppel was similarly remembered by Court Duluth, No. 724, for the many services he has rendered the court, presenting him with a handsome diamond ring. Frank Crassweller made the presentation speeches; and other speeches, all of which carried the spirit of the evening and were so received, were made by State Senator George R. Laybourn, Mrs. Oppel and Mr. Crouthers of Superior.

Dancing followed and was indulged in until midnight.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

METROPOLITAN—Baltimore Beauties.

COMING ATTRACTION.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, Joseph Santley in "A Runaway Boy."

WEAR FINE COSTUMES.

The costumes worn by the Baltimore Beauties at the Metropolitan this week are creating considerable favorable comment among the patrons of the house. The elaborate Highland suits worn by members of the chorus in the finale of the first burlesque cost a small fortune and they all come from Bloodgood's famous establishment in New York.

The Beauties will not conclude their engagement at the "Met" until Saturday and will give matinees Friday and Saturday. The performance this evening will be for ladies as well as gentlemen, and souvenirs will be given away. No smoking will be permitted.

JOSEPH SANTLEY.

Young Joseph Santley, one of the best known and most popular boy actors in this country, is this season starring under the management of Max H. Meyers in a new play by the well-known playwright, Hal Reid, which was especially written for him. The name of the new melodrama which is in four acts is "A Runaway Boy." He comes to the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, supported by a company said to be a strong one.

Will Operate Meadow Mine.

George A. St. Claire of this city has been assigned the lease to the Meadow mine, near Biwabik, owned by the Meadow Mining company. He will start operations for taking out the ore. The lease carries a royalty of 40 cents per ton, with a minimum annual output of 40,000 tons. The property is located in the north half of the northwest quarter, and the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter, and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 3-58-15.

Pneumonia and consumption are baffling the skill of the medical profession. Doctors of the entire world are engaged in a determined warfare against these merciless enemies of the human race, but so long as people neglect colds and coughs, pneumonia and consumption will prevail.

Prevention, then, does not lie with the doctors, but with the people themselves.

Don't Trifle With Colds.

Every case of pneumonia and consumption was at first only a simple cold or cough. Inattention to the latter developed the former. Take warning then! Do not neglect your cold no matter how trifling it may be! Get a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup at once! It is the one, positive, infallible remedy for all colds and coughs.

Read how this celebrated remedy is praised by all who use it. Every testimonial published is absolutely genuine.

REV. DR. JOHN W. BULL, Discoverer of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup

Mr. Frank Belt, Rochester, Ind., writes: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is certainly the best remedy to cure cold and cough that has ever come to my notice. When a member of the family is taken with a throat or lung affection, it is used and the patient is invariably rewarded with a cure. It gives entire satisfaction and has been used for many years in my family. If people instead of expecting a cold and cough to wear off, would use and stop trifling with other remedies, there would be less pneumonia and consumption for the doctors to battle with. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is cheerfully recommended by me."

DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

Dr. John W. Bull, a skillful specialist in throat and lung diseases, foresaw and foretold an epidemic of pneumonia and consumption in the twentieth century. Investigation had proven that colds and coughs were the fruitful cause of these ailments, and this led to the discovery of a prescription which would effect an absolute cure of colds and coughs. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the result of Dr. Bull's labors, and many thousands today ascribe their good health and their long lives to its timely use. It is a certain and effective cure for all the conditions that lead to pneumonia and consumption.

BABCOCK DENIES HOLD UP CHARGE

Orders Attorney to Sue Collier's for Printing Crosby Story.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Representative Babcock said last night that he had instructed his attorney to bring suit at once for libel against the Collier's Weekly for publishing in the current number a statement by Oscar Terry Crosby that he had "held up" Oscar Terry Crosby of the Elkins-Widener-Dolan syndicate for $5,000 for a contribution to the Republican congressional campaign committee.

The article in Collier's Weekly is headed "An incident of high politics showing how a corporation was brought to realize its duty to promote the public welfare." Henry Needham quotes an extract from the book, "Libel and Slander," of Oscar Terry Crosby, the African explorer and electrical engineer, and charges Representative Babcock with having demanded a $9,000 contribution to the Republican railway bill then pending and in which Mr. Crosby was interested. The charge is made in an interview with Crosby as reported by Needham. The extract in part is:

"A bill giving the needed authority was promptly reported to the senate by the committee on the District of Columbia. Despite that unanimous report the bill was held up for many weeks in the senate. Every time it came up Pettigrew of South Dakota rose and objected. Finally he reached the conclusion that absolutely nothing was to be gained by further obstruction and he allowed the bill to pass which it did without a negative vote. That ended the matter in the senate. The bill in question received a unanimous vote in the committee on District of Columbia of the house, but strange to say it was not reported by the chairman, Mr. Babcock of Wisconsin. It was about five days before the adjournment of congress and the bill was still in the chairman's pocket."

Then Mr. Crosby is quoted as saying that Babcock asked him for the $5,000 contribution.

"I have never received one penny from Mr. Crosby or his syndicate, either for myself or for the Republican congressional committee," said Mr. Babcock. "The published statement to anyone at all familiar with legislation shows on its face its falsity. I am tired of having charges made that I sandbagged corporations and others into making contributions to the congressional committee of which I am chairman. It has got to stop and after conference with friends I have decided to begin action against the Collier company."

Science in Selecting Proper Foods

People Are Unhealthy, Because They Do Not Eat the Right Food.

In these days of adulterated foods and food products such a food as is known to be pure and wholesome is indeed welcome. We have heard of many breakfast foods and cereal products—some broadly advertised as whole products, others as cure-alls for every disease known to man. No doubt they are all good and possessed of some merit, but most of them are manufactured with some foreign sweetening agent to make them palatable. Among all the breakfast and cereal foods offered the public today, we believe we are warranted in saying that Malta-Vita is the only food that is simply and wholly pure grain product and nothing else, except a little salt. Malta-Vita as it comes to you from the factory is all of the wheat. It has been thoroughly cleaned, steamed to gelatinize the starch, then added to it is barley malt made from selected barley—this, acting upon the starch, turns it into maltose or malt sugar, pronounced by physicians and food experts the finest, purest, most healthful sweetening agent known. Then the grain of wheat is rolled out flat into a thin wafer flake and baked in the ovens. It comes to you fresh and pure and sweet—absolutely nothing but a grain product prepared in the cleanest and most wholesome way and turned into the most delicious whole wheat food that can be found. Malta-Vita is for sale by nearly all grocers. It costs but 10 cents a package for the same big package for which you used to pay fifteen cents.

CHARGES REVIVED AGAINST PEIRCE

Old Controversy Against Probable Minister to Norway is Reopened.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Since the announcement of the president's intention to appoint Herbert H. D. Peirce first minister to Norway, an old controversy between himself and Judge Embrey of Kentucky, over fees for prosecutions of a claim against the Russian government, growing out of a seizure of a sealing vessel, has been revived in the shape of charges by the gentleman named seat to the president through Senator Foraker and transmitted to the state department for report.

Embrey states that Peirce, while secretary of legation at St. Petersburg, offered to assist him in the prosecution of the claim against the Russian government. The claim was paid, the award amounting to $55,000. Peirce put in a claim for one-third of the award, but he and Embrey could not agree to settle on that basis, Peirce finally getting out an injunction against the secretary of the treasury, forbidding the payment of the award to Embrey. The matter was finally adjusted out of court.

An investigation by state department officials showed that the charges of official misconduct on Peirce's part are without foundation. His connection with the case was with the full approval of Mr. Hay, then secretary, and that approval is a part of the department records.

Other charges have to do with the purchase of furniture for the rooms in which the Russo-Japanese peace envoys met at Portsmouth. At the department it was said that these charges were without the slightest foundation.

The dismissal of these charges leads to the inference that when the proper time comes Mr. Peirce will be appointed minister to Norway, if he cares to take it. The house committee of foreign affairs is now framing the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill and indications are that while the new office of minister to Norway will be created, the salary recommended by the secretary of state may be cut to $7,500. No appointment will be made until the appropriation bill becomes a law, which will not be for a month or more.

THE VASSAR GIRL HAD TO DUCK OUT

Gathered in Coin by Posing as Senator's Daughter.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 25.—Katharine Gray, former Vassar girl, said to be a smooth swindler by the Pittsburg police, has been ordered from Pittsburg by the police department and threatened with imprisonment if she returned. Some weeks ago she created a sensation by announcing that she was the only daughter of former United States Senator Asbury Gray, of Virginia, and that she was just coming into his fortune of $300,000. She employed the best attorneys and in a week had, it is said, got from several well-known business men large amounts of money. By this time she was found to be an impostor, and she disappeared after giving a bad check to her attorney.

Monday afternoon Miss Gray was placed under arrest. Since her disappearance from the home of E. H. Bausman, where she had worked as a kitchen girl, she has been flying high. Lawrence Faust caused her arrest on the charge of false pretenses. Faust was a coachman who posed as a millionaire and wrote letters to Miss Gray offering to marry her. The Vassar girl quickly got all Faust had—$60—and then told him to go. In court she made no defense until Faust the coachman, was through. Then she said:

"I gave you back $13, didn't I?"

"Yes," he admitted.

"And I gave you my note for 30 days for the balance, didn't I?" asked Miss Gray.

"Yes."

"Then, may it please your honor, I have discharged my obligation to this person and I demand to be discharged," said Miss Gray, rising like a queen.

"I guess that's right," said the alderman. Then Inspector Bailey ordered her out of town, and she promised to go.

WIFE ORDERED FROM THE HOME

After Trying to Poison Husband to Get Life Insurance.

Centerville, Miss., Jan. 25.—This town is in the throes of a first-class social sensation, growing out of the arrest Sunday of Mrs. William C. Stuart at the little town of Gloster, eight miles distant, charged with having poisoned her husband for the alleged purpose of trying to collect $10,000 life insurance. The affidavit was filed Saturday by Mayor Roberts of Centerville. The prisoner was brought here, and gave bond for her appearance before the grand jury.

William Clark Stuart is a prominent cotton farmer and is now recovering from a critical illness alleged to be due to a big dose of morphine.

Mrs. Stuart is said to have stated that her husband did not desire a physician and would not send for one, but a niece, Mrs. Stuart summoned his wife, charged her with trying to make away with him and ordered her from his home. He stated that he had never been ill until the poisoning spells attacked him.

July 6, 1904, he married in Gloster Mrs. Cadista Ford, a widow. Mrs. Ford had about $10,000. Last summer she told Stuart her life had been insured for $5,000 in his favor. Later along he was taken ill, but recovered, whereupon, it is alleged, she placed a $10,000 policy on his life. Last October Stuart became ill, and noticed that his coffee was very bitter. Nov. 25 he was again taken ill.

His physicians are of the opinion that systematic efforts to poison him have been made. Mrs. Stuart comes of a good family in Wilkinson county and was a sister of Judge Moise, circuit judge of that district.

BEDE MAKES WITTY TALK

In the House Against Rule on Joint Statehood Bill.

Called to Order by Speaker for Reference to Senators.

Washington, Jan. 25.—One of the features of the debate in the house yesterday, on the rule restricting debate in the statehood bill and preventing its amendment, was a witty speech by Congressman J. Adam Bede, who was one of the Republican insurgents opposed to the rule. When the smoke of the liveliest legislative battle of the session had cleared up yesterday, Speaker Cannon and his organization were in complete control, and the joint statehood plan of the administration had been adopted.

Forty-three Republican "insurgents" went down to defeat, having voted vainly with the Democrats to gain control of the rule, the terms of which are to govern the statehood bill in its passage through the house.

Previous to the vote the debate on the rule had proceeded under high tension. The speeches were short, but the words uttered were hot and full of sting.

Appealing for the rights of people of the great state of New York, Mr. Payne (N. Y.) protested against the equal representation in the senate from the territories. "Should the providence of God," he said, "inflict the country with Democratic rule, we should have such legislation."

J. Adam Bede (Minn.), who followed, began: "If we have Democratic rule it won't be the proddence of God; it will be the mistakes of Republican leaders. (Laughter). "Why," he continued, after order had been secured, "the 'payne' speaks about the New York senators; most people are trying to forget them.

"It was several minutse after this statement before the vigorous efforts of Speaker Cannon availed against the shouts, laughter and applause.

"The gentleman from Minnesota," warned the speaker, "does know, or ought to know, that his remark is against the rule of the house and against all parliamentary usage."

The veterans, Payne, Dalzell and Grosvenor, upheld the organization. Pitted against them were the leaders of the insurgents, Babcock, Mondel and Jones of Washington. Mr. Tawney, one of the erstwhile insurgents, arose and announced his acquiescence in the will of the organization and Mark Smith, the veteran delegate from Arizona, just as sorrowfully interpreted this action as the "most unkind thrust of all."

"I only intended my reference in the kindliest spirit," remarked Mr. Bede, who proceeded. He was tired, he said, of the treatment accorded the West, generally designated the "wild and wooly West." It remainded him of the daughter of an old Kentucky colonel, who said she was 27 years old before she knew that "Dam-Yankee" was not one word. "It was usual," he said, "when they want to whip us into line to use the name of the 'the great president' but when the president is opposed to some measure the East wants, he is the 'broncho statesman.'" "Why," continued Mr. Bede, "you say they have not got enough 'Folks,' whoever heard of a senator representing 'Folks.'" (laughter.)

Reverting to the early days in New England, Mr. Bede convulsed the house again by declaring that the Pilgrim fathers would not have landed there had they not been sea sick.

Mr. Tawney took the floor and briefly explained that, in bowing to the leaders of the house in supporting the rule, he did so against his own judgment.

Mr. Dalzell demanded a roll on ordering the previous question on the adoption of the rule. The rule was adopted, the vote being 192 yeas, 165 nays. The following Republicans voted with the Democrats on the test vote ordering the previous question on the rule:

Adams (Wis.), Babcock (Wis.), Bede, Beidler, Bonynge, Brooks (Col.), Brown, Calderhead, Cushman, Darragh, Davidson, Esch, French, Fulkerson, Gillett (Cal.), Goebel, Grimm, Hayes, Hermann, Howell (Utah), Humphrey (Wash.), Jones (Wash.), Kennedy (Ohio), Knowland, Loud, McCreary (Penn.), McKinley (Cal.), McLachan, McMorran, Marshall, Miner, Mondell, Mudd, Murphy, Needham, Otjen, Reeder, Slemp, Smith (Cal.), Steenerson, Thomas (Ohio), Wachter.

LAWSON TRANSFER NOT RECOGNIZED

Court Sets Aside Order of Boston Stock Exchange.

Boston, Jan. 25.—A decision which prevents Thomas W. Lawson and A. C. Burrage of Boston disposing of Tri-Mountain stock by transfer has been given and effectually checks a flank movement inaugurated by them a year ago against a Boston syndicate which purchased the controlling interest in the property and merged it with the Copper Range.

The decision, which is considered of great importance by stock operators, was rendered by Judge Bradley of the Massachusetts supreme judicial court, upon the demurrer of Burrage and other defendants, in the suit brought by William A. Paine, in which the contention of the plaintiff that he is entitled to sue for relief in equity is sustained.

According to Judge Bradley, William A. Paine, who is one of the prominent owners of valuable copper mining interests in the upper peninsula of Michigan, must amend his bill in several particulars within the next fourteen days.

When the Tri-Mountain mine was absorbed by the Copper Range company, a certain amount of stock in the Tri-Mountain was taken over and placed in trust, with the understanding that it was not to be disposed of for a certain number of years. Subsequently Burrage and Lawson tried to effect the transfer of the securities, but when they were presented at the offices of the company, transfer was refused.

An appeal was taken to the Boston stock exchange for a ruling, and the transfer of the stock was ordered, but Mr. Paine took the case into the courts, and his appeal has been sustained, entitling him to sue for relief in equity, which will force Lawson and his associates into the open market to cover their short sale of the securities.

CONSTRUCTION PROGRESSING

Work to Begin on Dock Superstructure Next Week.

The superstructure work on the Northern Coal company's new dock on Connor's Point is expected to begin next week. The piling is practically all in and the material for the superstructure is being placed at the dock site. The contract calls for a completed dock by May 1, but it is not expected that it will be finished before the middle of May, or that it will begin receiving coal before July 1. Fifty men are now employed, but as fast as it is possible to use them the force will be increased until about 200 men will be employed. The contract for the machinery has been awarded to a Toledo, O., concern and it will be installed as fast as the superstructure construction will permit. The dock is just west of the Hanna dock. Its site is 1,100 feet by 774 feet. Only about half the contemplated improvement is to be made at the present time, the dock to be 1,100 long by 400 feet wide. It will have a capacity for 300,000 tons and will cost about $350,000.

Duluth Poultry Wins Prizes.

Duluth chicken fanciers, comprising Municipal Judge W. L. Windom, and Messrs. Edmunds and Nelson, were among the prize winners at the Chicago poultry show yesterday. Judge Windom entered cock, cockerel, hen and pullet and won first premium for cock and cockerel and second premium on pullets.

Mr. Edmunds secured third premium and the special in the cock class, and Mr. Nelson won fifth premium in the hen class. The showing of local fanciers is considered gratifying in view of the large number of exhibits and close competition.

REPORT OF ENGINEER

T. F. McGilvray Completes Annual Statement of His Department.

Recommendations Previously Made to Council Are Repeated.

No new recommendations are contained in the annual report of the city engineer, which was completed yesterday afternoon.

In last year's report he recommended that Brewery creek be enclosed, in order to remedy the unsanitary conditions which now exist. No action was taken by the council, beyond calling for an estimate of the cost, and the recommendation is repeated in this year's report.

During the year, the question of widening Michigan street at the Point of Rocks, has been repeatedly before the council, and attention is called to the matter in the engineer's report. No recommendations are made regarding the best method, but the council already has three different plans under consideration.

The third chief recommendation made by the city engineer, is in regard to replacing the old wooden bridges with steel structures. The board of public works, in its annual report published last week called attention to the same problem, and outlined a plan whereby the old wooden structures could be gradually replaced by second-hand steel bridges, which could be secured from a local firm at a nominal cost. The board and the city engineer both urge the council to take some action, as the expense of maintaining the old wooden bridges is a large and growing item.

Estimates for work amounting to $2,723,484.10 were prepared by the department during the year. This was two and one-half times the amount called for during the previous year, and the work of the department was thus more than doubled. The amount of actual work superintended during the year, was $939,000.

Mr. McGilvray calls attention to the fact that for the first time since 1891, cedar blocks were laid in the city, from Superior to Second street on Fifth avenue west. He states that the pavement is a good one for the downtown avenues, being noiseless, clean, and economical. Provided it has a good foundation, the engineer claims it is no more expensive than sandstone, if relaid every seven or eight years.

The ferry bridge is briefly touched upon in the report, but the condition of affairs is already well known. Mr. McGilvray calls attention to the fact that the city is protected, as only one-third of the contract price has been paid, and the rest will be withheld until the bridge is satisfactory. He points out that excellent work was done on the truss, as it withstood a wind velocity of seventy-two miles per hour.

HUMANE SOCIETY

Prevents Exhibition of Dogs as Victims of Adulterated Food.

Philadelphia, Penn., Jan. 25.—Because the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals didn't think them strong enough, Maud, the mongrel; Barney, the Great Dane, and Prince, the Newfoundland, the canine horrible examples of the International Stewards' association, did not go on the stage in the opening session of the Pure and Impure Food Exhibition.

Ever since they reached Philadelphia the dogs, on the orders of the S. P. C. A., have been fed on pure food, but they still suffer too much from melancholia, dyspepsia and incipient nervous prostration to go out before the people and show what the food adulterates do to the eaters.

The S. P. C. A. has decided that experiments bring the animals to undue cruelty and may stop the proposed exhibition.

LOVED THE ORIENT,

Where She Spent Many Years With Her Son.

Versailles, Ky., Jan. 25.—Mrs. Mary E. Greathouse, the mother of the late General Clarence R. Greathouse, former editor of the San Francisco Examiner, consul general to Japan, and at the time of his death prime minister and confidential advisor to the King of Korea, fell in her room here and fractured her hip. On account of her age, 87 years, it is feared she will not recover.

Mrs. Greathouse has been a very active woman and has had a remarkable experience, making a trip around the world and establishing a home in an Oriental country when she was nearly 70 years old. When her son, General Greathouse, was appointed United States consul to Yokahama, Japan, Mrs. Greathouse broke away from home ties in America and went to Japan to preside over the household of her son, who was a bachelor. When General Greathouse accepted the office of advisor to the King of Korea his aged mother went with him to Seoul, where, by virtue of her son's position, she enjoyed exceptional privileges and was accorded high consideration at the Oriental court. She was on terms of close intimacy with the Korean queen, who was assassinated a few years ago. When General Greathouse died in the fall of 1899 the King of Korea delegated one of the high officials of his court to escort Mrs. Greathouse on her long journey to Kentucky, and to see that she had every attention and comfort. Two years ago Fuen Pak, of Seoul, the son of a Korean courtier, came to Versailles to visit Mrs. Greathouse and spent several weeks here. Mrs. Greathouse greatly enjoyed her life in the Orient, and since her return to Kentucky has frequently spoken of being "homesick" for Seoul.

Will Hold Big Auction.

Barrett & Zimmerman, proprietors of the big Midway horse market at St. Paul, are getting ready for their annual horse auction which will be held at the firm's mammoth stables, Feb. 7. Consignments of horses are being received direct from the country and the event promises to be the largest auction of the kind ever held in the Northwest. The consignments include all classes, from fancy drivers to horses suitable for farming and heavy logging work. The sale will be held every Wednesday following Feb. 7.

BRAKEMAN KILLED.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 25.—Charles Roxbrough, a brakeman in the employ of the Minnesota & North Wisconsin railway, while engaged in shunting cars near here yesterday slipped and fell, the wheels passing over his right leg from the effects of which he died soon after. His body was brought to Cloquet to await word from relatives as to its disposition. Roxbrough had been with the company only a week.

A LASTING EFFECT

This Evidence Should Prove Every Claim Made for Doan's Kidney Pills in Duluth.

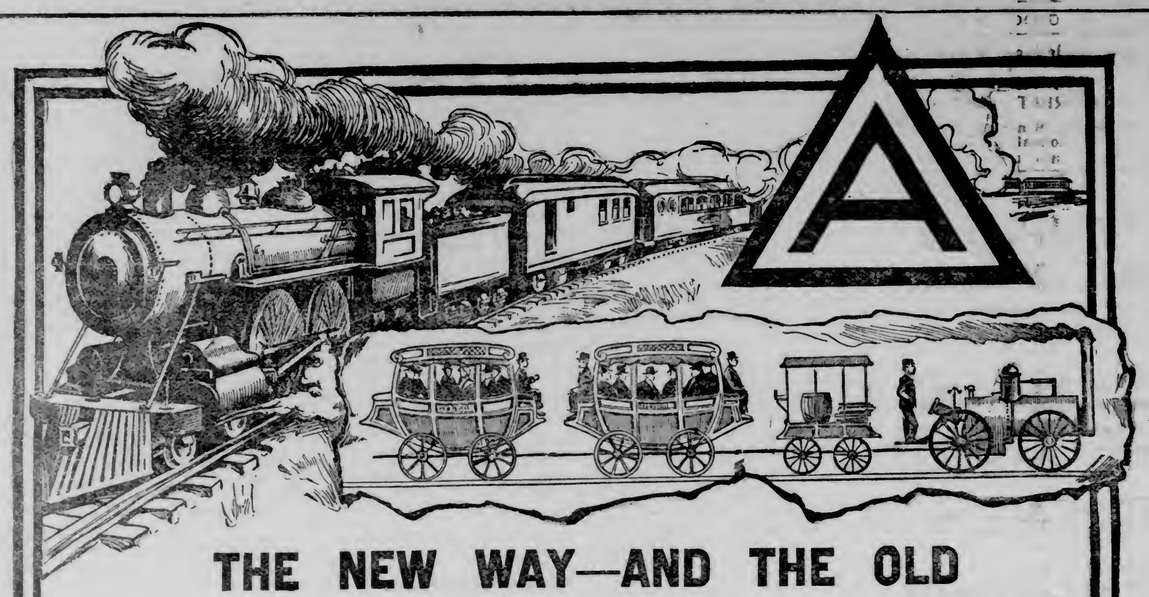

Relief from the pains and aches of a bad back is always welcome to every backache sufferer; but to cure a lame, weak or aching back is what's wanted. Cure it so it will stay cured. It can be done. Here's the strongest evidence to prove it:

H. G. Hibke, clerk in the Northern Pacific railroad freight house, and living at Hunter's Park, Duluth, Minn., says: "In a testimonial given by me in 1898, which has been published often in the Duluth papers, I told how Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of a severe attack of kidney complaint, from which I had suffered for a long time. I believe that it was brought on in the first place by exposure to all kinds of weather and the jarring of driving. Backache set in, and the pains and aches made stooping and lifting very painful. Whenever I took cold it settled in my back, and aggravated the trouble. The kidney secretions became discolored, irregular, and contained a sediment. I also had frequent attacks of backache. However, as I have emphatically declared and will always affirm, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of all these conditions, and today not a symptom of my former trouble remains."

THE NEW WAY—AND THE OLD

A revolution in cigar production as great as the evolution in railway transportation from the days of Stephenson's first locomotive to the Twentieth Century Limited!

The American Cigar Company has perfected at a cost of millions of dollars a scientific and heretofore unknown method of thoroughly fermenting and truly blending the tobacco leaf.

The fermenting process alone would produce from the same tobacco a cigar that you would recognize as twice as good. It removes every last lingering trace of the rawness that spoils the aroma, the harshness that burns the tongue and the bitterness that ruins the flavor.

The new blending process thoroughly combines the aromatic qualities of the various tobaccos required for each cigar before they go to the cigar-maker's table. The ordinary factory-operation, miscalled "blending," is only a mixing by the cigar-maker of tobacco taken from two or three small piles of cured leaf—a mixing which results in nothing in the world but a raw "tobacco sandwich."

The American Cigar Company's system provides not only for making better cigars but for keeping them good. After careful inspection at the factories, the finished cigars are stored in great "humidors" under the ideal Cuban climatic conditions, where their quality is constantly improving like rare old wine, till they are ready to go to the dealer. And when these thoroughly-seasoned cigars are ready to be shipped, not only are they boxed and sealed in the usual way, but the boxes are double-sealed, a tough water-proof parchment wrapper with the "Triangle A" seal in red on each end.

One of the best examples of this new way of producing cigars is the

"ANNA HELD" CIGAR

5 Cents

The Anna Held cigar is rolled from blended tobaccos selected according to a formula that, if made by any other system, would make the same cigar cost 10 cents instead of five.

It is a smooth, even-burning cigar of faultless workmanship and of delightful and distinctive flavor—regularly smoked by thousands of men who know what they like and why they like it.

WILL URGE NEW HARBOR

Vessel Interests Are Planning for an Active Campaign.

They Desire Refuge Harbor at Lower End Portage Canal.

Since the United States engineering department has reported against the advisability of constructing a harbor of refuge near Keweenaw Point, in Lake Superior, but recognized the desirability and importance of a harbor of refuge at the lower end of the Portage canal, similar to the harbor now furnished by Lily Pond, at the upper end of the canal, vessel interests are said to be getting ready to begin an active campaign for congressional action that will authorize such a harbor.

The statistical report, showing the commerce through the Portage canals during 1905, issued a few days ago by Maj. Charles L. Potter, United States engineer in charge of this district, gives the valuation of cargoes that passed through both ways as $79,869,500, exclusive of the logs that were towed through, and which were valued at $128,609.

It is expected that with the completion of the new draw bridge between Hancock and Houghton, with draw spans of 108 and 118 feet respectively, the Portage canals will be used more each year. Loaded vessels, 500 feet in length, and drawing nineteen feet, have passed through the canals this past season, and with the larger draws, the presumption is that many more of the largest boats will take advantage of the short cut across the point in the future, rather than the trip around it.

The commerce on Lake Superior is shown to be the heaviest during July and August, yet it is noted that there is more freight going through the canals in October and November, or in the stormy season, than at any other time. This is said to clearly show the extent to which the canals are used for refuge.

Maj. Potter has in various reports to the chief of engineers, strongly recommended a harbor of refuge at the lower end of the Portage canal as a necessity. He has pointed out that the harbor at the upper end, or the Lilly Pond, as it is termed, is overcrowded at times, as vessels bound both ways have to tie up there, and those downbound cannot get any idea of the weather to the eastward of Keweenaw Point, which is often quite different from what it is to the westward. Maj. Potter says that with a harbor of refuge at the lower end the waterway would be in fine condition, and would accommodate almost any vessel on the lake, and that undoubtedly many more vessels would use the canal.

Maj. Potter's official report to Brig. Gen. A. Mackenzie, chief of engineers, which has been endorsed by Lieut. Col. W. H. Bixby, engineer for the Northwest division, and by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, is as follows:

"Another necessity has arisen, however, which should be provided for by congress. The excellent harbor of refuge, known as the Lily Pond, near the upper end of the canal, has been a great relief to vessels in storms. It is formed by widening the canal to a width of 600 feet, and building a substantial revetment, with mooring posts, for vessels to tie up during storms. The entire length is often taken up with vessels and, in many cases, they lie side by side, there not being sufficient room to accommodate all lying singly. Vessels in passing the canal often, when reaching the lower end of the canal, find northeast storms which prevent their going to sea, and some can safely tie up, and they have to either return to Houghton or Hancock and pay dockage charges, or return to Lily Pond, which they are liable to find already overcrowded. Two small docks, known as the Stone dock and Edgerton's dock, exist at the lower end of the canal, and, as an illustration of the necessity of a tying-up place at this point, vessels are often seen tied up three and four deep at these two docks, obstructing the channel and receiving very poor accommodations.

"Such a harbor of refuge is, in my opinion, one of the greatest conveniences that could be provided for navigation on Lake Superior at the present, and will in a few years, by the time it can be completed, be an absolute necessity."

BECOMING A MOTHER

Is an ordeal which all women approach with indescribable fear, for nothing compares with the pain and horror of child-birth. The thought of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a god-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness," and other discomforts of this period. "A HANDFUL OF DIRT MAY BE A HOUSEFUL OF SHAME." CLEAN HOUSE WITH

SAPOLIO

SUSPICIONS CONFIRMED

When the Door of Hotel Room Was Burst Open.

Series of Divorce Suits and Damage Cases Disclosed.

New York, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Stanhope C. Renwick has sued her husband for absolute divorce. Thereby hangs a tale of another divorce in which Mrs. Renwick was defendant, of a suit for separation in which Col Renwick was defendant and the name of Mrs. Renwick was sued, of two suits for alienation of affections, of the bursting in of room doors of two hotels at midnight and of a night automobile ride and a hasty marriage at Greenwich, Conn.

Chief of the present exhibits are a woman's slipper and an automobile veil, trophies of a battle in the Hotel Pickwick, in West Forty-third street, a few night ago, in which Mrs. Renwick carried off the honors of war. Made suspicious by her husband's absence from their home at No. 1930 East One Hundred and Sixty-fourth street, since about Jan. 1, Mrs. Renwick employed detectives, who traced him to the Pickwick last Tuesday night. She was notified and called upon her attorney, David C. Myers, to accompany her.

Col. Renwick's name did not appear on the hotel register for that day, but Mr. Myers found that a week before "Dr. C. Low and wife" was registered from Stamford. By the handwriting Mr. Myers was assured that the colonel was in Room No. 47, but when he and Mrs. Renwick, accompanied by detectives, knocked on the door there was no response.

Appeal was made to the hotel manager and when the circumstances were explained to him he called Col. Renwick on the telephone and demanded an explanation at once. The manager was told that if he would identify himself by rapping on the door four times he would be admitted. This conversation was overheard, and back the party hurried to the room. When the door was opened a crack in response to four knocks a detective held it open with his foot, and Mrs. Renwick had before her eyes the evidence she sought.

According to the complaint, which was served upon Col. Renwick on Thursday in front of the Hotel Imperial, Mrs. Emily Imboden, who spends her summers at her mother's cottage at Long Branch, and who is known to her close friends as "Dimples," was found cowering in negligee behind a folding bed. She is said to be a daughter of Mrs. Renwick, about 30 years old, and to have been a widow 10 years.

When Mrs. Renwick was found at the Rossmore hotel a couple of years ago with Col. Renwick in similar circumstances by her husband, Thomas Stevenson of Brooklyn, she greeted Mr. Stevenson merrily with a "hello" and a "good-bye," but at the Pickwick Mrs. Renwick contented herself with a scornful look at her husband, and picking up a slipper and a woman's veil headed the procession from the apartment.

Col. Renwick reached her over the telephone when a conversation somewhat like this ensued:

"No, of course, I won't; you know you have no right even to speak to me. I wouldn't if I were you; try to live for your Emily. No, I'd rather not; remember me as I looked the last time you saw me. How foolish! Your face never looked well in repose. Sorry, but I'm busy now, good-bye.

"Forever," Mrs. Renwick added, as she hung up the 'phone.

Besides a suit for absolute divorce, with alimony of $50 a week and counsel fees, Mrs. Renwick was having prepared for her the papers in a suit for alienation of her husband's affections. In which $25,000 damages will be demanded from Mrs. Imboden. When Mr. Stevenson sued the present Mrs. Renwick for a divorce he also sued Col. Renwick for damages for the alienation of his wife's affections. It is expected this suit will be tried in White Plains next month. Col. Renwick has an income from the Rhinelander estate and from other sources has from time to time received considerable amounts.

First of the series of suits to be brought was one by a former Mrs. Renwick, now dead, for separation. The present Mrs. Renwick was then Miss Eleanor Bell, daughter of Edmund Randolph Bell, and her name was brought into the case. The separation was granted on May 13, 1903, a few weeks after the marriage of Miss Bell to Mr. Stevenson. It was a double wedding. Miss Amy Bell at the same time marrying W. T. Bliss, who is employed by a wholesale concern in this city. The Bells then lived at No. 414 Fourth street, Brooklyn, and the daughters were well known in society.

Col. and Mrs. Renwick No. 1 had been married since 1881 and had two children, one of whom, Harold G. Renwick, on Oct. 29, 1904, secretly married Miss Ruth Edson, daughter of the late Dr. Cyrus Edson and granddaughter of the late Franklin Edson, once mayor of New York. They have one child. The other child of Col. Renwick by his first wife is Miss Claire Renwick, who is at school. The married happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson was short lived. Wed on Ash Wednesday, 1903, they separated on Easter Monday, and on June 5 came the denouement at the Rossmore, which led to action for divorce against Mrs. Stevenson. The husband, with her father and brother, had spent the night at the hotel, and in the morning met Mrs. Stevenson with Col. Renwick.

"Good morning, Tom," was her smiling greeting to him. The action for divorce was his reply to her, and then suit against Col. Renwick for alienation of affection was his answer to the man in the case.

The next scene in the drama was at Greenwich, Conn., where Col. Renwick and Mrs. Stevenson were married at midnight on Sept. 13, 1904. In a large automobile they drove to a justice's office, where the ceremony was performed with a French maid and the justice's wife as witnesses. Made one, they at once started back for New York in the automobile without waiting for daylight. It is said a previous ceremony had been performed in this state, but that under advice they determined to obtain the sanction of the courts of another state.

Mrs. Renwick is living with her parents in East One Hundred and Sixty-fourth street.

MEXICO MAKING RAPID PROGRESS

With Gold Basis, Finding Ready Markets for Her Silver.

New York, Jan. 25.—The Herald publishes the following:

Bankers familiar with the shipments of gold from this city to Mexico stated yesterday that at least $12,000,000 in gold will go to that republic. Records of the sale of Mexican silver dollars indicate that so far $35,000,000 have been sold in open market, for which the Mexican government and banking institutions will receive in the neighborhood of $17,500,000. Already nearly $5,000,000 has been sent from the City of Mexico in connection with the movement.

The rapidity with which gold is being sent to Mexico to take the place of the silver reserve is attracting attention in the financial markets of the world. It was learned in Wall street yesterday that the total amount of silver currency issued by the Mexican government amounts to $77,000,000. Of this amount $25,000,000 has been converted into gold within the last few months. This was rendered possible by reason of the remarkable advances in the price of silver to a price at which the Mexican dollar could be converted into silver bullion and sold for gold without the discount which has existed for many years. For the gold that is being received paper notes are being issued similar to the plan adopted by the United States government. In addition, the Mexican government has placed an order with the Philadelphia mint to coin about $5,000,000 into gold pieces.

Practically all the silver sold by Mexico has gone to India. The demand in that country for silver has exceeded all previous records, and has made possible the big gold reserve which Mexico is now establishing.

Bastian Was Sent to Pen For Hugging Pretty Girls.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Hugging is expensive in Buffalo. Forty-five days in the penitentiary per hug was the punishment meted out in the police court to Lauri Bastian, who hugged two pretty girls—Viola Desenhell and Ethel Craig.

The fair complainants said Bastian had rushed out of a house as they were passing in the street and threw his arms about them, giving each an affectionate squeeze. Policeman Cotter, who happened to be near, dragged the amorous youth to jail.

Bastian did not have any excuses to make when arraigned before police Judge Murphy and took his punishment stoically.

SOUTH IS SOLID IN ITS DEMAND

That Roosevelt Shall Accept Another Term as President.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Col. Cecil A. Lyon, the head of the Republican organization of Texas, does not think Jacob Riis deserves the credit of being the original third-term Roosevelt man. Col. Lyon has been in Washington for a couple of weeks fixing up scores of postoffices and other federal appointments for his Republican friends in the Lone Star state. He is the patronage referee, and his word "goes" with the president and the heads of departments here. Said the colonel yesterday afternoon:

"Riis is not original in proposing another term for President Roosevelt. The South will demand his renomination, and I fancy he must have some popularity still in the North and West when the solid Democratic South feels as it does. Let it be remembered that the South has nominated a few Republican presidents. There is not a Democrat who could beat Roosevelt by 50,000 votes in Texas if he should run again, and, while I would not say he could carry the state, I would not say that he could not. He'd run like a scared rabbit in Louisiana after his visit to New Orleans at the risk of catching yellow fever.

"This is not a question of what President Roosevelt's intentions are or what his desires are. He has said he would not accept another nomination, and I believe he means it. But the people have selected him as their agent to accomplish certain definite things—the curbing of the beef trust and railroad legislation, for example. And the opposition that believes it can get rid of both Roosevelt and his policies by defeating his recommendations will wake up with a headache the morning after the next national Republican convention, for the people will give them Roosevelt until they give the people what they want."

At the White House it was again stated that Jacob Riis is in error as to what the president thinks. The president stands exactly where he stood on the night of election day, when he said that the term for which he had just been elected would constitute his second term, and that two terms should be enough for any president. It was stated also that Jacob Riis was the president's friend in matters on which he is an expert, he is not to be regarded as an authority on the political questions that confront the president. It was indicated that if Mr. Roosevelt is to continue the fight after March 4, 1909, it would be in his capacity as a citizen and not as president.

WHEAT HAS AN ADVANCE

After Early Weakness Market Appears Oversold and Goes Higher.

Foreign Weakness Causes Slump of Four Cents in Flax.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 25.—Wheat in the early part of the session was weak but the market was apparently oversold and rallied well before the close. The advance was sharpest in Duluth. Liverpool closed ½d lower. Paris unchanged to ¼c higher, Berlin ½c lower and Budapest ⅝c lower. A report had it that some Manitoba wheat is being worked for shipment to France. Stocks in this country are steadily accumulating and this is working against an upward movement in wheat.

The May option advanced ½c in the Duluth market, ¼c in Chicago, ⅜c in Minneapolis and New York, ⅛-¼c in St. Louis and ⅛c in Kansas City and Winnipeg.

Corn was ¼c lower for the May option in Chicago and ¼d to ⅜dlower in Liverpool. May oats in Chicago closed ⅛c lower.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 83, against 21 last year, and at Minneapolis 257, against 210 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 340, against 210 last year. Chicago receipts were 13, against 11 last year. Winnipeg received 91, against 49 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 536,000 bus; last year, 395,000 bus. Shipments, 183,000 bus; last year, 245,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 138,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 475,000 bus; last year, 478,000 bus. Shipments, 456,000 bus; last year, 328,000 bus. Clearances were 551,000 bus.

Wheat showed some little activity in the local market today. May wheat opened at 83⅜c, fell to 83¼-⅜c at 9:21 and advanced to 83⅝c at 9:50. At 11:08 the price had fallen to 83⅛c, but rallied at 1.04 to 83⅞c. The closing price was 83⅞c, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. July wheat was inactive at the opening. The one high price was 85c and the low 84⅜c. The closing price was 85c, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

The foreign flax market was very weak today. Foreign buyers were not much in evidence in the local market and that was responsible for the declines. The prices seem to depend almost altogether on the foreign situation now. The Argentine flax crop was reported to be 40 per cent below last year, but this gave only temporary strength. May flax opened ¼c higher at $1.23 and advanced to $1.23¾, then falling to $1.22, rallying to $1.22½ and falling to $1.19⅝. The closing price was $1.19, a loss of 3¾c over yesterday. July flax opened unchanged at $1.24, fell to $1.23¾, rallied to $1.23⅞ and dropped to $1.20½. The closing price was $1.20, a loss of 4c over yesterday. September flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.22, fell to $1.19½ and closed at $1.18¾, a loss of 3¾c over yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Lower Prices at Liverpool Cause Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Lower prices for wheat at Liverpool and comparatively mild weather throughout the Southwest caused a weak market in wheat here today. At the opening the feeling was firm because of considerable covering by shorts. Opening quotations on May were up a shade to 1⅛@⅛c at 85½@85⅝c. The slight advance met with liberal offerings from commission houses and created lively selling by local traders. On the reaction May dropped to 85c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 347 cars against 513 cars last week and 243 cars one year ago.

Later in the day the market weakened on bearish advices from Russia and Argentina. Shorts covered freely on the decline and a rally in wheat, in which all the loss was recovered, ensued. The close was firm, with May up ⅛c at 85⅝c.

Profit-taking by local longs, induced by lower cables and the weakness of wheat, caused a depression in corn. May opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 44⅞@45c and sold off to 43⅝c. Local receipts were 253 cars with 9 of contract grade.

The market gained, in sympathy with the rise in wheat, but the close was very easy. Final quotations showed May off ⅛c at 44⅝@43⅝c.

Oats were easier in sympathy with wheat and corn. There was moderate liquidation by a number of small holders. May closed unchanged at 33⅜c and sold off to 31½c. Local receipts were 94 cars.

Provisions were easier because of a decline of 10@15c in the price of live hogs. Shorts were the principal buyers. May pork was off 5c at $14.06. Lard was down 2½@5c at $7.50@7.52½. Ribs were 2½@5c lower at $7.47½.

Close: Wheat—May, 85⅝@85⅞c; July, 86⅝c. Corn—May, 44⅝@43⅝c; July, 44⅞c. Oats—May, 31⅜c; July 30¼c. Pork—May, $14.12½; January, $13.80; July, $14.22½. Lard—January, $7.40; May, $7.55@7.57½; July, $7.67½; September, $7.80. Ribs—January, $7.37½; May, $7.55; July, $7.67½. Rye—Cash, 59½c; May, 60¾@60⅞c. Flax—Cash, northwest, $1.15½; southwest, $1.04; May, $1.18. Timothy—March, $3.45. Clover—Cash, $13.25. Barley—Cash, 39@54c. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The fact that the cables did not fully respond to our break yesterday gave us a strong opening; later on a new estimate of Argentine exportable surplus was distributed to the trade, and coupled with the fact that we have had since Friday last a reactionary market, with something over 4c decline, induced some short covering, which on the rally late in the day became quite urgent. The short interests were the active buyers, and some of the outside commission house buying came in on the theory that the market had break enough for the moment and was due for a rally. If cables come firm in the morning and show some advance it would not be unreasonable to look for some further rally. Sentiment on trade conditions has not changed, however; the speculative situation was one-sided. It seems as if something new of a bullish nature would have to develop to keep up prices at the moment.

Corn—This market showed quite a little weakness early, subsequently improving somewhat. A leading cash concern was a heavy seller early. The market at the moment seems fair to continue on a moderate range.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—This was the first time in some days that Minneapolis receipts were over last year's. The heavier receipts had the effect of depressing the market somewhat, as lighter receipts were looked for at this time. Minneapolis stocks have now increased only 700,000 bushels for five days, which is considerable lighter than last week for the same length of time. Renewed liquidation sent the prices down below yesterday's low point. Volume of business light, we see no reason for this decline, aside from the size of local stocks, and while they are large, it must be remembered that the farmers' stocks are that much smaller, and therefore the elevators' stocks should really cut no great figure. We believe the market should now get stronger with the price reaching for higher levels. The cash demand is the best in weeks, everything strong, market firmer, prices a shade over yesterday's. Reports are to the effect that both quality and quantity are far below what was expected. Buy wheat on this break.

FINANCE PROGRAM

Of M. Sakatoni is Opposed by the Japanese House.

Tokio, Jan. 25.—The new finance minister, M. Sakatani, said in the house of representatives today that he proposed to convert $80,000,000 of the war taxes into permanent imposts and to establish a debt with a consolidation fund for the service of which $55,000,000 would be devoted annually in addition to the $18,000,000 hitherto assigned for the same purpose.

Both proposals were strongly opposed by the house. The premier, M. Saonji, emphasized the imperative necessity for a united national effort to cope with the situation created by the war and the heavy expenditure which it had entailed.

RECORD TRIP.

The ferryboat Paterson left her Christopher street slip on the New York side at 5:20 o'clock on Saturday evening, Feb. 10, 1866, with a considerable number of passengers on board, says the Kansas City Journal. There was a dense fog, and the river full of heavy ice. As the hours went by and nothing was heard from the Paterson on either side of the river, great anxiety was felt, and a second boat of the fleet was sent out in search of her at midnight. She was finally discovered making for her dock at 2 a. m. Sunday morning. The story told by the captain was that when the Paterson reached the middle of the river she was caught between fields of ice, and carried down the bay. The pilot lost his reckoning, and vainly signaled for help. At last Bedloe's Island was sighted, and recognized, the Paterson's prow turned toward home and the passengers landed early Sunday morning. This is said to be the longest trip across the Hudson on record. Some of the passengers were greatly alarmed, fearing to be carried out to sea.

Another dull day with little change in prices and sellers waiting news from Calumet & Pittsburg mine with belief that it is near at hand. When the turn does come, rapid advances are looked for.

At meeting of Calumet & Arizona directors in Calumet yesterday the necessary change in by-laws was effected and the stock will probably be listed on Boston Exchange in March.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Early Gains Followed by Decline, But Were Recovered Later.

Strength Shown at Close Which Was Active and Steady.

New York, Jan. 25.—The tone of the opening stock market today was feverish and irregular. There were wide recoveries in some of the stocks which were under pressure at the closing last night, but free selling was in evidence in other quarters of the list. Amalgamated rebounded 4, St. Paul 1½, Colorado Fuel, Lead and Reading about a point and Texas & Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, Sugar and the local tractions large fractions. The first sales of Union Pacific were of 2,000 shares at 157¼ and 157½ compared with 157 last night. Pressed Steel Car preferred, Colorado Southern and the first preferred were down ¾.

Resistance was shown to pressure and recoveries were made from declines. Stocks which opened higher extended their gains. Free offerings came out at the advance and there were abrupt reactions. St. Paul rose an extreme 2 points, Brooklyn Transit 1¾, Union Pacific and Copper 1¼ and Great Northern preferred, Central Leather, Sugar and Vulcan Detinning 1. The reaction wiped out the gains and carried Reading 2 points below last night and Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Railway, Denver & Rio Grande, United States Steel preferred and Smelting 1. Prices steadied before 11 o'clock.

Prices hardened slowly and the trading became very dull. A few dormant stocks made wide changes. American Express rose 9¼, United States Express 3, American Agricultural Chemical preferred 4¼, Brooklyn Transit 3, Hide & Leather preferred 5⅜, Colorado Fuel 2¼, Vulcan Detinning preferred and Locomotive 1¼, and St. Louis Southwestern preferred 1. American Snuff declined 20 points, Federal Mining 5, National Pump 1⅜ and Atlantic Coast Line 1⅜ and Iowa Central preferred and Cotton Oil 1. Buying showed more animation at noon. Bonds were steady. The recovery in the markets did not extend much beyond yesterday's closing level before large selling orders were encountered and prices fell backwards very materially. Union Pacific was driven below yesterday's closing again and Reading and some of the specialties sold at the lowest. Hide & Leather preferred reacted 2¼ and American Express 6.

Prices crumbled again and went lower all around than on the previous breaks. Reading fell 3 in all, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha as much, D. & R. G. 2⅜, Northwestern and Canadian Pacific 2, Smelting 1½ and Chicago Great Western preferred "B" and others 1 to 2¼.

The 10@5-point break in Tennessee Coal was restored with ½ additional by transactions in a few hundred shares. Prices then began to harden. The rise in Norfolk & Western to 2 over last night and the heavy demand for Southern railroad at an advance of 3 point increased the disposition of the shorts to cover.

Vulcan Detinning preferred gained 2¾. Many of the earlier loses were completely made up and stocks which had shown early strength rose to the best. The close was active and steady.

Stock Gossip.

Chandler Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: There can be no doubt that there has been very large distribution of stocks by strong interests, and that commission houses are loaded with stocks more now than at any previous time in this rise. This may not mean that individual advances are over, but we shall not be surprised if the market has reached its top prices.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 25.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 3 points to an advance of 3 points, but in spite of the sustaining influence of the big Liverpool spot sales, soon sold off to a net decline of 2@4 points on the active months, under continued liquidation and bear pressure. There was a good demand at the decline and the market rallied during the middle of the morning, but after selling about 5@6 points net higher, turned irregular and lost part of the gain.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 10 points lower. Mid ups 11.80; do gulf 12.05. Sales 736 bales. Futures closed steady: January 11.25; February, 11.25; March, 11.39; April, 11.43; May, 11.52; June, 11.54; July, 11.59; August, 11.39; September, 10.77; October, 10.64.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve, in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $143,177,274; gold, $77,736,197; gold certificates, $92,287,980.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—Cattle—Receipts 350; steady. Grain-fed steers, $3.50@5.50; cows and heifers, $2.30@4.25; stock steers, $2@3.50; calves, $2@5.25. Hogs—Receipts 3,500; 15c lower. Range, $5.15@5.35; bulk, $5.20@5.25. Sheep—Receipts 250; steady. Sheep, $4@6.25; lambs, $6.50@7.

New York Money.

New York, Jan. 25.—Money on call, steady, 4@4½ per cent; ruling rate 4½, closing bid 4½, offered at 5. Time loans steady; 60 days, 4½@¾ per cent; ninety days, 4½; six months, 4½. MOST DEGRADED PAPER IN THE UNITED STATES of the publication more forcibly to his mind.

Mr. Jerome asked Mr. Collier if he knew that President Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland were to be subscribers to and have their names in "Fads and Fancies," to which he replied that he did not know it.

Norman Hapgood was then called to the stand. "I believe you are the defendant, although I am not certain," said Mr. Shepard. Mr. Hapgood admitted it. He described the circumstances attending the writing of the editorial on which libel action was based, as related by Mr. Collier, and said that he wrote the various articles about Town Topics as a public duty. In reply to questions by District Attorney Jerome, Mr. Hapgood said he understood the scheme of Town Topics was to blackmail. He did not think that eminent people were clubbed into "Fads and Fancies." Mr. Jerome showed the witness a letter, which he did not read, but which purported to relate to the admissibility of President Roosevelt's name into "Fads and Fancies," and asked:

"Do you believe he was forced into the book?"

"I believe he was not forced," said Mr. Hapgood.

"What induced you to print this editorial?"

"The information given me by the district attorney himself was the immediate cause, but I had had knowledge for a number of years of the policy of the paper."

"Then your judgment was based upon the judgment of the district attorney?"

"Yes."

"After all, I am writing this article?" finally said District Attorney Jerome.

"Yes, in a measure."

"Did you understand that the distinguished ex-president, Mr. Cleveland, gave money for the use of his name in "Fads and Fancies?" asked Mr. Shepard.

"No, I understood he was to have a free copy."

Describing his interview with Mr. Jerome, Mr. Hapgood said:

"He told me that the scheme ought to be expurgated. He described what he called the 'whole bunch,' with extreme vigor and expressed the belief that most of these men got their information from Town Topics. He said he believed in striking at the root, at the very fountain head of the whole matter. We were of one belief and in concord on the subject."

At this point counsel for the defense rested their case.

District Attorney Jerome then recalled Col. Mann, who gave his version of his interview with Bernard N. Baker of Baltimore.

Col. Mann testified that Barton Harrison wrote the introduction to "Fads and Fancies," but that neither Mrs. Clement C. Moore, Mrs. Andrew Simmons, nor Harry Lehr ever gave him an item of information.

Neither President Roosevelt nor Grover Cleveland ever paid any money for the use of their names in "Fads and Fancies." Bishop Potter, the witness said, was also on the free list.

The witness's attention was called to a letter written by Justice Deuel, in which he wrote that the fortunes of Town Topics had wavered "because reciprocity has not been used between the editorial and advertising departments"

TO ENLARGE THE McKAY

Capacity of the Hotel Will be Doubled Before July 1.

Contract Soon to be Let for a $30,000 Addition.

The capacity of the McKay hotel, situated at the corner of Fifth avenue west and First street, and owned by W. A. McKay and G. T. McKay, will be doubled the coming spring by a $30,000 addition to the present building. Plans for the structure are now being laid, and the contract for building it will be let within a week or two. The new addition will be open for business before the first of July.

McKay Bros. have closed a deal for the purchase of the 25-foot lot lying directly east of the hotel site, which includes 75 feet and this will give a frontage of 100 feet for the hotel. The addition will extend clear back to the alley, as does the present building, and will be the same height, three stories in front and four behind. The foundation will be so constructed, however, that it will safely bear the weight of four or five more stories, and it is expected that more stories will be added within the next few years, if the business continues to increase as rapidly in the future as it has in the past.

The hotel as it stands today is very modern and comfortable from the standpoint of the guests, but the new part will be a good deal more expensive in furnishings and equipment. The rooms will be larger and more elaborately furnished, and a number of private bath rooms will be added, bringing the total number of private baths up to at least twenty-five. While the plans are as yet not entirely complete, it is known the number of rooms in the completed establishment will be about 120. The new building will be of brick and stone construction.

The McKay brothers have been in the hotel business in Duluth for eight or ten years. For the past four years their hotel has been located at the corner of Fifth avenue west and First street. It has received an excellent patronage since the start, and for the past year or two the demands made upon it by the traveling public have far exceeded the capacity of the building. Some time ago it became evident to the proprietors that it would be necessary to enlarge the structure. The hotel business is getting better in Duluth right along, and was particularly good last year. The proprietors of the McKay say it will be a matter of only two or three years before they will add more stories to the building.

AFTER THE OTHERS.

Efforts Being Made to Reach Those Who Have Not Yet Registered.

An organized effort to reach all voters who failed to register either at the primaries or yesterday, will be made by the candidates in the municipal campaign now in progress.

Lists of voters are being prepared, and all those whose names are now on books, will be reached if possible, before Saturday night.

Saturday is the last chance to register for the February election, and those who do not get their names down before Saturday night will be disenfranchised.

JAIL IS EMPTY.

Duluth Police Have Not Made an Arrest For Thirty-Six Hours.

Not an arrest has been made by the Duluth police for nearly thirty-six hours, and this morning, for the first time in more than a year, there was not a single prisoner to face the judge in the municipal court.

Not even an ordinary "drunk" was caught in the wheels of justice, and one police daily blotter was put away without a mark upon it.

It is a year since the city jail has been empty for such a length of time as thirty-six hours, and it devotes a very quiet and orderly condition of affairs in the city.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVALS

At West End This Week---Meeting at Swedish Mission Church.

Tonight's meeting of the series of union revival services which are taking place just now among the Scandinavian churches of the West end, will be held in the Swedish Mission church and Rev. John A. Anderson of the First Swedish M. E. church will be speaker. Mrs. Hagberg will sing a solo. During the first part of the week, when the meetings were held in the smaller church, the crowds were too great for the church capacity. The meetings have been very successful and many conversions resulted last night.

FOOD—NOT MEDICINE.

It all the treatments for consumption were put in book form it would make a pretty big library. But after all there has been little improvement over the old treatment of rest, fresh air, sunshine, plain, wholesome food and Scott's Emulsion. The latter supplies nourishment that cannot be secured in any other way, and after all, nourishment is what the consumptive needs first.

A gain in weight, however slight, is a long step toward improvement. If there is the least thing to build on Scott's Emulsion will enable the patient to make that gain. People have gained a pound in weight from a bottle of Scott's Emulsion—it's an exception when they don't.

We have seen Scott's Emulsion take hold of a patient and bring about a change for the better inside of a week. It always helps even the most stubborn cases.

INSANE PATIENT DIES FROM BLOW.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—James Kennedy, a patient at the county hospital for the insane, died as the result of injuries received from another patient several days ago. A number of the patients were unloading a coal wagon, and for a few minutes were left without an attendant. During this time one of them, whose name is not known, struck Kennedy with a shovel, fracturing his skull.

"POOH-POOHED" BY EVERYONE

Cane Growers Say Taft Has Taught Everybody the Refrain.

Washington, Jan. 25.—D. D. Colcock of New Orleans, representing the American Cane Growers' association and other interests opposed to the passage of the Philippine tariff bill, was heard by the senate committee on the Philippines. He said that Secretary Taft had been appealed to by American cane growers after confessing not to be a business man, had "Pooh poohed" the fears of the cane growers that their interests would be jeopardized by the passage of the pending tariff bill. Continuing he said: "Not only did Secretary Taft 'Pooh pooh' but Col. Edwards 'pooh poohed' and Col. Colton 'pooh poohed' us. Then Secretary Taft gathered together a number of senators and representatives whom I have learned to call 'Innocents abroad' and the secretary taught them that refrain 'Pooh pooh'."

Mr. Colcock's statement was humorous in the extreme and kept the members convulsed with laughter.

F. M. Hatch of Honolulu representing the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' association spoke in opposition to the sugar schedules as affected by the bill.

Questioned concerning the identity of the investors, he said that so far as known the "sugar trust" has no investments there at the present time but that the American Sugar Refining company is the only buyer of the raw sugar. He said Claus Spreckles has disposed of all his interests in the island.

DISOBEYS COURT'S ORDER

Mrs. Gilbert Willett Will Be Arrested on Bench Warrant.

Failure to comply with a summons to appear in court and disclose the whereabouts of certain household goods held under a chattel mortgage, will result in the arrest of Mrs. Gilbert Willett on a bench warrant issued by Judge Cutting this morning.

The arrest is the outcome of the case of J. C. Cole against Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Willett. The plaintiff claims to have a chattel morgage on certain goods owned by the Willetts. When an effort was made to foreclose the mortgage, the goods could not be found, and the man and his wife are claimed to have refused to tell where they were located.

An order was secured from the court for them to appear and disclose the whereabouts of the goods. This morning the husband alone appeared, and denied all knowledge of the location of the property. His wife failed to comply with the order, and on the request of the plaintiff's attorney, a bench warrant for her arrest was issued.

The case is a peculiar one, and it is many years since any legal action of this kind has been brought in the local courts.

SHONTS RECEIVES THE REPORT OF COMMISSION.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The majority report of the board of consulting engineers of the Isthmian canal commission, which was recently signed at Brussels by the foreign members and forwarded to Washington by Gen. Davis, has been received by Chairman Shonts of the commission. This, with the minority report, will shortly be placed in the hands of Secretary Taft for transmission to the president, and by the president to congress. It is said that the changes that Gen. Davis cabled had been made in the majority report do not materially affect the original draft.

P. B. WALKER CRITICALLY ILL AT HOME IN SCRANTON.

St. Paul, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Telegrams from Scranton, Pa., announce the critical illness of Platt Beauregard Walker, an old resident of Minneapolis, founder of the Mississippi Valley Lumberman, a Confederate veteran and one of Minnesota's best known characters. The colonel is at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Edgett, where he has resided for the past year and a half, during which his strength has declined rapidly. He is 63 years old.

CLEVELAND'S SCHEME

For Limiting Trolley Car Load Causes Great Dissatisfaction.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 25.—The first day's attempt to limit the number of passengers to a street car, according to the new rules and regulations of the board of health, was a failure. General Manager Stanley said so, and so did President McAfee of the health board. The public, for whose benefit the provision was made, refused to conform to it.

Twenty extra cars were put on during the evening rush hours by the Cleveland Electric Railway company to aid the public in complying with the ordinance. The effort only served to tie up the entire street railway system, throwing practically every line off its schedule from twelve to fifteen minutes.

From 5:30 to 6 o'clock the public square was almost completely blocked by the extra cars. In addition to the delay in the company's schedule, it took thirty to forty minutes longer to transport the people from the down-town district.

The street railway company will abide by the provision as long as it remains a law and the city wishes to enforce it. The first day's failure brought hurry-up orders to all schemes looking toward the relief of the streetcar congestion at the public square.

The first to be denied entrance to a crowded car were a young man and two young women who were bound for the Wade park neighborhood.

"Can't get on this car, ladies!" shouted the conductor.

"Oh, the lid is on the street cars, too. I hope the ministers will write something about that when they reply to Mayor Johnson," said one of the women.

HASTY FLIGHT OF A LAWYER

From Tulse When the Oklahoma Colonel Got After Him.

Tulsa, I. T., Jan. 25.—David L. Sleeper, formerly speaker of the lower house of the Ohio legislature, now a lawyer of Tulsa, is forced to leave here to prevent a tragedy. Capt. H. B. Talley, a Republican politician and lawyer, threatened to shoot him on sight at a recent meeting of the Republicans in this city. Capt. Talley was held back to prevent trouble while Judge Sleeper was given an opportunity to hunt a place of safety. He is now out of the city, while friends are attempting to patch up a truce.

Judge Sleeper and Capt. Talley were a committee to solicit funds for a recent Republican banquet. The money, it is alleged, was never paid over to the hotel. The hotel owner got judgment against the committee for the amount due, but has not been able to collect.

At a Republican meeting held recently Col. Sleeper asked why the money had not been paid, and it is alleged he insinuated that Capt. Talley had it. This brought on the fight and guns were flourished. Capt. Talley, who is a sure shot and has a record back in the Tennessee mountains, threatened to kill Sleeper on sight.

Friends of the former Ohio man spirited him away to his former home in Lawton. There he has remained. The trip to Lawton was made partly overland. The Tennessee mountaineer making such strong threats of pursuit.

The affair has so wrought up the Republican party of the city and territory that it will mean political victory up and down the line throughout the cities and districts where the two men are known well enough to have personal friends.

Col. Sleeper has been in Tulsa about a year. He has been connected with the Republican political machine, which is dominated by railroad attorneys.

He was to have been the Republican nominee from this part of the new state of Oklahoma for the senate, being the candidate of P. L. Soper, national committeeman and general solicitor of the 'Frisco railroad.

Capt. Talley is the graduate of the Washington, D. C., law school who refused to take the degree of doctor of laws because there was a woman in the case. He appealed to the executive board of the college, but was turned down. He took the degree two years later. He is prominently connected in the territory, being at the head of the legal department of the Kansas City, Tulsa & Southwestern railroad, now building, and general attorney for the Manufacturers' Belt Line Railway of Tulsa. He holds commission as captain of the Indian Territory militia.

Dangers of a Cold and How to Avoid Them.
More fatalities have their origin in or result from a a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful, as there is no danger whatever from a cold when it is properly treated in the beginning. For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been recognized as the most prompt and effectual medicine in use for this disease. It acts on nature's plan, loosens the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Sold by all leading druggists.

KING GRISSLY DEAD.

Largest Bear in the West Killed After Hard Fight.

Old Four Toes, the grandaddy silvertip of the Jackson Hole country whose tracks alone for 20 years has made the hearts of hunters beat faster and set their hands a-trembling, is dead, says a Cody, Wyo., correspondent of the Denver Times. But Old Four Toes died as he had lived—the king of the silvertips, the patriarch of the forest. The fight he put up but emphasized his right to the title he bore.

Carrying 30-40 soft-nosed bullets, his shoulder and hip shattered, a bullet down his throat, the blood gushing in a crimson torrent from three holes in his side, a bullet in his chest, he fought on his feet, without once falling to his knees, until, weakened by loss of blood, the eleventh bullet tore his liver. Then, with a roar which made the mountains reverberate, the king's head dropped and he died.

Old Four Toes' weight was close to a ton, the fat on his back was seven inches deep, the dried hide measured 12 feet in length and 9 feet 9 inches from paw to paw. His chest was three feet across, and the oil from the tallow after a sackful of the best had been removed amounted to 30 gallons.

The men who killed Old Four Toes are Robert L. Livermore, a mining expert from Cripple Creek, Colo., and Fred Chase, a local guide of Cody, Wyo.

During the beginning of the hunting season Chase had a party out from Kansas City that had come especially to hunt bear. They saw Four Toes' tracks on his range round about Buffalo Forks, in the Jackson Hole country, and concluded they would hunt elk. Then Mr. Livermore, coming out to hunt elk, heard of the fame of Four Toes and decided to hunt bear.

In a thick timber at Buffalo Forks, there is a runway between spruce trees through which the game travels. One of the trees is covered with pitch and this pitch has caught the hair of cinnamon, black and grizzlies as they have crowded through. But higher than all—higher than the head of the average man—could be seen the hair Old Four Toes had left in the pitch as he squeezed through the runway.

His track on the snow and in the mud was like the print of an enormous ham, and by other signs experienced hunters knew that Old Four Toes was a bear who made the rest of his kind look like cubs. He has been known for 20 years, his name for the last 15 having been "Old Four Toes," since he was caught in a trap and tore loose leaving one great claw in the steel jaws. Since then he has become as famous in his way as Felix, the giant mountain sheep who ranges in the mountains bordering the Blackfoot reservation in Montana, for whose head any hunter who has seen him would sell his soul and any forest ranger forfeit his job.

Two days after the bear hunters had made camp a slight snow fell and while hunting they came on the trail of a wounded elk.

"Tomorrow Old Four Toes will be after him," said Chase, who sabes bears as if he were related to them. And, sure enough, on the second day while still following the elk they found the enormous footprints of Old Four Toes mingling with those of the elk.

After a time the bear quit the trail, but the hunters kept on, and, coming up to the elk, killed him. He was a large specimen with a fine pair of horns, so they took the head and left the carcass.

"This is where we get Four Toes," said Chase. "He'll be here tonight to gorge himself, and he'll sleep tomorrow."

The next day they returned and found the huge carcass of the elk almost devoured. In the footprint they read that Four Toes had been accompanied by another bear. There had been a fight, so the story of the footprints read, and the smaller bear had been vanquished, then Four Toes had gormandized alone.

The hunters started keen on his trail, and to their dismay found it led into the forest, where the trees and underbrush grew thick. A meeting with a bear under such circumstances is a situation from which old hunters shrink. The men found, also, that he had been joined by a coyote, which made the situation even less desirable, as the coyote would give the alarm before the bear himself realized that danger was near.

But the hunters' enthusiasm nerved them and they followed the footprints into the timber. They moved cautiously, pausing to peer about them at every step, their nerves at the highest tension, not knowing what instant they would jump the bear.

"Be easy," warned Chase, "for I want fifty yards between us to start with. He's going to come for us, and we can't stop him under that distance."

Neither of the men underestimated the danger of the courage of their antagonist. They came into an open space, where, about a foot from the ground, fallen sapling were interlaced. There they found Four Toes had made a bed for himself. Evidently he had concluded it was not sufficiently sheltered, or it had not fit him, for he moved on.

The men now crept more cautiously than ever, for they surmised that he not not gone far. They took up his trail again, which now led among thick spruces, the branches bending almost to the ground with the weight of snow upon them.

Suddenly Chase, who was ahead, threw up his hand warningly. Both men stood still with hearts that thumped audibly. A few yards from where they stood than ever, for they surmised that he had a slight steam was rising into the cold air.

They waited but heard no sound. Then then they nived up inch by inch. The bed was empty, but it had been vacated only a few minutes previous, as the steam which rose from the ground where it had been warmed by Four Toes' great body testified.

In the awsome hush of the forest the men stood motionless, straining their ears for a grunt or some slight movement which should locate Four Toes for them. It was as quiet as death itself, and because of the spruces they could see only a short distance around them.

At last Chase moved. He took only a half step, but at the first movement a great hulk sprang from a thicket less than fifty yards away.

The supreme moment had come. Four Toes, with his jaws wide open, green flames darting from his piglike eyes, whirled around a tree and came straight for Chase.

Chase caught him sideways as he whirled. The tremendous force of the 30-40 soft-nosed bullet tore a hole in his side into which one could thrust his fist, but it seemed not even to jar the bear, much less knock him down. With a roar of rage which defies description Four Toes leaped into the air to a height which the hunters declare would seem incredible to those who had not actually seen it. When he came down he tore up a tree four inches in diameter as though it were a reed and hurled it twenty feet into the thicket. Then he made another tremendous jump for Chase, who stood his ground and sent another bullet crashing into his shoulder. The bear leaped again, roaring, slapping and tearing at the wound. As he jumped he shook the snow from the drooping spruce limbs until he was the center of a whirlwind of snow.

"Give it to him! Soak the lead into him!" shouted Chase. "He's coming too fast!"

With the rapid fire of a riot gun the bullets began to pour into Four Toes, tearing his great body with no effect, save to further enrage him. Frothing blood, his paws wide apart, the hair on his hump bristling till it seemed twice its size, he crashed through sturdy scrub pines and spruces as though they were dried grass in a meadow. Chase shot down his throat, shattering the front teeth on his lower jaw. Still the bear kept coming and still Chase stood his ground.

They tried to break his back, but, owing to the great breadth of him and the rolls of fat covering his spinal column, they could not tell where to aim.

"Reload!" cried Chase, "I've only one shot left!"

The bear was then but twenty feet from him.

Livermore's next bullet shattered Four Toes' hip. This wound seemed to hurt him more than any he had received. Standing on his two good legs he opened his jaws and tore at the ground.

While he stood, Chase, with his last cartridge, sent home the bullet which finished Four Toes.

He threw up his head with one final, despairing roar. He tried to gather himself for a last dash at his enemy. But a film was spreading over his eyes and he was tottering on his two remaining legs. In spite of himself and the rage in his heart his great head drooped. Lower and lower it sank until it hung upon his chest. Another second he swayed. Then, with the triumphant yells of his enemies ringing in his ears, he yielded to the numbness which was creeping over him, and old Four Toes, the king of the Silvertips, went down to rise no more.

MARRIED WRONG MEN.

A strange case of matrimonial fraud has lately occurred at Vienna, says the London Tit-Bits. A woman of the lower middle class married a man whom she took to be a Herr Weiss, her fiance, returning after a years absence in America to make her his wife. In less than a month he robbed her of her savings and then suddenly disappeared.

A month later she received a letter from America regretting that the writer had been too ill to return at the time agreed, but stating that he was about to sail, and that immediately on his arrival would fulfill his promise by leading her to the altar. The letter was signed "Herrmann Weiss."

The poor woman was thrown into a sad condition of perplexity and apprehension, and her worst fears were realized when, on her correspondent's arrival, she recognized that she had been imposed upon by a callous impostor whose resemblance to the real simon pure was marvelously striking. It subsequently transpired that the genuine Herrmann Weiss had, while in America, foregathered with his double, who had ascertained sufficient of the former's history and prospects to enable him to carry out with success his base scheme of deception and heartless robbery.

When Claude Bonnat, a baker of Marseilles, was in hiding from the police, who held a warrant for his arrest on a serious charge, he managed to communicate with an acquaintance, one Leriot, who in every respect was his exact double, and conjured him on the strength of their old friendship to promise that, should any misfortune befall him, he would, by impersonating him—an easy enough task by reason of the striking resemblance existing between them—keep from the young woman to whom he was engaged a the knowledge of her lover's shame. Leriot gave his promise, which sat but lightly on his conscience, as one to be kept or broken as whim might direct.

However, when Bonnat a day or two later fell into the hands of justice, Leriot sought out the young woman, of whom he had no previous knowledge, with the result that his susceptible heart was so touched that he entered into the fulfillment of his promise with surprising zeal. So well, indeed, did he enact the role of Bonnat that he in a short while espoused the latter's fiancee. The couple led a life of complete happiness, which was in no wise dimmed when some years later, on the convict's release, the wife first discovered the fraud of which she had been the victim.

POLITICIAN DEAD IN BED

T. W. Higgins, Irish Nationalist, Expires After Successful Election.

Tragic Occurrence is Attributed to the Excitement of Contest.

London, Jan. 26.—T. W. Higgins, Irish Nationalist, who yesterday successfully contested North Galway against Col. John Phillip Nolan, Irish Nationalist, was found dead in bed at his hotel in Tuam today. The tragic occurrence is attributed to the excitement of yesterday's polling, acting on a weak heart.

Mr. Higgins was one of the most militant Nationalists in the west of Ireland and had many conflicts with the police. He was imprisoned under the crimes act during Arthur J. Balfour's tenure of the chief secretaryship of Ireland.

Twenty-eight divisions are polling today. This practically marks the end of the elections as less than a dozen scattered constituencies will then remain to poll.

Lionel Walter Rothschild, Unionist, has been re-elected for the middle division of Buckinghamshire, though the Rev. Silas Kittio Hocking, the novelist, gave him a good race, reducing the Unionist majority at the last contested election by one-half.

The totals are now: Liberals, 351; Unionist, 149; Irish Nationalists, 81; Laborites, 49.

CASTRO'S SIDE OF THE CASE

Says Taigny Violated Diplomatic Etiquette and Caused Much Trouble.

Caracas, Venezuela, Monday, Jan. 22, via Port of Spain, Trinidad, Jan. 26.—In reply to a request sen: him by the Associated Press correspondent for a statement of Venezuela's attitude, concerning the Franco-Venezuelan situation, President Castro immediately telegraphed as follows from Maracay:

"You can transmit to the Associated Press the following: M. Taigny, the French charge d'affaires at Caracas, not only violated diplomatic etiquette, as is proved by the fact of his presenting a protest against the Venezuelan government when the French cable company was calmed and had been almost arranged with, but the protest has brought the disagreeable situation between France and Venezuela to the point of a rupture of friendly relations. But not content with this, he having been deprived by his government of the diplomatic character with which he was invested in Venezuela, violated as a French citizen the laws of the Port of La Guayara by embarking on a French liner, whereupon the Venezuelan government, in order to avoid new difficulties and after its police had been treated contemptuously, resolved not to permit Taigny to reland.

"CIPRIANO CASTRO."

CHINESE SEE THE SIGHTS AT CAPITAL.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Several of the members of the imperial Chinese commission spent today in visiting some of Washington's public buildings, paying quite a long visit to the treasury department. They lunched at the Y. M. C. A. and afterwards visited the Corcoran art galery, where they were received by the district commissioners. The chief event of the day will be the dinner to be given in their honor tonight at the Chinese legation by the Chinese minister, Sir Chentung Liang Cheng. Among those expected to be present are Secretaries Root and Bonaparte, Senators Dryden and Bacon, Representatives Dalzell, Denby, Payne and Hull, Assistant Secretary of State Bacon, Justices Harlan and Brewer, Gen. Chaffee and several others interested in Chinese affairs.

INTERNATIONAL JEWISH LEAGUE.

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—Permanent organization has now been effected by the International Jewish league, formed in this city last month for the purpose of aiding Jewish communities in any part of the world in the attainment of civil and religious liberty.

It is believed that within two months the whole Pacific coast will be thoroughly organized. In time state leagues will be formed and the heads of these state leagues will constitute the delegates from whom the national and subsequently the international executives will be organized.

NEED MORE HELP IN THE PATENT OFFICE.

Washington, Jan. 26.—In his annual report to congress for the calendar year 1905, the commissioner of patents sets forth the imperative need of an increased force and additional office facilities to cope with the business which, the report says, has shown a remarkable increase during the last year. In 1905 there were received 54,034 applications for mechanical patents, 781 design patents, 156 re-issues of patents, 16,224 applications for registration of trade marks, 1,068 labels and 467 prints. There were 30,275 patents issued, including designs. The total receipts were $1,896,768. The expenditures $1,479,633.

The most important event in the business of the patent office in 1905 according to the report was the new trade mark law, which reduced the fee for trademark application from $25 to $10.

NINE SURVIVORS OF THE WRECKED VALENCIA ARE IN A DESPERATE PLIGHT

Miles From Human Habitation, They Are Scantily Clothed and Without Shoes.

Four More Men Rescued, Making the Total Survivors of Wreck Thirty-Seven.

Victoria, Jan. 26.—Word was received last night at Bamfield from Capt. Ferris, who left with a party from the steamer Salvor yesterday mornin g to bring in the nine survivors of the Valencia who were at Darling river, about fifteen miles from Bamfield. The party was twelve hours on the trail and from accounts received by Capt. Ferris, the survivors are suffering great privations. Some are insufficiently clothed. Capt. Ferris will leave at daybreak today for Bamfield with the entire party, but does not expect to get in until Saturday morning. The Salvor will wait. The trails are reported in a very bad condition being in places almost impassable.

With the finding of four more survivors of the Valencia disaster on Turret island, one of the archipelago in the center of Barkley sound, the total number of survivors accounted for reaches thirty-seven persons.

The tug Lorne which returned at midnight from the wreck of the Valencia brought John Segalos of San Francisco, a fireman of the Valencia, rescued by the City of Topeka from the raft and placed him on board the Lorne. He is a Greek.

In an interview he told of a futile attempt made by him to swim ashore, carrying a line through the breakers to attach the line between the wreck and shore and of how he and seventeen other survivors had spent from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. of Wednesday on a fragile raft, buffeted by gale and swamped by the running seas until picked up by the Topeka.

John Segalos speaking to an Associated Press correspondent on board the tug Lorne after being transferred said:

"It was my turn on watch in the fire room when at 11:50 Monday night the Valencia, going very slowly suddenly struck the rocks and shook from end to end. Orders came to the engine room to reverse. The boat backed from the rocks, and shortly afterwards the water came rushing in at the rate of about a foot a minute, and we all knew the steamer was doomed.

"The officers and crew passed out life belts to everybody and orders were given to man the boats. It was terrible; the darkness, the rain, the crashing of the wreck and the roar of the boiling surf. Panic seized many and there was a blind rush in the blackness to get to the boats. At about 12:30 I saw a boat loaded with twenty-five people crash from the davits and every one fell into the sea. Among them was the first assistant engineer, now rescued and on board the steamer City of Topeka, going to Seattle. I helped to load three boats, but they were swamped. About this time the Valencia drifted broadside to the rocks.

"Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock three unsuccessful attempts were made to shoot lines to shore, but nothing could be done. That afternoon I volunteered to swim to land. A rope was fastened to me and I plunged into the surf.

"Before I left, a passenger, a woman I did not know, came to me and offered to give me a thousand dollars if I would get a line ashore. I told her I could not accept her money as it was my duty to try to save lives.

"It was no use. I was simply dashed back by waves, so I cut the line and a life buoy was thrown to me and I was pulled on board stunned.

"As the vessel settled, passengers and crew sought the masts and rigging. Many were swept off the decks. Others jumped into the sea, seeking to swim ashore.

"On Wednesday morning, Capt. Johnson told us the only chance for safety lay in the rafts. There were about a dozen women alive then, some in the rigging and some on the deckhouse. They refused to take to the rafts. I jumped from the mast where I had climbed and was helped upon one of the rafts. The sea was running high and there was a fog in which we lost sight of the other raft that left at the same time. It was about six hours afterwards that we were picked up by the Topeka and received every care and attention on that vessel."

Segalos was transferred to the Lorne so that he might be of service in guiding that vessel to the wreck.

THE PRESIDENT RETURNED BOOK

Did Not Accept "Fads and Fancies" From Col. Mann.

Washington, Jan. 26.—In view of the testimony of Col. Mann, editor of Town Topics, in his testimony yesterday in the libel suit against Norman Hapgood, that the president had received free a copy of Fads and Fancies, the following letter was made public at the White House today:

The White House, Washington, Nov. 1, 1905.

Sir: The president directs me to acknowledge receipt of your letter running as follows: "Col. Mann's compliments to the president and requests the honor of acceptance of the work Fads and Fancies, for representation in which the president was pleased to give photograph to Mrs. Hampton some three years ago, and which is but just completed. The volume is sent today by Adams Express. Oct. 13, 1905."

And to say that as Mrs. Hampton has already publicly stated, the president did not give any photograph to her for publication in the work in question and that he knew nothing of the book, or in fact that Mrs. Hampton wished the photograph for use therein. Under the circumstances the president cannot accept the book and it is accordingly returned to you herewith. Your truly,

WILLIAM LOEB, JR.,
Secretary to the President.

Col. William D. A. Mann, Editor Town Topics, 452 Fifth avenue, New York.

NEW CITY HALL AND JAIL

For Cass Lake is Probable, Council Having Asked Bids.

Cass Lake, Minn., Jan. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—That Cass Lake is in a very fair way to have a new city hall and jail is a matter of no little concern to citizens of this place who desire to see the community a progressive and go-ahead place. Last spring, an attempt was made to erect a new hall and jail, and the arrangements for building the same progressed so far that lots were secured. J. F. B. Neils, treasurer and local manager for the Neils Lumber company, which owns a large mill and has other property interests here, served injunction proceedings against the village council and stopped all operations on the hall. However, the council is now advertising for bids to erect a jail and fire hall, the bids to be opened on Feb. 3.

There is a rumor here to the effect that Charles Cutler, a former resident of this place, and now in the employ of the Great Northern railway as brakeman, will in the near future engage in a twenty-round fight with the "Kerry Kid" of West Superior.

GEORGE ADE IS TO BE BOOMED FOR CONGRESS.

Indianapolis, Jan. 26.—George Ade is to be boomed for congress by his admirers in the Tenth district. Ade's home is in Kentland, although he does not spend much time there, except to come down from Chicago occasionally to stock up his farms.

Frederick Gemmer, secretary for Governor Hanley and a leading Republican of the Tenth district, announced yesterday that Ade would be matched against Congressman Crumpacker for the congressional nomination.

"It does not matter much what his politics is," said Gemmer, "for everybody would vote for him in the district."

Should Ade be a candidate, Governor Hanley will be for him. Governor Hanley is one of Ade's staunchest admirers.

FIRE AT SCHNECTEDY.

Schnectedy, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The grain mill and elevator of Close Bros. was burned today, entailing a loss of about $75,000.

MAYOR FINED FOR CONTEMPT.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26.—In the case of Mayor McCarthy for calling a News Leader reporter a liar in police court yesterday and placing himself in contempt, he was fined $20 today by the justice. He took an appeal.

MAY REACH AGREEMENT

Concerning Morocco Outside of the International Conference.

French and German Specialists Begin Series of Discussions.

Algeciras, Spain, Jan. 26.—Count Von Tattenbach and M. Regnault, respectively the German and French specialists on Morocco, today began the first of a series of detailed private discussions with the object of reaching an agreement outside the Moroccan conference. M. Revoil, head of the French mission, and Herr Von Radowitz, head of the German mission, at their meeting yesterday, while most pleasant toward each other, avoided touching on anything except the general ground, Von Radowitz remarking at one point:

"Well you know that we could not let you have the policing of Morocco."

"I am sure that we shall not ask for it," replied M. Revoil.

That was as near as the two diplomats got to the main question, but they arranged for M. Regnault and Count Von Tattenbach to talk out the disputed points thoroughly. Their subject today was a Moroccan state bank, a question which probably will be one of the next to come before the conference after the problem of the taxes is disposed of.

The conference now has four sorts of activity—the Regnault-Tattenbach discussions, upon which most of the attention is fixed, the sub committee dealing with financial reforms; the committee of the whole from which the secretaries are excluded, and finally the conference itself. The members are tiring of this quiet coast town and are ready to get away, but it looks as though a month more will be required to finish the work in hand.

NELSON IS ON HIS DIGNITY

Will Not Fight Britt If He Arranges Previous Bouts.

Milwaukee, Jan. 26.—Billy Nolan, manager for Battling Nelson, lightweight champion pugilist of the world, announced today that, if Jimmy Britt arranged any short bouts previous to the proposed match between Nelson and Britt in April next, he will call the proposed match off and in the future will refuse to negotiate with Britt. The only engagement which Nelson intends to fill previous to meeting Britt in April is the bout with Terry McGovern in Philadelphia. Nolan says, in taking the stand he does, he is merely following out the terms exacted of Nelson by Britt previous to the last meeting of the two lightweights in September last.

ITALIAN HANGED FOR WIFE MURDER.

New York, Jan. 26.—Nicolo Murdaco, an Italian, was hanged in the jail at Jersey City today for the murder of his wife in that city in May last. Murdaco killed his wife with a hatchet after a quarrel in which she had declared "This is a free land and I am free to do as I please." His little son witnessed the crime and testified against his father.

JEROME CONDEMNS HIS OWN WITNESSES AND THE DEFENDANT IS CLEARED

Jury Says Hapgood of Collier's Weekly is Not Guilty of Criminal Libel.

District Attorney Expresses Loathing and Contempt for Plaintiffs.

New York, Jan. 26.—The jury in the Town Topics case returned a verdict that Editor Norman Hapgood is not guilty of criminal libel. The jury was out about ten minutes. Hapgood was charged with criminal libel of Justice Deuel. The complaint in the case was based on an editorial in Collier's Weekly in August last bearing on Justice Deuel's connection with Town Topics.

New York, Jan. 26.—"I will not attempt to disguise from you the utter loathing and contempt I feel for some of the witnesses whom I myself have introduced," declared District Attorney Jerome to the jury today in his argument for the prosecution in the action for criminal libel brought against Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's Weekly, on complaint of Justice Joseph M. Deuel, of the court of special sessions.

"For more than two weeks now we have been wandering through Vanity Fair," said Mr. Jerome. "witnessing exhibitions of human weakness and folly and, in some instances, of human degradation."

Continuing, Mr. Jerome said:

"It may be that I ought not to be here prosecuting one of the best friends I've got for a crime which in my private judment I believe he ought to have done and which I might have done in his place with more heat and more vim than he displayed. The law not to restrict the liberty of the press has provided that if the published article be true and published with justifiable ends it is a defense. On the ground of excuse the prosecution concedes that this publication was honestly made in a belief that it was true. If you find that the article was true you have got to acquit.

"Now let us see the character of this paper (referring to Town Topics). Mr. Shepard has told you that Col. Mann has stated that it was the natural evolution of personal journalism. If that is true it ought to be applicable to more than one daily paper in New York whose trend is that way. There is scarcely a morning paper that does not print vile scandals and obscene matter. I don't what interest it conserves to publish such stuff. I don't see what interest articles relating to the adultery of this or that person have for you and me.

"Does it serve any useful purpose? Is it other than filth? It is put there for no other purpose than that of paying dividends to the stockholders. The average newspaper is run from the counting room standpoint. Many of the advertisements are but a corruption fund to induce quiet about this, that or the other. This is not a pleasant statement to make, but if you ask the average newspaper man why a certain paper let up on a certain proposition, his reply will be 'Why didn't you see that advertisement of so and so?'

"These papers haven't yet reached the condition that this vile sheet has

CHURCH SPLIT THREATENED.

La Crosse Pastor's Ban on Card Playing Causes Trouble.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 26.—As a result of the pastor, Rev. William A. Gray, putting a ban on card playing among the members of his congregation, factionalism has begun in the parish of the Tabernacle Baptist church on the North side. Following this, difficulties have developed between two women and the parish officers, and a split in the church is threatened unless matters are speedily adjusted.

Rev. Mr. Gray, who is a young man, advocates strict adherence to the orthodox creed of the denomination and among other things has openly urged the discontinuance of card playing among members of the congregation.

Many of the members belong to card clubs and others play games in their homes.

HEINE ACQUITTED.

Found Not Guilty of Shooting Boy on Hallowe'en.

Moorhead, Minn., Jan. 26.—The case of the state of Minnesota against Henry Helme was argued in district court and given to the jury at noon yesterday. The case grows out of an alleged shooting on Hallowe'en when Peter, son of Alderman Ralph Pederson, was shot in the head while walking in company with several others near the waterworks. The bullet struck the boy in the head, stunning him and confining him to his bed for a time.

The jury, after deliberating four hours, returned a verdict of not guilty.

HEMP RAISING IS INCREASING

Is Now the Leading Export of the Philippine Islands.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Governor General Luke E. Wright, of the Philippine Islands, testified today before the senate committee having charge of the pending Philippine tariff bill. Senator Burrows brought out the fact that hemp is the chief export product of the islands and that a great deal of coffee is grown. He asked Governor Wright why the Philippine commission had not directed its labors to educating the Filipinos to extend the raising of crops which would not enter into competition with American products. Governor Wright responded that these crops are raised on hillside land and that the natives are congested near the sea, where the land is fit only for tobacco, sugar, rice, cocoanuts and similar products. He said that to do what the senator had suggested would necessitate a readjustment of the population, which "cannot be shifted like pawns on a chess board." The governor, however, added that hemp raising is being developed rapidly.

BURK DYING FROM WOUNDS

Victim of Shooting Pleads for Release of Prisoner.

Lamonia, Iowa, Jan. 26.—Joe Tunney, accused of shooting George Burk at a country literary society near here, has been captured and brought back. Burk, though dying from the wounds received, pleaded with the authorities to release Tunney and this action is creating wide interest in the case.

Burk was chairman of a society meeting which met last Friday evening. Tunney, who is only 16 years of age, attended the meeting while under the influence of liquor and was ejected by Burk, who threw the youth out bodily into the yard. The shooting occurred within the hearing of 100 people, but no one saw it. Tunney unharnessed a horse from a sleigh and ran for Missouri, where he was caught.

BURIED IN COAL PILE.

Iowa Fireman Has Narrow Escape From Terrible Death.

Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 26.—J. W. Wanning of Iowa City, a fireman on the Milwaukee road, narrowly escaped being buried alive. For an hour and a half he was a prisoner in a coal pile. He had taken the siding at Manilla to fill the tender with coal. He stood on the edge of the tank and tipped the chute over. As he did so he slipped and plunged to the bottom of the tender, and over him was poured six tons of coal. Fortunately he fell with his feet in front, and was enabled to stand upright. The railroad crew started at once to liberate him, and he was given a breathing space in a few moments. It required one and a half hours' labor on the part of the workmen before he was extricated from his serious position. He escaped with a few bruises.

THE MILITIA WITHDRAWN FROM CHATTANOOGA JAIL.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 26.—The militia was today withdrawn from the county jail, which was for the third time in its history stormed last night by a mob intent on lynching a negro, held for assaulting a white girl. There was no further use for their services as Ed Johnson, the man the mob was seeking, had been taken to Knoxville by Sheriff Shipp, it was stated.

"THE LATEST OUT."

TO SPEAK IN CLEVELAND

Bede Will Address the Tippecanoe Club Next Monday Night.

Has He Been Injured Politically by Opposing the Speaker?

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Jan. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. Adam Bede has accepted an invitation extended to him by the Tippecanoe club of Cleveland, Ohio, through Representative Burton, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors, to make a speech at their annual banquet, which will be held Monday night, Jan. 29.

Minnesota is after a few favors in the way of appropriations which the rivers and harbors committee can grant, and J. Adam is wise to his job and will go to Cleveland, Chairman Burton's home town, and give the Tippecanoe club a characteristic, witty jolly and incidentally weave into his talk a few pertinent remarks regarding the necessity of some additional money to be expended in improving the Duluth harbor.

Minneapolis, Jan. 26.—The Washington correspondent of the Journal, commenting on the speeches in the house on the statehood bill, says: "The most notable was made by J. Adam Bede of Duluth, who sustained his reputation as a wit, although it is to be feared his public repudiation of the speaker and his bolting of the party declaration indorsed by the formal caucus, will in the end destroy any chances he might have had for political distinction in Washington. Uncle Joe is a man with a long memory, and during the time he remains in the speaker's chair he is not likely to hand out any good things to the people who fought him. Sooner or later the Republicans of Duluth are likely to find that their representative on the floor is not able to secure recognition for local measures which some other man might easily have passed. When the Duluth Republicans discover this fact, Mr. Bede's hold on the district may be shaken rather rudely."

GAVE HIS LIFE FOR ANOTHER

Well Known Character Rescues Child From the Flames.

Cincinnati, Jan. 26.—After plunging through the flames into Charles Henderson's burning house at Montgomery, W. Va., and safely bringing out one of the children "Jug" King, a well-known character, was killed by a falling timber as the walls fell outward yesterday.

The cottage in which the Hendersons lived caught fire and the flames were in full headway before the family was arroused and fled from the burning building. Neighbors who had gathered discovered that one of the children, which both parents thought the other had carried out, was still in the house.

King plunged through the ring of flames, wrapped the child in a blanket, and was almost out of danger's way when the side of the house fell outward and he was struck by one of the timbers and killed. The child was unhurt.

BISHOP O'CONNEL'S RAPID ADVANCEMENT.

Rome, Jan. 26.—The pope today signed the papers appointing the Right Rev. W. H. O'Connell, bishop of Portland, Me., who recently visited Japan on a special mission, to be coadjutor archbishop of Loston, Mass.

The congregation of the propaganda met yesterday and discussed the appointment of Bishop O'Connell with the result that the cardinals voted almost unanimously for him. The friends of the bishop are jubilant. They scarcely expected so quick and complete a victory.

THIRTY STRIKES

Rolled in Succession by a Bowler at Peoria, Ill.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 26.—In a tournament for the state bowling championship outside Chicago, between the Peoria and Bradford teams, Clarence Bradshaw of the Peoria team broke all records. He rolled thirty straight strikes, completing two consecutive 300 games, one in the three men team contest and the other in the individuals. His average for the fifteen games was 252 pins. When the teams started Peoria was away behind in every contest but the phenomenal work of Bradshaw gave them every game rolled.

KILLED WRONG MAN.

Right Man is Notified That Mistake Will be Rectified.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 26.—M. Prosorovski, chief of the gendarmes at Pensa, east Russia, has been informed by the local revolutionary organization that the recent murder of Col. Lossovosky commanding the Seventy-eighth infantry division, by members of the organization was a blunder. He had been mistaken for Col. Prosorovski and the organization has notified the latter that the error will shortly be rectified.

KILLS EIGHT-HOUR LAW

House Passes Amendment Abrogating it on the Isthmus.

Fought by Democrats But Passed by Vote of 83 to 35.

Washington, Jan. 26.—After twenty minutes spent in an unsuccessful attempt to get consideration of Mr. Mann's (Ill.) general bridge bill, the house postponed pension day until tomorrow for the purpose of completing the urgent deficiency bill.

Before taking up the bill a resolution was reported from the committee on rules making "in order" on the bill the provision waiving the eight-hour law on the Isthmus of Panama amended so as to apply only to alien labor. In reporting the rule, Mr. Dalzell demanded the previous question, which, if ordered, would have provided twenty minutes debate on each side.

Mr. Williams, the minority leader, desiring, he said, to discuss the question of ordering the previous question, asked for seven minutes in addition to the twenty. This Mr. Dalzell refused, whereupon Mr. Williams made it necessary to call the roll of the house on the motion.

The house finally went into committee of the whole and the amendment abrogating the eight-hour law was offered. It was fought by the Democrats, but was adopted by a vote of 83 to 35.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The senate committee on territories has agreed to report favorably the statehood bill as passed by the house. Some minor amendments have been made to the bill.

FATHER AND MOTHER WORK

Father Gets $12,000 and Mother $6,000 From Des Moines Life.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—Violation of law, extravagance, crookedness and graft were embodied in the Iowa senate today against life insurance companies of Iowa. Senator Molesberry's remarks were occasioned by the calling up of his resolution providing for the investigation of such companies doing business in the state.

"The Des Moines Life pays its president $12,000 per annum and the wife of the president $6,000 per annum," declared Mr. Molesberrry. "The same company pays salaries to officers and employes to the amount of $55,000 and that on ledger assets of less than a million and a half dollars. If McCurdy, McCall and Alexander had known what salaries were paid the Des Moines Life officials they would certainly have been sorry that they were not operating in Iowa. One company, with a home office in Des Moines, one year wrote $83,000, for which not one cent of premium was collected and every cent of which was lapsed the next year. The insurance was written to allow the company to make a good showing."

Senator Molsberry accused various companies of extravagance and mismanagement of their affairs for the purpose of graft.

Denies Motion to Direct.

In the suit of Lucy Sims, as administratrix of the estate of William F. Sims, deceased, against the Northern Pacific Railroad company in United States court, the defense yesterday afternoon moved for a direction of verdict for the defendant after the plaintiff had put in her testimony. At noon today Judge Morris denied this motion and the defense is putting in its testimony this afternoon.

MUTINY HAS BROKEN OUT AT VLADIVOSTOK.

St. Petersburg Jan. 26.—According to advices received here a mutiny has broken out at Vladivostok. No details are available, the censorship being operative over press and private telegrams, but a report that Gen. Zelivanoff, the commander of the army corps, was wounded, is confirmed. The war department officials are unable to give particulars of the seriousness of the mutiny, which is due to the reserve men. These troops are thoroughly undisciplined and are clamoring for their immediate transportation home though the government has given them precedence over the trans-Siberian railroad in addition to chartering all the available steamers.

CITY BRIEFS

Smoke none but home-made union label cigars.

The funeral of Mrs. John Lindgren will be held Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the residence, 731 Garfield avenue, and at 2 o'clock from the First Swedish Baptist church, Nineteenth avenue west and First street. Interment will be made at Park Hill cemetery.

The annual report of the clerk of the municipal court, issued yesterday, shows fines and fees collected during the year to the amount of $21,394.94 as compared with $20,993.05 during the preceding year.

For the accommodation of the voters on Park point, and to allow loads of coal and other necessities to be taken across the canal, the ferry bridge will be operated tomorrow evening between 4 and 6 p. m.

For neglecting to obey the order of the municipal court to appear and disclose the whereabouts of some furniture held under a chattel mortgage, Mrs. Harriet Willett was this morning fined $10 and costs by Judge Cutting. The costs were later remitted.

The Federated Trades assembly will meet this evening and it may be that there will be a report on the matter of obtaining union labor grounds on lease. State Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams is in town and will be present this evening.

Norlin defeated Mergener last night at the Ideal pool hall in the pool contest, score 100 to 61 balls. Norlin will meet Westberg tonight. Norlin has lost one out of five games, Westberg three out of five, and Mergener three out of four.

There will be no meeting of the Unity club on Monday evening next. The discussion of "Federal Control of Railroads and Rate Making" has been indefinitely postponed.

TWO STRIKES

Still Waiting for Employers and Nothing is Doing.

President Clark of the Boilermakers' union claims that in spite of the fact that the employers have been notified that the union is ready to deal with them, the employers have paid no heed. President Clark says that the committee of the whole idea was the result of a suggestion of the employers themselves last year.

In the matter of the printers' strike nothing has been done by the Typothetae so far as can be learned, about the offer for settlement recently made by the executive committee of the union.

STRANGEST PALACE.

Most Remarkable is a House Under a River.

Perhaps the strangest house in all the world; a house so weird, so fantastic, so beautiful and so mysterious that all France that knows of it is thrilled with curiosity and consumed with desire to see it, has been built under the Seine river, between Melun and Sens, within a few miles of Paris, says the Chicago Tribune.

Victor de Larneau, a young aristocrat, wealthy, educated, a pet of society, a much-sought-after party, has deserted the world of Paris, and, wearied of society, tired of the sights of careless, pleasure-seeking crowds, suffering from ennui, has built him a house under the river and retired there to live his own life, amid books and pictures, and with only those friends he wants.

The story of the strange palace at first was not believed among the friends of the young millionaire. Paris laughed at the extravagance of the idea of a house under the bed of the beautiful river. But De Larneau did not invite any of his friends to visit him at his chateau, and for months none of them knew the truth. His apartments in Paris were closed and all his collection of paintings and china and tapestries had been taken away. Also the choicest of the furnishings of the old chateau had disappeared.

During the extreme hot weather in August a simple invitation came to Paris to three of De Larneau's friends. He requested them to visit him in his new home. He did not meet them at the station when they arrived from Paris, but an auto was waiting for them and they were whirled rapidly through the village and out into the country, along a road that ran beside the beautiful river for miles.

Not a building was in sight. Before the astonished guests was a marble grotto, with sculptural images on either side. Into this they were requested to step, and, an instant later, they were descending slowly into the earth. For fifty feet they went down, then the elevator stopped and they were ushered into a beautiful reception hall, where De Larneau met them with extended hands and bade them welcome to his new home.

They dropped from the glare and heat of the day into the most delicious coolness. Air, moved gently by ventilators, moved through the rooms, with all the dampness taken from it with the heat. In the middle of the marble reception hall a fountain played, the water being drawn down from the river. Fish swam in the pool, and the whole room was flooded with soft, mellow light.

From there they went into the marvelous library, directly under the river itself. In the center of the big room, in the ceiling, was a greenish-white space fifteen feet square. It was of glass, and the river, flowing over five thicknesses of toughened glass, let the light down through the water and glass into the room, while electric lights, hidden in ground glass, illumined the room. The choicest tapestries and the deepest chairs were there, besides a great table spread with the favorite possessions of the owner of the house.

Later, when De Larneau had told them why he had built the house under the river, they went to the dining room, where masses of growing plants filled two sides of the room, and sat down to dine.

This room is the most beautiful of all. At one side a fountain plays against a wall of marble, and at the other a bow window seems to open out upon a garden, yet the garden is all underground, and no sunlight comes to nourish the plants and flowers. The windows are of glass and open outward upon the little flower garden, where grow roses that never have tasted the sunlight, yet are rich in perfume and strange in this, even though lacking hardiness and the deep riotous colors of sun-bred flowers. And there are ferns and vines that seem to thrive in the artificial light and heat, and in the middle a cherry tree that blooms and blooms as if it were always spring until, perhaps, it will die.

To these guests the host explained that he had no idea of becoming a hermit. He wanted to escape the garish day, the falsity of society, the sight of the world—therefore he had gone under ground and under water. He intended to invite only those friends that he really wanted to see to visit him. He had made himself safe against intrusion, safe against the sights of the world that disturbed him; he had established a world of his own, in which he intended to live and have his being.

In the course of an interview with a representative of the Paris Matin, M. Julliot, the engineer of M. Lebaudy's balloon, declared that a balloon could scarcely be injured by rifle fire. Two hundred bullets trough the silk would only slightly diminish the balloon's powers of ascension, while its exceedingly mobile properties would render the possibility of disablement by shell fire exceedingly problematical. But should it be seriously rent the aeronauts would probably be able to reach friendly territory in safety before the final collapse.

No matter what the weather man on the hill top says, if you have the right shoe, you need not heed him.

Among the first arrivals of our Spring stocks are the things to cover your extremities—new hats and new shoes.

HANAN SHOES FOR MEN AND WOMEN.

The new styles will please all refined people, for they are elegant, tasty and at the same time sensible and full of comfort. Among men's shoes we call attention to the "No. 6" last, patent colt button—a new shape which makes a hit wherever Hanan Shoes are worn.

Mr. Burrows had decided to close out his women's shoes and we finished the job, but owing to the general demand we have concluded to carry again a full line of Hanan Shoes. The first shipment is here and the beautiful new shapes will be appreciated by every lady in Duluth who insists on elegance and worth in her footwear.

Patent leathers, buttoned or lace, welt sole with military heels, turned soles with Louis Quatorze heels; gun metal calf Bluchers; glazed kid lace shoes with patent tips, military heels and welt soles—all new, all rich and all $5 a pair.

COLUMBIA $3.50 SHOES SATISFY EVERY INCH OF THE FOOT.

New ones for 1906 can now be seen in our Shoe Department. Our Columbia $3.50 Shoe is an all-the-year-around bargain if there ever was one. Now more so than ever before, as everyone knows who is at all acquainted with the present conditions of the leather and shoe market. We are paying more to the makers without raising the retail price, while many other shoe stores lower the quality or raise the price. It is only by selling enormous quantities that we can hope to play even—a policy which gives the consumer a chance to co-operate in maintaining high qualities and reasonable prices. Are you with us?

THE ATTORNEYS WILL TRY AGAIN TO AGREE.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Another attempt is to be made by counsel for the indicted packers and the government to agree upon a statement of facts concerning the actions of Commissioner of Corporations Garfield, when he came west to investigate the beef industry. Judge Humphrey today announced that another conference of attorneys would be held and the hearing which was to proceed today was adjourned until Monday.

FARMER WANTS FINNISH WIFE

Tavio Enbusk of Wavina Has Land But No Woman.

A wife, Finnish preferred, is wanted by Tavio Enbusk of Wavina, Minn. E. A. Lindgren, general immigration agent o fthe Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, has received a letter from the man, who is 27 years old, asking him to recommend a Finnish girl who will be content to settle down as the life partner of an enterprising young Finlander on one of Minnesota's productive farms.

Mr. Enbusk says he is the owner of 160 acres of good land, and that all he lacks to make his happiness complete is a woman. He doesn't give any preference as to her personal appearance or habits, so one's looks, if they are not pleasing, will not necessarily be a bar to her happiness if she wants to put in an application for the position offered.

Mr. Lindgren is a bachelor, and feels that the matter is a little beyond him. He replied to the effect that he had as yet been unable to find a wife for himself, and was therefore hardly qualified to enter the field as a matchmaker or matrimonial bureau.

LUDICROUS INCIDENTS

Of the Latest Man Hunt in Jasper County, Missouri.

Will the Escaped Murderers Return for Their Witness Fees?

Joplin, Mos., Jan. 26.—Residents of Jasper county have talked of little else lately but the escape of John Franklin and Teddy Daly, the murderers brought from the penitentiary, where they were serving terms of ninety-nine and fifty years, to testify against their pal, Estel P. Butler. The men are still at large and no trace of them has been found since they unceremoniously shucked off their handcuffs at the door of the Carthage jail and fled into the darkness.

Sheriff Marrs has offered a personal reward of $500 each for the return of the convicts, dead or alive. He prefers them dead.

"Those men are worth all of that to Marrs," said one wise man in discussing the reward. "His office pays him $15,000 a year, and according to political custom here he is entitled to renomination and re-election if he can get it. But if those two men are not caught the fact may defeat his renomination, and if he wins in the Republican convention the affair will be used against him with telling effect by the Democratic nominee. So if Mr. Marrs wants to retain his office for another term he had better catch Daly and Franklin."

Many residents of the county believe that Daly is in hiding in the vicinity. They say that it is unlikely that he had any money when he escaped, and they believe that he had rather stay where he has friends than go elsewhere. But Franklin is believed to have gone as far as time and opportunity have allowed.

This idea was expressed by Butler, who was asked if he thought that his former pals were near Carthage.

"Daly may be," he answered, "but Franklin has gone so far by this time that it would cost $2.25 to send him a postal card."

One thoughtful citizen approached Sheriff Marrs and said:

"I can tell you how to get Daly and Franklin."

"Well?" inquired the sheriff laconically.

"Those fellows are entitled to witness fees for coming down from Jefferson City to aid blind justice. They officially claimed their fees after the trial and in due time the fees will be paid. You just watch the county treasurer's office and when Daly and Franklin call for their money nab 'em. No witness in Jasper county ever failed to call for his witness fee."

Sheriff Marrs is not as sanguine of the success of the plan as was his adviser, but it is safe to say that if Daly and Franklin attempt to get the money due them from the county that they will be nabbed.

Daly has not much of a criminal record, but Franklin, who is about 45 years old, has a long criminal record. After his conviction he showed several of the local officers some of his cleverness. He obtained a small piece of wire in the jail and then asked that he be handcuffed. After the bracelets were carefully adjusted he slipped the wire under the bands, worked it into the crevice where the cuffs were joined, gave it a jerk and the cuffs flew open.

He said that there were few handcuffs that he could not open with a stout piece of wire, if given a little time.

But it is not likely that Franklin had to use his skill in removing the handcuffs that fastened him to Teddy Daly when they left Joplin at 11 p. m. last Tuesday for the county jail at Carthage. The handcuffs were an old pair that were in the drawer of a desk at police headquarters, but which were not used because they were worthless, City Marshall Myers says that some time ago he took the handcuffs with him when he went to Kansas after two prisoners. He locked their hands together and took them aboard a train.

When ready to leave the train at Joplin Myers noticed that the men were not linked together and the bracelets were not in sight.

"Where are the handcuffs?" he asked in surprise.

"Here they are," said one of the men, as he drew them from his pockets. "The darned things wouldn't stay on our wrists."

Myers left the worthless manacles in a desk and they were used by a constable who did not know that they were untrustworthy.

Much criticism of Deputy Warden Moore has been heard because he remained in Joplin and trusted the men in his charge to Deputy Marshal Marquis. Moore found Joplin a pleasant place in which to spend the time and he did not want the long ride to Carthage on the midnight trolley. His anxiety to remain in Joplin over night will probably cost him his job.

There has also been much laughing at Marquis, from whom the men escaped. When he left the trolley car at Carthage he buttoned his overcoat tightly to avoid catching cold. His revolver was in his hip pocket, wrapped in a handkerchief to prevent its rusting.

When the men made their break for liberty one ran one way and the other scampered in the other direction. Marquis did not know which one to follow, and while he hesitated the men ran. Then he unbuttoned his overcoat, drew his handkerchief-wrapped weapon from his hip pocket, unwrapped it and began shooting.

Witnesses of the affair say that he followed Franklin about fifteen feet, a distance made necessary to go around the corner of the jail so that he could shoot in the general direction taken by Franklin.

Sheriff Marrs and his deputies were busy at court here, so they left the hunting of the fugitives to the Anti-Horse Thief association. Members of that body rode over the country for two days and then gave up the chase.

After Daly's conviction he was taken to the corner to be transported by trolley to Carthage. As he stood waiting for the car a crowd collected around him. He talked for a time with friends and then pulled out his watch and said:

"I am going to Jefferson City to spend the rest of my life and I will not need this watch. So I will sell it at auction. What am I offered?"

The crowd began bidding and Daly acted as auctioneer. He sold the watch for a good sum, then sold his chain, and later his scarf pin, which he drew from his tie. The auction collected a crowd of several hundred persons through which the officers had to press their way to get aboard the car when it came along.

PASSENGERS BRUISED IN TRAIN COLLISION.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 26.—The Missouri Pacific express train westbound, crashed into a freight train standing on the main track early today, and nearly 200 passengers were bruised, but none seriously hurt. The freight train caught fire and ten derailed cars were burned.

RAILROADS

ASK FOR AN INCREASE

Railroads Would Add to Minimum Weights on Stock.

Public Officials Get One-Twelth of Free Passes.

At St. Paul yesterday the railway and warehouse commission heard the application of the various railroads in the state, to be allowed to increase the minimum weights on live stock shipments, but took no action. The extra weights desired are to conform with the extra size of cattle cars with which the majority of roads are being equipped.

At the hearing opposition unexpectedly developed, several cattle-shipping firms, entering a vigorous protest. They declared the new weights would work a hardship on the small shippers, and if allowed to increase would in time freeze them out altogether.

During the hearing it developed that the size of the cattle cars has been materially increasing, together with the weights, and the new order of things has been working to the disadvantage of the small shipper. It was predicted by some of the opposition that weights would be so arranged that in time the business would all be in the hands of the big cattle concerns.

WHERE PASSES GO.

Table Showing Precentages for Different Classes of Pass Holders,

From a statement by the Texas railroad commission, showing the total number of miles traveled on free passes over the railroads of the state during the last fiscal year, the Railway Age has figured out the following percentages for different classes of pass holders:

"Exchange transportation to officials, agents and employes of other roads, including express and telegraph companies and steamship lines, 19.6 per cent; by employes of the roads and members of their families, 54.8 per cent; on account of newspaper advertising, 8.2 per cent; by public officials, clerks and other members of the United States, state, county and municipal governments, 7.1 per cent; by other persons, including clergymen, mendicants and representatives of religious and philanthropic objects, 10 per cent. It will be seen that nearly two-thirds of the free traveling was done by officers or employes of transportation lines, that one-tenth represents the aid by railways to religious and charitable work, and that while all the newspaper and other publications in the state were doing one-fourteenth of the free travel in exchange for advertising about one-twelfth of the entire mileage was chargeable to public officials, from village servants up to representatives of the United States."

United Railways' Officers.

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—The stockholders of the United Railways today elected Thornwell B. Mullaly assistant to the president and G. F. Chapman vice president and general manager. Charles Holbrook was relieved of the office of vice president and made chairman of the board of directors. The offices of assistant to the president and chairman of the board of directors were created today. G. H. Davis of New York was elected a director. Mr. Mullaly is a New York attorney.

Three Routes for Milwaukee.

St. Paul, Jan. 26.—President A. J. Earling of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway arrived in St. Paul this afternoon at 3 o'clock on his special train and departed for the West at 3:30.

Mr. Earling said his mission was to look into the matter of terminals for the Milwaukee road's Pacific coast extension, and that he would inspect three routes which he had in view for crossing the mountains. He declined to say where those three routes were located.

Co-Operation of Departments.

Among the talks which will be given at the meeting of the Northern Railway club this evening is one by W. W. Walker, general freight agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, who will speak on "Co-operation of Departments." It is expected that this will prove of particular interest to all members of the club and provoke considerable discussion.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

A Two-Year-Old Baby Choked to Death by Peanut Shell.

Pentoga—Death came suddenly to little Joseph Reynold, twenty-months-old son of William W. Maton of Pentoga, Iron county, as the result of a peculiar occurrence. The shell of a peanut lodged in the throat, and the boy choked to death.

Menominee—While at work loading logs on a train at Gould's spur, near here, Wednesday Barney Bowerman was caught underneath several logs and instantly crushed to death. One horse was killed at the time.

Ole Olson, a woodsman, wandered away from his camp near Northland and has just been found, frozen to death, in the snow.

Crystal Falls—The annual dog race at Crystal Falls is announced for Feb. 2. Many youngsters have entered their sleigh dogs in the event, and some great sport is anticipated. A trophy cup will go to the winner, and there will be cash prizes besides.

Ontonagon—A good-sized deer was killed by a St. Paul train near Ontonagon a few days ago. The animal got on the track and for some distance raced in front of the train, which steadily gained upon it. The deer was struck by the engine and killed. The train was stopped and the carcass taken to Ontonagon.

Sault Ste. Marie—A tailor at the Soo has commenced suit against Hon. Chase S. Osborn for an interest in the Moose Mountain mining proposition in which the latter is interested, also for a fourth of all the money Osborn has secured on the sale of a portion of his holdings. The tailor claims that he gave Osborn the tip that made him wealthy.

Newberry—Ross Leighton, appointed postmaster at Newberry, succeeds Charles Brebner, whose term expires in April. Mr. Brebner has held the office of postmaster for eight years and has been a most efficient and obliging official. Having recently accepted a position as cashier in the Newberry bank, however, he was not a candidate for reappointment. Mr. Leighton will not take charge of the office before the first of March.

NO PARDON FOR COLE.

Washington, Jan. 26.—President Roosevelt has declined a request to pardon Charles H. Cole, former president of the Globe National bank of Boston, Mass., convicted of violation of the national banking laws.

EPIDEMIC OF MEASLES

Disease is Apparently Becoming Widespread in the City.

Health Department Will Enforce the Quarantine More Strictly.

Troubles are coming in chunks.

Just as the city is convalescent from a severe attack of curling fever, the political campaign began to warm up, and now the town is threatened with an epidemic of measles.

The disease has become quite widespread in the city. It is apparently not confined to children, but adults are also subjected to the shame and disgrace of being confined to the house while they nurse an attack of a disease which they should have passed through before they shed their dolls and tops.

Almost any other epidemic could have been forgiven. Pneumonia is a well bred disease that adds a certain distinction to the patient. Diphtheria is sufficiently dangerous to make the patient's condition a continual source of solicitation by his friends. But measles are only one step better than being compelled to push around a face swollen twice its natural size with the mumps.

But as a cure for the strenuous life, measles are the real thing. Exposure to the cold with an attack of measles, means a very serious condition of affairs, and the sufferers must content themselves with watching the progress of affairs through the front parlor window, and get rid of their surplus energy by kicking the furniture.

The disease has become so prevalent during the last week or two, that the health department has had to step in and take a hand in stopping the spread of it. An order has been issued by the health commissioner to all the doctors in the city, to promptly report all cases which come to their notice, and the quarantine will be more strictly enforced during the next few weeks, or until the disease has been checked.

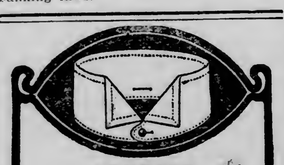

The disease hitherto, has been of a mild form, but it shows a tendency to become malignant, and the department will adopt as strict measures in regard to it, as are enforced in cases of diphtheria.

DYNAMITE WHISKERS.

The name of "whiskers" is applied to the featherlike crystals that gather on the outside of the yellow covering in which frozen dynamite is wrapped, says the Engineering and Mining Journal. These whiskers are more "irritable" than the dynamite itself, and a source of considerable danger unless handled carefully. A case is on record where sticks of dynamite had been thawed out in hot water, and the can of hot water in which it was done left in the blacksmith shop without being emptied of the residual scum of grease and whiskers. The first blow of the blacksmith's hammer on a nearby anvil was sufficient to set off the whiskers by concussion. The can was blown to pieces, but fortunately no one was hurt.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Joseph Santley in "A Runaway Boy," also tomorrow afternoon and evening.

METROPOLITAN — Baltimore Beauties.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM — Monday and Tuesday, "Liberty Belles."

METROPOLITAN—Next week, High School Girls.

JOSEPH SANTLEY.

Joseph Santley, who will appear at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening in "A Runaway Boy," is said to be the youngest star in the theatrical firmament and at the same time so clever that many of his elder brother thespians have good cause to be envious of his rapid advancement. He is a mighty good looking youngster, is young Santley, and he has been on the stage ever since his fourth year; being a receptive little chap, he has imbibed all of the technique of stageland and has had good sense enough to reject many of the glaring faults and mannerisms so often seen in others, even though they may be in stellar parts. This year young Santley is appearing in a new melodrama by Hal Reid called "A Runaway Boy." It is the most ambitious play and part that he has ever attempted and as it was written to order by the well-known dramatist, it fits him to a nicety.

BALTIMORE BEAUTIES.

The Baltimore Beauties will give three more performances at the Metropolitan before leaving the city to conquer hearts elsewhere, the last performance to be given tomorrow evening. "A Scotch Highball" and "A Busy Night," the two merry burlesquers, appear to be making a distinct hit with the patrons of the popular home of burlesque and vaudeville.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS.

The High School Girls, headed by Nat and Sol Fields, will come to the Metropolitan Monday evening and remain all the week, giving the usual matinees. The Field Brothers are brothers of the famous Lew Field, now starring in "It Happened in Nordland," and the tall man of the famous team of German comedians, Weber and Fields. Nat and Sol are said to have plenty of the genius for creating laughs that has made Lew so successful. There is plenty of other talent in the company.

GIRL SLEEPS TWO WEEKS AND CANNOT BE ROUSED.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 26.—Florence Parker, daughter of Col. L. C. Parker of Deer Lodge, Mont., fell asleep twelve days ago while visiting friends at Tucson, Ariz., and all efforts to arouse her have proved futile. She was brought here two days ago that specialists might attend her.

Dr. Brainerd was notified in advance and the girl was taken from a berth in the sleeping car to the sisters' hospital. Her case is puzzling the physicians. She has led an active out-door life and never has known a day's sickness.

WEST END

FOR CULLUM AND MORK

Sixth Ward is Getting to One-Sided Stage Just Now.

Seventh Ward, Naturally Largely Republican, For Cullum.

The political situation in the Sixth and Seventh wards is still drifting Cullumward. In the Sixth ward in particular the feeling is very strong and it appears that Cullum for mayor and Charles Mork for alderman will be the ticket which will be carried through on a wave of popularity. It really appears in the Sixth as though the situation is very one-sided. But Mr. Mork and his supporters, despite this assurance of election, are still working on the principle that "no election is a sure thing until the votes are counted."

In the Seventh ward where Roland D. Haven is on the aldermanic ticket in lonely grandeur, excitement has not yet been stirred up although some little work has been done there for Trevillion during the past week. However, it does not seem likely that the Republican candidate for mayor will be able to carry this ward although it is naturally Republican and it is believed a thousand votes will be cast there at this election. Mayor Cullum is very popular in the Seventh ward and while he has a large natural majority to overcome it is believed he will do it.

ANNUAL MEETING.

West End Commercial Club to Hold Election of Officers.

The West End Commercial club will hold its annual meeting this evening and will elect officers for the coming year. There may be a change in the list of officers for the reason that President J. J. Moe believes that if some of those who do not now display as much interest as they should, were elected, it would bring them out and get them busy in the club work.

Much work is to be done during the coming year and every active member who can be mustered into service is desired. Other matters of interest will likely come up at this evening's meeting and a full attendance of the club is desired.

ATHLETIC ENTERTAINMENT

To Take Place Tuesday at Columbia Hall---Good Attractions.

An athletic entertainment will take place at Columbia hall next Tuesday evening in which some of the best talent of the Head of the Lakes will take part and the affair promises to be a decidedly nice one. To begin with singing and other musical specialties will be given and following this will be the principal event of the evening, which will be a wrestling match between Arthur Roshe of West Duluth and George Williams of Superior, Wis.

The best two out of three falls will decide and the stakes will be the gate money, or 75 per cent thereof, the winner to get 50 per cent and the loser 25 per cent; the management has also offered $25 to the winner. The men are said to be top-notchers in the business.

Strong Man Coming.

C. R. Lindblom of the West end is endeavoring to make arrangements wherewith he can bring to the Head of the Lakes Anders Anderson, the new physical wonder from Sweden. According to the New York papers Anderson is the most wonderful of all strong men yet exploited. He is not only a strong man, but a wrestler whom the champions are leary of.

Strong Man Coming.

C. R. Lindblom of the West end is endeavoring to make arrangements wherewith he can bring to the Head of the Lakes Anders Anderson, the new physical wonder from Sweden. According to the New York papers Anderson is the most wonderful of all strong men yet exploited. He is not only a strong man, but a wrestler whom the champions are leary of.

Further arrangements will likely be made soon.

Learning Singing.

The Gopher club, which is composed of West end young men, met at the residence of George Jewell in the United States block last Wednesday evening and were put through a course of sprouts in the rudiments of music. There are said to be several fine voices in the club and they require only cultivation to be in excellent and useful condition. The club will meet for practice every week in future.

West End Shortrails.

Gust Desjardines will leave in a day or two for Drumand, Minn., to work for Scott-Graff in the woods.

Joseph Twaddle left yesterday for St. Paul to spend a few days.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Shaw, 207 Thirty-ninth avenue west.

Mrs. Minnie Bingham of Minneapolis, who has been visiting Dr. and Mrs. Coventry, will return home today.

Mrs. Preston of 2509 West Second street, who has been sick since Christmas, is improving. Her daughter, Miss Jessie Preston is laid up with a severe cold.

A daughter was born a few days ago to Mr. and Mrs. George St. George of 522 Twenty-fifth avenue west.

R. R. Forward is in Chicago on his regular spring buying tour.

The Home Missionary society of the Grace M. E. church held a thanks offering entertainment in the church last evening. A fine literary and musical program was rendered and quite a neat sum was realized.

C. R. Lind and Arthur Rosin, the wrestlers, have just returned from a successful tour through the range towns.

It's pure if it comes from the Lion Drug store.

The Ladies Aid society of Grace M. E. church who have been holding a rummage sale for the past week at West Duluth have done so well that they have decided to do business there a few days longer.

The ladies of St. Luke's Episcopal church will hold a cooked food sale tomorrow afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. D. Morrison at 2131 East Superior street.

Word has been received at the West end that Waldemar J. Moe, son of J. J. Moe, the well known merchant, has been appointed head of the legal department of the Indian reservation at Fort Totten, near Devils Lake, N. D. The appointment is a particular honor in view of the youth of the young man.

What the doctor orders is what you need—no substitute at the Lion Drug store.

A RUSSIAN JEW COLONY IN TEXAS

Zionist Society Will Aid Persecuted to Leave Czar's Land.

Galveston, Tex., Jan. 26.—The movement to open a colony of Jews who are persecuted in Russia, which has gained considerable momentum in Texas within the past few months, was formally launched in Galveston at a well-attended meeting in the synagogue at Twenty-seventh street and Avenue I. About 150 people were present and 100 of them placed their names on the roll which made them members of the Texas Zionist association.

According to Sam Fridner, one of the executive board of the association, the association in Texas was organized Jan. 1, with headquarters at San Antonio, but that previous to the completion of the organization the movement had been discussed in every city in the state and that at present about 10,000 Jews in Texas were interested. He further stated that the movement was becoming world wide and about 500,000 Jews had already joined the association.

Mr. Fridner makes this statement of the objects of the movement:

"We have organized in the state of Texas to bring the Jews out of Russia and to colonize them on the vacant lands of this state, not in Palestine. The association in other states will work to place them on lands in their states, while those in London are working to colonize certain parts of Africa. It is not a question of moving the Jews to Palestine, but one of getting them out of Russia, where they cannot live in safety, and we here in Texas believe that there is no better place on earth for them to live happily than in Texas, where there is plenty of room.

"Every member of the association will contribute according to his means to the movement, but our greatest help will come from the Jews in Europe and America who have been fortunate in accumulating riches. All are interested in the welfare of the Russian Jews, and many of them have already volunteered to contribute liberally in the association movement.

"Our Texas association is headed by Dr. Friendlanders of Beaumont, who is very enthusiastic over the prospects of colonizing Texas. Abe Gordon of Houston is vice president, while the other officers are all prominent citizens of the state."

Abe Gordon of Houston was one of the leading speakers at the meeting here. Sam Fridner also spoke, as did Mr. Daly and others. The meeting was an enthusiatic one, the young men of the city taking a special interest in the prospect of lending a hand to relieve the suffering of the Jews in Russia.

FORTY CHINESE TO VISIT THE U. S.

High Commissioners to Attempt to Secure Better Relations.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 26.—C. E. Stone, general passenger agent of the Great Northern, has received word that forty Chinese commissioners will visit the United States next month. The Great Northern Steamship line will bring the distinguished guests from the Celestial empire and they will arrive in Seattle, Feb. 24.

It is one of the first Chinese high commissions to visit this country and in view of the present relations between the United States government and China, the visit has a special significance. It is intimated that the commissioners will spend much time in Washington attempting to secure better relations commercially between the two countries and a modification of the present strict exclusion laws now operative against the Chinese.

Arriving at Seattle, Feb. 24, the forty high commissioners will spend some time in studying conditions on the western coast. Then will follow a trip over the Oriental limited to St. Paul.

From St. Paul the commissioners will make a tour of the Eastern cities, paying especial attention to Washington.

The trip is one of the movements made recently by the Chinese government to establish closer relations with the Oriental countries. In view of the fact that the members of the commission have been specially commissioned by the Chinese government, the visit will have an official significance.

After a close study of conditions in America, including a pleasure trip to Niagara, the party will sail for Europe.

CHINESE TREASURER

Disappears With $700 But is Caught in Fresno.

Vallejo, Colo., Jan. 26.—Joe Chock Man, a Chinese, treasurer of the Golden Gate Bazar, left here with $700 with which to pay some bills in San Francisco. He did not return and inquiry disclosed that he had not visited San Francisco creditors of the concern.

It is alleged that he returned here later, secretly packing $500 worth of silk in trunks and shipped them to Fresno. Chief of Police Sanford wired that the trunks had been located there and were awaiting their owner, who is a Chinaman. Later Chief Sanford was notified that Joe Chock Man had been arrested and was in jail on the charge of felony embezzlement.

BULL CAUSES TERROR.

Davenport Excited Till Packing Employe Kills the Animal.

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 26.—Hunting big game with explosive bullets is something of a novelty in Davenport, but that is what occurred when a savage bull escaped from a local packing plant and tore through the streets, bidding defiance to all attempts to capture him. His savage appearance and wild bellowings assured him a right of way, and it was not until a well-directed shot from a magazine rifle hit him in the forehead that he was brought to bay.

When the animal's escape was discovered, Henry Kohrs of the packing plant and E. J. Kistenmacher armed themselves with Winchester rifles and shells with soft-nosed bullets, and soon were on the trail of the beast. After following him through the city, Kistenmacher brought him to a stand in a cornfield, the animal facing about and waving defiance at his pursuers.

Kistenmacher finally got a chance at a 50-yard shot and put a bullet through the animal's forehead. The ball expanded and tore a great hole in the creature's head, and by the time the men reached it the bull was dead.

IN HONOR OF POET BURNS

Clan Stewart Celebrates Anniversary of Scottish Bard's Birth.

Good Program and Ball Given at Flaaten's Auditorium.

The celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, Scotland's greatest bard, is attended year after year by a great outpuring of the Scots of the city and of many others who probably have very little, if any, claim to Celtic blood. The celebration which took place last night seemed to have more people in attendance than ever. The affair was most happy, the crowd congenial, the program of a high order of merit and the evening as a whole such that nobody present would wish to have missed it. The celebration was in honor of the 147th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, Scotland's plowman poet and the favorite song writer of the human race, and was given under the auspices of Clan Stewart, No. 50, Order of Scottish Clans. It was at Flaaten's conservatory on West First street and the place was packed. The committees having the affair in charge were as follows:

Arrangements—Henry Taylor, John G. Ross, William Young, A. G. McGhie and A. G. Macaulay.

Reception—John G. Ross, J. H. McNiven, A. J. McLennan, Robert Ross, John Kelly, Colin Thomson, Alex McRae and John Burnett.

Floor—Simon Chalmer, James Elder, David Spence and John R. Rankin.

One matter of general regret was the absence of Simon Clark, who for years was chief of the clan and whose benign smile always greeted the guests at these celebrations. Mr. Clark is in the East attending the grocers' national convention. Another matter of regret was the enforced absence of Philip Gordon Brown, who was to have given two numbers during the program, but who was kept away by the serious illness of his wife.

The program, as has been said, was of a high order of merit. Some of the best talent of the city was on it and each number was enthusiastically received. The opening was a bag-pipe selection by Prof. John Smith, who played a Highland air. Then Chief John G. Ross, in a neat address of welcome, tossed wide the arms to the clan to take the visitors to its bosom. Mr. Ross put everybody at ease and opened the concert in a proper spirit.

Miss Alice Sjoselius sang "A Red, Red Rose" and in the second part of the program sang "Dinna Ask Me." She was encored persistently and replied each time. Miss Mae Wylie gave readings in both the first and second parts of the program, the first time reciting "The Cotter's Saturday Night" and the second part a dainty little thing which earned her vigorous applause. Mrs. Emily Ellis Woodward sang in each part also, singing the first time "My Home is Where the Heather Blooms" and the second time "Annie Laurie." Mrs. Woodward sang the Scots airs with great effect and they were properly recognized. The singing of James C. Myron, who gave "Scots Wha Hae" and "The March of the Cameron Men," was well received and his humorous recitals as encores convulsed the audience.

A feature of the evening's entertainment was John H. Matheson who sang Gaelic songs much to the delight of those who understood the language and these were not a few. It was surprising to observe the number who could carry on a conversation in the language of the Celt and they were pleased with Mr. Matheson. He has a very pleasing voice and appearance, generally. His costume was the kilt and was neat and tasteful.

Another of the program was the address on "Robert Burns" by Clansman H. J. McClearn, one of Duluth's leading young lawyers. The address was short but good. He spoke of the human side of the poet, his failings and his warm-heartedness. Mr. McClearn said Scotsmen should not wish it understood that they merely honor the memory of Robert Burns, but that they love the poet because he was one of themselves and sang the song of humanity. Mr. McClearn said that had Burns wrote only "A Cotter's Saturday Night" and "A Man's a Man For a' That" he would have deserved to be enshrined in memory as one of the world's greatest poets.

Following the program Flaaten's orchestra played and the clansmen and their visitors danced until the early hours of this morning. The dance program was conventional for the most part, but a liberal supply of highland schottisches and Scotch reels were in it to afford stir and fun. Shortly after the dancing started Prof. John Smith danced the Highland fling while Colin Thomson played the bagpipes.

Last call on these "plums" Saturday

When the store closes we will count stock.

The prices given on many of the lots below mentioned would be ridiculous, were it not for the fact that we have determined to practically give the goods away rather than include them in the inventory. Come and get them. Some of you need them and we MUST get rid of them before 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Basement Last calls.

We're bunching all that's left of the rummage lots—regardless of former values—and 'way below their present worth.

The White Shirt Waist Sale

Will be a crowd-bringer again Saturday.

The crowds Thursday and today have demonstrated conclusively that the women of this city and vicinity appreciate our efforts to give them "big things" in advance of any other store at the Head of the Lakes. We make plain, four-square announcements and they know it and profit by that knowledge.

Sale of 3000 New Style White Waists

Hundreds sold these first two days, but such a quantity to begin with that the early selling has hardly made an impression. There are five lots — read about each one — if you haven't been here yet, be with Saturday's crowd. Come early.

LOT NO. 1. White Waists worth $1.50
98c
Beautiful white linene waists, new spring styles, box pleated or embroidered stock collars. These waists have the new long cuffs, which are pleated and cut to match the front. The materials are strong and durable, and the waists are well made and easily worth $1.50.

LOT NO. 2. White Waists worth $2.00
$1.25
All white linene waists with fronts of five groups of fine French cluster tucking and with box pleated panel—have stock collars with cluster tucking to match in back and front—some have plain hemstitched and tucked fronts—all have the new long cuffs and puffed sleeves—excellent values.

LOT NO. 3. White Waists worth $2.50
$1.49
Linen finished waists with wide panels down the front, which are daintily silk embroidered. In addition they are tucked and pleated in both front and back—the collar is the stock pattern, tucked to match fronts—sleeves are the new puffs and long cuffs—every waist worth $2.50.

LOT NO. 4. White Waists worth $3.00
$1.98
These are very handsome waists, real linen fronts, embroidered all over with silk embroidering in eyelet designs—also box pleated and tucked front and back—with tucked collar to match—every waist the equal to any waist possible to be found in Duluth at $3.00.

LOT NO. 5. Linen Waists worth $4.50.
$2.98
Genuine imported Irish Linen waists in the most popular soft finished effects, daintily hand embroidered in a large variety of beautiful designs, with tucked collars and backs. They button in the back and have a French tucked yoke in addition to the embroidery fronts. $4.50 would be little enough for any one in the lot.

THE CHINESE NEW YEAR HERE

Far Easterners in Duluth Observe Beginning of Festival Time.

"Happy New Year," is the greeting the Chinese laundryman and restaurateur is extending to his patrons today, for the glad, new Chinese year began with appropriate festivities last night. These will continue until Feb. 5 and then the local Chinese colony will resume the peaceful tenor of its way.

Duluth Chinamen gathered in a West Superior restaurant owned and operated by one of their number. A feat chisled, wherein strange, weird viands from the far East were partaken of and incense burned merrily. The revelers ate Chinese candied fruits, nuts, candy, chop suey, drank tea galore and stuffed themselves on rice, with a little Oriental wine on the side. Of course there will not be feasts every evening during the New Year festival but observers will keep the occasion in mind.

The Chinese always make it a point to settle all their debts before the beginning of the new year and every upright, untainted business starts the new year with a clean slate, or rather an untouched string of counting beads. They also exchange gifts.

FROZE TO DEATH BESIDE TRACK

Superior Man Found by Brother Near Rockmont, Wis.

Section men on the Omaha road discovered the frozen body of Ornurd Johnson beside the track two miles north of Rockmont, yesterday. While they were endeavoring to discover the man's name, Andrew Johnson, a brother, came along and identified the remains of his relative, for whom he had been searching.

The brothers started out Wednesday evening to go to Hines station, but became parted. Ornurd appeared to have fallen beside the track, striking his head against the rail with such force as to render him unconscious. His body was found frozen about three feet from the rail.

An investigation by the Douglas county coroner developed that the brothers were intoxicated. The surviving brother remembers staggering along the track and reaching Hines station without his hat and mittens. He remained all night at a camp and started back yesterday morning to find Ornurd Johnson. The latter was 36 years old and was at one time employed at one of the coal docks.

THE LITTLE WIDOW

A Mighty Good Sort of Neighbor to Have.

"A little widow, a neighbor of mine, persuaded me to try Grape-Nuts when my stomach was so weak that it would not retain food of any other kind," writes a grateful woman, from San Pernardino Co., Cal.

"I had been ill and confined to my bed with fever and nervous prostration for three long months after the birth of my second boy. We were in despair until the little widow's advice brought relief.

"I liked Grape-Nuts food from the beginning, and in an incredibly short time it gave me such strength that I was able to leave my bed and enjoy my three good meals a day. In two months my weight increased from 95 to 113 pounds, my nerves had steadied down and I felt ready for anything. My neighbors were amazed to see me gain so rapidly and still more so when they heard that Grape-Nuts alone had brought the change.

"My 4-year-old boy had eczema, very bad, last spring and lost his appetite entirely, which made him cross and peevish. I put him on a diet of Grape-Nuts, which he relished at once. He improved from the beginning, the eczema disappeared and now he is fat and rosy, with a delightfully soft, clear skin. The Grape-Nuts diet did it. I will willingly answer all inquiries." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

C. Augustus Seton, who has been on trial before Recorder Goff in New York, charged with the larceny of $6,800 from the Houston, Galveston & Interurban Railroad company of Texas, in flating about three millions of dollars worth of bonds, was convicted late Thursday and remanded to jail to await sentence.

Two children of Leonard Wagner were burned to death at Park Falls, Wis., while the parents were absent Thursday.

Victoria square, a business block in Montreal, was partly destroyed by fire Thursday, causing a loss of $200,000. The principal losers are John Fisher, Son & company, wholesale woolens, $100,000; the Campbell Clothing company, $20,000; McIntyre Sons & company, wholesale dry goods, $20,000; the remainder being distributed among a dozen other firms.

Walter G. Oakman was elected president of the Interborough-Metropolitan company, which is to control the merged traction lines in Manhattan and the Bronx. John B. McDonald was elected vice president of the company.

While endeavoring to protect his wife from attack Thursday night, Boyd Carpenter of Coatesville, Pa., was shot and killed by unknown assassins. His wife was also shot and is not expected to recover.

The rear section of the six story brick building at the northeast corner of Second and John streets, occupied by the National Barrel company at Cincinnati, collapsed Thursday night, seriously injuring George Purley, Sr., and his son, George, Jr. The latter will probably die. Twenty other employes at work in the front end of the building had narrow escapes. The loss is estimated at $10,000. The cause of the accident has not been determined.

$23,000,000 a Year

That's the net profit poured into the Public Treasury of Germany every year by government-ownership of its Prussian railroads alone.

The biggest profits can not be told in dollars and cents: plenty of trains for the public convenience; handsome and roomy stations; millions of dollars saved to the public by cheap fare and freight; thousands of lives saved every year by right precautions against accidents.

More yet: rapid improvements—railroads getting better and more valuable—and the public owns them.

A brilliant and fascinating fact-story — told in Russell's "Soldiers of the Common Good," in Everybody's for February.

HIS WRIST FROZEN.

Methodist Minister Has Thrilling Experience in Extreme Cold.

Rothsay, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. G. J. Kelly, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, had a thrilling experience in the extreme cold yesterday. Mr. Kelly came from England a year ago, and has a great desire to fulfill his appointments. In spite of many warnings he left for a country charge, ten miles from town, and drove through the wind and cold registering 20 degrees below zero. Arriving at his charge he found to his astonishment that not a farmer had ventured out in the cold and the building was empty. He returned home in the face of the severe cold and wind, and on his arrival at Rothsay needed medical assistance. His right wrist was frozen and the skin rubbed off by the friction of his wrist movements in holding the reins.

LUMBER EXPORTERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The National Lumber Exporters association closed its sixth annual convention here yesterday. Officers weer elected as follows: President, W. H. Russe, Memphis; first vice president, J. L. Allcock, Baltimore; secretary, Richard W. Price, Baltimore; secretary-traffic manager, Edward M. Terry, New York.

The association placed itself on record as in favor of reciprocity between this country and foreign nations and in favor of the Grosscup plan of regulation of freight rates in the United States.

THREE BACHELORS.

Sons Heed Mother's Request to Await Sister's Wedding.

Springfield, O., Jan. 26.—There was a peculiar romance in the life of the Rev. Joel Dalby, who died at Washing C. H., and was buried there. There were five sons and one daughter in his father's family. On her deathbed the mother expressed the wish that the five sons should not marry until their sister should be married and cared for. A blighted love affair was afterward the cause of her remaining single, and three of the five remaining adhered to the wish of their mother and never married.

GIRL A NOTARY AT 14.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 26.—Jessie Johnson, pretty 14-year-old daughter of Julius Johnson, 251 East Jefferson street, has given Kokomo an added reason for pride in numbering among its population the youngest notary public in this section, if not in Indiana.

Miss Johnson, who was born March 8, 1891, is employed as stenographer and typewriter in the law office of B. C. Moon. She has just received her commission from Governor Hanly and gave bond for $1,000.

Captain of Athenian Guard Faints at Look From Sara.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Stage fright and the presence of Sara the Divine—these are the causes to which physicians at the Medico-Chirurgical hospital attribute the swoon which fractured the nose of Charles Forrestal and may disfigure him for life.

It was in the last act of "Phedre," at the Lyric theater. Bernhardt, as Phedre, was pleading with Hippolyte, as played by M. de Max. Back of Hippolyte were the ghosts of guards of Theseus.

At their head was Forrestal, their captain. The role of an Athenian guard demands statuelike attention and rigidity. In that frozen line none was more statesque than the captain.

Suddenly Forrestal fell face downward upon the palace floor. Blood spurted from his face as he lay without sign of life. Instantly Bernhardt stepped between him and the audience, spreading her Athenian mantle, hiding the crimson stream.

Other guards lifted their unconscious comrade and carried him to the wings. Bernhardt inquired anxiously for Forrestal when the scene ended. By that time he had been taken to the hospital.

WHIPPED WIFE DAILY.

Woman Finally Secures Warrant for Her Cruel Husband.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Anton Johnson, 3214 Jones street, secured a warrant for the arrest of her husband charging that he had whipped her every day for two weeks.

Mrs. Johnson told City Prosecutor Lee that she was compelled to flee from home, fearing her husband would murder her.

The next day, Mrs. Johnson says, she returned to her home with her 16-months-old child in her arms to secure some clothing and Johnson pushed her and the baby out into the snow and locked the door.

Mrs. Johnson displayed her arms to the prosecutor and they were covered with bruise marks.

WEIGHT OF SNOW

Causes Big Building to Collapse and Others in Danger.

Vinton, Iowa, Jan. 26.—The roof of the Rink livery barn collapsed from the excessive weight of the snow, which has fallen almost incessantly for several days. The building was erected originally as a skating rink at a cost of $6,000 and was the best one of its class in this section of the state. All the horses were protected from injury by their stalls, so that they escaped with but slight injuries, but a number of carriages, buggies and sleighs were demolished. The building was owned by the Aungst Bros., and occupied by the H. C. Knutz livery. The loss will reach $1,000. The private barn of Prof. H. C. Halleck also collapsed and many other buildings are in imminent danger from the heaviest weight of snow that has fallen in this section for many years.

STABBED WHILE RESCUING SISTER.

Mount Holly, N. J., Jan. 26.—At Evansboro, a small village three miles from Moorestown, yesterday, John Buzby, a negro, assaulted Hannah Sharp, 15 years old. Her cries were heard by her brother, John Sharp, who went to her aid. Buzby turned on him, stabbing him twice in the breast, and then fled. The alarm was given and a score of farmers hunted the fugitive, who was finally captured and landed in jail. It is feared Sharp's injuries may prove fatal.

BACK TO STILLWATER.

Declared by Board of Control to Have Broken Parole.

Mankato, Minn., Jan. 26.—D. G. Robinson, a former well known insurance man of this city, but late a resident of Moorhead, has been taken to Stillwater by Sheriff J. M. Boyer of Clay county. The board of control declared his parole broken. Robinson resided in Mankato for several years, and he was found guilty in this district court here of forgery and sentenced to the state's prison for a term of four years and six months. He served a portion of his time, was released on parole, secured employment with an insurance company and was apparently doing well, when his arrest occurred at Perkam on a charge of forgery, alleged to have been committed at Moorhead. His trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

ACCIDENTALLY POISONED.

Iowa Farmer Swallows Carbolic Acid and Dies in Agony.

Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 26.—Henry Smith, 35 years of age, and a prominent farmer of Johnson county, died yesterday as a result of accidental poisoning. He was visiting his parents' home and asked them for a drink. Through an error he was given carbolic acid, which he drank. He died in great agony. He leaves a wife and daughter.

PRESIDENT'S FRIENDSHIP

Won by Old Virginia Negro by "Befoh-de-Wah" Stories.

"Uncle Dickey" Declines to Repeat Anything Employer Said.

Pine Knob, Va., Jan. 26.—One of the happiest negroes in the United States today is "Uncle Dickey," a simon-pure specimen of the antebellum darkey. The morning's mail brought him a fine letter from his great and good friend, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States.

The acquaintance of the president and "Uncle Dickey" had its beginning during the recent Christmas holidays, but the intimacy and understanding it has brought forth in a few weeks could not be greater if their relations dated from boyhood.

The letter from the president assured "Uncle Dickey" that the first gentleman in the land had so greatly enjoyed his companionship on his recent visit that he would probably make another in a few weeks.

"Uncle Dickey" can't write, but declares the president already knows how glad he will be to see him.

"He sho' made a hit wif me," said "Uncle Dickey." "He jes' talk any othah gem'man though he is president. Ah thought sho' he would be stuck on hisself, but he ain't. Ah declah, Ah jes' thought he nevah would get thahd of heahin' me talk about de ole befoh-de-wah days. Ah believes he could set up mos' all night listnin' to 'em."

It took a great deal of persuasion to induce "Uncle Dickey" to make any utterance whatever about the president. He said Mr. Roosevelt might not like for him to talk.

"What we said was jes' between gem' men," he declares, "an' he didn't 'spect it to go no fathah."

"However, "Uncle Dickey," who is 72 years old and in full possession of all his faculties, especially that of memory, did consent to describe the manner in which he entertained the president.

Mr. Roosevelt has an estate near here, and a small log house is its only improvement. "Uncle Dickey" is one of the caretakers and looks after the president's household affairs whenever the head of the nation retires to this secluded property for relief from the strain of his official duties. When the president, Mrs. Roosevelt and the younger children came here during Christmas week for a four days' visit, "Uncle Dickey" made the arrangements for the hunting party that was a feature of the outing. He was Mr. Roosevelt's guide, and when the shooting was poor, during the day, "Uncle Dickey" regaled the president with stories of the ante-bellum days.

One evening, after the return to the house, the president and "Uncle Dickey" had a long conversation together—that is, "Uncle Dickey" conversed and the president listened. It is doubtful if Mr. Roosevelt was ever more interested than he was at that time in the simple negro's quaint speech. It was one of those scenes that have made the president probably the most popular man of his time—the touch of human nature that makes the whole world akin.

A Virginian friend of the president, who was a guest at the country home one evening when "Uncle Dickey" was at his best, has partially lifted the veil from the scene.

The president wanted to know about the old-time Christmas and here is a synopsis of what "Uncle Dickey" said: "Ole Massa" and "Missus" with the children (chillun) would go down the lane to the cabin to witness the negro Christmas quiltings, and hear the banjo jicking for the minuet and the old-time Virginia reel and cotillions, and see the darkies dance the "breakdown," and "cut the pigeon wing," or old Sweeney's jig and execute double shuffle with a skill that would make a minstrel man envious.

Some of the old "chunes" were "Sugar in the Gourd," "Forked Deer," "Money Musk," "Old Virginia Never Tire," "Mississippi Sawyer," "Midnight Serenade," "Number One," "Soldier's Joy," "Susanna Gal," "Arkansaw Traveler," etc.

The president was convulsed with laughter as "Uncle Dickey" jumped out upon the floor and began to imitate the negro banjoist who always called off the sets. Just to add a touch of realism, "Uncle Dickey" recited the following verses which were very popular with negro callers in those days:

Choose you' pardners, time's er flyin',
Take yo' places on de flo';
Don't yo' heah dat fiddle cryin'
"Nickerdemus" ebbermo'?

S'lute yo' pardners, how perlitely,
Dat's de motion through and through;
Swing dem corners, step up lightly;
Hail Columby! Hallaloo.

Ladies change an' keep er scootin',
Cross right ober, now you' swing;
Hol' dem hands up highfalutin'
Look permuskus—dat's de thing.

Fus' fo' forward, keep er diggin',
Now yo' sashay back again,
Nebber min' yo' ragged riggin',
So 't don't show de naked skin.

Mussy! look at Winny Jeter,
Dat gal flings a soople toe;
Crack you' heels dar, Tom, an' meet her,
Bow en smile, en so en so.

Lawdy! see dat Peter Slater,
How he bow an' scrape aroun',
Head look like a pealed pertater,
Slick as glass up on de crown.

Promenade! now dat comes handy,
Hunt yo' seats an' take a res',
Gentlemens will pass de candy
To de gals dey love best.

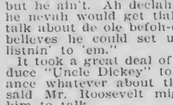

Banjo music was the darky's delight, and they shuffled, rather than danced, and in "Old Dan Tucker" and "Rock the Cradle, Joe," and "Hop Light, Ladies," their nimble feet would stamp the floor loud enough to be heard a half mile away.

Uncle Dickey entertained the president with the old-time Santa Claus in the cabins on the Southern plantation —Virginia sausage, cabbage cooked with pigtails, hog and hominy, with "knicknacks" for the young ones, and perhaps a coveted medicine and palliative for "mammy's rheumatiz." White children reared on Southern plantations had black "mammies" in the ante-bellum days, and they often loved the black ones as well as their own.

In describing the old camp meetings, he spoke of the great amphitheater laid off for the tents—the old preacher's stand under the wide shed, the immense preparations, and hospitality for the entertainment of the big crowds—the chicken and 'possum pies, the lemonade in wooden buckets, the cheese cake, and apple dumplings and pumpkin pies, all cooked on the grounds. The great majority came, he said, for fun and "devilment," and the few with pious intent.

He next spoke of the old slave-time harvest dinners and the old plantation songs at the corn shuckings and hog killings, and how the chitterlings were served, and how the girls were dressed in quaint and primitive fashion at the Christmas parties. His recollections were charming of the negro Christmas quiltings—the roaring hickory, ash, and red oak fires in the yawning chimney places and the postprandial briar or corncob pipe.

"I wish there were more like you," said Mr. Roosevelt on the way to the railroad station after cordially shaking hands with "Uncle Dickey" on bidding him goodby.

EARTHQUAKES DO DAMAGE.

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 26.—The whole Western country, from Gallup, N. M., to Seligman, Ariz., a distance of several hundred miles, experienced earthquake shocks about 1:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At Gallup the motion was from west to east. Buildings rocked and people fled precipitately from their homes. At Williams, Ariz., the shock resembled an explosion. Goods were thrown from the shelves of the stores and several buildings jerked from their foundations. At Flagstaff the wave moved from south to north. Chimneys were tumbled over, and the plastering in several rooms of the railway hospital fell. A number of patients fled in fear. Moving trains in the disturbed area were halted by the shocks, which were plainly felt by the train crews. No loss of life or serious damage to property has thus far been reported.

ROMAN COIN IN A FLORIDA TREE

Piece Dated 408 B. C. Probably Carried by Spanish Soldier.

Ormonde, Fla., Jan. 26.—A short time ago the buzzsaw of a planing mill at Montbrooke, Fla., in cutting up a pine tree brought to light a Roman coin dated 408 B. C. The Smithsonian Institution, after inspection, has decided the money genuine.

The saw in striking the silver coin embedded deep in the big pine log, naturally made a rasping sound.

As something bright was seen to fall into the pit, the workmen guessed that one of the saw teeth had been broken off, but the saw, on being stopped, was found uninjured, so a hunt was made in the pit and the coin was discovered.

The history of the coin can only be conjectured. It probably was a piece carried by some Spanish soldier. The chances are that, being surprised or threatened by Indians, the Spaniard secreted the coin under the bark of a tree, expecting to recover it later on. Perhaps the redskins never permitted him to return, or maybe he lost his bearings.

After a few years the bark grew entirely around it, and later the fiber of the tree. The coin still remains bright and shows little wear.

It is the property of F. E. Crawford, Florida anthropologists think it one of the most interesting finds for a long time.

'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

GIRL HEROINE

In Tennessee Slid Down Telephone Pole, Carrying Brother.

Huntingdon, Tenn., Jan. 26.—The good women of Huntingdon have launched a movement to secure, by popular subscription, a purse of $100 or more for Miss Maude Davidson, the plucky little telephone operator, who, by her act of heroism during a recent fire, has aroused the admiration of every one. Miss Davidson is an orphan, with the care of two little brothers and one sister devolving upon her.

She is employed as night operator at the central office of the Cumberland Telephone company's exchange here, and, with a small brother sleeps in the exchange. She awakened shortly after 11 p. m. to find the entire building in smoke and vapor arising from the fire that was raging in the cellar. She was on the second floor, and, finding escape cut off by the stairway, took her little brother out a front window onto an awning. Telling the little brother to place his arms about her neck, she managed to reach a telephone pole from the roof, and with the boy upon her back, she descended to the ground. Rushing to Hotel Olive she gave the alarm in time for the building to be saved. A large part of the desired amount has been subscribed.

WOMAN ENDS LIFE.

Illness of Gen. Wheeler, an Old Friend, Practically the Cause.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Brooding over the fatal illness of her old family friend, Gen. Joseph Wheeler, Mrs. Margaret Bailey ended her life with strychnine at the Sherman house last night. Twelve years ago Mrs. Bailey was prominent in Washington society especially in army circles. At the death of her husband she found a reversal of fortune, having been left with little means. She then came to Chicago and entered the employ of a mercantile firm as a traveling saleswoman. Recently she was released by her employers and has been despondent since because of financial troubles. Yesterday she received a telegram to the effect that the general was in his last illness and that his death would result in a short time. This, it is believed, led her to take her own life.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

CEMENT DECKS ON THE COREY

Experiment Being Made to Test Durability of Construction.

The use for concrete in construction work continue to multiply and it is a matter of special interest to people engaged in the construction business to learn that concrete is not only being used to build piers, heavy foundations and breakwaters on land, but is being utilized also in ship construction.

The steamer Corey, owned by the United States Steel corporation and one of the four largest vessels that ply the lakes has decks of concrete instead of oak planking, which has heretofore been used in the construction of the big lake vessels. The concrete decks are said to make the boat practically fireproof.

The constant or concrete deck is in the nature of an experiment. Should it prove durable, cement decking, it is said, will be ssubstituted for wooden decking on all the large steamers in the future.

The water ballast compartments of all the war ships are now lined with cement mortar which it is said to do excellent service in preserving the metal, which would otherwise rust from direct contact of the salt sea water with the steel plates forming the ship's bottom.

LOCAL CONCERN CHANGES NAME

The Fitzsimmons-Palmer Company Enlarges Capital Stock to $100,000.

Amended articles of incorporation filed with the county register of deeds yesterday afternoon changed the name of the Fitzsimmons-Derrig company, the local trust commission firm to the Fitzsimmons-Palmer company, and increased the capital stock of the concern from $50,000 to $100,000, the stock being divided into 2,000 shares.

The change in name is one of convenience for the firm, Mr. Derrig having severed his connection with it about two years ago. S. G. Palmer, whose name now appears in the firm name has been connected with the company since 1892 and is its vice president. Charles T. Fitzsimmons is president and Frank S. Sleeper is secretary of the Fitzsimmons-Palmer company.

For the past several years, while operating under a smaller capital stock the company has been carrying a surplus and the increase in stock now is to meet the exigiencies of a growing business. The company will continue to operate along the same line that it has been engaged in, a general mercantile business, wholesale and retail including fruits and all kinds of products of the soil, and a general commission business.

Articles of incorporation of the Sheldon-Mather Timber company were also filed yesterday. The incorporators are John P. Sims of Minneapolis, Frank P. Sheldon of Grand Rapids, Minn., and Oscar L. Mather of Duluth. The company is capitalized at $250,000 and proposes to do a general real estate and timber business, with offices in Duluth.

HONEYMOON ROUTE

Was Well Advertised on the Trains and in Hotels.

Reading Pa., Jan. 26.—Dodgers bearing the printed headlines, "Get on the job, we were married today," were distributed by friends of Florence Goodwin and E. R. Geiswelte. They were wedded by the Rev. W. H. Myers, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, and after a reception left on a wedding trip.

When the pair boarded the train they were astonished to find a number of passengers reading posters and looking at them in a queer manner. When they were handed one of the placards they understood.

These posters were sent all along the line of their travel and to all the hotels that it would be possible for them to stop at, with the instructions that they be posted in a prominent place for the benefit of the general public.

RICH WIFE SUES WEALTHY SPOUSE

Locked Out, She Produces Contract for $300 a Year.

Macomb, Ill., Jan. 26.—A suit for separate maintenance, just filed in the McDonough county circuit court by Mrs. Emma T. Henbee against Stephen A. Henbee, the wealthy Bushnell merchant and capitalist, promises some unusual features.

At the time the couple were married they also had drawn up a special contract, whereby each was to hold their own property and use the income from it just as they would if they were not married. The wife had about $7,000 in property and Mr. Henbee's was valued at $50,000. Moreover, Henbee was to furnish her a comfortable home and allow her $300 a year until the contract was severed by death, or otherwise.

The contract made, the couple signed it, and proceeded with the marriage ceremony, which was performed at the Palmer house in Chicago, Feb. 14, 1905, by Judge Dunne, now mayor of Chicago.

They had a short honeymoon, after which they went to Bushnell to reside. Henbee had several grown children, who protested, but it was never known that this caused any feeling between the man and wife. Last July Mrs. Henbee sold a part of her property and went out West to invest the proceeds. When she returned she found her house locked and has since not been able to gain admission to it. Neither has her husband contributed to her support.

She alleges he is worth $200,000 and has an annual income of $20,000.

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures, quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

ONLY WOMAN MEMBER

Of an Exchange Votes at the Election in Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 26.—Miss Leah Klein, who cast a vote in the Merchants' exchange election this week, is perhaps the only woman member of an exchange in the United States, if not in the world. She represents a Chicago grain company.

Only 18 years of age, modest and unassuming, she goes on 'change and buys and sells with as much ease and composure as the oldest veterans, and her ventures are generally successful.

She reads the quotation bulletins and keeps abreast of her work in a manner that is admirable, and her capacity is not limited to office work, but extends to the general run of business, which requires considerable executive ability.

Miss Klein came into prominence with the exchange recently. Everyone knew that she possessed great ability, but not until she became manager at Memphis did they dream of her capability. A grain company called its manager to Chicago some time ago and left Miss Klein temporarily in charge. Another manager was to have been sent to take the place of the former one, but so well did Miss Klein perform her duties that the company has failed to send another man and she is now the general manager.

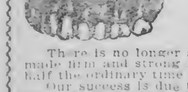

The members of the exchange became aware of the fact that Miss Klein would cast a vote for her company and prepared for it. As soon as she had voted and was ready to leave the hall, a committee composed of H. B. Sculoss and T. B. Andrews escorted Miss Klein to the stand and President Harry P. Johnson presented her with a beautiful diamond ring.

CITY CAT NEEDS HELP.

Albion, Mich., Jan. 26.—A cat, purchased about a year ago by the city council, was helpless in the midst of the many rats and mice which had been chewing into bits the city's documents.

When pussy first joined Albion's force of employes, the city thought itself too poor to purchase a steel box for the documents, which were kept in the fire department.

The mice furnished many a good meal, yet they increased so rapidly in numbers that the cat has asked for assistance like any other employe. Now the city will buy the strong box.

MERCHANT PRINCESS

Of Indiana Has Fallen Into the Trap of Cupid.

Mrs. Carson Became One of the State's Richest Women.

Shelbyville, Ind., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Flora Davis, Indiana's merchant princess, has fallen into Cupid's trap and is now the bride of Harry Carson, a wealthy Indiana man.

Mrs. Carson is the most remarkable business woman in Indiana, and her marriage has aroused interest throughout the state. From a very lowly financial condition she has grown, solely through her own efforts, to be one of the richest women in the state.

At 10 years of age she learned millinery; at 13 she owned a store; at 18 she was at the front in her business; at 23 she bought a block in the center of the city and established a department store; at 30 she owned a magnificent home, houses, stocks and bonds, and at 40 she is one of the richest women in the state.

How was it all done? When Mrs. Davis-Carson was 10 years old her mother died. Her father, Solomon Joseph, at the time a wealthy merchant in Cincinnati, was left with six children besides Flora, and he desired they should have the advantages of an education.

Flora, however, preferred millinery and learned the trade from some friends.

At 12 years, the turning point in Flora's life came. Her father was caught in a financial crash and his wealth slipped away. He left Cincinnati and came to live in Shelbyville.

Soon after the family established itself in Shelbyville, Flora obtained employment in a local millinery store, the only establishment of the kind in the locality. The owner always fearing competition, did not care to employ anyone, but he took Flora in because he thought her harmless at the end of the first day, the owner of the store informed Flora that she was discharged. When she asked for reasons, he answered:

"Because you know more about the business than I do. And I no not propose to employ that sort of person."

The answer set the girl to thinking. One of her friends repeats the story Mrs. Davis-Carson told her some time ago:

"When I found that Weiner would not employ me, I decided to have a millinery store of my own. But I had no money. I wrote to a millinery house in Indianapolis and they answered that for $25 I could get my first installment of goods.

"I set about to earn the necessary $25 with which to embark in business. I found I could earn small sums cleaning and pressing hats and I tried it. Before long I saved up $25 and was ready to start my first business enterprise. I thought I was capable to manage my business, regardless of size—I was 13 years old."

A store opened and managed by a child was a novelty, and everybody went to see it. Women called first in curiosity and then bought their millinery from the clever girl. Young as Flora was, she understood her business.

A few years after Flora opened her store, her former employer decided to quit the millinery business in Shelbyville. Flora took this opportunity to move to larger quarters.

She leased a room on the public square and her store compared favorably with any establishment in Shelbyville.

Although deeply interested in her business, Flora Joseph gave a good deal of her spare time to reading and study. She developed a taste for literature and art. Today she is a cultured woman.

Seeing that her business went along smoothly Flora Joseph decided she would open a department store. A few weeks after she decided to do so she bought one of the most desirable business blocks in the city square.

Soon the house was full with goods and ready for business.

About this time Cupid became active and he turned to Flora Joseph. She had met Robert W. Davis, a bookkeeper in Indianapolis, and it must have been a case of love at first sight, for, although she was of Jewish faith and Davis was a Gentile, Flora was not kept back. She married him.

This did not interfere with her business career. She continued as the active head of the business. Her husband was her assistant and kept the accounts. In 1888 Davis died.

Mrs. Davis-Carson's love affair with her present husband dates back about two years. A few years ago Harry Carson came from Richmond to Shelbyville, where he opened a brokerage office. After he met Mrs. Davis he became a frequent visitor to her home. Mutual interest in art and literature drew the couple toward each other.

The wedding took place in the parlors of Mrs. Davis' home and the justice who married the couple received a pocketbook from the bridegroom which was filled with $5 bills. It contained the largest fee he ever received.

Westinghouse Works in His Father's Shop at $1.28 Per.

Pittsburg, Penn., Jan. 26.—Working in the plant of the Westinghouse Air Brake company, at East Pittsburg, as an apprentice, at the munificent salary of $1.28 per day, is George Westinghouse, Jr., son of the famous inventor and manufacturer of electrical appliances and multimillionaire. Young Westinghouse puts in eight hours every day, does the same work as the other apprentices, of whom there are 200, carries his noonday meal in a tin pail and has more grease and grime on his clothing than any other man about the establishment. More than that, there is not an employe but declares that he is a "good fellow," although he expects and receives no favors.

Young Westinghouse completed his college career at Yale last year, and graduated with high honor.

When the whistle blows at 7 o'clock in the morning Westinghouse is there with the other apprentices. Although "Solitude," the palatial home of the Westinghouse family in Pittsburg, is closed at present, the young man lives there with the servants. His parents have spent the winter at their homes in Lenox, Mass., and Washington, and are now en route to Europe, where they will spend the remainder of the winter.

The servants get the young man up betimes. There are automobiles of his father's own make in the garage, and splendid carriages and high stepping horses in the stable, but Westinghouse boards a street car and travels the distance to the plant the same as the other workmen. When the whistle blows at noon, he sits in a row with the apprentices and eats his lunch from his tin pail, as they do. There is not a thing by which he could be distinguished from the others, and, when his work is finished in the evening, he returns to "Solitude" in a street car.

The men in the plant declare that he manages to get more grime on his clothes and make himself look more disreputable than any apprentice in the shop.

Young Westinghouse will take a complete course in electricity. After he leaves the air brake plant, he will enter the various other plants, and gain a thorough knowledge of the entire business, of which some day he will be the head.

Young Westinghouse is the only child, and will be the sole heir of his father's vast wealth. Nobody knows how much George Westinghouse is worth, his friends say not less than $20,000,000.

MICROBE MAY DETERMINE FATE

Of Edward Williams, Now on Trial for a Murder.

Danville, Ky., Jan. 26.—A microbe will either land Edward Williams in the penitentiary or set him free.

Last July Williams and Samuel Landy, a wealthy merchant, engaged in a quarrel over a trivial matter, and Williams struck Landy on the head with an old brick, fracturing his skull.

Physicians pronounced the wound serious, although not necessarily fatal, unless complications should arise. Eight days later Landy died of lockjaw.

Eight or ten of the leading physicians of the Blue Grass were summoned, and testified that lockjaw cannot be contracted unless by microbe.

The attorneys for Williams, consisting of Gen. R. J. Breckinridge, C. C. Fox, Morrison Breckinridge and Chauncy Bagby, claimed that unless it could be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Williams caused the microbe to take up its abode in the wound he could not be held responsible for the murder. Evidence was produced showing that Landy, against the advice of his physician, had rubbed common tallow on the wound, and that upon another occasion had spread a horse blanket out in the yard and taken a nap upon it. The physicians were again called and the fact brought out that lockjaw microbes are especially common around barns; although other physicians held that they exist in ordinary tallow, such as Landy used upon the wound. Still others claim that old bricks are their favorite dwelling place.

The case is attracting wide attention, the courthouse being crowded every day. The microbe question was never before brought into a case in this circuit court.

Is Battleship Dreadnaught, Embodying Lessons of Japan's Victory.

London, Jan. 26.—King Edward will launch, on Feb. 10, England's wonderful new battleship, the Dreadnaught, which is to revolutionize the whole science of naval warfare.

The details of construction are still kept secret, despite the perssistent efforts of other countries to elicit information. But her design is sufficiently known to convince many that she practically renders obsolete all existing warships. Not only is she the biggest, but she is the fastest ever built, having a displacement of 1500 tons and a speed of 20 knots.

Ten years ago the British warships were the best in the world. The Dreadnought could lie at 10,000 yards range and sink the entire fleet, in the opinion of an engineer of a leading technical paper, as easily as the Japanese sank the Russians in Japan Sea. Indeed, the fleet would practically be unable to reply, their guns not being really effective at much over 5,000 yards.

Incidentally the Dreadnaught probably could give battle single handed to the entire German fleet.

She is the embodiment of the lessons of the Russo-Japanese war. The Japanese permitted no foreign power to witness their great sea engagements except Great Britain, whose attaches noted all that took place. Their conclusions were submitted to a special committee, on which sat not only the most experienced naval officers, but the Director of Naval Construction, Lord Kelvin, and a number of leading private shipbuilders.

In another respect the Dreadnaught is unique, being the first battleship to be driven by turbines. She has been built in record time, the keel having been laid on Oct. 2.

BOY TRUSTY

Foils Escape of Prisoners and is Given His Freedom.

Kounze, Tex., Jan. 26.—Because a boy in the county jail remained faithful to his friends who made him a trusty, Sheriff L. G. Roberts gave him his freedom.

During nights several prisoners knocked out the instep springs from their shoes and attempted to saw the bars of the second floor in the Hardin county jail. They would have succeeded in opening a way for them to escape had it not been for the boy who had been made a trusty. He threatened to give alarm should the prisoners attempt to leave the jail.

Upon investigation is was found that twelve prisoners, white and black, conspired to make their escape. As a measure of precaution Sheriff Roberts and his deputies extracted the steels from the stoes of all prisoners.

THE COURTHOUSE COMMISSION.

The judges of the district court have appointed the five members of the courthouse commission provided for by a law passed last winter, and they have done their part of the work in an admirable manner.

The county commissioners constitute a majority of the commission with three members: Edward M. Patterson of Duluth, Capt. Elisha Morcom of Tower, and Capt. Neil McInnis of Eveleth. Two citizens of Duluth, John Miller, of the Duluth board of trade, a former governor of North Dakota, and William C. Agnew, director of the American Exchange bank of Duluth and general manager of the Mahoning mine at Hibbing, complete the commission.

It would be hard to improve upon this commission. In selecting the commissioners representation has been given to the Vermilion range in the person of Capt. Morcom, Capt. McInnis represents the Mesaba range, and E. M. Patterson is from Duluth. The selections of citizens of Duluth to complete the board are extremely well-judged.

The county board having set the ball a-rolling, and the court having appointed the commission, it remains only for the work of building a sadly needed new courthouse for Duluth to proceed. There will no doubt be complete harmony between the commission and the county board, as there needs to be, and both bodies will, as they should, cooperate to complete the work in the shortest time consistent with doing the best possible work upon it.

The way now seems clear to the realization of a hope long entertained by this county, that the old, disreputable and unsafe courthouse should be replaced by a handsome, commodious and creditable structure upon a more convenient and suitable site, and it is to be hoped that nothing will occur to interfere with the progress of this work.

SHOULD BE REASONABLE.

Quoting a paragraph from The Herald to the effect that if Northern Minnesota is relieved "from the burden of swamps, idle areas and park and forestry fanatics, it will blossom like a rose garden," the St. Peter Free Press says that if The Herald would cut out the phrase "park and forestry fanatics" it would read better. Then the Free Press continues:

> A park or two, of reasonable dimensions, and several forest reservations of as large an area as conditions will permit, would be a blessing to Northern Minnesota, and the only obstacle in the way of getting this appears to lie in the expectation to realize upon the property in question in favor of a few at the expense of the many.

If the "fanatics" approached the subject of parks and forestry reserves as temperately and sanely as the Free Press does that phrase would never have appeared in The Herald. But they did not. They are greedily seeking every acre of land in Northern Minnesota that they can get tied up and shut in from settlers, regardless of its character and of the needs of the state. Not long ago they had mapped out a great block of land in the heart of Northern Minnesota that would have included vast areas now under cultivation, and by attempting to make the country at large believe that this entire area was valueless for agriculture, they sought to make a forest reserve out of it. Included in the territory they sought then, for instance, were the Bigfork and Littlefork regions, which are now known to include some of the choicest agricultural land in the state.

The advance of settlement has curbed their demands, since they have not yet the audacity to claim settled areas for their hair-brained schemes, but they still seek immense areas that are valuable for agriculture, and ask to have them set apart and sealed forever to the cause of forestry and the preservation of trees and game. The state now owns, in addition to these areas, many thousands of acres of land that have been given it for forestry purposes, and if the forestry enthusiasts would content themselves with these, instead of trying to get all the land in sight, no matter whether it is good for tree-growing or not, there would be no complaint from Northern Minnesota.

The trouble is that their demands are unreasonable, and prejudicial to the interests not only of Northern Minnesota but of the entire state.

OLD DOGS, OLD TRICKS.

It is due possibly to the age of some of the senators of the United States that they cling so fondly to the political customs of old, and that they bend their efforts toward perpetuating conditions that afford them "patronage" even though it be at the expense of the nation's credit. It is hard to teach an old dog new tricks.

At any rate, the senate committee on foreign relations, which considered the Lodge consular bill, has reported the bill out with "a few slight amendments," said slight amendments having emasculated the bill by removing all of its reform elements except the single one of increasing salaries in the consular service.

The feature of most importance in the bill was that providing for promotions in the service on the merit system. That is gone since the committee got through with it. To be sure, there is not much of the bill left, and to call what remains of it a "reform" measure is a sad, sad misnomer, yet possibly the senators have fooled themselves, and believe they can fool the public, too.

It is clearly evident that the only way to teach these old dogs the new tricks in politics that have become popular is for the people to adopt some unamended, unexpurgated reform measure and apply it to the senators themselves. Such a move as this, if it received wide popular endorsement, could not be pushed into a committee room and put through the senatorial processes which result in either removing all the effective features or completely burying measures subjected to them.

So involved have these old political tricks become in the progress of reform, and so greatly do they hamper it, that it seems to be necessary, in order to accomplish anything, to eliminate the tricks. If no other way serves, there is always the last resort, in order to accomplish this, of eliminating the tricksters. They seem to deserve it when they will permit their personal and selfish desire to control a little political plunder to stand in the way of a reform that is necessary in order that this country may stand in its proper relation with the world.

REGISTER TOMORROW.

Tomorrow, Mr. Voter, is the last chance you will have, if you are not already registered, to register and place yourself in a position to vote at the annual director's meeting of the city of Duluth next month.

It is your duty to do this, a duty vastly more important than many people imagine.

If you do not, there is room for criticism of your citizenship, and you lay yourself upon a charge of responsibility for whatever evil conditions may grow out of your neglect, and the neglect of the "good citizen" is directly responsible for most municipal and political evils.

A good start was made in the first two registration days, but thousands of voters are still unregistered. They should remember tomorrow.

Register tomorrow.

POOR PONG BOW.

While most people agree on the advisability of excluding Chinese labor from this country, because it can get along on so much less wages than white labor can, there are incidents to the operation of the exclusion law that are awkward, such as the exclusion of Chinese merchants, students and travelers, which has resulted in a Chinese boycott that it will take a long time to overcome. W. E. Curtis tells of one that has its element of pathos, too.

The hero of this tale is a Chinese laundryman who has been 'doing up" the shirts, collars and cuffs of the people in an Indiana town for seventeen years. A year and a half ago he made a trip to Niagara Falls, and in an absent-minded moment crossed to the Canadian side. Since then he has been glued to the Canadian shore, trying vainly to get back.

Under the Chinese immigration restrictions the United States officials at Niagara Falls could not let him into this country. One night he tried to slip through on a freight train, and landed on the American side, but his jubilations were cut short when the American officials caught him and ordered him back to Canada again. Then it began to become complicated. The Canadian officials refused to admit him.

Then he was in a worse case than the man without a country. Canada wouldn't have him, and he didn't want to go to Canada. He wanted to go back to that dear Terre Haute, Ind., but the United States authorities refused to let him go. He was, constructively, very much in the air. Finally the Canadian officials relented to the extent of receiving him as a visitor, and as he has nothing better to do he is prolonging his visit indefinitely.

Meanwhile, his laundry down in Terre Haute, toward which his longing eyes are ever turned, is awaiting his return, and poor Pong Bow, its lord and master, is pining away friendless, unwelcome, deprived of his means of livelihood and his property, on the Canadian shore, with the land of his heart's desire in view across the tumbling waters.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"The extension of the Milwaukee road to the Pacific coast will open to the world a country of marvelous richness, which has up to the present time been almost unknown," said C. V. Howard of St. Paul, at the McKay. "While there have been three roads running through the northern part of this country and the southern border of Canada, the country tributary to their lines is so vast that it has only been partially opened by them, and there are millions of acres which, with a railroad immediately at hand to give connection with the world's market, will soon be put under cultivation, to yield more of the Western crops which long have been the wonder of the East.

"The cattle industry is less dependent upon a nearby line of railroad than the agricultural industry, because a man with cattle or sheep can drive them many miles from their feeding grounds before loading them for shipment. But to market large crops at a profit it is necessary to have a railroad to cut down the long haul by wagon. As fast as the new line of the Milwaukee is extended it will be followed by settlers, eager to assist in the development of what will probably be the richest strip of land in the entire West."

"While the fame of Northern Wisconsin as a muskellunge country has spread to all parts of the United States, there is one interesting fact about this game fish which I did not discover until I had spent several seasons in the woods," said O. F. Nelson of Eau Claire, Wis., at the St. Louis. "This is that the so-called 'Superior waters' contain no muskellunge. The Superior waters are those which flow into Lake Superior, while the other rivers and lakes of the north are tributary to the Wisconsin river. In the latter this variety of fish is plentiful.

"There are places in the north woods where two streams or small lakes are situated less than two miles apart, one tributary to the river and the other to the Great Lake. The one tributary to the lake may abound with bass, pickerel, trout and pike, but not a musky will ever be found there. In the other, within twenty minutes tramp through the forest, all the fish I have mentioned may be found in great profusion, and their ranks will be augmented by numbers of muskellunge.

"I have never yet found a man who could satisfactorily explain this freak of nature, but I suppose there is some property of the Superior waters which is personally objectionable to the muskellunge. Or it may be that there their natural food does not grow in abundance. At any rate, I have yet to hear the first exception of the rule I have spoken of. Whether the same condition is true of Northern Minnesota I do not know. There are some great musky lakes through the northern part of your state, and all that I call to mind just now are tributary to either the Mississippi or to the Rainy river and Lake of the Woods."

"A friend of mine wrote me from London last summer," said E. Jenkins of Detroit, Mich., at the St. Louis. "In his letter he told how he had occasion to go to one of the banks to cash a check for twenty pounds. The teller asked him in what form of money he would like to be paid. When he was told gold he picked up a small shovel, pushed it into a pile of sovereigns lying on the counter, and emptied the contents upon a scale that was standing handy. He struck the exact amount by weight and handed it across the counter. Such a thing as a certified check is not known over there, it appears."

"Gull Island, of the Apostle group of Lake Superior, which attained such fame during the big November storm, is one of the most interesting bits of land in this part of the country," said C. H. Collins of Ashland when interviewed at a Milwaukee hotel recently. "It is a center of attraction for tourists who visit the northern part of Wisconsin, and a day spent on its egg-bestrewn stretches is one never to be forgotten.

"The entire island, early in summer, is literally a mass of gulls' eggs. The birds do not bother much about nest making. A little clump of mud, kicked up into a mound, with a hollow top filled with grass or feathers, is all that a gull requires as a nest for its eggs. These are usually laid three in a nest. In the day time they are left to the care of the sun's rays while the old birds hunt food. When night falls the mother gull sits upon the eggs until the sun has again come well up into the sky, so that they are never chilled.

"The nests are built within a few feet of one another and there are thousands of them. Fortunately the island is seldom visited by a vandal class and most tourists are content to take one or two eggs as souvenirs, leaving the remainder undisturbed. While walking about among the nests one is surrounded by a crowd of shrieking gulls, but in spite of their size they are not savage before their eggs are hatched. After the nests are filled with young, however, the parent birds will fly into the faces of any marauders and make a savage fight for their little ones."

Reporters and Accuracy.

Kansas City Star: Where do certain persons—and a lot of them—pick up the idea that a newspaper reporter has no incentive to be careful and accurate; that newspapers have no motive for employing competent and trustworthy men, and that when a man is sent out on an assignment by a responsible journal he places so little store by his job that he doesn't care whether he gets things right or not? No reporter showing one-tenth as much ignorance as that sort of an impression implies could begin to get a job even on a third rate party organ—much less a newspaper.

THE WEATHER

Glorious winter weather, this. This morning it was clear, bright and pleasant. The lowest temperature last night was 12 deg. above, and yesterday's highest was 20 deg. The outlook is for continued fair weather tonight and tomorrow, and the lowest temperature tonight, says the weather man, will be about 15 deg. above. The warm weather is general, the table failing to show a single below zero report for last night. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The northwestern disturbance is slowly moving towards the Hudson Bay region, but it has caused a further rise in temperature in extreme northern states and most of Canada. The barometer is rising again in the far West with center of high pressure over Wyoming attended by falling temperature from that state northward. A disturbance off the Carolina coast is causing rain or snow in south Atlantic and eastern gulf states. The easterly movement of these pressure areas gives promise of continued partly cloudy to clear skies in this section tonight and Saturday with no decided temperature change."

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Anoka Union: Apparently some Republicans have got out their knives and propose to use them, no matter who is the Republican candidate for governor.

Grey Eagle Gazette: The Minneapolis politicians are working hand and glove with the corporations and they defeated Dunn and will attempt to defeat any other man that does not submit to their dictation.

Bemidji Sentinel: The Republican politicians of the state desire a candidate of their own selection for the next governor, hoping thereby to recover their old places in the public service. We can assure these politicians that any candidate they force through the convention will suffer the same fate as Dunn.—Houston County Signal.

Yes and there are a lot of Republican editors in the state waiting for a chance to help dunn-it.

Paynesville Press: If there is one thing in this world that this paper is proud of it is the fact that it contributed in some small measure to the partial defeat—not of Robert Dunn or any other single individual—but of the rotten organization of grafters that has dominated Republican politics in this state for several years past.

Eveleth Star: The St. Cloud Times is fearful that Alvah Eastman will have a voice in the next Republican state convention. Never fear! Alvah will be invited to remain in the back seat that his pomposity so well graces.

St. Hilaire Spectator: The Republican Moses who will settle all differences and unite all factions as a gubernatorial candidate has not yet been found, and it looks a good deal as if the Johnson Republicans are not looking for one very hard.

Northfield News: Gov. Johnson is most happy in the selection of his Republican advisors and managers. Alvah Eastman, working under the shadow of the capitol dome, is trying to promote a nationality war in Minnesota by pretending to favor the candidacy of J. F. Jacobson for governor. Alvah knows the game, likewise his master.

Mankato Free Press: The Northfield News is not satisfied with any one of the gentlemen who aspire to the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket. How would Joel P. Heatwole suit the discriminating taste of the News?

Princeton Union: E. A. Nelson says he would like to be secretary of state. He will undoubtedly have the active support of the present state administration, and who knows but Mr. J. J. Hill may be induced to contribute $25,000 to help along the Nelson boomlet.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Bro. Heatwole is giving increased symptoms of being on the pay roll of the Great Northern. Joel is quite cute but he forgets sometimes the extreme length of his ears.

AGAINST THE PRESIDENT.

Wall Street Journal: There are signs of what may be called a conspiracy to break down the president's popularity, and thus destroy his power to carry out his policies. Call the roll of those who might be included in this conspiracy, and see who responds:

A lot of people who are afraid of a foreign policy.
Bribers and corruptionists of all kinds.
Corporations that fear publicity.
Disappointed officeseekers.
Every person who still thinks that the president should not have received John Mitchell or Booker Washington.
Financial interests that have been or are being investigated.
Great men who find that Roosevelt is in their way.
High finance that puts itself above the law.
Interests that want to kill or delay the Panama canal.
Jacobins who are ready for anything that will serve to turn the "ins" out.
Kangaroo politicians strong in their capacity to kick.
"Law honesty."
Men who squirmed under the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law.
Nicaragua canal advocates.
Oddell.
Opponents of government regulation, especially of railway rates.
Pennsylvania's corrupt machine, recently rebuked at the polls.
Railroads that have violated the law.
Sugar lobbyists who don't want fair play given to the Philippines.
Shippers who want rebates.
Trusts that have become monopolies.
Usurers and others who don't like the doctrine of the square deal.
Voters, now few in number, who want to give up the Philippines.
Washington correspondents who feel that they have a right to run the White House.
Xanthospermous journalism eager for a new sensation.
You may perhaps find a few more by inquiring at 26 Broadway.
Zealots who think it right to destroy even a reputation to benefit their party.
One for every letter of the alphabet and one more for good measure.

The partnership in the Duluth theater between William H. Jackson and Martin J. Swenson has been dissolved. The business will be continued by Jackson.

The election by Company K, M. N. G., last night resulted the same as the previous one. The new officers are: Captain, Henri DeWitt; first lieutenant, H. R. Armstrong, second lieutenant, Eugene Poirier.

The Catholic fair in the old Adams schoolhouse at Rice's Point in drawing large crowds. There is a contest for a gold headed cane between Dr. Davis and Dr. Magie, while Miss Kate Swanstrom and Miss Annie Heisler are the favorites in the voting for a toilet set.

Mrs. Hall, mother of Mrs. W. B. Patton, will leave next week for a visit to Ashtabula and Cleveland, O., and Albany, N. Y.

Secretary Baker of the board of trade was unanimously re-elected by the directors this afternoon and his salary was increased. F. W. Paine, cashier of the Duluth National bank, was elected treasurer.

J. V. Watson and H. H. Hanford have been appointed appraisers of the estate of the late Hiram W. Coppernoll and Judge Dunphy issued a warrant to them yesterday. The estate aggregates about $12,000, consisting entirely of personal property.

Duluth's Toboggan club will aim to make the most creditable appearance at the St. Paul carnival. If any town in the state sends a better delegation to the show than Duluth, it will have to do some tall hustling.

An engineer today surveyed the ground and laid out the plan for the building of the toboggan slide. It will be located just off Superior street between Eighth and Ninth avenues west and facing the union depot. The chutes, two in number, will be 200 feet in length and erected at an angle of about 65 degs., making this the steepest slide in the state.

At the Parlor rink tomorrow night, Prof. Huse will attempt to skate one mile while F. H. Orton walks three-quarters of the distance, square heel and toe. The race is for a purse of $25.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Fairmont Sentinel: Practically every man in Minnesota is in favor of tariff reform except the men who are misrepresenting us in congress.

Cannon Falls Beacon: We feel disposed to take the railroad and warehouse commission into our confidence to the extent of saying that in our opinion there is more danger of the public protest against its inactivity taking shape in a demand for the resignations of its members than there is in their being run over by the cars.

Mora Enterprise: Every Republican in Minnesota, with the possible exception of the two senators, is a "receptive" candidate for governor, that is, he would accept the nomination if it were offered him.

Princeton Union: The United States senator who is unable to pay his expenses this year is either a dummy or an honest man.

Elk River Star-News: Platforms do not necessarily make honest men of politicians.

Le Sueur News: What a beautiful tribute President Northrop's talk on Governor Johnson was to the country boy whose honest, manly person was unsuccessfully besmeared in the mire of politics a few months ago. These words are from a Republican and from the man who is at the head of Minnesota's greatest educational institution. As a neighbor to Governor Johnson we are glad to read them, but must say they do not surprise us and we can lift ourselves above politics long enough to say that thousands of people know they are true.

Albert Lea Tribune: Congressmen who aspire to own a political machine are raging at the president's order that charges will not be made among certain federal officials except for cause. If an officer was sure he could hold his position pending good behavior the service in many departments might be improved.

Ortonville Herald-Star: The insurgents in congress propose stretching the president's hide on the dome of the capitol. Pennsylvania avenue will be lined with political dead ducks before their purpose is accomplished.

Rush City Post: The trouble with Jacobson on the governor proposition dates back to the deal that pulled Collins off the bench and reorganized the board of control.

Hibbing Tribune: Because, as we have good reason to believe, Congressman Bede once promised A. L. Hamilton the receivership and now refuses to make good, we must acknowledge that we are disappointed in that official and cannot support him for a re-election to congress with the same enthusiasm with which we entered into the first campaign, when all the country newspaper editors in the district stood by him from start to finish.

Anoka Union: Let the people understand that an attempt is being made to do up President Roosevelt in congress, and they will rally to his support in a manner that'll confuse and condemn his opponents. Theodore Roosevelt stands too close to the voters of these United States for them to stand any funny work.

Crookston Times: The Princeton Union suggests that the state immigration bureau, while doing good work, might accomplish more by holding meetings in Southern instead of in Northern Minnesota. We are getting to be fairly alive to our possibilities up here. When we want anything from the legislature it is the members from the southern part of the state who constitute the opposition. It is well to appreciate our resources, but it is absolutely necessary to convince other people of them also.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a man isn't afraid of his cook it is because it is because she is his wife.

The way a boy gets disciplined is first to go to school and then to get married.

In spite of the grafters and office holders, people continue to look down on burglars and highwaymen.

The only will a man can exert with his own family is the one he writes for them with his lawyer.

It is very improper for a girl not to make a man apologize for kissing her when her mother told her she must not let anybody do it.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Philadelphia Ledger: 'Rastus—Mah land! Dis ol' mule sho'ly is de most cantankerous beast. Cawn't mek him move any way but backwadh.

Dennis—Shore, that's aisy to fix. Jist turn your saddle 'round the other way an' ye'll hov him.

Washington Star: "Some men," remarked the assumptive citizen, "are born to lead."

"Yes," answered the cautious person, "but the trouble is that every man who feels a disinclination to do actual work takes it for granted that he is one of those men."

Cleveland Ledger: "His ancestry has a bar sinister at the very start."

"So has yours."

"That's right. Everybody has. Adam and Eve were never regularly married at the start."

Chicago Tribune: It was the first time Bessie had ever seen a talented elocutionist in action.

"Mamma," she whispered, "why does she make those queer faces?"

"Sh, child!" admonished mamma. "Those are not faces. Those are interpretations. We couldn't understand the meaning of the author without them."

Chicago Tribune: "As a poet and literary man," said the grasping publisher with enthusiasm, "I'll put you against the world."

"That isn't necessary," murmured the struggling author. "I'm up against it already, good and hard."

Washington Star: "In a few years we will hear no more of grafting," said the earnest reformer.

"I sincerely hope so," answered Senator Sorghum. "It is an ugly word of low origin. I will be glad when a substitute is provided."

Somerville Journal: Art Dealer—Here is a lovely little woodland scene for only $2,250.

Oil Magnate—That? Nonsense. I know where it was painted. Why, I could buy the whole farm for $1,500.

GEN. JOSEPH WHEELER, THE HERO OF TWO WARS, DEAD

Former Confederate Leader Passes Away at Home of His Sister in Brooklyn.

New York Jan. 26.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler, the famous Confederate cavalry leader and a brigadier general of the United States army since the war with Spain, died at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. Stirling Smith, in Brooklyn. The veteran of two wars was 69 years old, but in spite of his age, there was hope until Wednesday of his recovery from the attack of pneumonia, which caused his death. It has not yet been decided where the body will be interred, but probably it will be in Arlington national cemetery near Washington.

Gen. Wheeler was taken ill six days ago at his sister's home, where he has been living recently. He contracted a severe cold which developed into pleurisy and pneumonia. From the first his age told against him, but the family did not give up hope until Wednesday night, when the disease was found to have affected both lungs. Gen. Wheeler's immediate relatives were all with him. His daughters Mrs. W. J. Harris and the Misses Anne, Lucille and Carrie Wheeler, had been summoned from the South and arrived early in the week. His son, Maj. Joseph Wheeler, Jr., U. S. A., now stationed at West Point, was also present as well as Gen. Wheeler's sister, Mrs. Stirling Smith, and her son.

The family were summoned to the bedside of the patient at midnight Wednesday, when the doctors in consultation concluded that the end was but the matter of a few hours. The general was then awake and conscious and his mind was apparently active. He seemed to know that death was approaching and though too weak to speak, he succeeded in giving signs of recognition and encouragement to his children.

Later the general sank into a peaceful slumber and at the request of the doctors, the family quietly withdrew from the sick man's bedside.

Gen. Wheeler was never again more than semi-conscious. He lingered until last evening and passed away quietly.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler, U. S. A., retired, was born in Augusta, Ga., Sept. 10, 1836, graduated from West Point in 1859 and was a second lieutenant when he joined the Confederacy.

When this distinguished soldier, who had served the Confederate government with a dash and skill that won him world-wide renown, especially as a commander of cavalry, after years of peaceful occupation as a lawyer, planter and legislator, was appointed a major general of volunteers by President McKinley a few days after the outbreak of the Spanish war, he immediately showed that his old intrepidity and ability had not been diminished by years. In command of the affair of Las Guasimas, which practically opened the Santiago campaign, he pushed on with the troops to San Juan, and reports from the field told of his restless activity, climbing trees like a youngster to get a good point of observation and pressing on with the campaign to the surrender.

Later in the Philippines his cavalry brigade was engaged in a score of fights, where its leader was as active as its youngest officer. Made a brigadier general in June, 1900, he was retired with that rank on Sept. 10, 1900, his sixty-fourth birthday.

Since that time Gen. Wheeler had traveled abroad and been prominent in social fields, and as an authority upon matters arising out of the new additions to the territory of the United States.

Gen. Wheeler had several daughters. One of his sons, a young naval cadet, was drowned at Montauk Point while the fever camps were established there for the soldiers rturning from Cuba after the war. An older son is in the army.

BLUEBEARD'S ROOM FILLED

With Navy Beans Which Many People Grabbed as Souvenirs.

Columbia, Mo., Jan. 26.—The veil of mystery which has surrounded the general merchantise store of Dr. James F. French, otherwise known as "Blue French" and the "Boone county Regulator," who lived at Ashland, Mo., a village ten miles south of Columbia, and who was found dead in a room adjoining the store, was lifted when the Boone county sheriff, F. Rothwell, broke open the front door, which had been kept locked for many years, and revealed the contents.

French had for many years kept the contents of the store veiled in mystery. He permitted no one to enter it but himself, always requesting his customers to wait outside and bringing the desired articles out to them.

There were wild stories afloat in Ashland and the store was termed "Blue Beard's Chamber," for the reason that the face, beard and hair of the owner weree as blue as indigo, owing to some strange medicine he was taking. When sheriff Rothwell opened the door of Blue Beard's Chamber this morning, half the population of Ashland was at his heels. They had expected a surprise, and they got it. The wildest dreamer of the Ashland hills could not have conceived a more astounding climax. When Blue Beard's Chamber was at last revealed it was found to be full of beans.

When the door was pushed back a great flood of navy beans poured out into the street and people, many of whom had come from distant parts of Boone county, eagerly but them into their pockets as souvenirs and within an hour were selling them at 10 and 15 cents apiece to curiosity seekers.

The beans covered the store to a depth of three or four feet. The articles so far excavated consist of several pulpits, a large supply of suspenders, a whole arsenal of rifles, guns and pistols, antique clothing, 40 years out of date, including women's shoes and gaiters, hides of various animals, including the buffalo, wolf and wild cat, various parts of vehicles and stoves of many designs, both modern and antique.

French had for many years been considered an eccentric character, but was a shrewd business man, bearing the reputation as the most successful gensing dealer in this section. So far the excavations have revealed no gensing and his reason for keeping such a vast supply of beans is a mystery.

In some places the beans were piled as high as the ceiling. The clearing of the store is authorized by Dr. John French of Ashland and Charles French of Kansas City, brothers of the deceased, who are the only surviving members of the family.

SUPERIOR MAN AMONG THE LOST

Friends Fear Norman Anderson Was in the Valencia Wreck.

It is feared by the friends of Norman H. Anderson of Superior that he was one of the victims of the steamer Valencia disaster on the British Columbia coast. The name of N. M. Anderson appears on the list of those lost, and it is known that Norman Anderson left Los Angeles the evening of Jan. 17 to take a boat up the coast, with the intention of returning to Superior by the way of Seattle. Some of his friends state that Anderson stated he would take the steamer Valencia up the coast.

Norman Anderson is the son of G. J. Anderson, who owns a large farm near Superior, and who is now engaged on the contract for extending the Allouez ore docks. The young man was for some time connected with the superintendent's office of the Great Northern Railway company, and expected on his return to Superior to take a position with the Northwestern Fuel company. He was about 22 years old.

EXAMINATIONS ARE UNDER WAY

Eleven Teachers Strive for State First Grade Certificates.

Eleven candidates began the state teachers' examination for first-grade certificates at the Central High School building yesterday. Questions were put covering six topics, and the remaining subjects were covered today during the examination of those who appeared to take the examination for second-grade certificates.

While the enrollment is not large, there are about as many present as S. W. Gilpin, county superintendent of schools, expected. The attendance is always largest at the examination for third-grade certificates. The examinations will conclude tomorrow.

Those who are taking the examination for first-grade certificates are Isabel Bjork, Bessie Harsh, Gina Jensen, Florence Mallman, Bessie Murphy, Julia Haber, Myrtle Smith, Maude Graham, Duluth; Ida Rohrer, Eveleth; C. H. Graham, Aurora, and Madeline Wallen, Kenton, Mich.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM

Assembly Room for Loafers Provided at a Town's Expense.

Pleasant Place for Town Character to Spin His Yarns.

Sedan, Kas., Jan. 26.—This probably is the only town in Kansas, and perhaps in the West, where official provision has been made for the town loafer. The public treasury here has been drawn upon to provide this familiar town character with a comfortable and pleasant place to spin his yarns, indulge in town gossip and occasionally dabble in the heavier questions of state.

Sedan is typical of the smaller county seat towns of Kansas. With a population of 2,000, like all other county capitals, it numbers among its citizens many retired farmers, old soldiers and quite a sprinkling of ex-county officials. The farmers do not retire and move to town until they have an income sufficient to keep them without working. The old sholdiers in these later days are fast becoming too old to do any hard work, and many of them, by close economy, are able to live within the meager pensions that each quarter brings. The ex-county officials generally remain in the county seat and take up some business like that of real estate and insurance, where the main work is nothing more arduous than giving glowing descriptions of the countryside to prospective investors.

Until the oil boom came and added much to the business of the community these men who by the very nature of circumstances have little to do and therefore lots of time, found warm welcomes about the friendly stoves of the grocery stores. They disturbed not the current of commerce, but were always on hand to greet the farmer customer on Saturdays, and withal were not undesirable guests.

When the oil business quickened the pace of the community things became different, and the village loafers received less attention from the busier storekeepers. The oil men were strangers to them and they could no longer entertain the customers while the grocer was getting the orders tied up. In fact it went from bad to worse for the group about the stove, and it finally became evident to them that they were becoming less and less welcome. In fact the stores became too busy for them and the space that the motley circle had been filling was needed for stocks.

About this time the town decided that it needed a bandstand, for, with its other progress, the musical side had progressed also. A careful search over the community for talent had revealed no less than fifteen boys and men who had courage enough to give weekly band concerts. So when the City Council finally decided to devote at least $100 to the cause of music by building a bandstand, the town loafers promptly asked that it be made a two-story affair and that the lower room be used for a "police station."

The request was not taken seriously, however, until the town's peace officers added the strength of their official indorsement to the project. The night officer is an old soldier and wanted "company." He knew that if a sort of police station were built he could get plenty of it. So the council granted the request and gave the first floor to the town loafers under the guise of building a "police station."

Recently, to make it more comfortable, windows have been cut in all four sides of the structure and the loafers can now see what is going on all over the business part of the town without leaving their quarters, for the building stands at the intersection of the two most important streets.

A stove has been put up, chairs provided and lately an enterprising merchant has accommodated the increasing membership by donating several advertising-covered benches. The room will hold upwards of thirty, and it is full every evening. There are no loafers at all in the stores. They sought the more hospitable band stand—"police station."

In summer the crowd takes its chairs and benches outside, and the exact time of day can be told as the loafers "hitch" their chairs around the building to dodge the sun. A better sun dial was never invented. No one regrets the money the city has spent in building this loafers' paradise or the amount that has been spent in improving it. It has removed the habit of loafing from the stores and sidewalks and concentrated it out in the center of a street corner.

The loafers have named their headquarters the "Honk-a-Tonk" and a cigar is named in honor of them. Given a box of these cigars, the sessions open with first the village gossip; then follows a discussion of municipal affairs, which are made interesting now by public improvements that are making. Then comes the handing down of final decisions upon law suits that may have been tried that day in the local courts, for to the "Honk-a-Tonk," sooner or later, all appeals must come.

These local matters disposed of the session next takes up national or state affairs and handles them with familiarity and informality that puts "Uncle Joe" Cannon's rules of order to shame. Strict party politics and religion are eschewed, for the Republicans and methodists have a crushing majority. Along about 11 p. m. the door of the "Honk-a-Tonk" opens and the loafers separate like the ribs of an umbrella. The nation, state, county and town manage to worry along until morning, when its guardians reassemble. And the night watch, having discharged his duties as presiding officer, goes up and down the street rattling the front doors of the stores and trying the locks to see if all is well.

A Modern Miracle.

"Truly miraculous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Mollie Holt of this place," writes J. O. R. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn., "she was so wasted by coughing up pus from her lungs. Doctors declared her end so near that her family had watched by her bedside forty-eight hours; when, at my urgent request, Dr. King's New Discovery was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began and continued until she finally completely recovered, and is a healthy woman today." Guaranteed cure for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 at all druggists. Trial bottle free.

ARRESTED WITH STOLEN TEAM

Fugitives From Two Harbors Caught on Road to Duluth.

While driving a stolen span of horses to Duluth, Albert Ramolia and his younger brother Elmer, were arrested yesterday afternoon on the road between Two Harbors and Duluth, near Knife River, by Chief Troyer, Capt. Resche and Detective Terry, who had driven out to meet them in response to a telephone message from Sheriff Nelson of Two Harbors.

The team was the property of Peter Christienson of 11 South Fifty-fourth avenue west, who was working in the camp of John Winness at Milepost 46. They were stolen from the camp barn Wednesday night.

Sheriff Nelson notified the officers yesterday by telephone, that the two men were believed to be on their way to Duluth with the team, and the police took prompt measures to intercept them.

Capt. Resche took the team to Knife River, and left it there to await the owner, returning by train yesterday afternoon, while Chief Troyer and Detective Terry drove back with their prisoners.

The younger brother claims to have been ignorant of the theft. He says that the older brother told him he had bought the horses, and that he was going to drive to Duluth and sell them.

"Albert told me," said the boy, who is only 20 years old, "that he had taken the team in payment of a debt. He said he was going to sell them and give me all the money but $10, with which he was going to get drunk and jump into the lake."

The two men were taken back to Two Harbors today by Sheriff Nelson.

WOMAN THANKS JUDGE WITH KISS

Acquittal of Alleged Safe-Blower Followed by Unusual Scene.

Iuka, Miss., Jan. 26.—A scene of unusual interest was enacted in the circuit court room here at the conclusion of the trial of W. B. Burke, charged with blowing the safe in the store of the Barnett Drug company, of which he was part owner.

Notwithstanding the fact that a detective had been unable to connect Mr. Burke with the crime, an indictment was brought and he was arraigned before Judge O'Neal. At the conclusion of the state's evidence the defense moved to dismiss the bill because the evidence had not even remotely connected the defendant with the accusation. Judge O'Neal granted this motion, and the minute he annouced his decision the courtroom was in an uproar. Men threw their hats in the air and shouted, and ladies waved their kerchiefs and screamed.

The next minute the whole room was in confusion, the friends of the defendant rushing forward to congratulate him, his attorneys and the court. One woman kissed the judge, who blushed in acknowledging the salute.

CAREER WAS METEORIC

Cotton Broker in Jail Cell After Three Years' Respite.

Imprisonment of E. H. Lake Recalls Famous Arkansas Failure.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 26.—E. H. Lake, whose meteoric career as a financier wrecked the Alphin-Lake Cotton company, has landed him in jail under a Federal sentence, after three years respite, is taking life easily. How long he will be required to remain in jail is another question—nobody knows but Judge Jacob Trieber, whose judgment sent him there, and at whose behest he remains.

One way in which he could secure his release would be to pay $60,954.72 to the trustee of his bankrupt estate, but very few people believe he has that sum or any other sum in his control. If he has he evidently considers he is making good wages by keeping it, and staying in jail. He is being treated like all the other federal prisoners, with whom he associates, having no privileges, except that friends are permitted to send meals a little better than the prison fare.

The first week in February Judge Trieber will permit the state authorities to remove him from jail long enough to take him to Perryville for trial on thirteen charges of false pretenses, and should he be convicted in the state courts some arrangement of penal precedence would be required to determine who should have the honor of being his jailor.

And so culminates at the age of 29 the career of a young man who with his attractive wife stood high in social opportunity here three years ago, giving pink teas and carnation lunch functions, at which the elite of the society were pleased guests.

The failure of the Iphin-Lake Cotton company was one of the most sensational financial collapses that had occurred in Arkansas since the failure of the First National Bank in 1892. It brought down with it in ruin numerous other interests, and the litigation resulting from it will last several years. Among the results of Lake's manipulations, are the following:

Failure of Iphin-Lake Cotton company.
Failure of the Bank of Little Rock.
Failure of El Dorado Compress company.
Suspension of payment several days by Little Rock Trust company.
Large sums lost to railroads and banks on fraudulent warehouse receipts.

There are still thirteen criminal indictments in the state courts pending against Lake, having been returned in the Pulaski county court and removed to Perry county on change of venue, where they are to be called for trial early in February. These indictments charge Lake with false pretense in obtaining bills of lading on cotton, and securing money on them from banks in sums amounting to from $1,000 to $10,000.

His attorneys have fought the case stubbornly, and have neglected no issue which offered hope of acquittal or delay.

Lake, soon after attaining his majority, began business at El Dorado, where he was located for two years, and then sought a broader field for his projects. He removed to Little Rock and was in business here for a year and t half before the collapse.

Lake was practically the owner and was in absolute control of the cotton company, and when it failed, and the claims of creditors could not be met, the trustees brought suit to uncover assets alleged to have been wrongfully concealed. The cotton company was incorporated in September, 1902, commencing business Aug. 26, 1902, succeeding to the business theretofore carried on by E. H. Lake in his own name. The business amounted to over $2,000,000, and the liabilities were reported as $781,636.93. The nominal assets were $23,910.66, and real assets less than $500. The findings of the court upon this point contain the statement:

"The corporation existed less than five months, and during that time handled nearly $2,000,000 in money. No books were kept except memoranda, drafts drawn on them, and stubs of the check books, and these were incomplete, as large sums of money were drawn on checks not in the regular check book and by drafts on the Bank of El Dorado, of which no acount was kept by the cotton company."

This method of conducting business offered no end of trouble to expert accountants. The court, continuing, said:

"That this large indebtedness could have been incurred within so short a time seems incredible, but for the fact that the evidence conclusively establishes that the entire business was conceived in fraud and was carried on for no other purpose."

At the time of the failure the cotton company, or Lake, owed over $118,000 to Little Rock banks, which he had borrowed on warehouse receipts for cotton he did not own or which did not exist. Most of the cotton was purchased at El Dorado, where Lake and E. H. Smith, cashier of the Bank of El Dorado, owned a compress, built with money furnished by the cotton company. Drafts were drawn by Lake on the Bank of El Dorado for private or business purposes, and Smith would draw on the cotton company for cotton purchased and attach warehouse receipts. Receipts for about 8,000 bales of cotton thus issued were hypothecated to Little Rock banks. These fraudulent receipts were delivered to railroad agents as cotton on hand, bills of lading were issued, and these attached to drafts drawn on mills in the East, to whom cotton had been sold by the cotton company. The Little Rock banks would then give the firm credit for the amount of the drafts.

TOO LATE?

MAMA! Don't be frightened—but be warned!

Every Mother knows, or should know, that the terrible Mortality among little children is caused by Stomach and Bowel troubles. Colic, Sour Curd, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, Measles, Rashes, Scarlet Fever—even Mumps—have their first cause in constipation.

The Delicate Tissues of a Baby's Bowels will not stand rough treatment. Salts are too violent, and Castor Oil will only grease the passages, but will not make and keep them Clean, Healthy and Strong.

* * *

There is no other medicine as safe for a child as Cascarets, the fragrant little Candy Tablet, that has saved thousands of families from unhappiness.

The Nursing Mother even in good health should always keep her own Bowels Loose, and her Milk Mildly Purgative by taking a Cascaret at night before going to bed.

No other medicine has this remarkable and valuable quality. Mama takes the Cascaret, baby gets the Benefit.

Cascarets are the strengthening Exercise to the weak little bowels of the growing baby and make them better able to get all the Nourishment out of Baby's Natural Food.

Larger children cannot always be watched, and will eat unreasonably. The Ready Remedy should ever be at hand—Cascarets—to take care of the trouble when it comes.

No need to Force or Bribe children to take Cascarets. They are always more than ready to eat the sweet little bit of Candy.

Repulsive medicine forced on the little ones does more harm than good.

Home is not complete without the ever ready Box of Cascarets. Ten cents buys a small one at the Corner Drug Store.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

FREE TO OUR FRIENDS!

We want to send to our friends a beautiful French-designed, GOLD-PLATED BONBON BOX, hard-enameled in colors. It is a beauty for the dressing table. Ten cents in stamps is asked as a measure of good faith and to cover cost of Cascarets, with which this dainty trinket is loaded.

Send to-day, mentioning this paper. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

INVESTORS IN REALTY

In New York Coming From All Parts of the Country.

Advance Made in Fuel Methods by Certain Big Corporations.

New York, Jan. 26.—The school census of this city shows that Manhattan Borough, or the former city proper, is for the first time in nearly a century actually falling off in population, and the local newspapers, commenting upon this, attribute it to the increase in rents, such having had the effect of driving the people to the other boroughs, where rents are lower.

The rise in prices of rentals, coincident with the increased demand for offices, stores and other buildings for purposes of commerce, has had its tendency, and the demolition of many tenements to make room for great business blocks has also aided in this movement of the people from Manhattan Island to the other portions of the greater city of New York.

These factors are still in full force, and it will become more evident with each year that Manhattan proper will be the daily resort of the people for business and the nightly resort for amusement and pleasure, but the homes of the residents will be above the Harlem and beyond the East River.

Since Jan. 1 immense sales of realty have taken place in the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens. The aggregate is millions of dollars in value, and the topics of the hotels and offices are this week automobiles and real estate.

The hotels in the heart of the city have been turning thousands of people away, being unable to provide lodgings for them, and at one of the hotels near Forty-second street and Broadway I was informed that almost as many of their guests were in New York about realty as for the automobile show.

Investors in New York suburban realty are to be found hailing from all parts of the country, and this gives strong proof of the widespread belief in New York's attaining still greater population in the near future. Denver, St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati are all represented in recently formed syndicates for buying lands here, and I have it from parties well informed that upwards of $6,000,000 has been invested by residents of the state of Pennsylvania in realty on Long Island. Millions of money from the far West, the Middle West, from New England and the South are being placed here in real estate, and there is abundant evidence that 1906 will surpass any year thus far in the aggregate amount of realty sales both in suburban and inside lots and lands.

After the beginning of the revival of business affairs in 1898, a number of small syndicates were formed to buy lands and lots. The general advance in prices was profitable to the individuals composing these syndicates, as they sold parts or all of their holdings. Nothing succeeds like success. They were ready to invest again their principal and their profits. Prices still rose and profits were again taken or in sight. The pools grew in numbers as they grew in dollars of investment, and their members told their friends of their good fortune and good judgment.

Their friends joined the former syndicates or created new ones. The building of the subway, the contracts for the tunnels under the Hudson and the East river, the extensions of the suburban electric roads, widened the field of operations and created habitations, villages and developed sections inaccessible prior to establishment of these enterprises, and the public sentiment was and is all in favor of giving this great metropolis every possible convenience for the comfort of its people. The syndicate avails themselves of this public spirit and reason corrected is that it will take no backward step, and that each succeeding year the outlying districts will acquire and possess every improvement that is found in the heart of the city.

Even ten years ago distances in Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island and New Jersey were given in miles from City hall. Now they are given in minutes. Time is the great measure of today. The boroughs of Greater New York will within five years have but few steam roads either entering them or traversing them. Jersey City will also be relieved of their smoke, steam, ashes and other nuisances connected with their operation. Electricity will do all the work of this great center of population. It is announced this week that in the near future a point near Newark, N. J., called Harrison, will be the junction of the steam lines of the Pennsylvania railway and of the electric roads running from this city through the tunnels under the Hudson river into New Jersey. Passengers will be brought direct to the city via these tunnels, from Harrison, and it is put down on the schedule that Harrison and Newark will be but fifteen minutes from the terminal station in New York City.

These tunnels will be the making financially of the New Jersey electric lines. At present the suburban electric lines in that state are not nearly as profitable as they will become when united with lines coming into the city through these tunnels. Week days, Sundays and holidays the millions of people of New York will be contributing their fares to these New Jersey lines when direct communication is established. The river forbids at present, but within two years' time these nearby Jersey roads will be piling up the dividends.

Some of the syndicates controlling these Jersey roads have had heavy loads financially to carry and the happy day cannot come too soon for them. In the action of the Pennsylvania road looking at Harrison, taken in connection with the building of the through electric line from Camden, N. J., to Atlantic City, can be plainly seen the ultimate fate of steam railways in the country east of the Mississippi river and north of the James and Ohio river. Electric power will displace steam to a certainty. Water power producing electricity will be utilized very largely, and waterfalls providing even scores of horse power will be made use of to their full extent.

Where water power is not available and coal is, the electrical power houses will be placed near the mines and the power transmitted to wherever required. What a transformation this will work in West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois! The business and financial interests have finally grasped the idea of the absurdity of hauling coal many miles by rail or transporting it by water to points where its energy is to be converted into electricity.

Scientists have for years ridiculed this wasteful course and recommended the erection of vast power plants near the mines and the transmission of the current to the cities and to other points where needed. The railways which derive large incomes from carrying coal to consumers for gas and power purposes are reluctant to have the idea adopted, but it will be put into practical use very soon, and once installed on some Pennsylvania, Ohio or West Virginia road the coal carrying roads will soon see the difference in their tonnage. The New York Central road is making the most extensive electrical changes, not only in its lines within the limits of this city, but throughout the state of New York and on the associate lines in New England. Some gentlemen well posted in railway plans predict that within five years the New York Central's lines from Chicago to New York will all be operated by electric power.

LAD'S ODD FIGHT FOR A SCHOOLING

Came From New York to Kansas With Three Cents.

Lawrence, Kan., Jan. 26.—Three weeks ago, in New York city, with 3 cents in his pocket, enrolled today in the College of Arts and Sciences of the university of Kansas, and working on the university grounds to pay his tuition fees and tending a furnace for his board and room, is the story of one boy who had a determination to get an education.

When Harry Hibbard Kemp got into Lawrence night before last on the brake beams of a freight car, he did not know a person in the city. He had read some of Prof. W. H. Carruth's books on German grammar and composition, and that had caused him to select the university of Kansas as the place where he would study German and Latin.

It was dark when he knocked at the professor's door and told him his story. The frank, open face of the boy impressed Prof. Carruth, and he told him to come to the university the next day and he would see what could be done for him.

The professor gave him a dollar and told him to get a good night's sleep. Before the offices opened next morning he presented himself at the registrar's door. He told them he did not have a cent, but that he was willing to work at anything that was honorable.

Treasurer W. K. Folks was impressed with his honesty of purpose, and told him that he would get him a place to work on the university grounds.

He entered the university as a special student, taking Horace's odes, German composition and English literature. During intermissions between classes he is working on the sidewalk around the university.

Young Kemp has led a strange life. When 17 years old he quarreled with his father and left home. He went as cabin boy on a vessel to Australia. He associated there with the common tramps and traveled over the whole island. From there he went to Japan and China, and thence as a stowaway to San Francisco, and then across the United States to Mount Herman college, Mass., where he worked his way through school for two years. It was there he came to know of the university of Kansas and determined to enroll in it.

WITH TWINS

She Appeared in Court and the Jury "Soaked" Her Husband.

Goshen, Ind., Jan. 26.—When a jury in the trial of Wilbur Hare, charged with wife desertion, saw Mrs. Hare carrying twin babies in court that had not been provided for, it took the body but seven minutes to reach an agreement imprisoning Hare for 100 days for his offense.

BABY'S NAME

Led to Quarrel, and Both Are Seeking a Divorce.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 26.—Frank Millen and wife Florence quarreled over the naming of their baby, which led to the filing of a divorce suit. The husband brought suit, and the wife filed a cross-bill. Both demand custody of the child. In testimony Millen said:

"My wife named the baby William, and that was all right until I told her she had named it after my father. Then she refused longer to call the baby William. When I persisted she would refuse to answer me. Finally she took the baby and went to the home of her parents."

The wife denies this story, claiming she left Millen because he abused her.

UMBRELLA SMASHED

By Irate Wife Over the Head of Her Husband.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 26.—Frenzied over the action of her husband, who took sides against her with another woman in the police court, Mrs. Thomas Hergiton attacked him in the court, smashing an umbrella over his head and compelling him to seek refuge behind Judge Fiedler's desk.

"After twenty-eight years of married life you dare go back on me for another woman, you sniveling beast!" she cried, as she struck him several blows with the umbrella.

Hergiton and Mrs. May Lowman of 528 St. Clair avenue, were charged in court with intoxication. Hergiton was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to serve thirty days in the workhouse. Mrs. Lowman was given the same sentence.

TORONTO STREET CARS

Will Stop in Street Wherever the Passengers Desire.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—"Give the people what they want."

That was R. J. Fleming's announced policy when he became manager of the street railway.

"Please the people" were his orders. Then came the orders to motormen to stop only at certain crossings here and there, and the manager was led to believe he wasn't carrying out his own instructions.

Then, also, a few days ago, came the authoritative demand to obey the city engineer and put back the "stops."

From today on the citiens will be given the privilege of stopping the cars when and where they please—in front of their own doors, if they please.

"But it will make a slow service" is Manager Fleming's only comment.

PROMPT ACTION NOW EXPECTED

Preliminary Steps for New Courthouse to Begin Soon.

Now that the board of courthouse commissioners has been selected, it is expected that little time will be lost by the men comprising it in getting the organization complete and the preliminary steps taken toward starting the work on the new county courthouse.

County Auditor Halden, with whom the appointments are filed will notify each member, in his official capacity, at once, and it is presumed that the men selected have conferred with the district court judges and will be ready to file their acceptances and take the required oath to perform their duty, within the next few days. The first meeting for the organization of the board will depend on the call of three members of the commission.

As three members reside in Duluth, arrangements for notices to the remaining two members on the range are likely to be made very soon so that the commission may have its first meeting before the county board of commissioners next assembles Feb. 7.

RHEUMATISM

AN INSIDIOUS DISEASE THAT BREAKS DOWN THE STRONGEST

Rheumatism does not come on in a day; the causes that produce it work silently in the system for years. This insidious disease becomes intrenched in the blood, and some exposure to cold or damp weather, or slight indiscretion brings on an attack. Poor digestion, stomach troubles, weak Kidneys, torpid Liver, and a general sluggish condition of the system are responsible for Rheumatism. Food souring in the stomach poisons the blood, the failure of the Kidneys and Liver to act properly leaves waste matter and impurities in the system, which, coming in contact with the natural acids of the body, form uric acid. This is absorbed by the blood, and as it penetrates to the muscles, nerves and bones produces the terrible pains and aches and other disagreeable symptoms of Rheumatism. Life is made a torture by its excruciating pains, nerves are shattered, the health undermined, and if the disease is not checked it breaks down the strongest constitution. It will not do to depend on plasters, liniments, etc.; such treatment is helpful in easing the pain and reducing the inflammation, but does not reach the blood where the real trouble is located. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism by purifying and invigorating the thin, acrid blood, driving out all impurities and poisons and sending a stream of strong, rich blood to wash out all irritating particles that are causing the pain and inflammation. S. S. S. stimulates the sluggish organs to better action, tones up the stomach and digestion, restores nervous energy and builds up the entire health. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, whether acute or chronic, and the cure is thorough and lasting. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice desired without charge.

McKinley day has never been observed with much enthusiasm in Duluth and the pretty custom which must appeal to many of wearing the pink carnation on the anniversary of this beloved president's birth has never taken a firm hold on Duluthians. The cause of this lack may be that the weather around about Jan. 29 is of so sharp a nature that the first nip the little flower receives settles its appearance and life. But this year the weather is moderate and the florists promise plenty of the pink blossoms at no increase in price. In many parts of the country the demand for pink carnations on McKinley day is such that the florists double the price in many instances. The custom of thus remembering the dead president is a pretty one and might be well taken up in Duluth, and it is hoped by many that on Monday of next week this sign of remembrance will be generally adopted by Duluth people.

The Saturday Club.

The regular meeting of the Saturday club will be held tomorrow afternoon at the club room of the library. The topics for the current events half hour will be "Inventions and Discoveries," with Miss Ethlyn Abbott leader. Russian history will be studied and the program is as follows:

"Muscovite Russia," Mrs. W. A. McGonagle.

"Muscovite Renaissance," Mrs. J. M. Barnes.

"Feodor Ivanovitch," Mrs. J. C. Swan.

"Time of Troubles," Miss Multhaner.

"National Uprising," Mrs. Lectra.

Of General Interest.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stone entertained at a snowshoe party last evening. The guests were taken on a private car to Woodland and from there they tramped across country to the Country club, where supper was served.

• • •

The Palestine assembly, composed of the younger members of Palestine lodge, will entertain at the second in the series of dances at the Masonic dancing hall.

• • •

Mrs. John Jenswold will entertain at a sleighride tomorrow afternoon in honor of her little son, Henry. The children will take the drive to Lakewood.

• • •

The Luther league of St. John's English Lutheran church will entertain at a hard times social this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. N. Ole of 127 West Fourth street. In addition to many original and novel forms of amusement, a musical program will be given by Miss Nettie Gremmel, Miss Josephine Northmore, Miss Cora Hillard and Edward Olsen.

Birthday Dinner.

Mrs. R. Duby entertained at a birthday dinner last evening at her home, 626 West Second street, in honor of the twelfth birthday anniversary of her little daughter Gladys. The dining room and table were prettily decorated in pin kand white and the guests were:

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Excellent Indicators of the Taste of a Woman.

If one feminine accessory speaks more clearly than another of a woman's personal tastes it is her handkerchiefs. This essential square, be it of linen, lace or silk, tells many a tale of tidiness, daintiness or elegance which more conspicious parts of the attire fail to disclose. And the more refined a woman's tendencies, the more care does she display in choosing their handkerchiefs, says the Seattle Daily Times.

For this reason the daintiness and appropriateness of the small sized mouchoir which made its appearance early in the fall have caused it to gain a remarkable vogue. The old-fashioned ten-inch squares of muslin are being sold out as fast as bargain counter sales will dispose of them, and all the new handkerchiefs measure not over six or eight inches at the most.

Aside from this welcome decrease in size sheerness and delicacy of weave and pattern will characterize the mouchoir of 1906. Hankerchiefs for ordinary use show very narrow hems, and initials are much less in evidence than they have been in several years. Tiny designs of French hand-work adorn one or all of the four corners instead. Dragon flies, bees, autumn leaves, etc., are outlined in almost a thread line by satin stitch, and are embroidered with such exquisite fineness that they seem almost to be woven into the linen.

Fastidious women, however, continue to have a small, plain initial or monogram embroidered in one corner of each handkerchief. Not a few bachelor maids who pride themselves on their exclusiveness in dress order their mouchoirs by the dozen semi-annually from England. These little articles are then sent to France to have the initials worked by peasant women, and are finally dispatched to America, where the edges are finished with a narrow border of delicate Armenian lace. The handkerchiefs, when delivered in America, are as choice bits of linen as any woman could wish to own.

A pretty fancy for the holiday season in white mouchoirs shows the entire surface of the linen square sprinkled with embroidered disks. On others the tiny design is woven into the linen, butterflies, fleur-de-lys, shamrocks, etc., appearing at intervals of two inches over the entire handkerchief inside the narrow hem. Heavier threads of linen intercept these little patterns and give a fashionable lattice-work effect. One charming little handkerchief looks for all the world like a piece of dotted swiss sprinkled with minature iris, and is most delicate and unusual.

Mouchoirs with softly colored borders have retained their vogue in spite of all predictions of the contrary. Silhouette effects are the most sought after, and for these all the small flowers in pastel shades are employed to grace the edges of the white muslin squares. Often when no other color appears on a handkerchief an embroidered motif in one corner will inclose a small nouveau art design in pastel blue, lavender or gray.

The more expensive colored mouchoirs display irregular borders formed by flowers in pastel shades of muslin closely buttonholed around the outer petals.

In mercerized cotton these odd effects show to particularly good advantage. The rage for color schemes makes them exceptionally modish just now, and women, as well as men, consider them essential to a smart get-up. Genuine silk handkerchiefs, which are used for mufflers, are woven in all the wonderfully subtle colorings of the season. Many are finished with hems of a contrasting shade, and one little gem with a center of rose pink has the cream white border beautified by tiny rosebuds embroidered in silk floss to match the center.

WORK THE FACE.

Most Young Women Keep it Busy While Talking.

Why do so many girls make faces in their social intercourse? asks the Philadelphia Press.

Watch and you will find that eight young women out of ten, in animated conversation, are expending most of their energy in useless contortions of the face.

The expression pantomine of features, seen in a distant opera box, is often amusing and bewildering as the performance on the stage itself.

Whether it be the unconscious phenomena of nervousness or the mistaken struggles of vanity, the performance is equally unfortunate. The play of features indulged in by anybody but an artist is too likely to become a grimace.

The girl whose stock in trade is an "expressive face," whose "soul" makes a specialty of being "written on her countenance," is in great danger of excesses. She tries, most likely, to run against time, with the muscles of her face, the entire gamut of the emotions.

She "contracts her brows," and "levels her lids," twitches her lips and manipulates her eyes, bridles, beams, or languishes with the dispatch of a lightning change artist, until one feels assured that St. Vitus is the patron saint of the family.

Facial gymnastics as a habit are both unbecoming and injurious. They show a lack of repose that is associated with caste, and they affect the good looks of the future.

Puckers and frowns, contractions and expansions, and distortions too prodigal in youth, mean premature wrinkles and crows' feet and furrows. Elasticity of muscles is a thing to be husbanded, not overstrained.

No chronic fatal mannerism is admired except by the prejudiced.

She who habitually dilates her sensitive nostrils, or affects the coquettish "moue" of "The Duchess," or moistens or gnaws her lips through self consciousness, should be dealt with by the judicious.

Women made eyes as a business in the days of powder and patches and artificial chivalry. Even now some superannuated belle who slew her thousands by the old-fashioned method will complain that "Nellie has beautiful eyes if she only knew how to use them." But Nellie, wise maiden, knows the least use is the best use.

Mental vivacity can be expressed without a fidget of the features. The greatest need of the American girl is to learn to keep her nerve down and cultivate calm.

Electric Bath.

Miss Virginia Harned is said to be acquiring the sylph-like figure of a girl. According to the Dramatic News she is doing it by means of an electric bath which she has had installed in her house in New York. This is the way the News describes the contrivance:

"You all may look at Virginia's new bath, but you mustn't touch. To the casual eye it appears to be a sort of a white enamelled chest, with armholes and a circular opening in the top for a collar, but when the lid is lifted you see within a wooden seat and something like two thousand dollars' worth of arc lights and incandescent lamps. There are white lights than blind you with a blare like lightning, and there are blue bulbs that wink at you with wicked big eyes. Little flashes and faint Mephistophelean cracklings make you cross yourself piously and suggest Pol Plancon singing the "Veau d'or" to the wickedest music Gouraud—I mean Gounod—ever wrote."

Old Rose Popular.

Opinions may differ about the fashionable hue for winter gowns, but from the tidings which come from Paris there will be no doubt of the smart color for the spring. Lavenders, violets and mauves, greens, golden brown and tan, must all go down before old rose. Broadcloth is to continue the vogue for the fabric, but old rose is crowned queen. Miss Roosevelt will have an old rose broadcloth among her walking suits, and it will be trimmed with Persian embroidery. Old rose is just beginning to glimmer among the gowns at small ultra-fashionable gatherings, and it adorns only women who are always in the vanguard of style, and who pay a big sum to Paris modistes for the first hints of a coming fashion.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Endive, 10 cents, 3 for 25 cents.

Strawberries, 65 cents a box.

Rhubarb, 15 cents a lb.

Ducks, 18 cents a lb.

Turkeys, 25 cents a lb.

Pigs' heads, 7 cents a lb.

The person who goes on the lookout tomorrow morning for the Sunday dinner is going to have a pleasant time. The green things that will be shown are crisp and appetizing in appearance and there is enough variety and change from last week to cause folks to take notice. Strawberries at 65 cents a box will be an irresistible attraction for many people and these first of the most delicious of all berries will be dessert on Sunday in some few homes.

The rhubarb is pink and tender-looking and has that green taste for which people get so hungry before the spring garden stuff even thinks of coming.

The ducks and turkeys, and such things are looking better this week than for some time and ought with the proper assistance develop into lovely brown rich things for the piece de resistance of the Sunday meal.

THE SECOND MRS. VANDERVELT

By Albert H. Laidlaw.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Mrs. Vandervelt will be down in a few moments, sir," the servant said, as she ushered the visitor into the drawing room.

Vandervelt gazed about the room and his eyes rested on a photograph lying on the table. It was the portrait of his divorced wife—the woman who "would be down in a few moments."

"A picture of her," he muttered, with a wistful but hopeless look in his eyes. He still loved her—yes, loved her more than ever before—but he knew now that this folly had built a barrier between them that could never be torn asunder.

"A picture of her—just as she looked when I last saw her; at least, just as she would have looked had she been happy. How she must hate me now. God knows, I deserve the hate."

Cursing himself for being a fool, Vandervelt continued his soliloquy. What folly and what cruelty had been his desertion of her—his devoted wife! And his boy—did Francis know what a cowardly beast his father had been? And the divorce they had agreed to—yes, that had been still further folly. He had been blind—his infatuation for the other woman had been as sand in his eyes. He had been unable to see until the sand was removed and then it was too late.

"But heaven knows, I've suffered as greatly as she," was the consolation he tried to give himself, but it was poor consolation, for he realized that she had not deserved the suffering.

As he continued the mental battle against his feelings which he could not control, the man who had once been strong and brave and reckless dropped into an armchair beside the table and buried his face in his hands. Mrs. Vandervelt entered and looked upon the picture of despair. She stepped lightly, and so deeply engrossed was he in his bitter thoughts that Vandervelt did not hear her as she approached.

"Allen," she said, softly, her voice quivering, as she put her hand on his head and stroked his hair.

Vandervelt started violently. He was frightened, so suddenly was he awakened from his meditation, and bounded from the chair as he would have leaped from a railway track to escape death beneath the wheels of an approaching train. He turned about and looked at her and saw the tremble of her lips as she tried to speak. Then the gaze from his eyes fell to the carpet on the floor.

"Allen," she finally said again in a voice tremulous with emotion, "you—you—come back to—to—"

"Ask your forgiveness," he supplied.

"——to stay?" she finished.

"To ask your forgiveness," he repeated, unable to raise his eyes and meet her gaze.

Again her lips quivered in an effort to speak, but she could not. She tottered a little as though she were dizzy and might fall, and her hand swept nervously across her face as if she were brushing away cobwebs. He took a step forward, looked up at her and burst forth passionately:

"Margaret, I want you to listen to my confession. God, how wrong I've been. I—"

She put up her hand and shook her head, and he stopped.

"Don't," she said. "Please don't tell me. Let me spare you that—and myself. I could not listen to any confession. I forgive you without the confession."

"But you don't know—" he went on, but stopped again as she made another gesture, and his gaze dropped once more to the carpet.

"I don't want to know." Her voice was approaching steadiness, but it remained gentle. "I know you did not love—that other woman. You did not love her—did you, Allen?" The words were spoken with appealing eagerness.

Vandervelt replied brokenly and remorsefully:

"No, I did not love her. It was merely infatuation—a false infatuation. I never loved any woman but you."

"I knew it. I knew it," she continued. "I knew you would come back—and everything would be all right. We can begin over again and we can be so happy, for I love you so—I love you so—"

A light of happiness had sprung into her eyes as she spoke, and she rushed toward him and put her arms about his neck.

"Allen, I forgive you," and she kissed him. He could not respond and he could not resist. He was powerless and stood motionless, almost limp, with eyes cast toward the floor.

His attitude produced a frightened light in her eyes, and she drew away from him as she released him.

"Oh, I had forgotten the divorce," she said, "I had forgotten the divorce. We are not husband and wife. What folly that divorce was."

Then the look of fright disappeared and she almost laughed as she continued:

"But after all, that need not be a barrier, Allen. We can be lovers again, and you can ask me to marry you as you did that beautiful afternoon in the rose garden—at father's and mother's—that sweet, beautiful afternoon. And I can say 'Yes,' and then—and then— Oh, Allen, we can bury the past. Can't we, Allen, dear?" She put her arms about his neck again and spoke with passionate appeal.

Vandervelt broke away from her and broke into a sob as he bitterly exclaimed, pacing the floor:

"Why did I ever come back. I have returned only to torture you. I might have known—you could not know."

"What do you mean?" The look of fright again appeared in her eyes and again she brushed her hand across her face. "Can't everything be all right again?"

"It can never be," he continued bitterly. "It can never be. I am a married man. Oh, why did I ever do it?"

She gave a startled cry and tottered as both hands went to her head. She would have fallen had he not caught her and assisted her to the arm chair.

"Then—you—married—her?" Her lips quivered violently. "She—is—your—wife and is—living?"

"Yes."

"And you—didn't—come—back to—stay?"

"No. I came for your forgiveness. I had to have it. I couldn't live any longer without it—and I thought I might get to see the boy."

"You have—my forgiveness—now leave me—please."

Vandervelt left the house silently, filled with the mental anguish and remorse he had hoped would be partly obliterated by her forgiveness. How he wished that she had hated him. He felt that he was worse than amurderer. He did not return to the second Mrs. Vandervelt. He hated her now more than ever before. The strain upon his mind was too great. He could not live under it.

As the door closed upon the man she would never see again, the first Mrs. Vandervelt buried her face in her arms on the table beside the chair and sobbed quietly. Suddenly she was startled by a tapping at the door and then a child's voice called out:

"Mamma. Oh, mamma. Are you there?" Then the door was opened and the little boy rushed into the room, laying a bunch of roses in the lap of his mother, as she lifted her head and tried to dry her eyes.

"Why, what's the matter, mamma? Does your head ache?" exclaimed the child. "I've been looking everywhere for you. Aren't the flowers Mrs. Sanderson gave me nice?"

"Francis, my darling! My love!" exclaimed the mother passionately, clasping the child in her arms and kissing him again and again. "Thank God, I have you to live for, anyway. My little boy."

FAST TRAVELING.

Los Angeles Times: "There was a fair in the town of Douglas," says Senator Clark of Wyoming, "and I happened to be there during the event. The boys had made some miscalculations, and were losing money, when some one suggested a prize fight. Some good pugs were sent for, and the prize fight brought out crowd enough to save the fair from being a financial failure to the boys. In fact, with the prize fight feature they made some money.

"The day following we had the Commercial League of Denver for guests, and I was obliged to make a speech of welcome. I told them about the fair, and said that everybody in Douglas had attended the prize fight but me. I said that I had been all alone in Douglas for some time, when I happened to meet with a gentlemanly-looking fellow who was a few points more than half inebriated. He asked me if I was going to the prize fight, and when I told him no, he asked if there was any other amusement in town or coming, and I told him that the Commercial League of Denver was coming on the following day.

"'What kind of a bunch is that?' he inquired, and I told him they were a lively lot of people. He then asked me if they were as lively as the Kansas traveler, and when I told him I had never heard of the Kansas traveler, he said that there was a strong man in Kansas who was picked up in a cyclone, and carried away over into Iowa and landed in a graveyard. He was a little dazed when he picked himself up, and brushed the dirt off his duds. A minister visiting the cemetery addressed him and asked him where he had come from. The strong man said:

"'I have just come from Kansas.'

"'When did you leave Kansas?' inquired the minister.

"'About four minutes ago.'

"'Four minutes ago? Why, my good man, you cannot have traveled these 300 miles in four minutes.'

"'But I did. I came in a cyclone.'

"'Oh, that might be. But, of course, your heavenly Father was with you.'

"'Mebbe. I dunno. I was too busy to see if anybody was with me; but, if they was, they was goin' some I'll tell you.'"

A HARD STRUGGLE.

Los Angeles Times: "Men who wear glasses are not attractive to women," said the comedian, Joseph Coyne, in a Washington club. "Fat men, too, rarely please womankind.

"The former fact was forcibly brought home to me on a railway journey recently.

"The drawing-room of the car I was riding in was occupied by a bride and groom—she very pretty, he ugly and weak-eyed, but a millionaire.

"From where I sat, it was possible to overhear a good deal that went on in the drawing-room. This is one of the things I overheard:

"'Oh, George, why do you make faces at me like that?'

"'I can't help it, darling. My glasses are falling off, and I don't want to let go of your hands.'"

ATTITUDE OF THE WEST

Position on Football Reform Outlined at Conference in Chicago.

Michigan Students Protest Against Action by College Authorities.

Chicago, Janu. 26.—Coaches and managers of the "big nine" football teams met here yesterday to discuss recommendations for changes in the rules of the game which the West wishes made at the meeting of the American rules committee in New York on Saturday.

The gathering was secret, but it was learned that the discussion favored the forward pass in foohtball. Regarding rough playing, it seemed to be the unanimous opinion of those at the meeting that any player guilty of such work should be ruled out of the game at once, and that in cases where such a player is twice ruled out during the season that the player be suspended for the entire year from the football field.

Those present at the meeting were Coach Stagg, Chicago; Coach Williams, Minnesota; Coach Sheldon, Indiana; E. O. Smith, Northwestern; George F. Downet, Wisconsin; George Huff, Illinois, and James T. Lees of Nebraska. Nebraska is not a member of the "big nine," but as Mr. Lees is one of the Western representatives on the American rules committee, he attended the meeting.

Mr. Lees and Coaches Stagg and Williams, the three Western representatives on the rules committee, left for New York tonight to be present at Saturday's meeting.

STUDENTS PROTEST.

Michigan Protest Against Adopting of "Big Nine" Rulings.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 26.—University hall, the capacity of which is 3,500 people was unable to accommodate all the students, alumni and citizens who sought to attend last night's mass meeting called to protest against the adoption, by the University of Michigan senate, of the recommendations made by the recent Chicago conference on football. Resolutions were adopted unanimously asking the professors composing the university senate to give a hearing to a committee to consist of football men, two undergraduates and four alumni before acting upon the recommendations of the Chicago conference. The resolutions protest that the existing contract with Coach Yost should be honorably fulfilled, that the three years' rule should apply only to this year's freshmen and succeeding classes and that the number of games specified by the Chicago conference should be increased. There is also opposition to the abolition of professional coaches, of training tables, and of preliminary training for football men before the opening of the college year.

X-RAY EXPOSES FRAUD.

Suit for Damages Comes to an Abrupt End.

Paris, Tex., Jan. 26.—The testimony of the X-ray in a $10,000 damage suit resulted in the jury returning a verdict for the defendant.

T. J. Oliver alleged that at the hands of Sam Grant, a farmer, of Lamar county, he sustained a fractured leg from a blow administered by the defendant with a stick. Witnesses testified as to the encounter and to the plaintiff's having for several weeks been confined to his bed because of the alleged broken limb. As his only witness the defense introduced a local physician with an X-ray apparatus. The defendant was required to submit to being X-rayed and it was shown conclusively the leg had never been fractured.

BASEBALL MAGNATES

Will Hold Annual League Meeting in Duluth, February 4.

Copper Country Cities Will Send Representatives This Year.

Feb. 4 is the date set for the annual meeting of the Northern league, and at that time the delegates will assemble in Duluth for the purpose of talking over baseball matters for the coming year. The meeting was scheduled for tomorrow, but it was postponed another week.

The towns of Calumet and Lake Linden will send delegates to the meeting this year, and it is believed that some agreement will be reached whereby the Copper country cities will be included in the circuit. Whether the circuit will be enlarged to eight clubs, or whether Superior and Crookston will be dropped to make way for Calumet and Lake Linden, will be settled at the meeting.

At that time the officers of the league will also be elected for the coming year. President E. H. Kent is said to be out of baseball this year, and his successor will have to be chosen. As yet there is no hint of the man who will be selected.

The president will select his committees on the circuit and the schedule, and the settlement of these matters will be left in the hands of the committees.

The league is now planning for its fifth season, and is in the most prosperous condition it has ever seen. The outlook is bright for the coming year. The four cities which will be left from last year's sextet are all enthusiastic over baseball, and are prepared to get into the game energetically. They all cleared expenses and made a little money last year, and are prepared to give their teams substantial backing this season.

Following the annual meeting next month, a banquet will be held in the Commercial club, and the Duluth club will be presented with the pennant for 1905.

As soon as the league matters are satisfactorily settled, the Duluth management will go ahead and sign up players for next year. Capt. Artie O'Dea has been in correspondence with a number of available men for two or three months past, and he has several on the string, only awaiting the authority to close contracts with them.

Sporting Brevities.

Walter Wiggins won out in the unlimited pursuit race at the Temple roller rink last evening, overtaking his brother, Edward Wiggins, on the twelfth lap.

* * *

J. J. Wangenstein was last evening chosen a member of the board of directors of the Duluth Ski club. Arrangements were made to adopt a uniform for the members of the club who attend outside tournaments, in order to better advertise the local club and assist in landing the national tournament for next year.

The skating race between Charles Rankin and Carl Abroth will take place this evening at the Central ice rink. The race is for a purse of $20 and the championship of the Head of the Lakes.

SPANISH BANDIT'S WIFE IS HELD AS A HOSTAGE.

Madrid, Jan. 26.—The wife of the notorious bandit, El Vivillo, has been captured by the Magistrate of Ecija, who is holding her as bondage for the good behavior of her husband.

El Vivillo has written a letter threatening that, if the Magistrate does not release his captive immediately, he will tear him to pieces. On a previous occasion the brigand carried his wife away from her captors by sheer daring.

Several members of the brigand band have been arrested by the police as the result of information given by Don Ignacio Figueron, a rich merchant of Madrid, who was taken captive by them.

Don Figueron was captured while driving, and was informed that the price of his life was $5,000. He refused to write a note to his friends to that effect, and at the end of four days eluded his sentinel. He noted carefully the hiding place of his captors, and informed the police.

EGGS MORE PLENTIFUL

Heavy Receipts Result From the Continued Mild Weather.

Oranges Are Scarcer—Potato Prices Are a Trifle Lower.

Eggs have dropped a notch in price during the past week, and the market is now very weak for this season of the year.

Fresh eggs are quoted on Michigan street at 20 to 22 cents per dozen, as compared with 24 and 25 cents, which was the price last week.

The cause of the drop in price is the manner in which the receipts of fresh eggs have been increasing. The usual big falling off in receipts which is noticeable at this time of the year has not taken place, and the receipts at the present time are heavier than they have been for weeks past.

This is caused by the continual mild weather, which has been interrupted by but one cold spell of very brief duration. Hens continue laying much more freely than usual at this season of the year, and the supply of fresh eggs is now sufficient to practically supply the demand.

The result is that there is no market for the storage stock in Duluth at present, and the price has sagged to 18 and 20 cents.

A cold snap of a week's duration would doubtless bring a reaction in the market, but if the mild weather continues for another two or three weeks there will not be much likelihoood of higher prices this winter.

The mild weather had had no effect on butter prices. Cows have to be fed the same as they do in severe winters, and the market on butter is holding firm at the prices quoted last week. Creamery prints are sellings for 27 and 28 cents a pound and the fancy dairies at from 20 to 22 cents. The market all over the country is firm on butter, and there seems to be no immediate prospect of a decrease in the present prices for some little time to come.

The orange market is firm and higher this week. A heavy frost is reported in some sections of the orange country in California, and the exceedingly heavy shipments this season have told on a crop that was not overly large to begin with. The statistics show that 1,000 more cars of oranges had been shipped up to January 15 than during the same period last year. The low prices made ready sales and the consumption of oranges this winter has been very large all over the country.

The frost, coming on top of this situation, caused an advance of about 25 cents a case on all grades of the fruit and this week the best California navels are selling for $3 a case and sometimes a trifle higher for the choice fruit.

The mild weather has again caused the potato market to weaken, and the prices are a trifle lower this week. Whereas last week the tubers were bringing about 70 cents on Michigan street, they are now selling for about 67 cents, with an even better price for carload lots. The future action of the market depends largely upon the weather. Nothing short of a severe cold wave would bring a very strong reaction.

The prices of all the other vegetables remain practically unchanged from last week. Cabbage is a trifle firmer, and beets are a little lower, but the changes do not cut much figure in the market. The prices of staple vegetables vary but little during the winter months.

To the regular varieties of trout, pike, white fish and fresh salmon are added Lake Superior herring, skinned perch and smelts. Later they appear as sardines, but at present they are shipped in fresh and sell as smelts. The skinned perch are brought from the inland lakes and streams of Wisconsin, where they are netted. They are shipped in skinned and ready for the frying pan, and they make a very palatable dish.

Poultry is very firm this week. The receipts have fallen off, the farmers hesitate about killing hens which are laying as well as the average fowl is this winter, and the supply has scarcely been sufficient to supply the demand. The prices on the Chicago market are a trifle higher, than they are in Duluth. Good roasting spring chickens are bringing 15 cents a pound in Chicago, while in Duluth they are quoted at 14 cents.

* * *

Trade all along Michigan street has been quiet this week, with the exception of the branch packing houses. The demand for meats has been good, especially from the logging camps, and business has been brisk in this line.

CULVER POST'S IN MEMORIAM

Pays Fine Tribute to the Memory of N. A. Gearhart.

In respect to the memory of Nathaniel A. Gearhart, who died recently, Joshua B. Culver post, G. A. R., of which he was a member, has adopted and spread upon its records the following memorial, prepared by a committee:

In Memoriam—Nathaniel A. Gearhart. Joshua B. Culver Post 128, Grand Army of the Republic.

"The recent death of our beloved comrade, Nathaniel A. Gearhart, which occurred at the family home, 418 East Third street, this city on the 10th instant, leaves another sad vacancy in the ranks of Joshua B. Culver post, in which his presence was always greeted with pleasure by his veteran companions, who, like himself, assisted in making up the great army that fought—many of them dying on battlefields—that the Union might be preserved and the flag remain unsullied. After four years of civil war and bloodshed, the boys, those that were spared, returned home, for it was the boys that made up the army, as the following figures will show: There were less than 47,000 men of the age of 44 years and only 16,000 of the age of 25 years, a little over 600,000 of the age of 22 years, while there were 2,159,798 of the age of 21 and under; 1,151,438 of the age of 18 and under, 844,991 of the age of 17 and under, 231,051 of 16½ years and under, 104,987 15 years and under, nearly 2,000 14 years, 300 13 years, 225 12 years and on down to 25 of 10 years and under.

"Comrade Gearhart was one of that great army of boys, 18 years of age when he enlisted, though he lived many years afterward to enjoy a prosperous reunited Union.

"Comrade Gearhart was a member of the 104th New York infantry, known as 'the Wadsworth Guards,' which did valiant service in the Army of the Potomac. He was wounded in the first day's fight at Gettysburg, where his regiment lost nearly two-thirds of its number, and was a prisoner in a temporary hospital during the time the enemy had possession of Gettysburg. His name will be placed on the memorial tablet to go down to posterity as a record of self-sacrificing patriotism when his country and home were in the throes of dissolution and devastation. And while we will miss our comrade at stated meetings of the post, his family must bear their bereavement with much greater anguish, and to them we extend a sympathizing hand and trust we may all meet again.

"The post will make a record of these words of condolence, and drape their hall to the memory of their comrade and request the city papers to publish this memorial.

"MARCUS W. BATES,
"JOHN H. LAVAQUE,
"CHARLES S. WEAVER.

ANXIOUS FATHER

Drops $150 in Street, But Boy is Not Found.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 26.—Dr. L. S. Byers of Seeleyville, Ind., whose boy is supposed to have been kidnaped in May, 1904, was bunkoed out of $150 here. Several days ago he received a letter saying if he would come to Evansville and walk up Main street until he heard two shrill whistles and then drop $150 in a bundle and walk back to the depot his son would be led in there. Dr. Byers dropped the money as soon as he heard the whistles and walked back to the depot and waited for several hours, but his boy did not show up. The disappointment has prostrated the father. He has spent a fortune in search of his boy.

ROCKEFELLER SAYS HE WILL APPEAR

Cleveland, Jan. 26.—Frank Rockefeller gave out a statement yesterday afternoon in which he denied that he had told the deputy sheriff who served him with a subpoena to appear as a witness in connection with the action of the state of Missouri against the Standard Oil company that he would refuse to testify. Mr. Rockefeller said:

"I have made no statement that I would refuse to respond to a subpoena in this case. As a law abiding citizen, I have always responded and always expect to respond to any process of the courts.

"I have, however, explained to Attorney General Hadley, that my connection with the oil business ceased six years prior to the time to which his suit refers, and I think that he is satisfied that I have no information that would be of any service to this litigation, but should he ask me to appear as a witness, I will, of course, respond."

ALFONSO EXPECTED TO PROPOSE SUNDAY.

Biarritz, France, Jan. 26.—King Alfonso, traveling incognito as the Marquis of Covadonga, arrived here in an automobile yesterday from San Sebastian and immediately visited the Princess Ena of Battenberg and her mother at the villa Mouriscot, where they lunched together. The king appeared to be in a most joyful humor, graciously saluting the crowds along the roads.

The formal proposal of marriage may be made Sunday or Monday, during the dowager queen's visit. In the meantime the King will visit the princess daily.

The authorities have adopted the strictest precaution for the king's security.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE

Would Exempt Women and Minors From Capital Punishment.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 26.—Whether women should be exempt or not from capital punishment in Kentucky will soon be decided by the legislature. The debate began this week.

The execution of Mrs. Rogers for the murder of her husband, and the agitation caused over the fate in store for Mrs. Tolla, have set the Kentuckians a-thinking.

Judge J. A. Stevens, representative from McLean county, has introduced a bill in the house modifying the capital punishment law. The judge's bill provides that women and minors shall be exempt from capital punishment.

FAILED TO GET THE PRISONER

Mob Batters Down Jail Doors in Effort to Get Negro.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 26.—The county jail here was stormed by a mob of over 1,000 men last night, the assailants demanding possession of a negro who is suspected of having assaulted Miss Nevada Taylor, a resident of St. Elmo, one of this city's suburbs. The mob failed to find the negro.

The crowd began to form as early as 7 o'clock, and shortly after 8, headed by a man carrying a double-barreled shotgun, marched into the jail and demanded the negro. The mob was told the negro was not there, and the authorities offered to allow a committee of ten to inspect the prisoners to bear out this statement. The mob seemed to have no leader, and this committee was not named.

With the aid of the police the crowd was then driven from the jail offices. Promptly it began battering down the doors and succeeded in effecting a re-entrance. The ringing of the riot bells served to add to the crowd. All the windows of the jail were smashed by stones. Armed deputies and police guarded the doorway leading to the cells.

By 12:30 o'clock the mob became discouraged and dispersed. Troop B of the state guards was stationed at the jail to prevent further assaults. Two men were wounded by stray bullets during the assault on the building. Wood Parker was shot in the eye and Will Gentry in the head. Both were bystanders. The shooting was all done in an effort to intimidate the officials.

De Witt's Little Early Risers simply expel all putrid matter and bile, thus allowing the liver to assume normal activity. Good for the complexion. Sold by all druggists.

ABBOTT BLUNT VERY ILL.

Well Known Newspaper Man's Condition is Very Serious.

Abbott Blunt, editorial writer on the News Tribune and one of the best known newspaper men in the West, lies at the point of death in St. Mary's hospital, Minneapolis. His malady is Bright's disease and it is feared that he can live but a few days.

Mr. Blunt has been in poor health for some time and on Saturday was forced to give up his work and go to Minneapolis, his former home and where he has relatives, to rest. His condition became so serious however, that he was removed to St. Mary's hospital Wednesday and he has been gradually sinking ever since. He is said to be in an unconscious condition.

SUFFERED SIX YEARS FROM STOMACH TROUBLES AND GENERAL WEAKNESS.

"FAMOUS COOPER REMEDIES CURED HER."

Here is her story:

The Cooper Medicine Company.

Gentlemen: Six years ago I was taken sick with severe stomach trouble and have suffered ever since. I tried everything I could hear of but nothing seemed to help me. I grew weaker and weaker, lost my appetite, had frequent headaches and dizzy spells, and when I did force myself to take some nourishment I experienced a tired and bloated feeling afterward. A friend induced me to try the Famous Cooper Medicines and I am pleased to say that after a short treatment I am entirely relieved. I no longer suffer and my appetite and digestion are fine. I wish to thank you.

FARMERS GET INTO QUARREL

Lars Olsen Sues Peter Nelson for Damages for Slander.

Lars Olsen and Peter Nelson, two farmers residing in the town of Nortland, this county, have had trouble and will air their grievances in district court. Olsen claims that Nelson has called him a thief and has made the assertion that Mrs. Olsen "is not a d—— bit better than the plaintiff himself." For these alleged, false, malicious and defamatory accusations Olsen claims that the reputation and good standing of his family has been injured $1,000 worth in the community where they live and he asks judgment for that amount.

He alleges that Nelson, in the presence of John and Christian Swenson and several others, said in the Swedish language that he, Olsen, had stolen seven or eight bushels of potatoes from Nelson's cellar, that Mrs. Olsen knew it and was no better than her husband, Olsen says that the words have caused him humiliation and has exposed himself and family to great shame and ridicule.

Olsen is represented by I. Grettum and Nelson by Marshall & Greene.

Notice of a hearing on the demurrer to the complaint, for Feb. 3, has been filed with the clerk of district court.

VIRGINIA HAS A COMPLAINT

Citizens of the Range Town Want a Through Train.

Virginia has put in a plaint about the train service on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range roads since the Commercial club of Eveleth succeeded in inducing the Duluth & Iron Range to change its running schedule.

The citizens of Virginia feel that they are entitled to at least one through train to Duluth. The town has not now one on either the Missabe or the Iron Range. The Virginia Enterprise expresses the following opinion on the situation:

"Virginia continues to get the short end of the deal on passenger accommodations by both the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range roads. An honest kick on the part of the Commercial club might result in getting through trains to this city on at least one of these lines."

No formal complaint has been made at the general offices of the roads by the Virginians and, until that is done, the lines will probably pay no attention to the muttered discontent.

Funeral Services of Judge Potter.

John H. Potter, a member of the local bar, who died a few days ago of pneumonia, was buried this afternoon in Forest Hill cemetery, after the solemn and impressive Masonic funeral ceremonies, at the Masonic Temple, under the auspices of Ionic and Palestine lodges of Masons. The funeral occurred at 2:30 o'clock and was largely attended by the friends of the deceased, many of the local attorneys and members of the fraternity to which Judge Potter belonged.

Judge Potter was a member of Temple Lodge, No. 25, of Winthrop, Me., where he first opened his law office many years ago.

TOWNE WILL MAKE SPEECH

That Will be Appeal to Democrats of the Country.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Democrats in the New York congressional delegation have been engaged in earnest discussion lately regarding the necessity for a reorganization of their party, state and national. There is a general feeling that if the "housecleaning" methods of the Republicans of the state are not followed there should at least be some activity by which the lessons of the Greater New York mayoralty fight last fall may be taken advantage of and party interest aroused.

Representative Charles A. Towne, the Tammany orator, is preparing a speech which he will deliver in the house in the near future. It will be an appeal to the Democrats of the country and an effort to rally them around a leader and a platform that will inspire confidence in the voters. Towne is an orator of renown, and as he proposes to devote a good deal of thought and attention to this speech, it will doubtless create more or less of a sensation.

EVIDENCE ON OIL COMBINE

Cleveland Man Tells of Control by Standard Oil Company.

The Statements of Former Auditor Turrell Are Confirmed.

Cleveland, Jan. 26.—The second day's session of the investigation by Attorney-General Hadley of Missouri into the Standard Oil company's methods of doing business began before Commissioner Schwentner today, with H. H. Browne president and treasurer of the Great Western Oil company of Cleveland, as the first witness. Mr. Browne testified that his company was engaged principally in the marketing end of the oil business and handled lubricating oils largely. Mr. Browne continuing, said:

"I was manager of the company at the time John Teagle conducted the negotiations for the sale of the properties and what information I gained of the sale I obtained from him. I have no documentary evidence of the negotiations which began several months before the deal was consummated. Mr. Teagle asked me early in the year of 1901 to assist in the preparation of schedules of the properties of the company, which he said he wanted to submit to J. A. Moffatt and H. M. Tilford of the Standard Oil company of New York City. Mr. Teagle made several trips to New York to confer with the Standard Oil company's officials and a number of statements were prepared."

Attorney Hagerman had been objecting to all of the questions of Mr. Hadley and at this point asked Commissioner Schwentner to rule on the relevancy of the questions, saying Mr. Browne spoke from hearsay.

Commissioner Schwentner ruled that the evidence go in under objection and that the proper court must pass upon its legality. Mr. Browne then continued his statements as follows:

"The Republic Oil company appeared on the scene immediately after the deal was consummated, Louis H. Turrell, who testified yesterday, coming in here and taking charge of affairs temporarily. Mr. Turrell told me when I was first introduced to him that he was a representative of the Standard Oil company. I am somewhat familiar with the methods of the Republic Oil company since it took charge of the property of Scofield, Shurmuer & Teagle. The Standard Oil company has always had what is called a dissatisfied trade, which business was easy for the independent companies to obtain. The Republic went after this trade under the guise of being an independent concerns."

THE MINNEAPOLIS MUNICIPAL COURT

Can Try County Cases Within Jurisdiction of a Justice Court.

St. Paul, Jan. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Minneapolis municipal court has jurisdiction beyond the corporate limits of the city. It can try and determine all offenses committed within the county which are within the jurisdiction of a justice court. With this finding the supreme court today affirms the Hennepin county district court in its order covering the case of state ex rel, William H. Rosckes, appellant vs. J. W. Dreger, as sheriff, et al, respondents.

Rosckes was a resident of Excelsior and was sentenced by the Minneapolis municipal court to serve thirty days in the workhouse for conducting a "blind pig." He then tried to secure his release by protesting the right of the municipal court to try him.

In an opinion filed by the supreme court today, the district court of Dakota county is reversed in the contest over the will of Richard Tyner, a former pioneer of that section and a new trial ordered. Undue influence of the most arrogant character is noted and findings are made which practically takes away from Tyner's wife the lion's share of the estate, which her deceased husband willed to her and her relatives.

Tyner when he died at the age of 87 years, in 1903, was possessed of a 160 acre farm and about $4,500 in personal property. He had three sons and one daughter and in his will he cut all of them with $2.50 each, giving the farm and his personal property to his wife, it on her death to go to two of her nephews. The children entered a protest, alleging undue influence.

FORM A PARTNERSHIP.

Upham-Gravatt Coal Co. New Firm at Old Location.

A new firm has succeeded the Upham Coal company. John H. Upham has formed a partnership with M. Gravatt, former cashier of the old company and the firm will hereafter be known as the Upham-Gravitt Coal company, continuing at the same location, 410 West Superior street.

The new company is in position to handle the best kinds of the different fuels in both a wholesale and retail way, and will make a specialty of the highest grades of coal, both anthracite and bituminous, continuing the same excellent service that has characterized the old company. "No short weights, no long waits," is a motto that will in future as in the past be carried out to the letter.

FLOOR OF THE SEA.

Diver Says It Is World of Silence and Gloom.

The disaster which happened to the French vessel Sully not so very long ago when it went to the bottom not far from Saigon has afforded the divers intrusted with examination of the submerged ship opportunities for making exhaustive and important explorations of the bottom of the sea, says the Scientific American. In these fields of sub-aqueous exploration special distinction has been won by a young naval engineer named De Plury, who, by the aid of an apparatus of his own invention succeeded in reaching a depth of even more than 336 feet—a depth which had never before been attained.

De Plury has invented a kind of metal armor which affords him every protection, while by means of a special chemical combination respiration is automatically provided for. Thanks to this, he has already made more than 115 most daring descents with perfect safety. He has thus been able to discover a most marvelous world, hitherto seen by no eye but his; the sea bed is a scene of marvels combined with no small amount of tragic horrors.

"The first sensation experienced," said this intrepid diver at a recent interview with an Italian journalist, "is something like that which is felt on descending into a mine, but you soon get accustomed to it. At a depth of about nine feet medusae began to be found in large quantities. Seen through the water, everything appears magnified and they are apparently of enormous proportions. All recollection of the protection afforded by the glass front of the helmet is forgotten, and the first impression is that these masses of horrid flaccid and slimy medusae will adhere to your face.

"Just a little lower down, and a scintillating multitudinous shoal of small fishes is encountered, shimmering like so many strips of shining copper or other metal, in a state of continuous vibration.

"At a depth of about 162 feet thick masses of seaweed are traversed; some of these are hairlike vegetable growths, with arms from 20 to 30 yards in length, which, with a kind of horrid vitality, wrap themselves round every part of the body. These algae constitute a grave danger, as they can easily paralyze the diver's movements, and, by rising up above and around him, can weigh him down with a weight amounting to several hundred weight—sufficient to break a rope or life line when hauled on.

"Below 162 feet there are small snakelike fishes of about three feet in length, and also other denizens of the deep resembling dolphins. These latter hurl themselves violently against the diver. If, as already remarked, he is somewhat young at the game, and has forgotten the protection afforded by his helmet, he is still filled with a mortal dread lest they should succeed in smashing the glass front of the helmet despite its four inches of thickness. Of course, should that occur, death would be almost instantaneous.

"Still other and worse monsters are the polypi or devilfish, who wrap their slimy tentacles round the bold explorer; but although repugnant, these monsters are cowardly, and immediately renounce their attack on coming in contact with the unfamiliar feel of the metal armor plating or my diving dress. There are also equally horrible and much more intrepid, giant crabs. Some of those I have seen have measured as much as three feet in diameter. Due to their strong shells and formidable claws, they constitute a continual menace to the safety of the diver which is by no means to be despised.

"This is about all that can be said on the score of the deep sea fauna. The deformation of fish is not very noticeable at such a small depth; by deformation I mean not only change of form, but also of character. This takes place at a depth of about 1,604 yards; here their nature changes entirely, and they assume the forms and constitutional modification necessary to enable them to bear the enormous pressure to which they are subjected at the depth where they move and have their being.

"Hitherto it has been quite impossible to obtain living specimens of these submarine creatures, as they reached the surface with their volume quadrupled, due to the reduction of pressure. All these creatures are carnivorous, and their capacious maws not infrequently serve as the tombs of unfortunate sailors whose ships have gone down, and their bodies generally sink deeper and deeper, while the formidable pressure to which hthey are subjected in an increasing intensity soon smashes all their bones, and finally crushes the corpses quite flat. But enough; suffice it to say that this awful spectacle is scarcely visible after a depth of thirty feet.

"One curious fact attending these submarine explorations is afforded by the light, which forms a strange blend of green and violet, the color being a little similar to that of ice caverns which are to be seen in icebergs. At a depth of 32 yards the light begins to get more and more diffused, and the sun, viewed through the mass of superincumbent water, appears like a reddish opaque globe, but—and this is somewhat strange—when sheltered from the rays of the sun (behind a rock, for instance) the stars become visible even at midday.

"One day, just about noon, I saw a never-to-be-forgotten sight at a depth of 129 feet. The sun was right at the zenith. The bottom upon which I stood consisted of fine white sand, and the reflection of the light upon the snowy carpet gave me the impression of standing upon a plain of molten gold. At a depth of 226 feet the obscurity is complete; at 327 feet the darkness is inpenetrable, and it is necessary to have recourse to electricity for purposes of vision. I use electric lamps of 10,000 candle power, but even these cannot diffuse their light beyond a radius of ninety feet. A most tragic spectacle is then presented by sunken vessels, broken boats, splintered hulls, gaping decks and broken masts."

No scenes of horror can be surpassed by the awful panorama of death and disaster which have been witnessed by Engineer de Plury in the course of his professional experience as a diver.

"In the vicinity of Ostend," he relates, "I was requested once to examine the wreck of a vessel which had sunk not long before. This was the occasion upon which I was assailed by a veritable horde of those giant crabs of which I have already spoken. They were at the time busy devouring the corpses of the dead sailors. One of these monsters seized me by the leg, which would have been crushed as if squeezed by a jaw of steel had it not been protected by the powerful armoring of my diving dress. I had a kind of sword in my hand, with which I succeeded in killing two of these monsters; the shells I still possess.

"All objects at the bottom of the sea are covered with a kind of curious powder, and a terrible gloom and silence prevails. What a scene of melancholy! The floor of the ocean is strewn with bones, not a few of them of human origin. A very singular fact which I have observed is that the sea for a certain period of time keeps bodies in a perfect state of preservation. I once visited the hull of a vessel which had gone down with all hands.

"The crew were mostly asleep at the moment when the disaster occurred, and had thus practically passed instantaneously from sleep to death. So far they had not been bitten or gnawed by any fish, as most of the hatchways were closed. The men still appeared as if asleep. There they lay, wrapped in a calm and mysterious slumber. I approached, and climbing down to the hatchways, touched one of the corpses with my hand; the flesh seemed to dissolve and vanish under my hand, leaving nothing but a grinning skeleton!

"And the treasurers of the seas! Millions alone are engulfed not far from Vigo. Personally I have never been there, but one of my men once went down there clad in the old diving dress. The unhappy man died almost directly he reached the surface again, but he had had time to see several galleons lying at the bottom, with the masts still standing and the timber work still sound. These, of course, were some of the famous treasure ships, but I do not think it would be possible to recover them. All metals would have been destroyed by rust by now, as they have been below water ever since 1707.

"I have seen personally the vessel which, about 1805, was conveying Napoleon's treasures to Holland, but it was wrecked en route and sank with 100,000,000 francs of gold on board. Of these, 56,000,000 francs have been recovered, but the remainder, as I have said, is still in the bottom of the ocean. The Prince of Monaco states that he has found near Cyprus a galley still full of objects of art at the bottom of the sea. This is where submarine boats will have such a great future time before them, as by their aid we shall one day be able to explore unknown deep sea grottoes, rich in unknown forms of life, vaults full of untold wealth and the tomb of many a poor sailor."

CURE FOR FROGS.

Many years ago Dr. Woodward, founder of the Woodward institute at Quincy, was much annoyed by a wealthy maiden lady who was very positive she had swallowed a young frog and that it was growing in her stomach, says the Boston Herald. After many attempts to disillusion her, the doctor resorted to a strategem. He procured a medium-sized frog, and, placing it in his pocket, visited his patient and informed her that he proposed to remove the frog. He administered a powerful emetic. He then produced the frog, and she was very happy, and kept the frog as a souvenir.

In less than a week he had an urgent call from the lady, who tearfully informed him that the frog had left one of its family in her stomach. He took the frog, placed him on a table, and with his microscope examined him long and attentively. At last, with a sigh of relief, he exclaimed: "Madam, you are mistaken; the frog is a he one."

RUSSIA UNPOPULAR.

Louis Horwitz, a Russian, aged 28 years, has filed a petition in the circuit court of St. Louis asking that his name be changed to Louis Hart, says the Kansas City Journal. The Russian is a traveling salesman and represents that he is at a disadvantage in business by reason of the fact that he retains his Russian name. He says there is at present much prejudice in the United States against Russians. He also states that he wishes to effectually disavow all connection with the Russian empire.

COULD NOT REST NIGHT OR DAY

With Irritating Skin Humor—Whole Body Affected—Scalp Itched All the Time and Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From

APPLICATION OF CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I am never without Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment since I tried them last summer. About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors; but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body; and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured, and my hair stopped falling out, but I continue to use the Cuticura on my scalp. It keeps all dandruff out and scalp is always clean. I always use Cuticura Ointment on my face after shaving, and have found nothing to equal it. I will never be without it." D. E. Blankenship,

RECOMMENDED TO ALL MOTHERS

"I have used Cuticura Ointment for chafing of infants, and as they grew older all skin diseases were given treatment with that and the Cuticura Soap. I never found it necessary to call a doctor, as these Remedies are a sure cure, if used as directed. I am glad to recommend them to all mothers." Sincerely yours, Mrs. F. A. Kennard,

WEST DULUTH

It has been learned that Stryker, Manloy & Buck, as agents for parties owning the building at the corner of Fifty-third avenue west and Ramsey street and formerly used as the Red Cross hospital, have offered the building for use as a branch Y. M. C. A. The building is of brick and is 75 by 50 feet in size with a large basement and good heating plant.

The question of renovation and refitting is occupying the minds of the Y. M. C. A. directors. If it would cost much it is believed that it would be cheaper in the long run to erect a new building than to spend money for repairs. The W. C. T. U. ladies have already presented to the Y. M. C. A. a lot in West Duluth.

West Duluth Briefs.

Mrs. Josephine Carlson Hoglund has moved into her new residence on Fifty-sixth avenue west and Elinor street.

FRANCE MAY BOYCOTT VENEZUELAN PRODUCTS.

Washington, Jan. 26.—As a preliminary to a naval demonstration, France is now considering the initation of a boycott of all Venezuelan products, of which she is the largest foreign purchaser. No plan of action has been finally determined on, but the apparently complicated situation at Algeciras has caused a suspension in the program for the immediate dispatch of warships to La Guaria.

HAS QUEER DELUSION

Insane Prisoner Works Hard at His Self Imposed Task.

Was Climbing About Walls of City Jail Collecting Dust.

Clambering about the upper row of windows in the city jail and gibbering like a monkey, Anton Ahlseen was found this morning by the jailer.

Ahlseen was arrested yesterday on Third street by Mounted Officer Stewart, and locked up pending an examination into his sanity. He acted queerly when arrested, but the officers locked him up with the other prisoners, intending to take him before Judge Middlecoff this morning.

When the jailer entered the cell corridor this morning, he found Ahlseen clambering about the upper row of windows, about twelve feet from the floor. He was as quick and agile as a cat, but it was difficult to see how he had managed to reach the position in which he was found.

He carried with him a little tobacco sack, which he was trying to fill with dust from the window ledges and the top of the tier of cells. He would scrape together a little heap of dust and place it in the sack. When the officer found him he was bathed in perspiration from his strenuous efforts to fill the sack, but he had collected nearly a tablespoonful of the fine dust.

"My, but this is hard work," he said wiping his brow, as the officer called to him to come down. "I've got to fill this sack before I quit, though." He fell to work again at his self-imposed task and it took some time to convince him that he could quit work and descend from his perilous position.

He was locked up in the boys' department of the jail, as the officers feared he would fall to the stone floor and dash his brains out, while climbing about in the main corridor.

He will be taken before Judge Middlecoff this afternoon, and examined as to his sanity.

REVIVAL SERVICE.

Dr. Rice Preaches Sermon on God's invitation to Men.

That the revival meetings at the First M. E. church are continuing to increase in interest was evidenced last evening by the large attendance and deep interest. There were six conversions at the altar. Dr. Rice preached a very tender sermon from Prov. xxiii. 26, "Give Me Thine Heart," and spoke in part as follows:

"'Give Me Thine Heart.' That is a beautifully, tender and cordial invitation. God is at the door of your life with a request. No demand here; this is a request. God asks of men what He wants. How kind that He should treat us so. And I come tonight as a very humble representative of His to offer to you His invitation. And I count it the greatest privilege of my life that I can be His messenger, and can be privilged to remain with you to urge you to accept it. It would seem that no reason would say that such an invitation alone would be enough. But men must be urged for God.

"Now the alternative that is before you on this proposition is not that you can keep your heart all your own, but that you will put it some other where. You must give yourself if you would live. There is no hunger of the human life so deep as the hunger of the soul to love. You know that sometimes the natural appetites when restrained for some cause, become so ravenous that they will devour the most loathsome things in order to live. Well it is so essential for the heart to love, that if it be denied the best things for affection, it will turn even to the lowest and most unworthy rather than to be bereft of the life of love. It is not any wonder, my friends, that you, in forbidding your heart the best object of its affection, shall find it cleaving to something low. This is not a sign of depravity, it is rather proof of the nature of the human heart. There are hearts here holding things, because of inherent natur to cling, things that have been forced upon them. Ivy will fling its tendrils into the crevices of rocks, and by nature cling and climb. But I have seen it trying to grow in places unworthy its beauty, but because it was put there and by nature it clings and climbs, it was doing its best. And then I have seen it growing beside the wall where its best nature could not. One time I tried to compel some old English ivy to grow up a brick wall. It would not hold. It could not. The little tendrils would pull loose. But I nailed it there, and as fast as it grew away from my nails it drooped down again, and again and again I nailed it back. And it never grew strong and true. Some here have many times found their lives shrinking away from the things to which they profess attachment, and men could easily note it, but you have gone boldly about it and nailed them back to the unnatural places. Now I come to bespeak for you a better life to live. I come to offer you this kind invitation of your Heavenly Father that will take care of all your life—'Give Me Thine Heart.'"

JEROME CONDEMNS HIS OWN WITNESSES

reached. I am not here to justify Town Topics."

Justification of the editorial denouncing Justice Deuel, Mr. Jerome said, "means that Deuel was part owner of the paper, censor and reviser of proofs and that the paper which he edited in part, extorts money and prints scandal. It is alleged that he threatened to make public the family skeletons of society people unless given money."

The district attorney asserted that Judge Deuel did not violate the statute which forbade him to practice law in court, but, said he, "in my opinion he violated the statute in carrying on business. It cannot be said that in carrying on business he neglected his judicial duties. As a justice I will say for him, that he conducted his judicial duties honestly, fairly and well. Mr. Shepard has admitted that a great jurist did violate the statute, but Deuel was not drawing a salary of $17,000 a year. One rules a banking house from the supreme court bench, as others have from the bench. Growing gray and with his back to the wall, Deuel violates the city charter in an endeavor to provide for himself in his old age.

He does what a great judge, who took a position from a trust company did, before him. Don't say that he is a vampire or blackmailer because he violates the city charter. There is not a scintilla of evidence to show that Justice Deuel knew about the borrowing of thousands of dollars by Col. Mann.

"There is not a scintilla of evidence to show that E. Clarence Jones was blackmailed. He made a loan on collateral. If you gentlemen happen to know Thomas F. Ryan, I don't believe that you would think that much progress could be made with him along the lines of blackmail. He has been abused and vilified in the papers for years and he is not very sensitive. He has dealt with commercial guerillas and would not be shaken down by Col. Mann.

"This old man had been a power in railroad affairs and had been driven to the wall. His money had been taken from him and he was forced to make his living in this way. It is reasonable to suppose that these great financiers had a soft spot in their hearts for a man driven to the wall and that it was'nt very hard for them to give him an accommodation.

"O. H. P. Belmont did not say on witness stand that he was blackmailed. He was pounded before and after he refused to loan Mann and yet he gave to Col. Mann, the man who pounded him, an interview.

"Now take Perry Belmont. This rising son got stuck on the horizon. You would think that Mr. Osborne thought Perry was shaken down. Was he? He got shares of Carbon Steel.

James R. Keene is a rough and tumble fighter in the field of finance and yet we are told that $76,000 was taken from him by Col. Mann over night. I felt that Col. Mann ought to be arrested as soon as he left the stand. Think of Keene being plundered over night. What really happened, Col. Mann tells you, is that he gave securities on properties for this loan.

"Irving approached burden but he did not blackmail. Wooster, Wayne and Irving went beyond their authority. Wooster took blood money. They all said that Mann and Deuel warned them not to use the influence of Town Topics with reference to 'Fads and Fancies.'

"If there is a man on God's footstool who carries a fiercer eye than J. Pierpont Morgan I don't know him. Col. Mann may be a brave man and a warrior who would face the cannon's mouth, but facing a cannon's mouth would be nothing to that fierce gray eye of Mr. Morgan. Think of Col. Mann blackmailing J. Pierpont Morgan, and if he was blackmailed, why was he not called at this trial? Why blackmail anybody when there are so many easy marks?

"Until Harry Lehr appeared," said the district attorney, "I had not supposed there was a man in the country so modest as not to go into that monumental production, 'Fads and Fancies.'"

Here E. M. Shepard, counsel for the defense, suggested that he take up the Baker case.

Mr. Jerome said: "The Spanish war comes and Baker, owner of a big steamship line, filled with patriotic pride, rushes down to Palm Beach to tender his vessels to Gen. Alger, a member of a lumber company and hero of another war, the Civil war. Because of his patriotism, Mr. Baker sacrificed his line of steamships for the protection of the country and $4,000,000.

"The defendant in this case is an old time friend of mine. Only the best of motives could have actuated him in writing these articles, from information obtained in talk with me. In a measure I was the expurgated author. I talked to him honestly and told him what I thought of Town Topics. But he did not violate my confidence. His actions throughout this whole proceeding have indicated a finesse of professional honor. He did not reveal to his counsel the talks that he had with me until I suggested it to them. If people had the courage to come into court this scandalous paper would have been wiped off the earth long ago.

"I think, in your deliberations, the question you will turn on is of justification, and whether Hapgood wrote the article with greedy intentions. The gist of that will be, was there reasonable ground for arraigning a judge as a blackmailer?"

Justice Fitzgerald then charged the jury.

ENDORSES THE CANDIDATES

Garfield Republican Club Approves of Thomas F. Trevillion for Mayor.

A meeting of the Garfield club, held some time ago for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, named the following: Thomas H. Martin, president; L. S. Meader, first vice president; W. C. Weld, second vice president; F. A. Sills, secretary; C. F. Wiberg, treasurer; E. F. Chalk, sergeant-at-arms; J. P. Johnson, N. B. Morrison, Hugh J. McClearn, executive committee.

A meting held last evening with a representative gathering of members indorsed the candidacy of Thomas F. Trevillion for mayor, William L. Windom for municipal judge and the Republican candidates for aldermen in the various wards in the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the Garfield Republican club of the city of Duluth pledges its support to Thomas F. Trevillion, the Republican candidate for mayor. The members of the club feel certain that when elected Mr. Trevillion will give this city a clean, progressive and honest administration of public affairs.

"Resolved further, the Garfield club indorses the candidacy of William L. Windom, the Republican candidate for municipal judge, and the Republican candidates for aldermen in the various wards. They are worthy of the support of the people. This club supports them and its candidate for mayor because they are pledged to good city government and their election is its surest guarantee."

It is the purpose of the club to hold its annual banquet in the near future and prepare for its usual vigorous work for future campaigns.

Addresses were made by ex-Senator Culkin, B. J. Coook, S. F. Staples, John R. Hein, E. R. Jefferson, James Thompson, H. A. Wing and others. Favorable reports were received from all parts of the city as to the progress of the campaign.

BIG MACHINERY DEAL.

Canadian Concern to Supply Plant to Atikokan Iron Company.

Port Arthur, Ont., Jan. 26.—The Canadian Rand Drill company has sold the Atikokan Iron company a full plant of mine machinery and equipment, which is to be set up and put into running order within six months. There will be no hoisting plant, for the company will be able to mine in tunnels and open cuts for a long time. The machinery includes one Blake crusher, of 1,000 tons capacity in twenty-four hours, calculated to crush to 2.5 inch size, together with steam power. There will also be a 20x30 compressor, half of which is to be installed at once and ten drills.

The Drill company has granted J. G. Herr six months' leave of absence, during which time he will install this and other machinery for the Atikokan company, and get it running to capacity. The company's furnace will be ready for blowing in late in the year, and will have capacity for about 100 tons, not 200 as has been frequently stated of late. It is intending to mine for the Canadian market, and to crush and roast the ore before shipping from here.

Efforts are now being made to secure from the Canadian government a bounty of $3 a ton for pig iron made in Canada, in place of the annually diminishing bounty now in force, and also to secure a bounty on ore mined there. The indications are that both these propositions may be accepable to the government in some modified form.

MARRIAGE MIX-UP.

Brother of Divorced Man Marries Former Sister-in-Law.

Le Sueur, Minn., Jan. 26.—One of the steady inhabitants and legal voters of the city of LeSueur, a gentleman whose name might as well have been Montgomery Brewster as anything else if the facts in the case had happened to be that way, is a highly domestic man, with a kind and loving heart and a strong tendency toward matrimony. Three times he has entered into the state of wedded bliss, and lady two and three are still in the land of the living, the ties of love and law that united him to his second affinity having been severed by the decree of a court.

It now happens, in the indiscriminate play of the machinations of cupid, that a brother of wife number three is to join, today, in the holy bonds of wedlock with ex-wife number two, and the question arises among the numerous readers of the puzzle departments of all the great family papers, "Where then will the matter of family relationships be at?"

The marrying man, Brewster, will be brother-in-law of the husband of wife number two and, consequently, brother-in-law of said wife number two. He will be uncle to their children and, being now father of the children of his present sister-in-law by her first marriage with him, will be father to one portion of a set of brothers and sisters and uncle to the rest of them. He and his ex-wife will call the father of her present husband "papa," although he is no real relative of theirs, nor they any relation whatever to each other, except by the marriage of each to some one else.

NEW COLLEGE HEAD.

J. H. T. Main Is Elected to Succeed President Dan F. Bradley.

Grinnell, Iowa, Jan. 26.—At a session of the trustees of the Iowa college, held yesterday, Prof. J. H. T. Main, who has been dean of the faculty for several years, was elected college president. Mr. Main was acting president of the institution between the retirement of President George A. Gates and the election of President Dan Bradley, who retired to take the pulpit of the Congregational church in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Main has been occupying the chair of Greek, of which he is considered one of the best instructors in the country. There were several candidates for the position, but Mr. Main's long connection with the institution, with his well-known ability, coupled with the fact that he had acted as president for some years, and his administrative qualities having been demonstrated by actual experience, made him the first choice of the board of trustees, the college prospering beyond anything heretofore known in the history of the attendance.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Isaac Syfe Arrested on the Charge of Killing Peter Kaden.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Bonesteel—What was called a mysterious suicide by the coroner's verdict in the case of Peter Kaden, the Hoskins, Neb., farmer found dead in a well on King's homestead on the Rosebud, is now pronounced murder in the first degree, and Isaac Syfe, a Syrian, who had had trouble with Kaden and with whom Kaden was last seen alive, is in jail here awaiting his preliminary hearing on the charge.

Kaden was found dead in a well the last day of December. A note found in his room, and apparently written by him, stated that Kaden had determined to end his life by jumping into a well, and told where the body would be found. It was signed "I Am Done."

Later developments, however, seem to indicate foul play, and Syfe, who came into town five days after Kaden's death, on the pretext of wanting to have Kaden, the dead man, arrested, claiming ignorance of his death, was suspected. Three weeks after the tragedy Syfe has been arrested on a charge of throwing Kaden into the well deliberately and with premeditation. State's Attorney Bachus filed the complaint on order of the board of county commissioners. Syfe has pleaded not guilty.

The trouble between the two men is said to have been due to Kaden's failure to live up to an agreement.

Citizens of the reservation were greatly incensed and since then an investigation has been going on which the county commissioners believe warrants them in filing the charge of murder. Interest is still intense, and startling disclosures are anticipated.

Mitchell—Miss Etta Smith, daughter of Mrs. Lew Merriman, who lives nine miles north of town, was the victim of a serious accident. She had been to Loomis and had started home in a buggy.

When crossing the railroad track she got out to fasten a tug that had become loosened. The horse started and she endeavored to get into the buggy, but her foot caught between the spokes of the front wheel. Her leg was twisted and the bone broken squarely off, the limb hanging by a shred of flesh. Her hair became twisted around the axle of the rear wheel and in this position she was dragged for a mile when the horse was stopped.

In order to release the young woman her hair had to be cut, so tightly was it wound about the wheel. She was bruised and cut and was only partially conscious when released. It was necessary to amputate her leg at the knee.

Lead—The Homestake has laid off about fifty of the 1,000 men who work below ground on account of the vast accumulation of ore. Several open stopes are now completely filled with rock waiting to be taken out. Aside from these, there are several open passages from floor to floor also filled with ore reserves. More ore is being broken at present than is being hoisted and it was necessary to reduce the ore output for the time. The men who were laid off were drill machine operators. About 250 of these machines are in constant use and fifteen of them are now quiet. All departments of this immense mine are growing so rapidly that it is impossible to keep up with the demand. The ore supply at present far exceeds the demands of the mills, but it is not possible at present to increase the milling capacity as it is living up to its water supply. This lay-off will be only temporary.

Sioux Falls—A move of the utmost importance is about to be made as a result of litigation extending over a period of several years between the city of Sioux Falls and the private water company which for twenty years or more has furnished the residents of Sioux Falls with water. The bone of contention was the completion and operation of a municipal system of waterworks.

The water company was defeated in the courts and the city is about to complete its plant preparatory to placing it in operation. Thus far the city has expended about $185,000 for the system. It is now officially announced that in the near future the water company will make a proposition to the city for the purchase of the municipal plant on condition that the company be given a franchise.

It is stated that the water company will, if the proposition is accepted, reimburse the city for the $185,000 expended in the construction of the municipal system, and in addition will abandon a claim of $50,000 against the city and agree to furnish water to consumers at one-third less than the present rate. It is probable that when the proposition is formally presented to the city, steps will be taken to submit it to the voters for their acceptance or rejection.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Valley City—The attendance at the meeting of the North Dakota Livestock association is much smaller than was anticipated, because of delayed trains. Many people who were to have attended were snowbound. However, an interesting program has been carried out. State Senator Harris of Kansas read a paper yesterday and there were many other speakers of lesser note.

Grand Forks—A regular summer term of the University of North Dakota, in conjunction with a state training school for Grand Forks, Walsh and Pembina counties, known as the university summer school, will open June 25 and close Aug. 3. Arrangements for the school were discussed in this city Tuesday at a meeting attended by State Superintendent W. L. Stockwell, Prof. Joseph Kennedy of the university, and J. Sonderal, F. M. Sherarts and J. F. McLain, superintendents of Walsh, Pembina and Grand Forks counties.

Prof. Joseph Kennedy will be the conductor and Miss Alice Fisher of Park City, Utah, will be in charge of the primary department. The other instructors so far selected are Prof. P. S. Berg of Larimore, W. E. Hoover of Park River, and C. C. Schmidt of Jamestown. Additional instructors will be selected by the university faculty, with the exception of a teacher of drawing and music, not yet decided upon.

All subjects required for all grades of county certificates will be offered, including reading, writing, orthography, grammar, arithmetic, geography, United States history, civics, physiology, algebra, geometry and physics. In addition to the above will be offered vocal music, drawing and primary reading, language, number work and native study.

HONEST.

Gen. "Jack" Weston is believed to stand a chance for appointment as chief of staff of the army, says the Kansas City Journal. Should he be so fortunate he will owe some part of his good fortune to the rugged honesty which he displayed on one occasion while talking to the president. He heard that Mr. Roosevelt thought of passing over Col. Humphrey in appointing a quartermaster general, and he immediately called at the White House. "I came, sir," he said to the president, "to have a straight talk about the quartermaster generalship. I hear that you are thinking of passing over Col. Humphrey and some persons are saying that you are proposing to do it because you had a personal quarrel with the colonel during the Santiago campaign and, sir, they will say what they will be justified in saying." Such a look as passed over the face of the commander in chief of the army and navy when this speech had been finished most officers would hate to see. But in an instant it wore a beaming smile, the teeth were shown and the president exclaimed: "By Godfrey, you're right, Weston, and I'll appoint Humphrey."

WOULD HAVE IT AMENDED

Sheriffs of State Not Satisfied With Present Mileage Law.

Sheriff W. J. Bates Talks of the Convention at St. Paul.

"The Minnesota State Sheriffs' association had a very profitable and interesting session," said County Sheriff W. J. Bates, who returned this morning from the state convention of sheriffs at St. Paul.

"The business sessions were instructive and the social sessions were everything that could be desired. Along the latter line the banquet given the sheriffs Wednesday evening was certainly a fine one. J. E. Lundgren of Douglas county was the toastmaster and he made a great hit with the boys. He had something doing all the time.

"Most of the time was spent yesterday in discussing the question of fees. There is a strong sentiment among the sheriffs that the law regulating their fees should be amended. The discussion centered over a recent decision of the state supreme court that holds that when a warrant from a justice court or any other that is not a court of record, is placed in the hands of a sheriff for execution, he is entitled to such perquisites only as are due a constable in such cases. This means that the sheriff's compensation in such cases is not regulated by the law that prescribes the sheriff's fees. The decision further holds that in executing a warrant for the apprehension of a prisoner, the sheriff, like the constable, is allowed only the mileage of 10 cents a mile and is entitled to nothing for the transportation of the prisoner.

"Importance is placed on this decision because heretofore most of the sheriffs have been allowed transportation charges for prisoners. This happened in counties where county attorneys had not heard of the decision, or else ignored it. In other counties the county attorneys were vigilant and instances were related where the sheriff was actually out of pocket on account of having to bring prisoners in from a distance, the 10-cent mileage not being sufficient to pay the fare of the sheriff and his several prisoners.

"It was the opinion of the sheriffs that the only recourse now open is to get a separate warrant for each prisoner and bring them to the county jail one at a time, collecting the 10-cent mileage each way, but such step would obviously be out of accord with public policy, so the sheriffs desire that the law shall be amended.

"There were thirty-one sheriffs present and the officers elected for the ensuing year were J. W. Dreger of Hennepin county, president; E. H. Vine of Olmstead county, vice president; J. E. Lundgren of Douglas county, treasurer. President Dreger is also at the head of the Interstate Sheriffs' association that will meet in Des Moines, Iowa, next July. He is a splendid man and well fitted for his positions."

Sheriff Bates was named on the executive committee of the state association for the Eighth district.

J. C. HUNTER IS MANAGER

Former Duluthian Continues in Charge of Atikokan Properties.

Company Holds Its Annual Meeting at Port Arthur.

William MacKenzie, president of the Canadian Northern road, was elected president and J. C. Hunter, formerly of Duluth, was elected vice president and general manager of the Atikokan Iron company, limited, at the annual meeting of the corporation held recently at Port Arthur, Ontario. Hugh Sutherland, executive agent of the Canadian Northern road, and R. M. Hunter of Duluth were elected secretary and treasurer respectively, of the company.

The following directors were elected: William MacKenzie, D. D. Mann, vice president of the Canadian Northern; Z. A. Lash, counsel for the same road; Hugh Sutherland of Winnipeg, A. Stafford White of Chicago, J. W. DeC. O'Grady, manager of the Northland bank of Winnipeg, R. M. Hunter of Duluth and J. C. Hunter of Port Arthur. Messrs. Sutherland, Lash and J. C. Hunter will make up the executive board.

The company has placed a contract with the Canadian Rand Drill company for the installation of some mining machinery, which is needed at once. The mine will be opened by tunneling and no hoisting machinery will probably be needed for many years.

Foundations for blast furnaces, boilers, coke ovens, roasting plant, engine house and track approaches have already been completed and contracts have been let for the completion of the superstructure, which will probably be about the first day of August. The company has also placed an order with the Pittsburg Coal company for some coking coal.

An ore shipping dock is being put in and it is the intention of the concern to make shipments of Bessemer ore to Canadian furnaces. Something like 600 or 700 tons or of ore will be handled a day at the Atikokan mines by May 1, it is expected.

WILL REQUEST POSTPONEMENT

Dan Cameron Not Ready to Press Charges Against Black.

The hearing of the charges of Dan Cameron, the former member of the fire department, is bringing against Chief Black, was scheduled for the meeting of the board of fire commissioners, which will be held this afternoon, but it will be postponed until the next meeting of the board.

Cameron has engaged Porter J. Neff as his attorney. Mr. Neff had charge of the case brought by Herman Wendtlandt against Chief Black.

Cameron stated this morning that he would ask for an adjournment of the hearing when the board met this afternoon, and it will probably be granted.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU.

Few People Realize the Importance of Good Digestion Until It is Lost.

Many people suffer from dyspepsia and do not know it. They feel mean, out of sorts, peevish, do not sleep well, do not have the inclination and energy for physical or mental work they once had, but at the same time do not feel any particular pain or distress in the stomach. Yet all this is the result of poor digestion, an insidious form of dyspepsia which can only be cured by a remedy specially intended to cure it and make the digestive organs act naturally, and properly digest the food eaten. Bitters, after-dinner pills and nerve tonics will never help the trouble; they don't reach it. The new medical discovery does. It is called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is a specific for dyspepsia and indigestion. It cures because it thoroughly digests all wholesome food taken into the stomach, whether the stomach is in good working order or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by digesting the food, instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, gives it a much needed rest and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

When you are nervous, run down and sleepless, don't make the common mistake of supposing your nervous system needs treatment and fill your stomach with powerful nerve tonics which make you feel good for a little while only to fall back farther than ever.

Your nerves are all right but they are starved, they want food.

Nourish them with wholesome everyday food and plenty of it, well digested, and you can laugh at nerve tonics and medicine.

But the nerves will not be nourished from a weak, abused stomach, but when the digestion has been made perfect by the use of this remedy all nervous symptoms disappear.

Who ever heard of a man or woman blessed with a vigorous digestion and good appitite being troubled with their nerves?

Good digestion means a strong nervous system, abundance of energy, and capacity to enjoy the good things of life.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will certainly set your stomach and digestive organs right; they can't help but do it because they nourish the body by digesting the food eaten, and rest the stomach.

You get nourishment and rest at one and the same time, and that is all the worn out dyspeptic needs to build him up and give new life to every organ and an added zest to every pleasure.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a god-send to the army of men and women with weak stomachs and nerves and justly merits the claim of being one of the most worthy medical discoveries of the time.

JUST ONE MORE DAY

Saturday is Absolutely the Last Opportunity to Register.

Not One-Half the Voters Have Qualified as Yet.

If there is a poor, hunted voter in the city of Duluth who has escaped the cluches of the political compaigners, who has failed to read the newspapers during the last two weeks, and who has no independent knowledge of the state election laws, he is hereby informed that tomorrow, Saturday, Jan. 27, 1906, is the last day of registration for the municipal election which will be held in this city next month.

If he is also ignorant of the meaning of that term, he is further informed that it means that he must go to his polling place tomorrow between the hours of 6 o'clock in the morning and 9 o'clock in the evening, and give his name and address to the judges who will be waiting to receive it. Otherwise he will not be able to cast his vote at the election next month, and will lose the opportunity to cast his ballot for any of the candidates, or state his position on the question of the issuance of water and light bonds.

Tomorrow is absolutely the last chance, and all those who have failed to register at the primaries or on the second day of registration, must get their names in tomorrow.

There are still from 8,000 to 10,000 eligible voters who have, through indifference, neglect or absence from the city, neglected to prepare themselves for the election. About 6,400 have registered. It is hardly hoped that any large percentage of the 8,000 will go to the polls tomorrow, but it is hoped that the two totals will be, nearly if not, quite evened up, and that the number of voters registered will be equal or greater than the number not registered.

To do this, it is necessary for between 2,000 and 3,000 voters to go to the polls tomorrow, and this will take some vigorous work on the part of the campaign managers who are bending all their efforts to get out the registration.

FARMER HINDS VISITS DULUTH

Former Railroad Promoter is Now a Seller of Lands.

D. W. Hinds of Hanna, N. D., better known to a great many Duluth people as "Farmer" Hinds, is in the city. Mr. Hinds acquired his appellation from his agitation of ten years or more ago for the building the farmers' line of railroad across Northern Minnesota and Northern North Dakota to allow the grain of that territory to get entrance to the market at Duluth. He came to Duluth at that time and while his appearance and his scheme were somewhat unique, his earnestness and the study which it was easy to see he had brought to bear upon the subject gave him a respectful hearing.

He finally went so far as to get the ear of Calvin S. Brice and other New York financiers, and finally interested them, but before the plans could be worked out James J. Hill saw that the road must be built and jumped into the field first, building what is now known as the Fosston branch of the Great Northern.

Mr. Hinds recalls that while the farmers' road was not built the present one is doing about what he claimed would be the result, a reduction of one-third in the freight rate on grain from his country to the Head of the Lakes. It then cost 14 cents a bushel for wheat and now between 8 and 9 cents.

"We were a pretty poor people at that time," said Mr. Hinds this morning, "about as poor as we could be and live at all, but you ought to see us now. Several years of good crops has brought peace and plenty to us and we have some rich farmers now among those men who were then so poor and who did not lose faith. We have prospered just as you have, and I can see many signs of better things in Duluth."

Mr. Hinds is now a land seller, being interested in selling Canadian lands.

A SLIGHT DECLINE

Wheat Rather Heavy Early in Session But Has a Rally.

Flax Again Weaker But Some is Sold for Export.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 26.—Wheat was pretty heavy at the opening and in the early part of the session today. Liverpool was unchanged to ¼d lower, Paris ½c higher, Berlin ⅛c lower and Budapest unchanged. Argentine weather was reported favorable and shipments from them were fairly large, being 1,176,000 bus., against 640,000 bus. last week and 2,000,000 bus. last year. Rumors of some export business being done of American wheat steadied the market and caused a rally but prices closed a little weaker than yesterday.

The May option fell ⅛c in Duluth, ⅛-⅛c in St. Louis, ⅜c in Winnipeg, was a shade lower in Chicago and Minneapolis and unchanged in New York.

Corn was weaker. The May option in Chicago fell ¼-⅜c and Liverpool was ¼d to ½d lower. Argentine shipments this week are 171,000 bus, against 496,000 bus last week and 1,560,000 bus last year. May oats in Chicago fell ⅜c.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 23 against 11 last year, and at Minneapolis 266 against 271 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 266 against 271 last year. Chicago receipts were 14 against 28 last year. Winnipeg received 51 against 43 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 526,000 bus, last year 452,000 bus. Shipments 193,000 bus, last year 793,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 129,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 525,000 bus, last year 417,000 bus. Shipments 290,000 bus, last year 250,000 bus. Clearances were 900,000 bus.

The local wheat market was dull today. May wheat opened unchanged at 83⅞c, dropped to 83⅜-½c at 9:55, and then advanced to 84¼ at 11:10. The closing price was 83¾c, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. July wheat opened unchanged at 85c and advanced to 85⅝-½c. The closing price was 85c, showing no change from yesterday.

Flax was weak in the local market and the foreign markets were lower. London was ¾c to 1½c lower and Antwerp 1¼c lower. However, the foreigners bought some for export on the break here.

May flax opened ¼c lower at $1.18¾, fell to $1.18, rallied to $1.18¼ and then declined to $1.17. During the rest of the session, the price ranged from $1.17¼ to $1.17½. The closing price was $1.17½, a loss of 1½c from yesterday.

July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.19¼, advanced to $1.19½ and then fell to $1.18. The price then rallied to $1.18⅝. The closing price was $1.18¾, a loss of 1¼c from yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.18¾ and fell to $1.18. The closing price was $1.17¾, a loss of 1c from yesterday.

Oats to arrive were ⅛c off and oats on track ⅜c off. The other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive No. 1 northern, 81⅝c; No. 2 northern, 79⅝c; on track No. 1 northern, 81⅝c; No. 2 northern, 79⅝c; May, 83½c; July, 85c. Durum No. 1, 72c; No. 2, 68½c. Flax to arrive, $1.14; on track, $1.14; May, $1.17½; July, $1.18¾; September, $1.17¾; October, $1.16; oats to arrive, 29⅝c; on track, 29⅜c; rye, 90c; barley, 35-45c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Profit Taking and Short Selling Cause Decline in Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Profit taking by discouraged holders and short selling by local traders caused a decline today in the local wheat market. The early reports were that the market was firm at Liverpool, but that later some weakness was manifested, and this encouraged selling on the local exchange. May opened a shade to ¼c lower at 82⅞c to 82¾c, and declined to 81¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reimported receipts of 319 cars against 407 cars last week and 310 cars a year ago.

During the last half of the session, a better feeling prevailed. All of the early loss was regained. The close was steady with May off a shade at 82⅝c.

Weak cables and favorable weather for the movement of the crop induced general selling in corn and weaker prices. The shipping demand was less and this encouraged the bears. May opened unchanged to a shade lower at 46⅝c to 46¾-47¼c, and sold off to 44¾c. Local receipts were 199 cars with 15 of contract grade.

Prices in the corn market did not change materially before the close which was easy with May off 1¼-⅜c at 44⅝c.

The slump in wheat and corn started renewed liquidation in the oats market, which caused the May option to decline ½c. Owing to the considerable changing of May to July the latter option showed greater steadiness. May opened ⅛c to ⅜@¼c lower at 31⅝@⅛c to 31½c, and declined to 31¼c. Local receipts were 134 cars.

Provisions were easy on selling by small longs and local bears. The weakness of grain and larger receipts of hogs than had been expected also depressed the market. May pork was off 7½c at $14.05. Lard was down a shade at $7.55. Ribs were 2½c lower at $7.52½.

Close: Wheat—May, 85⅝c; July, 84c. Corn—May, 44⅝c; July, 44⅜c. Oats—May, 31½c; July, 30¼c. Pork—January, $13.70; July, $14.12½. Lard—January, $7.40; May, $7.52½; July, $7.62½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Immediately after the opening today it seemed as if market were in for another down turn, May selling as low as 80⅞ @83c, from which point a smart rally developed. The report of a large sale of No. 2 red being made at a half cent over May price caused some belated short covering and undoubtedly induced some buying by long holders. It seems, however, notwithstanding the sharp upturn from the low point that the rally today was but a repetition of yesterday. The short interest have been twisted so many times in the past that they feel a little shy about getting too far from shore on such a break as we have gone through in spite of the fact that their sympathies favor lower prices. Considering that market closed unchanged to ½c lower, sentiment more divided as to the immediate turn of prices. Further strength will likely run in the stubborn ones among the shorts, but the buying power does not seem heavy enough to sustain an advancing market.

Corn and oats—Despite yesterday's large sales of cash stuff in the coarse grain markets, the speculative trade again took on a downward tendency and it seems as if both markets would have sold lower but for the rally in wheat. The rally that did develop from the low point was but feeble at best. Trade broadened in these markets by tired holders.

Provisions closed 2½@10c lower, the extreme decline coming in pork. Outside liquidation on a small scale is responsible for this feeling. The market has dwindled down to a narrow and almost wholly local affair; the recent snap is missing, and the market is getting to look more and more like a scalping one.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Cables report Argentine visible 1,472,000 against 2,024,000 bushels a year ago, a pretty good indication that their crop is going to be short from a year ago. Increase for the week at Minneapolis 500,000 bushels. Demand for cash stuff has been excellent, market strong and not showing the effect of this temporary weak spot in wheat. Local shorts in trying to cover, found offerings scarce and had to bid the market up a half cent before they could get the wheat. Volume of business light with no important features. Trade holding steady and waiting for something to turn up. This low figure may be a good place to buy.

Flax—The flax market has acted rather sick for a couple of days but the Argentine news and the foreign situation will soon help it, and will lead to such a rapid rise that those who will not buy now will see that they missed a great opportunity. We believe this foreign demand

Modern Miller: The recent cold wave was preceded by sleet and snow that covered the winter wheat in all sections of the country, except in the Southwest, including Kansas and the Southeast. No reports of damage have been received, but from the Southeast come complaints that the general appearance of the crop is not satisfactory.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

At the Close But the Undertone is Quite Firm.

Late Selling Wiped Out Most of the Early Advances.

New York, Jan. 26.—Prices started upwards at the opening of the stock market today, and there were very large buying orders in all the leading speculative favorites. Anaconda jumped 9 points. Gains ran to about a point in Reading, Atlantic Coast Line, Texas & Pacific, Brooklyn Transit and Colorado Fuel, and a large fraction in Union Pacific, the subsidiary Pennsylvania stocks, St. Paul, Amalgamated Copper and Hide & Leather preferred.

The market gave a good demonstration of strength up to about 10:30, when a vigorous attack on Reading drove it back 2⅜ points from the best and caused a general selling of other stocks. A number of stocks in which there is a unity of interest made good showings. The rise reached 7⅛ in International Power, 2¾ in Consolidated Gas, 2½ in Colorado Fuel, 2 in Lead and Atlantic Coast Line and 1 to 1¼ in Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Locomotive, Smelting, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, Missouri Pacific and Northern Pacific. All of these gains were reduced. When the market weakened Central of Jersey fell 3 points.

The whole market sold off when Reading was forced back 3¼ from the best to 151¼, and gains were generally wiped out. The market then turned strong and animated. Ontario & Western made a gain of 2⅜, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Norfolk & Western and Amalgamated Copper about 1½, Union Pacific 1¼ and Erie, Denver & Rio Grande, United States Steel preferred, Metropolitan Street Railway and Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred 1 and the preferred 1½ and American Agricultural Chemical preferred 2. Reading rallied a point but yielded again and the advance elsewhere was checked. Bonds were firm at noon.

Speculation quieted down a good deal in the early afternoon and changes either way in representative stocks were not very numerous or important. The market was somewhat lower all around on side of a handful of minor stocks that advanced materially. New York Dock gained 3, Hocking Valley 4 and American Express 6 points.

Bull operators limited their efforts to comparatively few stocks, the general mass of active stocks proving inert and unresponsive to the buoyancy shown by numerous specialties. International Power jumped 13. American Express 8½, Hocking Coal 2¾, Locomotive 2⅜, Pacific Coast 2 and Great Northern preferred, Atchison and United States Express 1 to 1½.

The recovery in Reading was followed by some hardening again elsewhere, but the demand soon became languid again. Ontario & Western got up 3, United States Express 2½ and Great Northern preferred 1⅜. There was a drop in Delaware & Hudson of 2½, American Snuff preferred and Linseed preferred 3, International Pump 2½ and Northwestern, Lake Erie & Western, Hide & Leather preferred and Westinghouse Electric 1. Southern Railway and Wheeling & Lake Erie were pushed up 1 in the late dealings, but the tendency elsewhere was downwards and the closing was rather heavy.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stock market closed irregular, but with a firm undertone. Just at the closing hours there seemed to be a lot of selling, wiping out most of the advances. Baltimore & Ohio was taken in hand and actively bought. Copper was another of the active stocks. The list as a whole shows the effect of profit taking, but it acts well on the declines and stocks are readily absorbed. It is still a big market. The fact that many of the big operators are away from Wall street does not seem to diminish the volume of business to any appreciable extent. We feel would buy the good stocks on the reactions.

• • •

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been irregular, but generally strong today. Early advances by stocks of the better class were not fully maintained, but the market showed no weakness. Heavy buying of Amalgamated made these stock leaders strong during the morning. Norfolk & Western, Chicago & Burlington, Baltimore & Ohio, Ontario & Western and United States Steel shares were the features. Reading was again under pressure and broke in the early trading, but later it rallied smartly. The market was somewhat uncertain but generally firm in tone at the closing. Indications are that tomorrow's bank statement will be moderately favorable.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was steady and inclined to be strong. Many of the specialties were taken hold of and advanced. The buying of Southern Railway was of the best character and this had good effect on the general market. The Steels held well. The bank statement tomorrow is expected to be good. It looks very much as if the big people were liquidating under cover and the general strength is giving them a good opportunity.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 26.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 to 6 points on reports of higher cables and continued large spot sales in the English market and soon after sagged off to a net decline of 6 points under scattering liquidation and room selling.

After March demand improved, early sellers began to cover, prices rallied a point or so over last night's finals and during the middle of the morning the market was quiet, but steady.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points lower; middling uplands, 10.70; ditto gulf, 10.95. Sales, 113 bales. Futures closed steady; January, 11.10; February, 11.10; March, 11.21; April, 11.25; May, 11.34; June, 11.38; July, 11.42; August, 11.24; September, 10.67; October, 10.55.

GLOVEMAKERS.

The corporation of glovers and staymakers of Paris have just celebrated the seventh centenary of their industry with a banquet and a ball, says a Paris correspondent of the London Express.

The origin of the corset is essentially unaristocratic. A butcher in the thirteenth century had a talkative wife, who was, in addition, something of a virago. To reduce her to silence he imprisoned her body in the first pair of stays. Wives have imitated and improved upon the idea of the thirteenth century butcher, but stays and silence have ceased to be synonymes.

Gloves have also had a checkered history. As lately as two centuries ago they were forbidden in France in churches, at the king's court when the king was present and in the courts of law. In the first part of the eighteenth century they almost passed out of fashion, but Paris followed London in such matters, as it does today, and when in 1839 it was known that the London dandies wore six different kinds of gloves each day the fashion returned to Paris, and has never left it.

But gloves are not worn here as they are worn in London. No Londoner puts on a pair of white or lavender kid gloves to pay a call. In Paris white or lavender kid gloves for men worn with a frock coat are the height of fashion.

EDITED COMEDY.

Clyde Fitch was greatly enjoying a musical comedy.

"It is superb," he said to one of the authors. But that gentleman, with a sour smile, replied:

"You are not complimenting me. You are complimenting the manager. I confess I don't resognize my own book at all."

Mr. Fitch laughed.

"Take that in good part," he said. "You are coining money. Then take it as a friend of mine in London did.

"At a musical comedy in London, from my seat in the stalls, I noticed a young man in one of the boxes laughing uproariously. My companion was a critic. I said to him:

"'That chap in the box seems to be enjoying himself.'

"'He is the author,' said my friend.

"'Well, then,' said I, 'I think he ought to have better taste than to laugh so loud.'

"'Oh,' said the critic, 'he is the author, but he never heard these jokes before. They were put in by the comedian.'"

PILES OF DOLLARS.

Kansas City Star: The train upon which Judge G. L. Chrisman returned from Mexico this week ran off the track north of Chihuahua, and the cars stopped right side up upon the prairie, except the express car, next to the engine. This car, which contained 750,000 Mexican silver dollars, was overturned.

The boxes of silver dollars were smashed and the money was strewn around in glittering piles. Two guards with rifles stood over the money until the car was righted and lifted back upon the track, and then the money was scooped up and put back into the car again.

All of this money was going to China for circulation there. The Mexican silver dollar is the standard of value in parts of China, and millions of dollars go from Mexico to China every year.

CATCHING ALLIGATORS.

Spearing Them By Artificial Light Said to Be Great Sport.

We lay in camp at the mouth of the Lerma. "We" was made up of Chihuile (salt-water catfish), the harpooner, a glance at whose mouth explained his nickname; he was called Weely for short; El Negro the paddler and the writer, says a writer in the Mexican Herald. The sun was just sinking into the sea as we lit our cigarros and commenced making ready for our nightly hunt. The torch and bulls-eye lantern were filled with oil, an extra harpoon and line were stowed in the 18-foot canoe, as well as a rifle and a heavy 6-shooter. A chunk of driftwood with a doubled-up overcoat on top made a very comfortable seat amidships for the boss of the outfit.

The nor'wester had died down and the floodtide was coming in as Weely took his station in the bow, standing erect, harpoon in hand. I seated myself on my improvised stool, with the pistol in my belt and the rifle close to my hand. Impelled by a vigorous push from El Negro, we shot out into the stream.

As we got into the shadows of the tall mangrove trees on the further side of the river Weely lit the torch that hung over the bow, and with strong but noiseless strokes of the paddle we sped along close under the bank with the tide in our favor, and watching intently for a sight of the fiery red eyes of an alligator gleaming in the torchlight or possibly the green eyes of a Mexican tiger or a deer gazing at us from among the tree trunks on the bank.

A tree on the bank ahead showed up white and ghostly in the starlight as if entirely covered by a white sheet. As we swept under its branches there was a sudden rustle and swish of wings and a flock of several hundred white ibises launched themselves into the air and, wheeling heavily around and over us in the darkness, with hoarse cries and croaks protested against our intrusion on their roosting place.

On the starboard side out in the swift current two red lights showed, looking like a couple of well lit cigar stubs. About thirty feet from the bow Weely made a vigorous throw. There was a rattle and jingle of steel on bone, and he recoiled his line and made ready for another throw, with an exclamation of disgust. "What was the matter? Why didn't you get your string tied to that fellow?" The harpoon struck him on the head, senor and that is almost solid bone, and a harpoon won't stick in it," was the reply. "You wait a little and I'll tie on to one good and fast usted vera."

A few minutes later we were nearing the sandbar of the "wise alligator," when suddenly Weely's arm shot out and the light harpoon whistled through the air and found its mar. There was a swirl and splash of the water, and the line tautened up like a bow string and the canoe leaped forward at double speed through the darkness.

"What is it, Weely?"

"I don't know, senor. It was down deep in the water. It is a caiman or a black robalo, and a big one."

The line cut the water like a knife as our game towed us up a little tide creek that branches off from the main channel until a pile of drift blocked our way. He then turned and pulled us out again to midriver, and then stopped exhausted and came to the surface.

It was a superb black robalo, nearly four feet in length and weighing from forty to fifty pounds.

His exact length was 45 inches, and his tail was 10 inches in width. I had no means of getting his weight.

"Pull him into the canoe, Weely, and we will knock him on the head." Weely pulled him up alongside and put one hand in his gills, but the fish was too strong for him and nearly pulled him overboard.

"I cant' handle him senor. You had better shoot him."

A bullet in the brains quieted his struggles and we pulled him aboard. After we had admired him and agreed that it was the finest fish we could hope to catch that night we went on with the flooddide up the river.

Let me say here that the black robalo is simply a salt-water variety of the large-mouth black bass of the Southern United States and Northeastern Mexico. It closely resembles its fresh water relative in everything except size, as it averages much heavier, going from two to three pounds up to forty or fifty, and even over.

It is an anadromous fish, like the salmon, living in both fresh and salt water, and ascends the rivers yearly in spawning season. In fresh water or salt it takes like bait freely, and I believe would take the fly also if offered.

I am in absolute ignorance of its proper name in English. On a line it is a game fighter, and it is common on both coasts of the republic and is frequently on sale in the Mexico City markets, but I have never seen a specimen in either Texas or California on sale in the markets.

Just below Canebrake Bend we shined the eyes of an alligator dead ahead. Weely made an artistic throw and harpooned him in the neck. How he ran with us up the river and down, across and back, the canoe carrying a "bone in her teeth" as we sped along. Then he turned on us, biting a chunk out of the harpoon shaft in his rage. He was an old bull about nine feet long and full of fight, but a rifle ball in the head knocked all the fight out of him and he lay on the surface of the water apparently dead.

Weely and El Negro started to pull him aboard as he lay on the gunwale. El Negro said: "The caiman isn't dead, senor. See how bright his eyes are?" "Pshaw! He is deader than Julius Caesar. Don't you see where the ball hit him? Pull him in," I ordered impatiently.

And then our troubles commenced. As the "gator" was stowed in the bottom of the canoe, head to the stern, I handed the rifle to El Negro, and standing astride of the hideous reptile bent over him and started to cut out the harpoon with my bowie knife.

The first cut acted on him like an electric shock and he made a most vicious snap at El Negro, his jaws clashing together like a steel trap. El Negro promptly attempted to jump over board into the shark infested stream, but compromised by throwing both legs outside the canoe and sitting there in a sort of spreadeagle attitude, with the rifle in one hand and the paddle in the other, his eyes bulging out of his head with fright, while I, having dropped my knife and seized a heavy mahogany club, beat the alligator over the head with all the strength at my command, but every blow seemed to act on him as a restorative and the more I clubbed him the livelier he got.

The situation was critical and the thought flashed through my mind that if he should hump his back like a "sunfishing" broncho instead of making ineffectual snaps at the paddler I would be projected into the starlit firmament like a bung starter at a Sunday picnic, with an even chance of landing in the cup of a mangroe or in mid river among the sharks.

"Weely" I ordered in the most commanding voice I could muster under the circumstances, "catch him by the tail," but the astute Weely, from his safe retreat in the bow, mildly, but firmly, declined, alleging as a reason that it was "muy resgoso" and left me to fight it out alone.

I eased my feelings by a few choice and well-selected Anglo-Saxon expletives, and as I was doing so my hand touched the butt of the till then forgotten pistol that hung on my hip. In an instant a quick, well-aimed shot through the alligator's brain finished the trouble. The first shot had flattened on his skull and only stunned him. El Negro handed me back the rifle as soon as he got his legs again inside of the canoe and quietly resumed his paddling with a rather reproachful "didn't I tell you so" sort of air, while Weely, face to the front, kept a sharp lookout ahead and I maintained a grim impressive silence, seating myself on the back of the now really defunct alligator.

An alligator got within ten feet of the port beam before Weely saw and harpooned it. As it dove with a heavy splash I received a couple of buckets of cold salt water on my face and shoulders and down the back of my neck, putting a stop to the lecture for that night. In a few minutes we had him alongside the canoe, with two bullets in his head, and after a hasty but thorough post-mortem decided that he was dead, and hauled him aboard.

We paddled on up the river toward Egret Slough and shined the eyes of a tiger on the bank, but he turned his head away from the light before I could shoot and so saved himself.

Weely harpooned two more alligators, and then I took my place in the bow with harpoon in hand, while Weely took my place amidships, eyeing me as he did so with that jealousy which the professional ever feels for the amateur.

I made several misses at first, and then right across the bows lay a big one (he measured 10 feet 6 inches), his eyes glowing like red-hot coals in the torchlight. It was a regular pot shot, and I sank the harpoon in his shoulders and away we went across the river, the line blistering my fingers as I tried to hold it, and the canoe running at about twelve miles an hour. I called to Weely: "Come and take your confounded line. I can't hold it; it's too hot." Weely took the line from my smarting fingers, and in a few moments we were towed into a tangle of submerged mangroves, where the current had eaten away the bank. We bumped and scraped through the tangled mass, Weely ignoring my advice to let the line go, but giving vent to a stream of eloquence entirely unfit for publication, as we flew through, but which ought to have secured him a berth as first mate on any whaler.

El Negro lost his hat in the passage and I had a badly bunged eye and scratched and bleeding hands, while Weely at his post in the bow suffered rather rougher treatment than either of us, but at last we emerged into clear water again, our fiery, untamed steed going like a quarter horse. He ran us at last on a sand bar in mid river, where there was but a few inches of water, and there a six-shooter ball crippled him and four more placed in his head in quick succession killed him, and, with some difficulty, as he was very heavy, we got him on board, and then turned back in search of El Negro's hat, which we found snagged among the mangroves.

The tide was now on the ebb, and the waning moon was just rising over the peaks of the cordillera. Weely stowed away the harpoon and took a paddle, and we headed for camp, five miles away, the two paddlers keeping their stroke in perfect time.

As we swept along from the bank on the right there was suddenly a heavy splash and then the sound of wings beating on the water, together with loud quacks and croaks, and then all was silent again save for the sound of the rushing current and the howl of a lone coyote far back among the sand hills. "What was that?" I asked. El Negro laughed. "It was the caiman catching a gazra morena (blue crane), senor." "But how does he do it?" "Why, the gazra fishes at night and wades far out from shore in the shallow places, and if the caiman can catch him napping he sneaks up quietly and knocks him down with a blow of his tail and then swims away with him and eats him, and that is buena gente. I have seen them in the rookeries feed the young white egrets after the plume hunters had killed the old birds and left the unfledged young to starve in their nests. The garzas morens would first feed their own young and then go and feed the little egrets. Such birds ought not to be killed," he concluded, giving his paddle an extra hard dip.

The shallow mud flats just above camp were covered with a foot or two of water and mullet in shoals of thousands were feeding there as we passed along.

Alarmed by the canoe they attempted to retreat to deep water, leaping high in the air in their panic. Blinded by the light of the torch, a number of them leaped and fell inside of the canoe and were duly served for breakfast in the morning, while one jumped clean over the canoe, knocking the cigarro out of my mouth in passing, and another struck me fairly in the side of the head and fell back into the water, to our mutual surprise and disgust.

Tired, wet and sleepy, we disembarked and, rolling ourselves in our blankets on the sand, slept the sleep of weary, but successful hunters, while the sand fleas danced jigs on our unprotected faces and the mosquitoes sang and hummed the accompaniment.

PAWNING IN FRANCE.

Brooklyn Eagle: It is not considered a shame in France to go to the pawn shop when in need of money. It has always been customary to go there, for so many centuries, in all Latin countries, that the Mont de Piete is in the hands of the government as a monopoly, so that there can be no usurers to take undue advantage of the people, for it makes no money by the operation, though the employes are allowed to charge the pawner about one-fourth the value of the things pawned. The things are kept a year, then can be held for another year upon the payment of a small sum in proportion to the value of the objects pawned. Many a small tradesman or even a merchant or dealer of importance goes to the Mont de Piete to pawn his belongings, when payment of the rent or a bill is due and he does not happen to have the money, and often there is jewelry at the Mont de Piete, waiting to be redeemed, worth millions of dollars. Well, it seems that "Ma tante," as the waggish French call the Mont de Piete, is not doing a flourishing business. The employes refused 74,410 articles this year in Paris. This is not because Paris is so flourishing in business that it has no need of money, but because the government has come to the conclusion that it is losing large sums of money by the Mont de Piete operations; laces wear out, old coats get older, hats go out of fashion, gold and silver tarnish, then, besides, other countries get along without a government Mont de Piete, why cannot the French?

HIS COMMAND.

In Lewiston, Me., lived a certain policeman who was also captain of the local company of Hibernians, says the Boston Herald. On one occasion a street car approached while he was marching the company along the street, and, as it seemed the proper course to pursue, he decided to execute the movement known as "open order."

Turning to his men, he shouted, in his most martial tones:

"Attention! Here comes the car-r; company, schplitt!"

SURVIVORS IN SAFETY

Men From Wrecked Steamer All Taken From Beaches.

Many of Them in Bad Condition From Exposure.

Victoria, Jan. 27.—All the survivors who reached shore near the scene of the wreck of the Valencia have now been cared for, the last party of nine who had been stalled at the Darling river on account of the flooded waters reaching the steamer Salvor at Bamfield creek last night. They were in a bad condition.

Great credit is due to the party from the Salvor, headed by Capt. Ferris, who left here early Wednesday and traveled an almost impassable trail for fifteen miles. After a night spent on the trail they started for home with the survivors. Before returning Capt. Ferris visited the wreck. He reported the beach literally covered with wreckage, and at that time five bodies were on shore being identified. A second party left the Salvor yesterday morning. They went as far as Pachena, carrying packs of provisions and extra clothing. At 3 o'clock they were joined by a landing party sent from the United States revenue cutter Grant. At Pachena provisions were made to succor the survivors. The party was sighted at 3:10 p. m. on a point of rock, having taken to the beach as the trail was to hard for the men to travel in their famished condition. The Associated Press correspondent was the first to reach them. All the survivors were completely fatigued. The entire party was equipped with shoes, those who had been without having been supplied with shoes taken from the corpses washed ashore. The survivors are loud in their praise of the rescue party from the Salvor. The trail is in a frightful condition and is most difficult at best. There are eleven bodies reported washed ashore. One has been identified as that of Mr. Doherty of New York. The name of W. Doherty appears in the crew list as a fireman. Another is identified as A. F. Grifenstan of San Jose, Cal.

F. A. Bunker of Seattle said there was an evident lack of discipline among the officers and this statement has been corroborated by other passengers. A mess boy cursed an officer to his face for not giving porper orders.

DIPLOMATS SEND NOTE

To Venezuelan Government Protesting Against Action With Taigny.

Cannot Accept Proposition That He Was Ordinary French Citizen.

Caracas, Venez., Jan. 25. (Thursday) via Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, Jan. 27.—Twenty-five members of the diplomatic corps today delivered to the Venezuelan government a formal joint note stating that they cannot accept Venezuela's position that M. Taigny, the former French charge d'affaires here, had been deprived of his official character and that he only ranked as a French citizen at the time of his forced departure from this country. The diplomats have communicated the text of this note to their respective governments.

A French line steamer which arrived at La Guaira today was granted the usual privileges of communication with the shore.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, D. W. I., Jan. 27.—The French armored cruiser Desaix, flagship of Admiral Devoe De La Peyrere and the cruiser Jurien De La Graviere arrived here yesterday from Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad.

SERVANT GIRL SHOT

Because She Made Egyptian Princess Crumble Into Dust.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A famous medical professor and antiquarian, whose name is withheld by the police, is in jail on a charge of having killed his servant girl in a fit of rage. Pressure is brought to keep the matter quiet, but the state's attorney is bound to prosecute and thus the whole matter will eventually become public.

The professor boarded in his study an ebony casket containing an Egyptian mummy of great historical value. He claimed that it represented the remains of a famous Egyptian king's daughter, the only one of a dynasty that perished many thousand years ago. The professor's family and particularly his servants were forbidden to go within ten feet of the casket, and the professor himself mopped up the dust collecting on it with a specially constructed pair of bellows.

Some time ago a "green" servant girl was installed in the professor's household, and, of course, was instructed like the rest, but Eugenie was of so curious a nature that, a few days ago, when alone in the study, she not only went to the casket and viewed it from outside, but pried it open. Seeing a black mass all done up in silks and satins, Eugenie attempted to handle the strange doll and under her unschooled fingers it collapsed like a card house and fell into dust.

Eugenie was terribly frightened, but told her mistress, who promised to pacify the doctor. The latter heard the report seemingly without anger, but sent for Eugenie to hear the story from her own lips. When she had finished, he pulled a revolver out of his pocket and shot the girl dead.

He pleads excitement, temporary insanity, etc., but the circumstances point to deliberate murder, and there are many who think it would be a good thing to guillotine the professor as a warning to others holding life of the poor at a low estimate.

A WAY TO GET MONEY FOR SULTAN A PROBLEM CONFRONTING DELEGATES

Rich Men Protected From Taxation and Poor Cannot Contribute Enough.

Interesting Squabble Among the Powers Over the Question of Taxation.

Algeciras, Jan. 27.—The plenipotentiaries of the powers resumed their sessions today and spent a couple of hours going over the work of the committee on Moroccan revenues. The powers have several important objects in examining the Moorish system of taxes, or rather lack of system, and trying to regularize it. The sultan is always in need of money and will be in a better humor of co-operate with the powers in the work of reform, if he is supplied with more cash for foreign luxuries, of which he is fond and which are a scandal to the pious subjects.

The Moroccan conference seems disposed also to reduce the number of so-called "protected" persons who escape taxation because they are foreigners or in the service of or in partnership with foreigners.

"You have only left me the poor to tax," said the sultan to the foreign ministers at Fez when the subject was discussed there some time ago. "You have taken all the rich men under your protection and out of my reach."

Part of the plan under consideration is to limit foreign protection and to introduce land taxes. It was proposed in committee to tax landlords.

"No," said Sidi Mohammed El Mokhri, the second of the Moroccan delegates to the conference. "Tax the tenants. We can never find the landlords. The occupants of houses always say they are tenants."

M. Revoil, chief of the French mission, who was formerly governor of Algiers and who therefore is familiar with North African affairs, remarked: "Tax them both, then you will catch one of them."

One perplexity is the status of the Sheeref of Wazzan, who is revered throughout the Barbary states as the descendant of the Indreesi family and Ushari family and is very rich and is also a landowner in Alegria. His influence is religious rather than political. The failure of the ministers at Fez to agree on a new taxation scheme was due to the objection of the French minister to tax the Sheeref of Wazzan. The other ministers said that if the richest family was to be protected by one power they would not give up protecting those who were less rich.

The sultan, in addition to other reasons for reforming the Moroccan system of taxation, must have more money with which to pay the semi-military police establishment which the powers wish to form.

An odd experience of the Spanish cruiser Infanta Isabel, which is patrolling the Moroccan coast to prevent the smuggling of arms, was reported to the conference by her commander, who returned here Tuesday. While the cruiser was close to the shore the flag of Roghi, the sultan's formidable rebel subject, was observed flying from a staff with the French flag under it. A boat manned by Moors and displaying the French flag put off from the shore, pulled alongside the cruiser and handed to the captain of the Infanta Isabel, which the Moors evidently had mistaken for a French vessel, a message from Roghi inviting her commander to come ashore and placing himself at the latter's disposition. The commander of the Spanish cruiser, as he was without the right to search foreign vessels, did not attempt to interfere, but put back to Algeciras in order to advise the Spanish delegates of the mysterious flag incident.

TWO HUNDRED CASTLES BURNED

During the Recent Revolution in the Baltic Provinces.

Wenden, Livonia, Thursday, Jan. 25. —The pacification of the Baltic provinces is reaching the final stage, so far as the agrarian movement is concerned. Nearly 250 revolutionists have been shot, several thousand have been captured by the troops.

Generals Orloff, Meinhardt and Wendt are now operating in the Wenden district with 10,000 troops, completing a circle in which the revolutionists are being gathered. The generals have the names of the revolutionists, who will be tried by courtmartial when caught, and either shot or imprisoned. The majority of those already executed were Lettish teachers or students.

The revolutionists have stopped burning buildings, but they occasionally fire on the troops. Among the burned castles is that of Baron Rosen Grossroop, about twenty miles northwest of Wenden, which was destroyed with all its contents, servants who had been in the service of the baron for twenty years assisting in the work of destruction.

Altogether the revolutionists in this district burned 200 castles, valued at $4,000,000, without including the articles of value which they contained.

The troops are taking the strictest measures. On one occasion they surrounded a church, in which funeral services were proceeding, arrested the revolutionary orators, and shot one of them.

COL. WING OF WISCONSIN GIVES BOWDOIN $50,000.

Washington, Jan. 27.—As a sequel to the banquet of the Bowdoin college alumni held here Wednesday evening, Col. Isaac Henry Wing, a wealthy retired lumberman of Wisconsin, has given $50,000 to endow a college of mathematics at Bowdoin.

Col. Wing, who is a native of Augusta, Me., graduated from Bowdoin in the class of 1856. He attended the banquet Wednesday night and Thursday made the offer to President Hyde, who accepted it. Col. Wing is in Washington for the winter. His home is in Bayfield, Wis.

TUCKER IS SENTENCED TO DIE WEEK OF JUNE 10.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 27.—Charles L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Mabel Page of Weston, on March 31, 1904, today was sentenced to death by electricity during the week of June 10. When asked if he had anything to say Tucker addressed the court as follows:

"Your honor all I have to say, is that I am absolutely innocent of this crime."

THE DOMINION GOING HOME.

London, Jan. 27.—The British admiralty says that the rumors that the British battleship Dominion is going to Venezuela are groundless. She will leave Halifax, N. S., today for home.

DROPS DEAD.

Andrew Bensen, Prominent St. Cloud Man, Meets Sudden Death.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 27.—Andrew Bensen, brother of Mayor Bensen, of this city, dropped dead yesterday at 11 o'clock. He was the president of the Bensen Grocery company and was one of the oldest and most prominent business men in the city. He was 55 years old and was born in Germany.

Mayor Bensen left this city on the morning train and was on his way to Chicago when he was reached by a wire at St. Paul and came back.

HOUNDED TO DEATH.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—Policeman John A. Scollard, who shot himself yesterday rather than go before the police board and answer to charges of immorality died last night. Before his death he dictated a statement in which he declared he had been hounded to death through false reports concerning him.

WANT EARLY CONVENTION

Republican Leaders Fearful of a Bitter Preconvention Fight.

Friends of Frank Eddy Would Force Him Into Contest.

St. Paul, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—What the Republicans of the state are most fearing is a late convention. Late conventions always, their leaders declare, engender bitter preconvention fights. Nothing but early convention talk can be heard among the leaders about the St. Paul hotels. While the Republicans are strenuously advocating an early convention, the Democrats are smiling serenely because they see in it all an element of that weakness which led R. C. Dunn to the block.

It is argued that not a candidate mentioned up to date as possible Republican gubernatorial timber could stand the strain of a mud flinging preconvention campaign. A prominent Republican in an interview stated that the only hope for the Republicans at the polls next fall was in an early convention.

Members of the state central committee were in St. Paul during the week attempting to arrive at some date upon which to call a meeting of the political leaders to fix a date for an early convention. It is known that several secret sessions have been held and a call for a meeting of the general organization is expected any day, from Conde Hamlin.

Those workers who are really solicitous for the Republican party are extremely anxious to spare the candidates a preconvention fight and will bend all efforts toward an early convention.

HEINZE ENRICHED BY THE BOOM IN COPPER.

New York, Jan. 27.—F. Augustus Heinze, the Montana mine operator, who for years has been fighting the Amalgamated Copper company, is credited in Wall street with having made $5,660,000 within the last four months out of the enormous rise in the copper stocks. Many of his friends in the East are said to have made hundreds of thousands of dollars profits with him. Most of Mr. Heinze's profits have been in United Amalgamated and Anaconda Copper.

It is the belief in Wall street that Thomas W. Lawson, instead of being short of copper stocks, has recouped his fortunes out of the recent rise.

WINK AT GAMBLING.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the Belgian authorities are suppressing gambling in the towns near the German frontier, those of the Netherlands wink at the nuisance. In the little town of Vaals, near Aix la Chapelles, the third roulette establishment was opened the other day, despite protests of the German authorities.

GUESTS IN A BURNING HOTEL SAVE THEIR LIVES BY JUMPING INTO NETS

Three Persons Perish, However, and Several Sustain Severe Injuries.

The Richardson Hotel at Lowell, Mass., Burns at Early Hour in Morning.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27.—Three lives were lost by the burning of the Richardson hotel here at about 2 o'clock this morning, and several persons sustained injuries, one of whom is likely to die. The dead:

H. C. HARDING of Somerville, Mass.

CHRISTINE NELSON, pastry cook, of Boston.

MISS JOSEPHINE KENNESTON, nurse, Franklin Falls, N. H.

Most of those who were injured were either burned, cut by falling glass or received injuries in jumping from the windows of the upper stories of the burning building. Among those who were injured are: M. S. Anthony, New Bedford, cut by falling glass and also injured by dropping from an upper story in a life net; E. H. Dickey, Portland, Me., numerous cuts and bruises caused by jumping from a window on the fourth floor; John F. Haich, New York, badly burned and almost overcome by smoke.

Andrew Lynch, Lowell, badly burned. John Hutchinson, New York, severely bruised by jumping from ladder, also somewhat burned. Ira Allen of Lowell injured by fall from fire escape.

There were more than forty guests in the building when the fire broke out, and as the hotel register was not available, for hours it was feared that many had lost their lives. A search of the ruins made this forenoon, however, revealed the fact that only three had perished.

The two upper floors were burned out. The two lower ones were wrecked by falling debris and smoke and water.

Those injured were either burned, cut by falling glass or received injuries in jumping from the windows. There were many thrilling escapes, including that of Mr. Anthony, the New Bedford man who hung from a window ledge as long as his strength would permit. Several of the guests leaped into life nets held by the firemen. The hotel was owned by Thomas T. Hoban, who estimates his loss at $60,000.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27.—At least three lives were lost early today in a fire which badly damaged the Richardson hotel, one of the best known hosteiries in the city. It is believed that when the ruins of the hotel have been searched it will be found that the list of fatalities will be increased. Seven injured persons were taken to the hospital, while nearly a score of others were treated by physicians and then lodged in other hotels and residences in the neighborhood.

All of the known dead were women. Two of them have not been identified, while the third was a woman who was employed yesterday as a pastry cook at the hotel. Her name was unknown to the hotel proprietor, but she came from Boston.

The fire is believed to have started in the kitchen from an overheated stove. It is thought that it had been burning nearly an hour before it was discovered.

During the evening there had been a meeting of business men at the hotel and after the meeting adjourned many of those who attended remained at

PAY MEMBERS BY THE DAY

German Government Finally Accedes to Desire of the Reichstag.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—According to the Cologne Gazette the imperial government has at last decided to meet the long standing desire of the reichstag to pay members per diem for actual attendance. The proposition has been discussed numerous times, the reichstag each time passing a resolution asking for the government's acquiesence but the latter has steadily ignored the request. This week another debate occurred in which the fact developed that many Conservatives are convinced that it is necessary to compensate members of the reichstag in order to maintain a quorum. The debate brought out some sharp criticism from the emperor, who was described as being the only man in Germany standing out against the wishes of the reichstag. Another speaker quoted a remark attributed to the emperor, indignantly exclaiming:

"Give these fellow a per diem too?"

It is understood that the government's decision to yield is due to the visible irritation manifested by the reichstag toward the government for ignoring its various notes in favor of compensation to members.

SMALL VERDICT FOR COMPANY

Mrs. Parker Must Return $1,663 to Insurance Compnay.

New York, Jan. 27.—A verdict for $1,663 was returned today in the suit brought by the Liverpool, London & Globe Insurance company against Mrs. Susan Day Parker. The insurance company sought to recover $7,000 insurance paid by them to Mrs. Parker for the burning of the yacht Scythian. The company paid the defendant $21,000 insurance, but claimed that this was $7,000 in excess of what should have been paid. The jury, in rendering its verdict, made a statement that they believed Mrs. Parker to have been in no way responsible for the burning of the yacht. Capt. Cardiff, formerly in command of the Scythian, had testified that he set fire to the yacht by order of Dr. Parker, husband of Mrs. Susan Day Parker.

FUTURE OF KOREA IS VERY BRIGHT

Kingdom Will Have a Much Better Government Under Japan.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Edwin Morgan, former United States minister to Korea, who arrived here from the Orient, en route to Cuba as minister to that republic, in an interview on Korean affairs, said:

"When I left Korea, Marquis Ito, the newly-appointed minister general, was preparing to start for Seoul. He is in no sense a military governor. The people have feared that Korea was to be placed under harsh military government. The contrary is the case. Korea will have a better government than it has ever had, and I think the future of the country is very bright. In going over the foreign relations of Korea, Japan gave assurances to all of the treaty powers that existing foreign treaties would not be disturbed. This means that American interests in Korea will not be affected, and that American enterprise will continue to find a profitable field of activity in the country.

"American goods find a big market there, and mining enterprises conducted by Americans are being worked."

TO RAISE JAP LEGATON.

Tokio, Jan. 27.—It has been decided to raise the Japanese legation at Rome to the rank of an embassy, and it is understood that M. Uchida, the Japanese minister at Pekin, will be appointed ambassador to Italy.

TREACHERY IS AVENGED

Russian Traitor Stabbed With Daggers While in Hospital.

Condemned to Death for Giving Information to Police.

Lodz, Russian Poland, Jan. 27.—Three unknown persons today gained access to the hospital and killed with daggers a man named Lukizevski, who was shot in the streets Jan. 25. The murderers thus completed the sentence of the local revolutionary tribunal, which condemned Lukizevski to death as a traitor for informing the police of the location of bomb depots.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 27.—In continuation of the policy of retrenchment by the weeding out of inactive members of the military organization, the retirement on half pay of twenty-two generals and three admirals who hold sinecures on the Alexander committee for the care of the wounded will shortly be gazetted. The committee has fifty-one members, who are doing little except drawing their salaries, amounting in all to over £50,000. Many of them are not even residents of St. Petersburg.

A dispatch from Gomel says that half the town is in flames and that fighting is going on in the center of the town between troops and revolutionists, who have been reinforced by the peasantry of the surrounding districts. The disorder extends to five counties around Gomel. The peasantry, as in the Baltic provinces, have deposed the old authorities and elected revolutionists to fill their places.

CAPTAIN IS GUILTY

Cor... of Ill Intent

Found Criminally Negligent in Failing to Have Fire Drills.

New York, Jan. 27.—Capt. William H. Van Schaick was today found guilty of criminal negligence in failing to have fire drills on the steamer Gen. Slocum which he commanded in June, 1904, when that steamer burned with the loss of over 1,000 lives. He was immediately sentenced to ten years' imprisonment by Judge Thomas of the United States district court. The jury disagreed as to two other counts in which he was charged with criminal negligence by the employment of life preservers of poor quality on the steamer.

REPORT OF MINORITY

For a Lock Canal Will be Recommended by Commission.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The isthmian canal commission met today and concluded its consideration of the report of the board of consulting engineers with respect to the type of canal that should be constructed. The commission has had before it the reports of the majority and minority of the consulting board. At today's meeting the commission adopted a report to the secretary of war which they will forward to him. While no official announcement is made with reference to the report there is good reason to believe that they have summarized the two reports and have recommended the construction of the lock canal with an 85-foot level, practically following the recommendations of the minority of the consulting engineers. The report of the committee and the two reports of the consulting engineers will be transmitted to the president by Secretary Taft with such suggestions as he may desire to make.

Gen. Davis, chairman of the board of consulting engineers, returned to Washington today from Brussels, where he recently met the foreign members of the board and secured their signatures to the report of the majority.

FRAZER IS MISSING.

Searching Party In Wisconsin Woods Looking for Lost Hunter.

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 27.—William Frazer of Mellen has been lost in the woods since last Saturday, and grave fears are entertained for his safety. Frazer started out Saturday morning on his skis with a revolver and some poisoned bait with which he said he was going to kill wolves. Since then nothing has been heard of him, and it is thought that he lost his way and perished. A searching party is looking for him.

SERVANT GIRL SHOT

Because She Made Egyptian Princess Crumble Into Dust.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A famous medical professor and antiquarian, whose name is withheld by the police, is in jail on a charge of having killed his servant girl in a fit of rage. Pressure is brought to keep the matter quiet, but the state's attorney is bound to prosecute and thus the whole matter will eventually become public.

The professor boarded in his study an ebony casket containing an Egyptian mummy of great historical value. He claimed that it represented the remains of a famous Egyptian king's daughter, the only one of a dynasty that perished many thousand years ago. The professor's family and particularly his servants were forbidden to go within ten feet of the casket, and the professor himself mopped up the dust collecting on it with a specially constructed pair of bellows.

Some time ago a "green" servant girl was installed in the professor's household, and, of course, was instructed like the rest, but Eugenie was of so curious a nature that, a few days ago, when alone in the study, she not only went to the casket and viewed it from outside, but pried it open. Seeing a black mass all done up in silks and satins, Eugenie attempted to handle the strange doll and under her unschooled fingers it collapsed like a card house and fell into dust.

Eugenie was terribly frightened, but told her mistress, who promised to pacify the doctor. The latter heard the report seemingly without anger, but sent for Eugenie to hear the story from her own lips. When she had finished, he pulled a revolver out of his pocket and shot the girl dead.

He pleads excitement, temporary insanity, etc., but the circumstances point to deliberate murder, and there are many who think it would be a good thing to guillotine the professor as a warning to others holding life of the poor at a low estimate.

A WAY TO GET MONEY FOR SULTAN A PROBLEM CONFRONTING DELEGATES

Rich Men Protected From Taxation and Poor Cannot Contribute Enough.

Interesting Squabble Among the Powers Over the Question of Taxation.

Algeciras, Jan. 27.—The plenipotentiaries of the powers resumed their sessions today and spent a couple of hours going over the work of the committee on Moroccan revenues. The powers have several important objects in examining the Moorish system of taxes, or rather lack of system, and trying to regularize it. The sultan is always in need of money and will be in a better humor of co-operate with the powers in the work of reform, if he is supplied with more cash for foreign luxuries, of which he is fond and which are a scandal to the pious subjects.

The Moroccan conference seems disposed also to reduce the number of so-called "protected" persons who escape taxation because they are foreigners or in the service of or in partnership with foreigners.

"You have only left me the poor to tax," said the sultan to the foreign ministers at Fez when the subject was discussed there some time ago. "You have taken all the rich men under your protection and out of my reach."

Part of the plan under consideration is to limit foreign protection and to introduce land taxes. It was proposed in committee to tax landlords.

"No," said Sidi Mohammed El Mokhri, the second of the Moroccan delegates to the conference. "Tax the tenants. We can never find the landlords. The occupants of houses always say they are tenants."

M. Revoil, chief of the French mission, who was formerly governor of Algiers and who therefore is familiar with North African affairs, remarked: "Tax them both, then you will catch one of them."

One perplexity is the status of the Sheeref of Wazzan, who is revered throughout the Barbary states as the descendant of the Indreesi family and Eshari family and is very rich and is also a landowner in Alegria. His influence is religious rather than political. The failure of the ministers at Fez to agree on a new taxation scheme was due to the objection of the French minister to tax the Sheeref of Wazzan. The other ministers said that if the richest family was to be protected by one power they would not give up protecting those who were less rich.

The sultan, in addition to other reasons for reforming the Moroccan system of taxation, must have more money with which to pay the semi-military police establishment which the powers wish to form.

An odd experience of the Spanish cruiser Infanta Isabel, which is patrolling the Moroccan coast to prevent the smuggling of arms, was reported to the conference by her commander, who returned here Tuesday. While the cruiser was close to the shore the flag of Roghi, the sultan's formidable rebel subject, was observed flying from a staff with the French flag under it. A boat manned by Moors and displaying the French flag put off from the shore, pulled alongside the cruiser and handed to the captain of the Infanta Isabel, which the Moors evidently had mistaken for a French vessel, a message from Roghi inviting her commander to come ashore and placing himself at the latter's disposition. The commander of the Spanish cruiser, as he was without the right to search foreign vessels, did not attempt to interfere, but put back to Algeciras in order to advise the Spanish delegates of the mysterious flag incident.

WANT EARLY CONVENTION

Republican Leaders Fearful of a Bitter Preconvention Fight.

Friends of Frank Eddy Would Force Him Into Contest.

St. Paul, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—What the Republicans of the state are most fearing is a late convention. Late conventions always, their leaders declare, engender bitter preconvention fights. Nothing but early convention talk can be heard among the leaders about the St. Paul hotels. While the Republicans are strenuously advocating an early convention, the Democrats are smiling serenely because they see in it all an element of that weakness which led R. C. Dunn to the block.

It is argued that not a candidate mentioned up to date as possible Republican gubernatorial timber could stand the strain of a mud flinging preconvention campaign. A prominent Republican in an interview stated that the only hope for the Republicans at the polls next fall was in an early convention.

Members of the state central committee were in St. Paul during the week attempting to arrive at some date upon which to call a meeting of the political leaders to fix a date for an early convention. It is known that several secret sessions have been held and a call for a meeting of the general organization is expected any day, from Conde Hamlin.

Those workers who are really solicitous for the Republican party are extremely anxious to spare the candidates a preconvention fight and will bend all efforts toward an early convention.

GUESTS IN A BURNING HOTEL SAVE THEIR LIVES BY JUMPING INTO NETS

Three Persons Perish, However, and Several Sustain Severe Injuries.

The Richardson Hotel at Lowell, Mass., Burns at Early Hour in Morning.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27.—Three lives were lost by the burning of the Richardson hotel here at about 2 o'clock this morning, and several persons sustained injuries, one of whom is likely to die. The dead:

H. C. HARDING of Somerville, Mass.

CHRISTINE NELSON, pastry cook, of Boston.

MISS JOSEPHINE KENNESTON, nurse, Franklin Falls, N. H.

Most of those who were injured were either burned, cut by falling glass or received injuries in jumping from the windows of the upper stories of the burning building. Among those who were injured are: M. S. Anthony, New Bedford, cut by falling glass and also injured by dropping from an upper story in a life net; E. H. Dickey, Portland, Me., numerous cuts and bruises caused by jumping from a window on the fourth floor; John F. Haich, New York, badly burned and almost overcome by smoke.

Andrew Lynch, Lowell, badly burned. John Hutchinson, New York, severely bruised by jumping from ladder, also somewhat burned. Ira Allen of Lowell injured by fall from fire escape.

There were more than forty guests in the building when the fire broke out, and as the hotel register was not available, for hours it was feared that many had lost their lives. A search of the ruins made this forenoon, however, revealed the fact that only three had perished.

The two upper floors were burned out. The two lower ones were wrecked by falling debris and smoke and water.

Those injured were either burned, cut by falling glass or received injuries in jumping from the windows. There were many thrilling escapes, including that of Mr. Anthony, the New Bedford man who hung from a window ledge as long as his strength would permit. Several of the guests leaped into life nets held by the firemen. The hotel was owned by Thomas T. Hoban, who estimates his loss at $60,000.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27.—At least three lives were lost early today in a fire which badly damaged the Richardson hotel, one of the best known hostelries in the city. It is believed that when the ruins of the hotel have been searched it will be found that the list of fatalities will be increased. Seven injured persons were taken to the hospital, while nearly a score of others were treated by physicians and then lodged in other hotels and residences in the neighborhood.

All of the known dead were women. Two of them have not been identified, while the third was a woman who was employed yesterday as a pastry cook at the hotel. Her name was unknown to the hotel proprietor, but she came from Boston.

The fire is believed to have started in the kitchen from an overheated stove. It is thought that it had been burning nearly an hour before it was discovered.

During the evening there had been a meeting of business men at the hotel and after the meeting adjourned many of those who attended remained at

TREACHERY IS AVENGED

Russian Traitor Stabbed With Daggers While in Hospital.

Condemned to Death for Giving Information to Police.

Lodz, Russian Poland, Jan. 27.—Three unknown persons today gained access to the hospital and killed with daggers a man named Lukizevski, who was shot in the streets Jan. 25. The murderers thus completed the sentence of the local revolutionary tribunal, which condemned Lukizevski to death as a traitor for informing the police of the location of bomb depots.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 27.—In continuation of the policy of retrenchment by the weeding out of inactive members of the military organization, the retirement on half pay of twenty-two generals and three admirals who hold sinecures on the Alexander committee for the care of the wounded will shortly be gazetted. The committee has fifty-one members, who are doing little except drawing their salaries, amounting in all to over £250,000. Many of them are not even residents of St. Petersburg.

A dispatch from Gomel says that half the town is in flames and that fighting is going on in the center of the town between troops and revolutionists, who have been reinforced by the peasantry of the surrounding districts. The disorder extends to five counties around Gomel. The peasantry, as in the Baltic provinces, have deposed the old authorities and elected revolutionists to fill their places.

CAPTAIN IS GUILTY

Cor... S...

Found Criminally Negligent in Failing to Have Fire Drills.

New York, Jan. 27.—Capt. William H. Van Schaick was today found guilty of criminal negligence in failing to have fire drills on the steamer Gen. Slocum which he commanded in June, 1904, when that steamer burned with the loss of over 1,000 lives. He was immediately sentenced to ten years' imprisonment by Judge Thomas of the United States district court. The jury disagreed as to two other counts in which he was charged with criminal negligence by the employment of life preservers of poor quality on the steamer.

REPORT OF MINORITY

For a Lock Canal Will be Recommended by Commission.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The isthmian canal commission met today and concluded its consideration of the report of the board of consulting engineers with respect to the type of canal that should be constructed. The commission has had before it the reports of the majority and minority of the consulting board. At today's meeting the commission adopted a report to the secretary of war which they will forward to him. While no official announcement is made with reference to the report there is good reason to believe that they have summarized the two reports and have recommended the construction of the lock canal with an 85-foot level, practically following the recommendations of the minority of the consulting engineers. The report of the committee and the two reports of the consulting engineers will be transmitted to the president by Secretary Taft with such suggestions as he may desire to make.

Gen. Davis, chairman of the board of consulting engineers, returned to Washington today from Brussels, where he recently met the foreign members of the board and secured their signatures to the report of the majority.

FRAZER IS MISSING.

Searching Party in Wisconsin Woods Looking for Lost Hunter.

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 27.—William Frazer of Mellen has been lost in the woods since last Saturday, and grave fears are entertained for his safety. Frazer started out Saturday morning on his skis with a revolver and some poisoned bait with which he said he was going to kill wolves. Since then nothing has been heard of him, and it is thought that he lost his way and perished. A searching party is looking for him.

TWO HUNDRED CASTLES BURNED

During the Recent Revolution in the Baltic Provinces.

Wenden, Livonia, Thursday, Jan. 25.—The pacification of the Baltic provinces is reaching the final stage, so far as the agrarian movement is concerned. Nearly 250 revolutionists have been shot, several thousand have been captured by the troops.

Generals Orloff, Meinhardt and Wendt are now operating in the Wenden district with 10,000 troops, completing a circle in which the revolutionists are being gathered. The generals have the names of the revolutionists, who will be tried by courtmartial when caught, and either shot or imprisoned. The majority of those already executed were Lettish teachers or students.

The revolutionists have stopped burning buildings, but they occasionally fire on the troops. Among the burned castles is that of Baron Rosen Grossroop, about twenty miles northwest of Wenden, which was destroyed with all its contents, servants who had been in the service of the baron for twenty years assisting in the work of destruction.

Altogether the revolutionists in this district burned 200 castles, valued at $4,000,000, without including the articles of value which they contained.

The troops are taking the strictest measures. On one occasion they surrounded a church, in which funeral services were proceeding, arrested the revolutionary orators, and shot one of them.

COL. WING OF WISCONSIN GIVES BOWDOIN $50,000.

Washington, Jan. 27.—As a sequel to the banquet of the Bowdoin college alumni held here Wednesday evening, Col. Isaac Henry Wing, a wealthy retired lumberman of Wisconsin, has given $50,000 to endow a college of mathematics at Bowdoin.

Col. Wing, who is a native of Augusta, Me., graduated from Bowdoin in the class of 1856. He attended the banquet Wednesday night and Thursday made the offer to President Hyde, who accepted it. Col. Wing is in Washington for the winter. His home is in Bayfield, Wis.

TUCKER IS SENTENCED TO DIE WEEK OF JUNE 10.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 27.—Charles L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Mabel Page of Weston, on March 31, 1904, today was sentenced to death by electricity during the week of June 10. When asked if he had anything to say Tucker addressed the court as follows:

"Your honor all I have to say, is that I am absolutely innocent of this crime."

THE DOMINION GOING HOME.

London, Jan. 27.—The British admiralty says that the rumors that the British battleship Dominion is going to Venezuela are groundless. She will leave Halifax, N. S., today for home.

DROPS DEAD.

Andrew Bensen, Prominent St. Cloud Man, Meets Sudden Death.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 27.—Andrew Bensen, brother of Mayor Bensen, of this city, dropped dead yesterday at 11 o'clock. He was the president of the Bensen Grocery company and was one of the oldest and most prominent business men in the city. He was 55 years old and was born in Germany.

Mayor Bensen left this city on the morning train and was on his way to Chicago when he was reached by a wire at St. Paul and came back.

HOUNDED TO DEATH.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—Policeman John A. Scollard, who shot himself yesterday rather than go before the police board and answer to charges of immorality died last night. Before his death he dictated a statement in which he declared he had been hounded to death through false reports concerning him.

HEINZE ENRICHED BY THE BOOM IN COPPER.

New York, Jan. 27.—F. Augustus Heinze, the Montana mine operator, who for years has been fighting the Amalgamated Copper company, is credited in Wall street with having made $5,000,000 within the last four months out of the enormous rise in the copper stocks. Many of his friends in the East are said to have made hundreds of thousands of dollars profits with him. Most of Mr. Heinze's profits have been in United Amalgamated and Anaconda Copper.

It is the belief in Wall street that Thomas W. Lawson, instead of being short of copper stocks, has recouped his fortunes out of the recent rise.

WINK AT GAMBLING.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the Belgian authorities are suppressing gambling in the towns near the German frontier, those of the Netherlands wink at the nuisance. In the little town of Vaals, near Aix la Chapelles, the third roulette establishment was opened the other day, despite protests of the German authorities.

PAY MEMBERS BY THE DAY

German Government Finally Accedes to Desire of the Reichstag.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—According to the Cologne Gazette the imperial government has at last decided to meet the long standing desire of the reichstag to pay members per diem for actual attendance. The proposition has been discussed numerous times, the reichstag each time passing a resolution asking for the government's acquiesence but the latter has steadily ignored the request. This week another debate occurred in which the fact developed that many Conservatives are convinced that it is necessary to compensate members of the reichstag in order to maintain a quorum. The debate brought out some sharp criticism from the emperor, who was described as being the only man in Germany standing out against the wishes of the reichstag. Another speaker quoted a remark attributed to the emperor, indignantly exclaiming:

"Give these fellow a per diem too?"

It is understood that the government's decision to yield is due to the visible irritation manifested by the reichstag toward the government for ignoring its various notes in favor of compensation to members.

SMALL VERDICT FOR COMPANY

Mrs. Parker Must Return $1,663 to Insurance Compnay.

New York, Jan. 27.—A verdict for $1,663 was returned today in the suit brought by the Liverpool, London & Globe Insurance company against Mrs. Susan Day Parker. The insurance company sought to recover $7,000 insurance paid by them to Mrs. Parker for the burning of the yacht Scythian. The company paid the defendant $21,000 insurance, but claimed that this was $7,000 in excess of what should have been paid. The jury, in rendering its verdict, made a statement that they believed Mrs. Parker to have been in no way responsible for the burning of the yacht. Capt. Cardiff, formerly in command of the Scythian, had testified that he set fire to the yacht by order of Dr. Parker, husband of Mrs. Susan Day Parker.

FUTURE OF KOREA IS VERY BRIGHT

Kingdom Will Have a Much Better Government Under Japan.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Edwin Morgan, former United States minister to Korea, who arrived here from the Orient, en route to Cuba as minister to that republic, in an interview on Korean affairs, said:

"When I left Korea, Marquis Ito, the newly-appointed minister general, was preparing to start for Seoul. He is in no sense a military governor. The people have feared that Korea was to be placed under harsh military government. The contrary is the case. Korea will have a better government than it has ever had, and I think the future of the country is very bright. In going over the foreign relations of Korea, Japan gave assurances to all of the treaty powers that existing foreign treaties would not be disturbed. This means that American interests in Korea will not be affected, and that American enterprise will continue to find a profitable field of activity in the country.

"American goods find a big market there, and mining enterprises conducted by Americans are being worked."

TO RAISE JAP LEGATON.

Tokio, Jan. 27.—It has been decided to raise the Japanese legation at Rome to the rank of an embassy, and it is understood that M. Uchida, the Japanese minister at Pekin, will be appointed ambassador to Italy.

SITUATION LESS FRIGID

Things Political Beginning to Show Signs of Warming Up.

Picturesque Fight in Fourth — Cullum's Chances Rosier.

Things political are beginning to assume a slightly more torrid temperature, and the campaign may yet furnish some of the excitement of the old time political battles.

The "bloody Fourth" is the center of interest in the aldermanic fights. The four cornered battle in this ward promises to furnish plenty of interest, and the best political prophets are at sea on the condition of affairs. ex-Alderman Walker has not yet filed as an independent, but he is expected to, this afternoon. His petition is said to be complete, and all that is necessary is for him to take the oath and deposit his filing fee with the city clerk.

B. J. Cook is making the hardest fight of any of the candidates. With ample funds at his disposal, he has a horde of workers busy, and they are leaving no stone unturned to land him the office.

George Van Burgess, the Democratic candidate, is making a quiet but energetic campaign, and his chances look good, although with so many candidates in the field, the vote will be badly split up.

The Third ward fight also promises to be a close one. Frank Jordan, the Democratic candidate and his supporters, claim to have the situation well in hand, but Alderman Waugh, his opponent, is not letting any moss grow under his feet.

In spite of his long illness, which has confined him to his room, Alderman McEwen is making good headway in the Fifth. His friends have taken up his fight all the more energetically owing to his illness, and they are giving it. D. MacKercher something to think about.

In the Second ward Ole Jensen, the Democratic candidate is a hustler and popular but he has a hard man to beat in S. F. Staples.

In the Sixth ward Charles Mork, the Democratic candidate, is making good headway, and his friends claim that the chances of his election are very bright.

The Eighth also looks Democratic, and the cry there is claimed to be "Eklund and Cullum."

Judge W. L. Windom is not losing any time because he apparently has a sure thing in the judgeship fight He made a thorough canvass of the city for the registration days, and his well organized efforts resulted in getting out a very large percentage of his friends.

The chief interest of the campaign naturally centers in the mayoralty campaign. The least that can be said of Mayor Cullum's position is that it is no weaker than it was when the campaign opened. The registration on Tuesday showed a very favorable condition of affairs. In his own ward, the registration was very heavy, although there was no ward fight to bring out the voters. Through the West end he has the bulk of the Scandinavian vote, and in the downtown districts the solid business interests are lined up in his support. His supporters are not making any claims, but are bending all their efforts to get out the biggest registration possible, feeling confident that the larger the registration the better are Mayor Cullum's chances of piling up a big plurality.

Efforts have been made through canards to weaken his position. One story, which was going the rounds, was to the effect that he intended to let politics influence the government of the police department, and depose Chief Troyer to make way for some political friend, but this story was promptly denied, and the mayor has positively stated that Chief Troyer will be retained if he is elected for another two years.

Today is the final day for registration, and it is one of the busiest days of the campaign for the candidates. If the registration today is as heavy as is expected, the total will break all records for municipal campaigns for years. Less than 2,000 names are necessary to bring the total up to last year's mark, and there is little doubt but that these will be added today.

JENSEN SUCCEEDS KNUDSEN.

Christiania, Jan. 27.—Dr. Jensen was today appointed minister of ecclesiastical affairs in succession to Dean Knudsen, who resigned yesterday as a result of differences with other members of the cabinet concerning the appointment of non-Lutheran professor of theology at the University of Christiania.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Prisoner Leaps Through Window of Train and Disappears.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Lead—A daring escape was made on the incoming North-Western train just this side of Rushville. Sheriff Mote of Dawes county, Neb., was returning from West Virginia with a prisoner who had long eluded the law. He had also just finished serving a sentence of several years in Virginia and the Nebraska officials had only succeeded in the last week in laying their hands on him. Shortly after the train pulled out of Rushville, the prisoner, with lightning-like quickness, kicked out the window and dived out of the window feet first. Although the train was stopped and a search made at once, the man escaped, notwithstanding the fact that his hands were manciled.

Sioux Falls—W. G. Porter of this city, president of the South Dakota State League of Republican clubs, in the near future will call a meeting of the executive committee of the league for the purpose of selecting the time and place for holding the next convention. This will probably be held at Sioux Falls on June 5, that being the date the Republican state convention will open. The convention of the league, among other things, will be required to select delegates to the next biennial convention of the National Republican league, to be held at Philadelphia on dates corresponding to the fiftieth anniversary of the first national Republican convention, June 17, 18 and 19 next.

Miller—Mrs. Hubbel, 101 years of age, is worried at the continued absence of her son, Silas, aged 80. The case has developed into a mystery. Last summer, when Mrs. Hubbel gave her one hundredth birthday party, Silas came from Iowa to be present. He is a painter and decided to remain here and follow his occupation. He did not succeed in the town so started out to do work among the farmers. Since then nothing has been heard from him.

Deadwood—Deadwood's pride in her new era of morals has had a fall. Thursday night the Denver saloon, run by George Holstein, was raided by the police and Holstein, together with five men who were enjoying a poker game, were brought before the authorities. Two of these pleaded guilty, Holstein waived examination and the others pleaded not guilty. They were all bound over. This is the second or third charge of this sort against Holstein, and it is possible that his case will come up in the next term of court. All other raids have so far succeeded in excluding the roulette wheel and faro games, but this is the first time that a poker game has been interfered with. There was no money in sight last night, but the chips were held to be sufficient evidence that gambling was going on. It has been known that there were two or three places in town where money was put up on poker and faro, but this is the first raid made by the officials in several months. The lid is loose, but it will go back on again.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Major Murphy is playing a continuous performance in the trial for the alleged forging of county warrants in which he is the defendant. He has been on the stand four days in succession, and there is no certainty when he will be permitted to rest. The cross-examination was concluded after Judge Pollock made a ruling permitting the state to go back to the 1903 taxes. After an hour's questioning along these lines the defendant was turned over to his own attorneys for re-direct examination.

THE DETAILS ARRANGED FOR WHEELER FUNERAL.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Maj. W. D. Beach of the general staff, U. S. A., today gave out the details of the funeral service, in this city, over the body of Gen. Wheeler. The body will arrive about midnight Sunday, or early Monday morning, and be taken to St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, where it will lie in state with a guard of honor, from 10 a. m. Monday until 2 p. m., when the funeral cortege will form at the church and proceed to Arlington. Full military honors will be paid. There will be no services at the church here, but Rev. Dr. Stires of St. Thomas church, New York, will accompany the body to Washington and conduct the final services at the grave.

BIG CONSIGNMENT OF GOLD.

London, Jan. 27.—The largest consignment of gold ever brought in a single shipment from South Africa, arrived by the steamer Carlsbrook Castle, at Southampton today. The specie was valued at $1,355,000. It was consigned to the Bank of England.

PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED

Pentecost Mitchell Now General Manager of Oliver Company.

Annual Meeting Held Upon President T. F. Cole's Return.

Thomas F. Cole, president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, returned to Duluth today after an extended stay in the East. He arrived shortly before noon over the Omaha road from Chicago, and drove straight to his office in the Wolvin building, to attend the annual meeting of the Oliver company.

Officers of the concern were elected and there were no changes in the actual official board save the election of Pentecost Mitchell of Hibbing as general manager. This office has been held by W. J. Olcott, who is also vice president of the Oliver company and president of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road.

His duties were so many that it was decided to split up the work more and when L. W. Powell resigned to go to Elsbee, Mr. Mitchell was selected for the post of general manager. He will devote all of his time to the aaffirs of this company and will have his offices in the Wolvin building.

Mr. Mitchell has been general superintendent of the Hibbing district of the Oliver properties. His place there has been filled by the appointment of William J. West, formerly assistant to Mr. Mitchell, as general superintendent at Hibbing.

John H. McLean, who has been general superintendent of the Oliver properties on the Gogebic range, has been named assistant general manager, the place made vacant by the retirement of Mr. Powell. Mr. McLean will have offices on the sixth floor of the Wolvin building and will take up his new duties here as soon as possible. He has already purchased a handsome residence in Duluth.

With Mr. McLeans promotion, O. C. Davidson of Iron Mountain, Mich., who has been general superintendent of the Oliver properties, on the Menominee range, becomes general superintendent of both the Menominee and the Gogebic range districts. D. E. Sutherland of Ironwood, Mich., is to be superintendent of the Gogebic range.

It is understood that other promotions further down in the ranks of the Oliver Iron Mining company will be made, but it was decided at the annual meeting of the company today that the time was not ripe for an announcement of them.

"We are merely adding men to our working staff," said Mr. Cole, in discussing the changes in the personnel of the department heads of the company. "Work has been piling up on us so that it became evident that more men would be needed at the general offices. Mr. Olcott's duties as vice president of this company and president of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road prevented him from devoting enough time to the general management of the company and it was decided to make that a separate office and Pentecost Mitchell has been selected for the place. Aside from promotions of which I have spoken, no changes in the official board of the company were made."

Mr. Cole looks very well, despite the fact that he has been quite a little time away from the pure, bracing air of Duluth. He said he was glad to be home again. W. J. Olcott, vice president of the Oliver company, and Joseph B. Cotton, general counsel for the same corporation, accompanied Mr. Cole from Chicago.

EXPERTS DEMAND SAFE THEATERS

Problem Causing Fire Insurance People to Do Hard Thinking.

Pittsburg, Jan. 27.—How many theaters are safe from fire? Is the Iroquois disaster in Chicago forgotten? Underwriters figure that three theaters, three public halls and twelve churches are burned up in this country each week. It is this problem which is causing fire insurance people and architects to do some hard thinking these days.

"A theater audience is like a crowd of people sitting before a fireplace made of dry wood, crammed with inflammables, and with the chimney top covered by a stone slab," says John R. Freeman, president of the Rhode Island Fire Insurance company, and an expert on the theater fire hazard. "If a match should be applied to such a fireplace, you can imagine what would happen."

A Pittsburg architect who has made a special study of the subject supplements this alarming description by the assertion that there are not more than half a dozen safe theaters in the United States. The safe theater he describes as one in which the stage, its surrounding walls, roof and curtain form a fireproof box, virtually independent of the auditorium. This is the main consideration. The next most important feature of theater construction is the means of exit.

On the stage of the Iroquois theater, at the time of the disaster which cost nearly 500 lives, there were 10,000 square yards of canvas, 3,000 yards of gauze, ten miles of rope, and 8,000 feet of dry white pine. The burning of the gauze alone would have produced 1,000 deg. of heat. This shows that the theater stage must have adequate smoke and heat vents, always ready to open instantly. These vents are to a stage what the chimney is to a fierplace. But the stage fireplace, like any other, must be itself unburnable in order to be safe.

Pittsburg has recently built a really safe theater. Its stage is constructed exclusiveiy of steel beams and hollow-tile fireproofing—the same material which the insurance companies chose to use in constructing the model unburnable Underwriters' laboratories in Chicago. The bridges on either side and the gridiron above are of steel. A tile roof with ample vents covers all. The stage is separated from the auditorium by a thick brick wall extending over the stage portion of the building well above the roof of the auditorium.

Embodying all the most recent lessons in fireproof construction is the Majestic theater, just completed, in Chicago. Among other novelties it has a steel fire-proof curtain. Throughout this great building, of which the theater is but a portion, the latest designs of steel and hollow-tile fireproofing are used. This structure derives still further interest from the fact that its exits number forty-two.

These are but samples of the most recent forms of construction. Great holocausts like that of the Iroquois theater and the Paris bazaar are soon forgotten. But those who have studied this problem carefully say that such catastrophes are likely to happen any day, until all places where large numbers of people gather are as unburnable as is the steel frame and hollow tile office building.

TONS OF STEEL CRUSH WORKMEN

Derrick Cable Breaks in Altman Block in New York.

New York, Jan. 27.—Nine tons of steel girders fell from above the seventh floor of the new Altman block, in process of erection in Fifth avenue, today, tore through several floors on its way downward, and crushed a workman, named Edward Steinman, to death, and seriously injured five other workmen, who were employed on the building. A derrick was holsting the girders to the upper part of the building, when a cable broke. Steinman and two others of the workmen were on the second floor, and hearing the crashing of the steel floor beams giving way above them under the great weight of the falling steel, they jumped fifty feet into the basement, hoping to escape. Steinman fell under the falling steel, and the others escaped death narrowly. The foreman in charge of the derrick was arrested.

THE CONFERENCE AT ALGECIRAS

Likely to Last Much Longer Than Was Expected.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—While Germany is not dissatisfied with the progress hitherto made at Algeciras, the belief is gaining ground here that the conference will last much longer than at first regarded as probable. Persons in the confidence of the foreign office even predict that the conference will last six months. The feeling in financial circles has grown more confident that a satisfactory solution of the difficulties will ultimately be reached and the Moroccan question begins to cut a smaller figure in speculative matters. Nevertheless better informed political quarters point out that the hardest questions for the conference to discuss have not yet been touched on and that when these come up a much slower pace is certain, while a deadlock for a considerable time is not impossible.

ASSEMBLY STAIRCASE IN DANGEROUS CONDITION.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The assembly staircase in New York's $30,000000 capitol, which has been under suspicion for several months, was ordered closed today on the ground that it is unsafe for use. It is believed by those familiar with the conditions that the situation is exceedingly serious.

Taking the Kaiser's Trophy.

The recent yacht race across the Atlantic for the Kaiser's trophy was easily won by the American boat, which established a new record between Sandy Hook and the Lizard. A wonderful record has also been established by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in its 53 years' experience; in fact, it is so far ahead of its competitors that there is really no second in the race. You therefore owe it to yourself and family to see that the Bitters finds a permanent place in your home from this time on. You'll find it very valuable in cases of chills, colds, grippe or pneumonia, also that it cures vomiting, heartburn, flatulency, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, insomnia, biliousness, or malaria, fever and ague. We urge a fair trial by every sick man or woman. It never disappoints.

BROOKS DISCOVERS HIS TWENTY-FIFTH COMET.

Geneva, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Dr. William R. Brooks, director of Smith observatory and professor of astronomy at Hobart college, today discovered a new comet in the northeastern sky. Its position is right ascension 16 hours, 19 min. and 30 sec.; declination north 47 deg., 10 min. It has a moderate motion in a northwesterly direction. This is said to be the first comet of the year and is the twenty-fifth discovered by Prof. Brooks.

BIG SALE OF LUMBER

Mullery & O'Brien Sell Fifty Million Feet Ahead of Saw.

Lumber Brings Good Prices---Prospects Poor for Logging.

James McDonald, manager and salesman for the J. C. Mullery and William O'Brien mills, has just closed the largest sale of lumber made at this point in a long time. The names of the purchasers are not given. The sale consists of an aggregate of 25,000,000 feet of lumber, to be sawed here, part of which will go to Chicago and the rest to Toledo, Cleveland and Tonawanda. This lumber will be cut at the Mullery mill, in the West end and at the O'Brien mill, formerly the St. Louis, at West Duluth. Most of it will be cut this winter and part of it next summer.

The sale was made at good prices. It is reported that No. 4 boards are selling at $15.50 per thousand; No. 5 at $11.50 to $12 per thousand, and No. 3, common and better, at $26 to $27 per thousand.

The Mullery & O'Brien mills are now receiving about 600,000 logs per day from both the Iron Range and the Missabe roads, and both mills are running to full capacity. These mills have disposed of over 50,000,000 feet of lumber ahead of the saw.

The weather conditions as they now exist and have been for some time past, make a shortage of logs imminent, it is claimed by lumbermen and loggers. The bottoms are practically all mushy, and there is no chance to make ice roads with such weather as has been prevailing. It is expected that the cut of logs will be small.

Entertain on Monday.

The ladies of St. James Catholic church will give a card party and musical entertainment Monday night at St. James hall. A reading will be given by Miss Mary Shesgren, Misses Clara Kenny and Alice Shannon will sing, piano numbers will be given by Clarence Fleischer and Leon Iltis, and a piano and violin duet will be given by Miss Amelia Bouchard and John Thompson. Refreshments will be served.

Installation of Pearl Hive.

At the last regular review of Pearl hive, No. 4, the following officers were installed by Deputy Supreme Commander Mrs. Mary Barton:

Past commander, Mrs. Nora Merlan; commander, Mrs. Mary Spooner; lieutenant commander, Mrs. Mamie Devitt; record keeper, Mrs. Lon Gardner; finance keeper, Mrs. Anna E. O'Brien; chaplin, Mrs. Fannie Erickson; seargeant, Mrs. Mary Burns; mistress-at-arms, Mrs. Martha Smith; sentinel, Mrs. Carrie Scott; picket, Mrs. Mary Richards.

At the close of installation Mrs. Barton was presented with an immense bouquet of carnations, and she in turn, on behalf of the members of the hive, presented Mrs. Nora Merman, the retiring commander, with a beautiful, hand-painted salad bowl. A program was given and refreshments were served.

Friends Surprise Her.

A number of friends gave a surprise party, Thursday evening, on Miss Agnes Larson at her home, 275 North Fifty-ninth avenue west. Games and music furnished the entertainment of the evening. The following were present:

Misses Julia Anderson, Ida Peterson, Inga Anderson, Lizzie Anderson, Ruth La Pine, Minnie Engstrom, Florence Koski, Annie Foss, Sophie Carlson and Esther Foss; Masters David Carlson, Victor Anderson, Charles Mellen, Inwa Granley, Clifford Bijold, Oscar Carlson, Arthur Granley, G. WONDERS OF THE FUTURE NEW YORK

Whole Life of the Metropolis Will be Revolutionized.

New York, Jan. 27.—Changes of revolutionary significance are being made in the conditions of life in New York. Skyscrapers are filling the narrow confines of Manhattan island—sky-scraper offices, sky-scraper apartment houses, sky-scraper colleges, sky-scraper churches—soon the city will be a vast workshop with an overwhelming demand for numberless trains to take the human workers to their homes in the suburbs in lightning-like time.

To handle the local traffic from points near the city, transportation lines are constantly multiplying their facilities by additional trackage, new stations, and under-river tunnels.

The New York Central's huge new station is rendered necessary mainly by the crowding thousands who must be brought to and carried away from the city morning and evening. The Pennsylvania's station, the foundation for which now looks like the swath of a whirl-wind through the densely built up section of the West side, will provide for only a tithe of the army that invades the New York shore front and journeys every morning only to swarm back again at night.

When transportation plans now under way are carried out, a map of Manhattan island will look like a centipede, from every side of which will stream the lines indicating tunnels, ferries and bridges, to Jersey, to Brooklyn, to Long Island City, and additional lines of rails to the northward, spreading fan-like from the Hudson to the Connecticut line and beyond.

The steam railways, rapidly as they increase their facilities, cannot keep up with the suburban traffic. This has shown the opportunity for the high speed electric railway. From the terminus of the Subway at One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street, a new road, the New York, Westchester & Boston, is being built to consist of four tracks over private right-of-way, and with no grade crossings.

This line will mark an epoch in suburban transportation. It will be of as perfect construction as modern engineering can make it. Penetrating the heart of beautiful Portchester on the New York-Connecticut boundary line, and to White Plains, on the foot hills of the Berkshires. The line is being built for electric express traffic, at a mile a minute; locals will run as fast as forty-five miles an hour The whole line and branches cover only thirty-six miles, but its roadbed and equipment are the same or better than the steam railroads maintain. With such roads as this the city can be emptied of its out-of-town workers comfortably and quickly. The old-style, one-car trolley in suburban traffic is giving way to the high-speed electric train. If the city of the future is to be only a workshop, the new Westchester road shows how the workers will get to and from their labors. This is the type of railway that will solve the problem of over-population in cities.

FRIGHTENED BY PUPS.

Agent in Lumber Camp Mistakes Two Collie Dogs for Wolves.

The woodsmen at Crowley's camp near Knife river, are laughing over the discomfiture of an agent representing a Duluth clothing firm, who visited the camp recently.

The woodsmen have two playful, young collie pups at the camp, but the agent was unaware of this. He entered the camp about evening, and while walking near the edge of the clearing, the two pups came bounding out at him.

Setting up the cry of "wolves, wolves" the frightened agent headed for the shanty at top speed, and fell half fainting with fright inside the door, while the pups chased madly up thinking it was some new game for their special benefit.

The agent was so unmercifully "ragged" over his experience, that he left the camp the following morning.

BOOKS NOT JURY LISTS.

Registration Does Not Increase Chances of Being Summoned to Serve.

Contrary to the opinion of some people, the jurors in the municipal and district courts are not selected from the polling lists.

Some voters keep away from the polls in the belief that they might be summoned as jurors if they put their names on the voting list.

The idea that the judges make use of the books in selecting jurors is an erroneous one, however, and registration does not either increase or decrease a man's chances of being summoned to serve on a jury.

TRANQUILITY

Restored Over the Entire Republic of Santo Domingo.

Washington, Jan. 27.—From naval sources the state department has been advised of the collapse of the last remnant of the insurrection in Santo Domingo. Only one of Morales' adherents has been in the field for the past week holding out at Sanchez, on the north coast. Word now comes that this general has surrendered to the Caceres forces, thus restoring tranquility to the entire republic and placing the government in possession of all the customs houses.

RULES OF FOOTBALL DISCUSSED AT LENGTH.

New York, Jan. 27.—The national intercollegiate rules committee met here today and first took up the subject of elimination of rough and brutal play from the game. The entire morning's session was occupied in discussing the report of a sub-committee composed of John C. Bell of Pennsylvania; F. C. Curtis of Texas university, and Prof. James Babbitt of Haverford, Pa., which submitted a working plan for eliminating brutality. The discussion was not made public.

FIRE IN NEW YORK CITY ENDANGERS HOSPITAL.

New York, Jan. 27.—Fire, which swept Tolia Pergmont & Co.'s three-story oil and candle factory, on Water street, near the East river, today threatened the surrounding buildings for a block on every side. The fire was near the heart of the East side tenement district, and within a half block of Gouveneur hospital. This institution was enveloped at times with masses of black smoke from the burning oil and the eighty-nine patients in it were prepared for instant removal. The fire was then burning furiously, and the firemen devoted all their efforts to preventing the flames from spreading to the hospital and other nearby buildings.

The Grip.

"Before we can sympathize with others we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. LAST OF THE GEIRFUGLS

Tragedy of the Giant Iceland Bird at Last Revealed.

Extinct Since 1844—Story Told by Its Exterminator.

Reykjavik, celand, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—At a ripe old age Capt. Ketil Kentilsson, the exterminator of the Geirfugls, is dead. Some little time ago the captain told the story of his exploit to your correspondent, admonishing him not to reveal it until after his death. In after life, it seems, the captain did not like the notoriety he obtained as a young fellow as the murderer of the last living examples of an interesting bird species, the like of which may never be seen again on this earth. Hence his prohibition to publish the story while he was alive.

Let it be stated beforehand that natural histories and encyclopedias, at least such that are obtainable here, are all wrong concerning the Geirfugl. They state that the last living specimen was encountered in 1849; as a matter of fact the Icelandish skipper killed the last pair four years later. Of the carcasses, one is exhibited in Copenhagen, the other in some British museum.

Here follows the captain's story as told to your correspondent: "The Geirfugl (in Latin aled impennis) had become rarer and rarer for many years previous to our exploit—that was probably the reason why orders for same grew more frequent and prices offered higher all the time. In the summer of 1844 a Hamburg firm offered me from 30 to 50 thalers for a bird, acording to size, and this being a tremendious sum in my estimation, I collected a number of brave fellows to hunt and find him, if possible.

"Some time in the beginning of June, either the second or the fourth, myself and thirteen professional egg and bird hunters started in a boat for the Meelsackken, a little, sterile island, that, when the weather is clear, may be observed from Cape Raykjanes. Meelsackken is the Danish geographical name which thoroughly describes it. It looks from a distance like a meelsack or flour bag. In Iceland it has been known as Eldey for time immemorial. Among my crew was Karl Siemsen, a famous egg hunter in his day. We sailed and rowed the whole night, and when at daybreak we reached the island, found it the center of a storm-tossed sea, repelling any attempt at landing.

"I had never been to Meelsackken, which seemed a single rock, rising above the North Atlantic like a giant tusk. It took us not very long to circumnavigate the island. Three sides were invulnerable, the rock having been ground down and polished by the sea into a smooth surface, which offered no foothold.

"The fourth side was rather ragged and torn in spots; there were clefts and precipices, just the place for northern birds to nest, and inviting hunters. If there were any Geirfugls, here they must be or nowhere.

"The Geirfugal, I had learned from old Iceland bird hunters, differed from all other birds (except the ostrich) in that it could not fly. His short, stubby wings only served as a balance when it jumped from the rock into the sea. On the other hand, it was the fleetest swimmer of any bird in existence. The description furnished was as follows: Length of body about three feet, a black, shiny coat of feathers on top, white below. The female laid but one egg a year, grayish white in color with dark spots, length from 120 to 150 millimetres, both male and female attending to the hatching.

"As related, there was a terrible surf, waves frightened my men from an attempt at landing, no matter how often I told them of the great prize in store for us. Finally two, Jon Brandtsson and Sigurdr Isleesson, offered to accompany me up the rock. It took us more than an hour to obtain a foothold, but once out of reech of the waves, things were easy. Still no time durst be lost since we feared that the boat might be driven out by the heavy sea. Having reached the plateau, we found the usually large herd of Tordalken and Lummen, thousands, ten thousands of them, but they interested us little. We were out for bigger game and half an hour's search revealed it the more easily, as the Geirfugl cannot fly. While the Tordalken and Lummen made off, a pair of Geirfugls slowly and painfully tried to waddle away from the huntsmen. The birds seemed to be old and not in full possession of their strength. Perhaps they had been fishing all night and just finished the laborious climb up the rock. When they saw themselves pursued they were so frightened that they did not even utter a cry, simply tried to outrun us. Brandsson soon cornered one bird, I the other. We took hold of them by the neck, and for fear of hurting the plumage strangled the poor beasts as previously agreed upon.

"Meanwhile Sigurdr also made a discovery. He found a Geirfugel egg on a lava block, but it was broken. Either he stepped on it or one of the parents did it in trying to get away from us. Before I could hinder him Siegurdr had thrown the egg off the rock.

"Receiving hig reward, an advance of the price agreed upon, for the two birds, I kept up the search for them for years afterwards while egg hunting, but never found a trace, nor did any of my comrades either in Iceland or on the Faroe isles, and, as the Hamburg firm wrote, no more Geirfugls were found in Newfoundland either. Thus it seems that in my youthful days I exterminated the last of the species, and for a very inconsiderable price too, for soon the stuffed Geirfugls, still in Iceland, were bought up at a very large figure. In 1860, or thereabouts, a friend of mine sold one for $400, later $500 and more were paid. Some time ago an offer from Copenhagen raised the price to $2,000."

KING CHRISTIAN'S COMMANDMENTS

For Emperors and Kings and His Grandsons and Others.

Copenhagen, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The happy married life of King Christian's royal and imperial sons-in-law, sons, nephews, grandsons, etc., has often been subject of comment. Now it is learned that it's all due to his majesty's ten commandments, which he hands to his male relatives on the eve of the marriage day. They are as follows:

First: Remember that while thou art master of the house, thou should'st not be a tyrant.

Second: Remember that thy wife is not an angel, but a human being like thyself, and like thyself full of errors and foolish traits. Remember that thou must bear with her as she bears with thee.

Third: Remember that thy wife is a much weaker animal than thyself, and that many of her duties are performed amid great physical drawbacks.

Fourth: Thine is a great burden, but thou hast no right to esteem thy wife's duties lightly.

Fifth: Give thy wife the necessary pin money, and never interfere with her finances.

Sixth: In financial difficulties do not blame thy wife offhand. Talk matters over in a friendly and conciliatory spirit, and never ask her to give up any luxuries unless thou art willing to do the same.

Seventh: Tell thy wife every day in the year that thou loveth her. Do not carry the troubles of the government into the bedroom or to table with you.

Eighth: Do not make favorites of thy boys. Treat all your children alike, irrespective of sex.

Ninth: Before sitting in judgment on thy wife's doings, ask the reason of her actions, and never criticise her in the presence of the children.

Tenth: If thou hast been quarreling with thy wife, make peace before sundown, according to the word of the Bible. Make an agreement with her on the wedding day that, alternately, one or the other will ask to "make up" after a quarrel, and thou will be happy.

KING HAAKON "CUT DEAD"

The Bjoernson Ladies and There is Trouble Brewing.

Christiania, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—At a recent ball, which the king and queen attended, Haakon "cut dead" the ladies of the Bjoernson family and all Christiania is talking about the awful fact and hunting for reasons or excuses. Your correspondent learns the reason for this act, which may involve Haakon into trouble sooner or later and besides shows that his diplomacy is not as great as pictured by court scribes.

Some little time ago the king and queen attended a performance of Sigurd Jorsalsar, and after the second act sent for the author, Bjoernson, to thank him for the pleasure of seeing so fine a drama.

"A very fine piece, my dear Bjoernson," said the king, affably, in Norwegian, "det er et meget smukt stykke, kjare Bjorenson." In speaking, the king pronounced the word meget (very) in the Copenhagen dialect (majet).

Hearing this, Bjoernson stepped up to the king, and giving him a fatherly tap on the shoulder, said:

"Don't say majet, majesty, the Norwegian pronunciation is meget. A man ir your position ought to pay attention to little matters like that."

Haakon was surprised. Though willing to be a democratic king, he did not anticipate that democracy would go as far as that. Still he listened to Bjoernson with a somewhat forced smile and said: "I shall take note of that.'

"Very well," said Bjoernson, "if you do, you will avoid a lot of trouble."

Haakon looked very glum during the rest of the performance, but did not mention the matter to anyone. Now he seems to have taken his revenge—not in the most dignified manner, either.

SCIENTISTS DOUBTFUL

Over Wellman's Proposed Balloon Flight to North Pole.

Stockholm, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prof. Nansen, as well as a member of other Norwegian Polar explorers, will join a party of Swedish sicentists at Spitzburgen during the summer months to witness Santos Dumont's balloon flight to the North pole, provided it comes off as scheduled. It is learned from Paris that the balloon which is to carry Wellman and Santos will soon be ready to ship, together with all the necessary paraphernalia, but scientists here remain skeptical. "Wellman," they say, "is taking matters easy. We remember what he said about 'a dash to the pole' several years ago. He now thinks he can make the journey from Spitzbergen in four days, that means going to the pole and back in a little more than a week. This will be important if it can be proved true."

PARK IS CLOSED WHEN OLAF RIDES

Old Ladies Too Fond of Kissing the Royal Baby.

Christiania, Jan. 27.—(Special to the Herald.)—Queen Maude has put her foot down—she won't have her baby boy kissed to pieces and innoculated with all sorts of diseases, politics or no politics. Hence the park of the royal palace remains closed now during Olaf's riding hours.

Olaf is the little fellow that hopes to sit on papa Haakon's throne sooner or later, and he is a good looking chap. Since making his royal entry into Christiania, he was in the habit of taking the air during the hours of sunshine in the park adjoining the palace in the midst of babies of lesser degree, wheeled there, like himself, by some sturdy nurse girl. But though Olaf carries no crown on his tiny head, the Christiania women soon found out his identity, and, as a consequence, Olaf was fairly mobbed, day after day, by ladies, young and old, who wanted to kiss him. The nurse girl said Mamma, the Queen, objected to having her baby boy osculated. The ladies paid no attention. The services of a lackey or two were employed to keep the old girls away. They called the men names, threatened to stick their eyes out with hat pins and kissed Olaf to their heart's content.

A ministerial council was called. "We don't want to become unpopular," said Haakon, "but for hygienic reasons the Queen insists that the kissing stop." "But how stop it without giving gravest offense?" The ministers shook their head and said Norway was a free country, etc.

When Haakon reported to Maude that the conference had not come to a decision, the Queen said: "I have. There are gates to the park and hereafter I will have them closed every time baby goes for a ride." And they are closed.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Weather Favors Outdoor Work But Accumulates Heavy Goods.

New York, Jan. 27.—R. G. Dun & Company's Weekly Review of Trade says: No change appears in the business situation, weather conditions favoring outdoor work but causing accumulation of heavy weight wearing apparel. Reports from the Northwest are favorable but most other sections have found bargain sales necessary to reduce stocks of winter goods. Lumber mills have reduced time to five days a week, and lumbering operations are seriously retarded by lack of snow and soft ground otherwise news of the week is satisfactory, especially as regards the manufacture and distribution of spring goods. Products for fall are also ordered freely, notably in the footwear industry and shipments of boots and shoes from Boston for the month thus far eclipse all previous records, which is especially significant when viewed in the light of the rapid growth of the industry in other sections. Iron and steel plants have made steady progress and the manufacturing consumption of fuel is heavy but household demand for anthracite coal reflects the mild temperature that has prevailed. Labor discussions are not all settled, but there is little serious interruption on this account. Railroad earnings thus far available for January show an increase of 13.0 per cent over last year's, while foreign commerce at this port for the last week exhibits a gain of $1,411,709 in exports and a loss of $2,339,878 in imports as compared with the movement in the corresponding week of 1905.

Steady improvement is noted in the primary markets for the textile fabrics, urgent requests for prompt delivery endorsing earlier estimates of reduced stocks from shoe manufacturers, who are not well supplied with material. Quotations rule firm. A somewhat opposite situation exists in the hide market, particularly as to packer natives that were freely offered at a decline of about half a cent. Failures this week numbered 334 in the United States against 305 last year and forty in Canada compared with forty-three a year ago.

WANT EARLY CONVENTION.

—anything to see him run. They are sure that he has a good race left in him still. At Warroad an Eddy club under the leadership of C. A. Moody has been formed and that genial editor of the Plaindealer states that there are 100 editors in the state who are out for Eddy.

The Democratic party, especially F. A. Day, is charged with a conspiracy to sidetrack Eddy as they believe that he would be the hardest candidate to beat and are pushing instead the candidacy of Jake Jacobson, the gentleman from Lac-Qui-Parle. Mr. Moody is also the authority for the statement that Eddy did not commit himself when he published C. M. Sprague's announcement that he intended to run for lieutenant governor. The statement, according to Mr. Moody, was merely a news item, not an editorial endorsement.

Mr. Day is positive in his statements that Eddy will not be a candidate at any price, but that he is willing to lie low and make the attempt two years hence when the odds will be with the Republicans. With the exception of the Eddy talk, the gubernatorial situation is unchanged. The old standbys, Block and Lord, are still quietly at work and Representative A. L. Cole of Walker is receiving some mention as a possible candidate but the political talk about the St. Paul hotels is at present extremely desultory.

Perhaps no candidate who has positively announced himself has received more favorable comment from the country press than has Julius Schmahl, who is out for secretary of state. Nearly every country paper has said something nice about Julius.

* * *

Gus Widell of Mankato has at last quieted the fears of the many aspirants for the office of secretary of state. It is well understood that he will not be a candidate, as his business interests are such as not to permit of mixing them with politics. Nelson, Lommen, Brown, Osborne and Schmahl have all taken heart since this announcement.

* * *

Commissioner Staples' announcement that he would run again for railroad commissioner puts him out of the ring of gubernatorial possibilities. It is well known that Staples would like to be elevated to the highest executive office in the state, but with Johnson as popular as he is and it being an off year, he will not hazard his political strength by attempting to capture the plum. At present there is no real opposition to Staples, although there is some talk that Jacobson may be brought forward for his seat on the commission.

It is the general opinion among the Republicans that S. G. Iverson, state auditor, will be renominated by acclamation. There has not developed any real opposition to him, and Mr. Iverson has already come out formally with the announcement that he would be a candidate for another term.

* * *

One of the country journal gubernatorial dreams recently delivered, and which has caused real amusement in state circles, is the tip that J. A. Lovely, former justice of the supreme court, might run as an independent candidate for governor. If such is the case, Judge Lovely has the benefit of a recent experience of trying a non-partisan plan when he was defeated for the supreme bench. State officials, however, give Judge Lovely credit for sounder sense, and treat the rumor as a huge joke.

* * *

W. A. Nolan, representative from Grand Meadow, is the butt of a story which went the rounds of the state house this week. Being roused from a sound sleep from the cries of his wife, who exclaimed, "Will! Will! I think there are robbers in the house," he gently admonished his spouse in these words:

"No, no, impossible, my dear. There may be a few in the senate, but there's none in the house."

Governor Johnson's handling of P. M. Kerst's report on the capitol commission has greatly disappointed the Republicans. They were hoping that he would grill the members of that commission most unmercifully, and then there would be a chance next fall for an issue based on sympathy and sentiment. Instead, Governor Johnson gratuitously paid the members of the commission several graceful and unalloyed compliments. This is his first public announcement in commendation of the commission. Even Channing Seabury, who worked overtime to deprive Governor Johnson of his rightful patronage in connection with the control of the new state house, has come in for several bouquets. Governor Johnson has been heaping coals of fire on the heads of the members of the commission, which more than anything else shows him to be a staunch believer in the doctrine of the square deal. By his handling of the report it is generally conceded that he has added another plank to his platform, besides depriving the Republicans of some substantial planks which they hoped to insert into theirs next fall.

TOWNE REMINISCENT.

Tendency of Republicans From Duluth District to Rebel.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Representative Towne of New York, formerly a senator from Minnesota, made a speech in the house in opposition to the statehood bill. He was in a reminiscent mood and he touched on the tendency of the Republicans from the Duluth district to rebel, remarking, "I am somewhat of an expert on the subject of party rebellion." A smile went around the house. Mr. Towne said it gave him a feeling of pride to listen to the rebellious utterances of J. Adam Bede, who now represents the Duluth district, and the same feeling had been experienced when Judge Page Morris of the same district led the beet sugar insurgents against the Cuban reciprocity bill. "I rebelled in that seat so hard myself that I found myself entirely outside the breastworks," said Representative Towne.

WEAK BACK? IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS!

Ex-Judge James P. Murphy, 515 South Joliet Street, Joliet, Ill., who suffered intensely for years from kidney disease and pains in side and back, restored to health and cured at 84 by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY CURE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE DULUTH HERALD WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE, OR WHAT IS COMMONLY KNOWN AMONG WOMEN AS "FEMALE WEAKNESS."

HON. JAMES MURPHY.

This popular and respected jurist, in writing of his remarkable cure, recently said: "Some years ago I commenced to be troubled with a weak side and back, and I suffered intense misery from kidney disease. I consulted a doctor and was under his care for a long time, but he did me no good. I got a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and it worked wonders from the start. I continued to use it, and, although eighty-four years of age, in about two months I was in my normal condition, and for the return of my health I thank the Lord and your great medicine. Whenever I hear of anyone having the same trouble I advise them to take Safe Cure, which I am satisfied will cure them.

"About five years ago I advised a friend, who was very ill and lame from kidney trouble, to take Safe Cure, which he proceeded to do, and in a short time he was cured. He now writes me that he could not get along without it under any circumstances."—JAMES P. MURPHY, 515 South Joliet street, Joliet, Ill., November 9, 1905.

REAPS AS HE SOWS.

Dr. Rice Preaches on What the Harvest Will Be.

A large audience gathered at the First M. E. church last evening. Dr. Rice preached from Gal vi., 8: "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." A large number were at the altar, including many children. Dr. Rice's sermon was in part as follows:

"'Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap.' God's workmanship is perfect. When you look into His word for things that come direct to your case you will be amazed. Here again we meet the direct message. No one can fail to understand the figure. Sometimes we preachers, hunting for figures of illustration, get things that need much explanation. God's figures are plain. This one tits up so close to human life and to our own personal experiences that we cannot fail to feel its evidence. No matter now in what line of life you may have been thrown, you realize the true position held between sowing seed and reaping a harvest. The bare principle against which no one is ever so foolish as to waste a thought, and upon which men invariably act, is that the kind of seed we sow is the sure prophet of the kind of harvest we will reap. We may not be able, on account of uncertain days ahead, to tell just how much the harvest will be, but we are always absolutely sure as to its nature. There are some seeds that come cheaper for the sower to buy, but if he expects in sowing them that he will increase his profit, he must count absolutely on the crop as from that seed. But when we get into the moral world, conditions change in the conceptions of men. Men have forever been trying to set this law aside, and to make themselves believe that they can plant what they care to and choose their harvest at last also. Well, men can plant whatever they choose to. That is the tribute to the dignity of our race. But the planting, as chosen, must come then under the law of the harvest. I am here now with plainest figures to warn you, my friends, that the seed you sow today will be found in the harvest you must gather tomorrow. Nature's harvest field is bound by no more certain laws than that of soul life. The sowing may be done in even careless manner, but the harvest will come, for every seed is prophet of harvest, and the reaper will cut it down, and the flail of the judgement will beat it out and then will be known what sowing you have done. I tell you, upon the authority of God's word, backed up by the experiences of earth's millions, you cannot expect to carry on a life of sin today, and not have to bend your back and gather a crop tomorrow. You may think that in the planting you can conceal much. And you can. No trouble to hide seed away in the fertile soil of your character in secret. You can draw your cloak in seclusion about it there. Oh, yes, you can sow by night, in the secret places. But the harvest! The opening days will push up their fair hands and hold out to a world, to say nothing of the revelation at God's bar, the full harvest of your life. Walk you, my friend, with the harvest in view. He only is a wise sower who handles his seed in the appreciation of the harvest.

The special meetings will be continued during all of next week, Dr. Rice preaching every evening.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

D. E. STEVENS HEADS CLUB

West End Commercial Club Holds Its Annual Election.

Number of Other Matters Are Taken Up and Discussed.

The West End Commercial club met last evening in Sloan's hall and among other things, held its annual election of officers. Capt. D. E. Stevens was elected president, to succeed J. J. Moe who declined to serve any more; William L. Bernard was elected vice president to replace T. W. Walker who asked to be relieved; but the rest of the former officers were re-elected as follows: Secretary, George M. Jensen; treasurer, C. W. Ellston; directors, R. R. Forward, R. D. Haven, S. Morterud, M. A. Fedje and N. E. Nelson.

Quite a number of measures were taken up but only two were acted upon. In the matter of the proposed building of Lake Superior & Southwestern line of road through the city, something of a protest against the road crossing Michigan street at some point between the ore docks and the Twenty-eighth avenue was started and a committee was appointed to wait upon Crassweller & Crassweller, attorneys for the road, and look into this. This committee consists of Dr. A. J. Braden, Alderman R. D. Haven and S. Morterud.

N. E. Nelson asked that the Northern Pacific officials be requested to put a Zenith telephone into the Twentieth avenue depot. A Duluth 'phone is already in there but for those who have only the Zenith 'phone in their places of business, there is no service with the depot. Resolutions embodying this request from the club will be sent to Supt. Blanchard today.

The matter of supporting an athletic association in the West end was brought up by Rev. S. F. Sharpless and talked over, but the club decided that any aid extended the athletic association would have to be as individuals and not as a club.

The club protested against the Duluth street railway putting so much salt on the tracks. Capt. Stevens, who brought the matter up, says it is so thick now that it is hurting the hoofs of horses and can be felt through the shoes of pedestrians. The matter will be referred to the health department.

The committee appointed some time ago to see the city engineer regarding cutting through the point of rocks and opening up Superior street, reported that this operation would cost the city about $350,000. No action was taken by the club. Another committee whose duty it was to learn who must bear the cost of keeping the approaches to the interstate bridge in shape, reported that in a short time the Great Northern road will ask for ordinances from both cities, permitting it to build approaches to this bridge in order that its trains may run across it; and after that the road will have to take care of the approaches.

On motion of Capt. Stevens a vote of thanks of the club was extended to Street Commissioners W. L. Bernard and Charles Anderson for so promptly clearing the walks of snow after the last storm.

BANK ROBBER IS CAPTURED

New York Detectives Arrest Man Said to be James Manes.

New York, Jan. 27.—Central office detectives of this city last night arrested a man, for whom they declare the police of the world have been searching for more than four years. The prisoner, who was captured on the street by a mere chance, is declared to be James Manes, formerly an American bookmaker, who is wanted in connection with the famous Bank of Liverpool robbery of Nov. 21, 1901, in which the English institution, through forgery and conspiracy, was defrauded of more than $800,000. Subsequently $380,000 of this amount was recovered from the conspirators, the bank having sustained a net loss of more than $400,000.

While admitting that his name is James Manes, the man asserts that he is entirely ignorant of the Liverpool robbery and had no part in it. Manes will have a hearing, and probably will be held to await word from the English authorities, who have been apprised by cable of the arrest.

The arrest was made by Detectives Cain and Collins of the headquarters staff, at Broadway and Forty-second street, where they came face to face with Manes in the midst of a rush hour throng. They had but recently been reading of the Liverpool bank robbery, and had been discussing the escape of Manes, the only person unaccounted for in connection with the big swindle. They had studied the features of the missing criminal from a photograph and when they saw, last night, the man who, they claim, answers the description of the person wanted, they immediately put him under arrest.

In the history of the crime the conspiracy to rob the Bank of Liverpool will always hold the distinction of being one of the most conscienceless ever planned. The entire scheme turned upon the weakness of a bank clerk, who, while drawing a salary of $750 a year, became a victim of the betting craze, and played the races. His accomplices were four bookmakers and a prize fighter. Not only did the bank clerk play into their hands through his losses at the race tracks, but he was deprived of the occasional big winnings he made, through some pretense. The clerk forged continually the name of one of the bank's depositors, whose identity was never revealed, until finally more than $800,000 had been taken out of the institution and turned over to the coterie of the race track men. Finally, without having profited a penny, he went to the penitentiary for ten years, a sentence he is now serving with hard labor.

The bank clerk was Thomas P. Goudle. His associates were "Dick" Burge, an English pugilist; F. T. Kelly, a man named Stiles, Laurie Marks and James Manes, all bookmakers. Goudle confessed the plot, and pleaded guilty. "Dick" Burge, Kelly and Stiles were arrested, but Marks and Manes escaped. Burge was given ten years. Kelly and Stiles, by pleading guilty to conspiracy to defraud, escaped with sentences of two years each. Marks is believed to have committed suicide by jumping from an English channel steamer.

HEAVY SENTENCES

Were Imposed Upon the Anti-Militarists in Paris.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The head of the anti-militarists, Herve, was sentenced to four years' imprisonment, three others to three years, one to two years, three to fifteen months, six to one year, and ten to six months' imprisonment, besides a fine of 100 francs each. These sentences promise to embarrass the government much longer than it cares to, and the excitement in public and press, particularly workingmen's circles, is taking a dangerous turn. The sentence is pretty generally regarded "as preposterously insane." "I protest against so stupid a sentence," cried a hundred voices when the judge delivered the same. The state's attorney who procured it through his sentimental appeal to the patriotic feelings of the jurors is roundly abused and charged with deliberate falsehoods, to-wit: He said that no French army officer had ever commanded his troops to fire upon laborers; again that there was no class distinction in France; third that anti-militarism was a crime against the state and that opposition against the army existed only in a few minor states such as Spain, Holland and Switzerland.

The following passages in the anti-militarists' manifesto prompted the sentence: "When as soldiers you are ordered to shoot upon men, women and children fighting for bread—shoot, not your brethren, but the dastards who order you.

"When ordered to march to defend the money bags at home against the money bags on the other side of the frontier—do not march, for you are asked to fight against your brethren and your own better interests. Every war is a crime. The order to go to war ought to be responded to by a general strike and insurrection.

"On May 1, 1906, the workmen of the world will arrange a demonstration to show that they are no longer willing to work more than eight hours a day. The army will be ordered to drown this manifestation in the blood of workmen—soldiers of France, workmen, refuse to play policeman and spy, refuse to carry arms against your brethren now, on May 1, and forever."

Will Build a Supply Depot.

It is understood that active work on the new lighthouse supply depot to be erected on the lower end of Minnesota Point, will begin early this coming spring and that the construction will be completed and the depot in use by next summer. The depot, which is to be a concrete and steel building will occupy a site near the old lighthouse near Superior entry. Besides the depot there will be an oil house of fire-proof construction and a dock on the bay side of the point, where the new lighthouse tender to be put on Lake Superior will be tied up when not in service over the district. The whole work will represent an outlay of several thousand dollars by the government, all of which was authorized by the last congress.

Matt Pollari is Released.

Matt Pollari, a Biwabik miner who was held for examination for insanity before the probate court was released yesterday. Pollari was found by the police in Superior acting in a manner that led them to suppose he was mentally unbalanced. He was brought across the bay and turned over to the local authorities. A few days rest in jail had the effect of clearing up his senses. Pollari claimed he was not crazy but admitted that his mental condition might not have been just right when he was taken into custody, owing to a prolonged spree. He had $719 in gold and silver when arrested and this amount was returned to him when he was discharged from jail.

CAMPAIGN RUMOR.

Mayor Cullum Says He Will Not Depose Chief Troyer If Re-elected.

The rumor was started yesterday that Mayor Cullum would depose Chief Troyer, if he were elected for another term.

It was stated that the mayor had agreed to appoint a member of a faction which has been opposing him, if they would drop their opposition.

The story was labeled as untrue by Mayor Cullum yesterday, when he stated that he would reappoint Mr. Troyer chief of police for another term, if he were elected. He stated that Chief Troyer had earned a reappointment by his record in the department.

CARRIERS MAY HAVE TROUBLE WITH PILOTS.

Detroit, Jan. 27.—The Lake Pilots' Protective association in annual session here yesterday adopted the referendum plan for electing the officers of the association after 1906 and directed President Burch to write to President William Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association and J. A. Calbrick of Chicago, president of the Lumber Carriers' association, notifying them that the pilots are ready for a conference on a 1907 agreement at the earliest convenience of the carriers.

These letters bring up a direct issue between the pilots and the Lake Carriers' association, the latter at its annual session having decided not to engage union men as mates. A captains' union was disrupted during the strike of two years ago.

MASTERS AND PILOTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The grand harbor of the national organization of masters and pilots of steam vessels has elected the following officers: J. C. Silva, Boston, president; M. L. Cullom, Camden, N. J., first vice president; B. F. Perkins, Camden, N. J., secretary, and L. B. Dow, Brooklyn, treasurer.

The board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels heard the committee from the association regarding certain minor changes of the rules and regulations governing masters and pilots. The convention closes today.

EPISCOPAL MINISTER IS FOUND GUILTY OF FRAUD.

Omaha, Jan. 27.—At 4:35 yesterday, the jury in the Ware case returned a verdict on two indictments. The charge was conspiracy to defraud the government by means of fraudulent land entries in Hooker county, Neb. The maximum penalty is a fine of $10,000 and imprisonment for two years. Ware has been rector of the Episcopal church and in Lead and Deadwood, S. D.

SIR HENRY IRVING'S WILL.

London, Jan. 27.—The probate of the late Sir Henry Irving's will was granted yesterday. It divides his property equally between his two sons and Mrs. David B. Aria, a woman journalist, who has made dress a specialty, and who has written on this topic in American as well as English papers.

LABOR

SPEAKS FOR EDUCATION

State Labor Commissioner Williams Gives Strong Talk on Subject.

Urges Laboring Men to Keep Children in School.

Union meetings:

Monday—Tug Firemen and Linemen, Labor World hall.

Tuesday—Carpenters, Rowley block; Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall.

Wednesday—L. T. P. A., Labor World hall; Marine Engineers, Lyceum building.

Thursday—Stationary Engineers, Axa building; Electrical Workers, Labor World hall.

Saturday—Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders, Axa building; Brewery Workers, Kalamazoo hall; Bakers and Confectioners, 18 West Superior street.

Sunday—Typographical, Labor World hall.

State Labor Commissioner W. W. Williams gave some very good advice in a speech to the members of the Federated Trades assembly, which held its regular meeting in the Manhattan building last evening.

He declared that his eyes had been opened to a good many things since he accepted his present office and that one of those which made the biggest impression upon him was the tendency of the parents of today to take their children out of school too soon and put up a strenuous argument against this, and one that made an impression.

"The trouble with the working people of today is that they allow their children to leave school too soon, for the factory or the store," said Mr. Williams. "We laboring folks haven't got any too much education and the more we get, the better it will be for us.

"And how much help does the boy's little salary of $2 a week give? Enough to compensate you and him for taking him out of school at a time when he was getting that which would be most valuable to him in after life? Do you know what the average wages of children in the state of Minnesota is? A dollar and fifty cents a week. I will admit that there are many getting considerably more than that, but from figures secured from every county in the state, an average of $1.50 a week is secured. Is it worth while?

"The best thing you can give your boy or your girl is an education, for it is something that no one can take away from them. Talk about slavery! There are more slaves in the United States now than there were at the close of the war of the rebellion. There are 1,700,000 children who ought to be at school, working in the United States. That number is more than the number of slaves who were freed by Lincoln. The average wage of these children is 90 cents a week. Think of it!

"It has been demonstrated time and again that putting the children to work too soon makes a race of puny weaklings. In an Eastern factory recently, a little fellow, probably 13 years of age, was asked why he was working. He said that he did not want to go to school and his parents allowed him to go to work. He was then asked why he chewed tobacco. He replied that he did it because everyone in the factory did and to prevent the lint going down his throat.

"Don't take the kids out of school simply because they do not want to go any longer. If you don't, the children can never turn on you in after life and say that you did not give them a chance to secure an education. Your conscience will be clear, anyway.

"All my life I have realized that my education was sadly deficient. My brother was well educated and he was always made more money than I have and many people have said that I was the brighter man of the two. It always kept me humping to make $55 a week and when I was earning that, my brother was getting $75 a week on the same newspaper writing editorials.

"Just the other day my lack of education was brought home to me. I was asked to deliver an address before the Six o'Clock club of Minneapolis and it took me four or five days to prepare it and then I had to call in my 15-year-old son to correct the grammatical errors.

"That boy has grown fast. He is in the high school now and last year he was selected to deliver an address at the eighth grade exercises in Wesley M. E. church, Minneapolis, and I was invited to be present. There were about 2,000 people in the church besides the pupils from all the schools, and I thought the boy would fall down. But he did not, and I complimented him on the work afterwards.

"He said that he did just as the teacher had told him to do and that he inherited his gall from his father. That is the only way I have been able to get along in life. I have had more gall than education, but I have found that education is far more valuable."

In speaking of elections, Mr. Williams said:

"The best time for the laboring people to strike is at the ballot box. Both parties often need a little trimming and the laboring people are the ones that can do it. Don't vote for the man simply because he is your party's candidate. Find out how he stands on the labor question. Remember that every candidate is the laboring man's friend just before election. Pick out a man that you know is your friend, and after the men are elected, keep tab on them and see how they act on union labor questions.

"Some people tell you that we are disrupting the country with our organizations, but I fail to see why. Everyone else in the world is organized so why should not we continue so? The doctors are organized. They all charge $2 for looking at you and if one advertises, he is called a quack, kicked out of the medical society and out of town, if possible. The lawyers are the same way. They charge $5 for turning around.

"And keep in mind the fact that the way to help our cause is to preach it as much as possible and attend union and assembly meetings, whether our particular union is in trouble or not. If we are only in the unions for selfish reasons, we might just as well break them up."

The special committee appointed to secure a site for permanent picnic grounds and park for the labor unions, reported that about the only available place found was at the Irontons, on the other side of West Duluth. The committee was instructed to look further into the matter and report again at the next meeting of the assembly. It was suggested to the committee that a tract near Tenth avenue east and London road might be secured.

* * *

Peter Nelson's resignation as secretary and treasurer of the assembly was accepted and C. W. F. Hegg was elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Nelson is leaving the city. James Walsh was elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Mr. Hegg.

* * *

The following new members, delegates to the assembly, were admitted: L. F. Berger, George E. Gregory and O. R. L. Johnson of the musicians' union; John Noble, from the stationary firemen's union and John F. Filburn, from the barbers' union.

* * *

A new trouble has broken out in labor union circles this week. The boilermakers of almost all shops at the Head of the Lakes have struck for an increase in the scale. They were getting 33 1-3 cents an hour for a 9-hour day, and double time for more than nine hours. They are asking an increase to 36 cents an hour. They claim that they notified the employers in plenty of time, but the employers have thus far failed to even acknowledge receipt of their notifications. The union stands ready to meet the bosses in conference of the whole and try to fix the matter up. It is believed by the union men that the matter can be fixed up very easily if the employers exhibit the right kind of spirit.

* * *

Review has already been made of the offer of settlement made the bosses by the striking printers. So far the bosses have not acted on the matter, and there is no telling what they will do, although John Christie has given it out that he will not have anything to do with a proposition that does not recognize the open shop and nine hours as a working day. He says he is satisfied with the way things are running now.

* * *

Word has been received from Mount Clemens, Mich., to the effect that Joseph Pringle of the Machinists' union is very much better. He is being treated for muscular and inflammatory rheumatism, from which he was a great sufferer for some time. Alderman Harker, who is also at Mount Clemens getting treated for rheumatism, is getting along well.

Weak Kidneys

It is of but little use to try to doctor the kidneys themselves. Such treatment is wrong. For the kidneys are not usually to blame for their weaknesses or irregularities. They have no power—no self-control. They are operated and actuated by a tiny shred of a nerve which is largely responsible for their condition. If the Kidney nerve is strong and healthy the kidneys are strong and healthy. If the Kidney nerve goes wrong, you know it by the inevitable result—Kidney trouble.

This tender nerve is only one of a great system of nerves. This system controls not only the kidneys, but the heart, and the liver, and the stomach. For simplicity's sake Dr. Shoop has called this great nerve system the "Inside Nerves." They are not the nerves of feeling—not the nerves that enable you to walk, to talk, to act, to think. They are the master nerves, and every vital organ is their slave. The common name for these nerves is the "sympathetic nerves"—because each set is in such close sympathy with the others that weakness anywhere usually results in weakness everywhere.

The one remedy which aids to treat, not the Kidneys themselves, but the nerves which are to blame, is known by physicians and druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative (Tablets or Liquid). This remedy is not a symptom remedy—it is strictly a cause remedy. While it usually brings speedy relief, its effects are also lasting.

If you would like to read an interesting book on inside nerve disease, write Dr. Shoop. With the book he will also send the "Health Token"—an intended passport to good health. Both the book and the "Health Token" are free.

For the free book and the "Health Token" you must address Dr. Shoop, Box 4705, Racine, Wis. State which Book 5 for Men, book you want. Book 1 on Dyspepsia. Book 2 on the Heart. Book 3 on the Kidneys. Book 4 for Women. Book 6 on Rheumatism.

RAILROADS

LADIES ARE LONESOME

Great Northern Ticket Auditors Cannot Sit With Them.

Men Liked Talking to Girls Better Than Working.

The Great Northern road has the name of being accommodating, but it draws the line at keeping men on the pay roll for the express purpose of furnishing entertainment for the lady passengers who patronize its trains. Train auditors who were evidently of the opinion that "mashing" was to be a part of their duties have been called to time, and an order has been issued prohibiting them centering their attention upon any one member of the gentler sex while drawing a salary on the company's time.

Recently the Great Northern placed a number of ticket auditors on trains to assist the conductors. The reason for this, as given out, was that the conductors have all the work they can attend to looking after the operation of the train, without having time to devote to the wants and comforts of the individual passengers. Besides helping in the collection of tickets the auditor was supposed to do all he could to gain for the road the lasting friendship of the patrons, new and old alike.

On its face, this appeared to be a good idea. The auditors appointed set about their work with energy and interest. They figured that they had a snap, and—some of them at least—that they would be able to get a little pleasure as well as money out of their work.

Their instructions said nothing about who their attentions were to be lavished upon, and those of them who were young and good-looking and unmarried, and, said to relate, a few of the others also, found it much more pleasant to pick out some attractive lady passenger who was traveling alone, and who appeared to be lonesome and in need of masculine company and assistance, and to put practically all of their time in looking after her comfort and entertainment, than to scatter their attentions broadcast among the general run of passengers.

It seems that many of the auditors followed out their desires in this matter, and the practice of neglecting the majority became so general, it is said, that news of it reached the head officials, and a stop order was issued. One clause of the order is understood to read as follows:

"Train auditors will under no conditions be allowed to occupy seats with lady passengers."

MEETING A SUCCESS.

Northern Railway Club Now Has a Membership of 240.

At the third monthly meeting of the Northern Railway club, held last night at the Commercial club, there were 125 members in attendance out of a total membership of 240. Officials of the organization are well pleased that such an interest should be taken in proceedings. The attendance at the regular meetings is much larger than that of either the Western Railway Club of Chicago or the Northwest Railway Club of the Twin Cities.

W. A. McGonagle, president of the club, presided. W. W. Walker, general freight agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, read a paper on "Co-operation of Departments." J. E. Goodman, master mechanic of the Northern Pacific railway, read an able paper on "Variation in Height of Couplers." W. G. Wallace, superintendent of motive power for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, responded to this with a strong argument, entering thoroughly into the question, and exhibiting drawings, charts, etc., to better explain the purpose of his remarks. These charts and drawings will appear in the official proceedings of the meeting when published.

There was a musical program, taken part in by J. Myron, Louis Dworshak and A. F. M. Custance. Subjects for the next meeting, which will be held on the evening of Feb. 23, have not yet been assigned.

REBATES WERE GIVEN.

So Says President Stickney of the Great Western.

President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western road said in Chicago yesterday that the vice presidents of western railroads who had called upon him admitted that jobbers had been receiving rebates, through Broker G. L. Thomas for three years, cutting the rate on dry goods to Missouri river points far below the published tariff. Mr. Stickney said he was considering a cut in the rate, as the most advisable way to get his share of the business.

"Did you ever see two fellows get a sucker in between them in a poker game and keep raising him back and forth until the poor chap had lost all of his money just anteing away?" asked Mr. Stickney. "Well, if you have, that illustrates the position of the Great Western for the last three years with respect to the dry goods trade. They've been raising us between them until we have anted away all our money, but now we've got some more, and were going to do some raising on our own account. When the federal injunctions were issued we thought all railroads had stopped paying rebates, but we were rudely awakened, and we don't see any way to recoup ourselves except to make a contract with the jobbers and put in a tariff of about 75 per cent of the present rate, which would be the rate the jobbers have been secretly receiving for three years, or until Thomas' indictment."

MANY PENSIONERS DIE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—In the past six months taps have been sounded over the graves of 28,006 pensioners of the Civil war, according to a statement of Pension Commissioner Warner, yesterday. This, he says, is an evidence of the rapidity with which the veterans are being diminished. The total number of pensioners on Dec. 31 was 679,-234.

BOY SHIELDS MOTHER FROM MURDER CHARGE.

Marietta, O., Jan. 27.—The story of a son's loyalty to his mother, which led him to face death for the murder of his father, although he knew that she had fired the fatal shot, was told in court here yesterday by attorneys for the boy. Eddie Uuhl is on trial charged with the murder of his father, Edgar Uhl, last June. His mother, Ida Uhl, was indicted with him, as circumstances indicated that both had committed the crime. Mrs. Uhl afterward became insane and died in an asylum last week. With the death of his mother, Eddie Uhl evidently considered that his devotion had been carried far enough and his lawyers declared in court today that they expected to show that Mrs. Uhl was guilty and that every act and utterance of the son up to the present time had been planned to shield his mother.

FORTUNE FOR IOWA MAN.

H. C. Thorn of Clinton Left $252,000 for Befriending Stranger.

Clinton, Iowa, Jan. 27.—H. S. Thorn, a checker employed in the stockyards of the North-Western railroad in this city, has fallen heir to a fortune of $252,000 bequeathed to him by an aged Ohio man whom he had befriended twenty years ago. Thorn has just learned of the windfall that will make him independently rich for life. The money was left by J. W. Woodridge, who died in Ohio recently. He came to this section of the state in a canvas covered wagon twenty years ago and settled on a farm near Lawton and Massilon, near where the Thorn family lived. Another neighbor was John Sharp, of Massillon, Iowa, who also comes in for a large fortune. The Thorn and Sharp families befriended the new arrival and performed many little acts of kindness for him. He remained in the neighborhood for five years, then left and nothing more was heard of him until the other day, when the two families received tidings of the death of their former friend, and the bequests he had made them. Woodbridge invested in mines and left a fortune of $1,010,000.

FAMOUS HUNTER

Killed Two Bears by One Shot of Army Rifle.

Budapest, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. Augustus von Spiess, the famous bear hunter, came unexpectedly upon two black bears trotting behind one another in a narrow rock passage in the mountains near Hermannstadt. With his army rifle he took deliberate aim and killed both animals with one shot, the bullet piercing the head of the first bear, a female, and also that of the second, behind, and then flattened against the rocks. Both bears weigh over 200 pounds, the female nearly 300.

Look for Establishment of Central Bank in United States.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Nine Men Overcome by Foul Gases in Tamarack Mine.

Calumet—Nine men were overcome in North Tamarack No. 3 shaft Friday owing to gases generated in the burning portion of the mine. The compressor broke down and it was necessary to furnish artificial ventilation. The company started the compressors at No. 5 shaft, which is connected with the burning workings. This compressor sucked foul gases from the burning openings and forced the deadly fumes into the drift where miners were at work several thousand feet distant. The men were taken to the surface and resuscitated by physicians after hard work. The miners working in the bottom of No. 2 shaft of the Hecla branch of the Calumet & Hecla mine report gases evident from Tamarack. There is a narrow wall of rock separating the two mines at that point and the poisonous gases leak through the fissures and water channels.

Marquette—"Ping" Foster, the Houghton county trapper, returned this week from his camp in Laird township with the pelts of ten lynx which he had trapped within five days. They were all fine specimens. He will collect bounty on the animals and will market the pelts. In one case Foster trapped a large female lynx, and two kittens were found beside her. He shot one, but the other escaped, and the next day he caught it in one of his traps. Jacob Harig of Marquette this week claimed the bounty on the largest wild cat killed in the upper peninsula. The animal measured three feet and six inches in length.

Norway—The Norway city lighting department now furnishes power for 6,000 incandescent lights varying from four to thirty-two candle power each, in addition to seventy-two arc lamps. The plant provides first-class service at a price less than prevails in many cities of the same size. The municipal waterworks plant is perhaps the most important and least appreciated of any utility, but it has now fully twenty-two miles of mains, nearly 800 house connections and about ninety fire hydrants. Both of these departments are self-sustaining and no tax for their maintenance was asked by the board of public works for 1905.

Sault Ste. Marie—A Sault Ste. Marie high school student making a call one evening recently was given a chair which had lately been renovated. The varnish was showy but recent, and as the evening passed the occupant gradually melted into it. At the same time the dryer was doing its work so that at the quitting hours adhesion by "first intention" had ensued. As the student arose to depart the chair arose with him, and the attachments refusing to be cancelled and his efforts to bring it about proving abortive, the young woman volunteered her assistance, both blushing madly. After a few tugs he implored her to quit. Male members of the family came to the rescue and with considerable effort unseated him.

Crystal Falls—"Kid" Herman, a rising young pugilist who has been attracting considerable attention recently, is a son of J. P. Landfield of Crystal Falls. He is now preparing for one of his greatest fights, a go with Aurelio Herrera, the Mexican, who has won fame with the gloves in many a go.

RADLY FROZEN, MAY DIE.

Madella, Minn., Jan. 27.—Orlando Depue, a stock buyer of this place, while buying stock in the country and returning home, in some manner was thrown from his cutter. He lay on the ground until he was found by Frank Cash several hours later. Depue was badly frozen, and it is not believed by doctors that it is possible for him to live. Both his legs will have to be amputated above the knees.

BRIBERY IS ATTEMPTED

Attorney for Beef Trust Hands Money to Chicago Reporter.

Present is Refused and the Event is Given Publicity.

Washington, Jan. 27.—By authority of President Roosevelt correspondence was made public at the White House relating to methods alleged to have been employed by attorneys for the beef packers who are under indictment at Chicago, to influence public opinion in behalf of the packers.

The document consists of a communication made to Attorney General Moody by United States District Attorney Morrison of Chicago, setting out certain alleged facts regarding the payment of a sum of money to a Chicago newspaper reporter by one of the attorneys for the beef packers; a letter from the attorney general to the president, transmitting Mr. Morrison's report and expressing the opinion that no way existed under the law by which the alleged offense could be punished; and a letter from the president to the attorney general directing the publication of the correspondence in order that the public might be informed of the situation.

The correspondence, with the exception of certain exhibits in District Attorney Morrison's report which were not furnished and which include articles published in the Inter-Ocean, Jan. 22 and Jan. 23, follows:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26, 1906.—To the President: Sir—I forward herewith the report of Mr. Morrison, the United States attorney at Chicago, showing that one of the counsel for the defendants in the indictment against the beef packers has given a sum of money to a reporter of the Chicago Inter-Ocean engaged in reporting the proceedings in that case, and unsuccessfully attempted to give a sum of money to another reporter of the City Press of Chicago, who declined to receive it. In view of the fact that the articles of the reporter of the Inter-Ocean have been misleading, contain many false statements of fact, and have been circulated widely throughout the country, I deem it proper to bring the subject to your attention. Under the statute which rigidly restricts the power of the federal courts to punish for contempt of court there seems to be no remedy. I am advised by the district attorney that proceedings for disbarment of the offending attorney would not be likely to prevail in the federal courts.

"I await your instructions with reference to the subject if pou have any to give. Very respectfully,

"WILLIAM H. MOODY,
"Attorney General.."

"Department of Justice, Office of United States Attorney, Northern District of Illinois, 537 Monadnock block, Chicago, Jan. 18, 1906.

"To the Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

"Sir—I have the honor to say that on the 27th day of December, 1905, Judge George W. Brown, who is one of the attorneys for the packers in the 'beef trust' case, gave to a Mr. Hasler, who is a reporter for the Inter-Ocean and who reports the proceedings of the 'beef trust' case, a certain amount of money, ostensibly as a Christmas present, the exact amount I do not know, and directed him to give $100 of it to a Mr. Elwell, who is a reporter for the City Press of Chicago, and who is also detailed to report the court proceedings in this case, and whose reports are used by all of the newspapers of Chicago, and largely by the Associated Press. Mr. Hasler had intimated to Mr. Elwell before that day that he was going to receive a present, and on that day met him in the corridor of the federal building and handed him $100.

"Mr. Elwell declined to take it and Hasler pushed it into Elwell's pocket with Judge Brown's card and told Mr. Elwell that Judge Brown had sent it to him. Elwell went to his employer and told him about it and his employer told him to take the money and give it to Judge Brown, which he did, and Judge Brown told him he did not mean anything by it; that he just wanted to make him a Christmas present. I then requested Capt. Porter to have an interview with Mr. Hasler, which he did, and I herewith enclose a report of Capt. Porter's interview.

"Judge Brown knew that I was familiar with the facts he came to the office to see me. He had learned that we knew about the matter. His explanation was that complimentary articles had been written about him and that he thought Mr. Elwell wrote them, and that he gave the money to Elwell out of gratitude.

"I do not remember any articles especially complimentary to him, but am having the matter looked up to see whether there were any such. Judge Brown also admitted to me that he gave Hasler money at the same time to retain for himself. The amount he gave Hasler was not stated. Judge Brown stated that the money he gave was his own money and that his clients knew nothing about it. We are this morning considering the question as to whether we will lay the matter before the editor of the Inter-Ocean. Mr. Garfield and I laid the matter before Judge Humphrey at his rooms.

"I beg to call your attention to the fact that the jury returned yesterday morning and remained in Chicago over night and had every opportunity to read the article published in this morning's Inter-Ocean. Respectfully yours

"C. B. MORRISON,
"United States Attorney."

"The White House, Washington, Jan. 26, 1906.—Sir: In view of the fact that there seems to be no opportunity for action before the courts against the counsel of the beef packers, who, it appears from District Attorney Morrison's statement, has been guilty of bribing a reporter—the reporter having disseminated false and misleading statements as to the case against the beef trust—it seems to me that the only course left is to publish Mr. Morrison's letter and the other documents in the case. This I direct to be done. Extraordinary efforts have been made in this case, as in one or two similar cases, to poison the public mind by the dissemination of false and misleading statements, and it is right that the public should know why and how their circulation is secured. Very truly

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
"To Hon. Wm. H. Moody,
"Attorney General."

Washington, Jan. 27.—George Wheeler Hinman, editor-in-chief of the Inter-Ocean, issued the following statement last night in regard to the matter:

"Mr. Hassler, the accused reporter, ceased tonight to have any connection with this newspaper. He undertook to report the trial of the packers under these instructions and no other: 'Tell the truth and treat the packers fairly.' A reporter who takes money, even though he does so innocently, as Mr. Hassler appears to have done in this case, has lost his usefulness to the Inter-Ocean. The insinuation that the general policy of the Inter-Ocean has in any way been fixed by Mr. Hassler is, of course, ridiculous. Hereafter, as heretofore, the truth regarding the trial of the packers will be told without prejudice against either prosecutors or the prosecuted."

When shown the statement from Washington, Judge Brown said:

"The small Christmas present that I gave Mr. Hassler, who is an old friend and neighbor of mine, was my own money, and had no more bearing on the packers' trial or his reports of it than of any other case that I might have had in hand at the time. I gave presents of the same nature to thirty or thirty-five persons. The fact that I am one of the general counsel of the Inter-Ocean and a personal friend of the editor shows the utter preposterousness of the insinuations uttered by the United States district attorney in this case."

In a statement giving his side of the affair, Mr. Hassler said:

"Judge Brown's Christmas gift of $100 was a personal present. As to its having the slightest bearing on or relation to my report of the packers' case, I am willing to stand on the records of the case in justification of the accuracy and fairness of my reports. I will also state that the present offered by Judge Brown to Mr. Elwell of the City Press association was also purely a personal one, taken out of Judge Brown's own pocket, and having nothing to do with the packers' case."

Joseph Santley Appears in "A Runaway Boy" at the Lyceum.

CAST:

Kamya	Frank Trenor
Sam Nelson	Wilber M. Roe
Stella Reynolds	Margaret Macdonald
Ned Marston	Earnest Kast
Marie Bouton	Pearl E. Abbott
Ezekial Reynolds	Burr Caruth
Prudence Reynolds	Millie Zoar
Harry Reynolds	Joseph Santley
Brute	Harry Wilson
William Bowom	Frank Scott

"A Runaway Boy" was quite well received at the Lyceum last evening. The play is a melodrama of the usual thrilling sort, with plenty of gun and knife play. Joseph Santley took the part of Harry Reynolds, the runaway boy. He is starred as the boy actor, and looked the part so far as his face went, but, in height he towered above all the other men in the show. There was no doubt as to his youth, however.

Young Santley is very good looking and has a pleasing stage appearance. He went through his lines in a creditable manner, and his acting was superior to that of many stars who appear here in melodrama. At the opening of the play he is shown as an orphan, with a fortune due him, and the usual scheming old man and adventuress trying to get it for themselves. After escaping death several times from poison, guns and ugly falls, the boy comes out on top, with the other fellows underneath.

Reynolds and Sam Nelson, a negro servant, impersonated by W. M. Roe, join a circus, and this gives an opportunity for a number of vaudeville features in the third act. A ring in a circus is shown on the stage. Scott and Wilson, "whirlwind" acrobats, were the features of this scene. Their stunt was in many ways an original one, and they displayed considerable cleverness in the act, and were liberally applauded.

Roe was good as the negro, and Pearl E. Abbott was handsome and capable as the adventuress. Burr Caruth, who appeared as the leading villain, evidently went on the principle that he was paid by the piece—so much per snarl, and by the height of the pitch to his voice, judging by his deportment on the stage.

HANDICAP AT OAKLAND TRACK

New Record Expected to Be Made---Proper the Favorite.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—The most important handicap that will be run in America this year outside of New York will be decided this afternoon at the Oakland track. It looks as if the Burns' handicap this year will be run over a good track, which is quite a change.

That a new record for this race will be established is believed to be a certainty. The present record is 2:06¾ made by Ruinart in 1897. The track record for one mile and a quarter is 2:06¼ held jointly by Gauntlet and Lizella. It would not be considered surprising if the coast record or 2:04¾, made by Eddie Jones at Tanforan is equalled.

The track was good yesterday and should be good today.

The following are the entries, weights and jockeys:

Horse—	Weight.	Jockey.
Proper	122	Knapp
Eugenia Burch	120	Dugan
Lubin	120	Davis
Dr. Lego	118	Lineer
Veterano	107	Jackson
Sir Brillar	106	Clark
Red Leaf	100	Radtke
Nealon	104	Williams
J. Sanders	109
Dr. Gardner	110
Gregor K.	109	Walsh

The horses entered are as fit as skillful hands can make them. Proper will undoubtedly be the favorite, but a big plunge will likely be made on Eugenia Burch.

In the pool rooms last night the odds were as follows:

Proper, 2½ to 1; Eugenia Burch, 3 to 1; Lubin, 4 to 1; Dr. Lego, 2 to 1; Jake Sanders, 10 to 1; Schreiber entry, 8 to 1; Gregor K, 25 to 1; Sir Brillar, 10 to 1; Red Leaf, 10 to 1; Veterano, 50 to 1.

DR: SPECIALIST of MINNEAPOLIS
LOCK BOX 311

Will be at Spalding Hotel Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 1, 2 and 3.

DR. E. S. BUGBEE

Relieves all eye strain that causes cataract, blindness, red, sore and enflamed eyes, headaches, dizziness, black and floating spots, nervousness, etc., without drugs or pain. Unexcelled in ocular and medical science. All cases thoroughly examined under Dr. Bugbee's skiascopy, revealing the slightest errors of refraction as well as any diseased or abnormal condition of the eyes. (Glasses made that will fit.) New lenses put in old frames if desired. Replace lenses from prescription or from pieces sent by mail. A complete record of every case and a guarantee and prescription number given with every pair of glasses fitted. Artificial eyes fitted.

Special attention to cure and relief of nervous troubles, such as deafness, asthma, stammering, St. Vitus' dance, headaches, etc. Many of these troubles are caused by uncorrected eye strain, causing irritation of the vital nerves and brain centers, and properly fitted glasses will permanently relieve this trouble.

A YELLOW SERMON.

Equally abhorrent to common decency are yellow newspapers that will not stick at falsehood in the seeking of sensational effects, and the yellow preachers whose attempts to make a point will not balk at leaping over the bounds of strict truth.

A minister in New York recently declared that alcoholism among women is alarmingly on the increase, and that the future of the republic is thereby endangered.

Doubtless his observations leading to this conclusion were made in New York, but he should remember that New York is not the republic—fortunately, be it said, since New York has its Tammany and its Platt and Depew—and that he has no right to judge womankind by the performances of the few that seek public notice and care not how they attract it.

Let it be said, for the rebuke of this offending parson and for the comfort of those who may take stock in what he says, that his remark is a libel on American womanhood, not justified in any measure by the facts.

It is true that in the public cafes of New York and other cities it is a more common sight than formerly to see women calmly ordering drinks, and taking much the same concoctions that the men take. It is true that the sight of women drinking in public is an unpleasantly common spectacle, but this is not an unfavorable commentary upon womankind as a whole but solely upon those who make of themselves and their shamelessness a public spectacle.

Furthermore, the man that would witness such scenes, and argue from it the demoralization of the womankind of America, is sadly lacking in many things, all of which leave him a poorer man than he would be if he had them.

It is greatly to be feared that whether this preacher realized it or not his zeal to make a point and attract notice ran away with his discretion and good judgment. Every man and every woman in this land will challenge his right to judge American womanhood by the pitiful specimens he may find flaunting their new freedom to the public gaze. Had he contented himself with commenting upon the acts of the women he had noticed, instead of making their acts the basis of a charge that the women of America are deteriorating to the extent of threatening the safety of the republic, it would have been much more manly and infinitely more sensible.

CUTTING OFF FAT FEES.

They have discovered down in Pennsylvania something that Minnesota discovered and corrected last winter. They have found out that the state insurance department is a gold mine to the commissioner under the fee system, and they propose to start a campaign that will give that officer a proper salary, leaving the large profits to the state. While the commissioner has been getting $3,000 salary, and $8,000 to $10,000 a year in reported fees, he has been getting in addition to that, without reporting it, $15,000 to $20,000 a year for making annual valuations of policies.

This is like what happened in Minnesota, only Insurance Commissioner O'Brien, when he took office after his appointment by Governor Johnson, proposed the change himself, and helped push it through the legislature, while in Pennsylvania it is expected that it will take quite a fight to pry the commissioner loose from his soft snap.

The tendency in government is strongly toward the abolition of the fee system, replacing it wherever it is possible by adequate salaries, that the state may profit by the fees instead of the politicians.

REAL PRIMARY REFORM.

In states that have not yet risen to the stage of progress that includes a primary election law, and where attempts are being made to bring about that reform, the politicians are protesting, as usual, and are bringing into the fight every argument they can against the adoption of the direct nomination system.

One favorite argument that is being used is that New Jersey, the "traitor state," boss-ridden and corporation-owned, has the primary election system, and that since it produces no better results there than it does, it is not likely to help much in other states. An examination of the New Jersey law, however, leaves little to this argument.

The law adopted by the New Jersey vassals of the trusts is primary election in name only. It provides for general primaries on the second Tuesday in September, "for the selection of delegates to conventions of political parties and for the nomination of candidates for certain offices." According to this the people are permitted to nominate certain officers, while as to the others they can only select delegates to do that work in conventions. The law says that all candidates to be voted for by a single ward or township shall be nominated directly, without intervention of delegates or conventions.

Now state senators in New Jersey are elected by counties, so they do not come under the primary direct nomination system. Representatives, too, must be selected by the conventions. So must county and state officers. In fact, practically no officers except constables, township assessors and such are nominated directly by the people. All the rest must seek nomination in conventions which are manipulated, as conventions always have been and always will be, by the bosses. The convention system is a travesty on popular government, and the New Jersey brand of primary election does not improve upon it.

If popular government is a sound theory, the more popular it is the better. The direct nomination system, therefore, is a step in the right direction. But it should apply to all officers, not to a part of them, since what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. The obvious deduction is that Minnesota, which has the direct nomination system on all but state officers, should disregard the wishes of the bosses and bring the nomination of state officers under it also.

Incidentally, since candidates for legislative positions will presently be in the field, it will be well for the people and the newspapers to make sure that all of them favor the extension of the direct nomination system to state officers.

HARD ON JOKESMITHS.

New Jersey proposes to attempt an internal improvement, so-called, that will wring the heart of the jokesmith, and bring from his tongue the most bitter objections.

She proposes to kill off her mosquitoes. She has had her state entomologist look the field over and figure up what it will cost to do it, and he has reported that it will take $315,550.39. The amount, though large, is considered to be not unfair in view of the results it will accomplish, and there is every probability that the state legislature will undertake the work.

The Jersey mosquito, with its long, sharp bill, its furious buzz and its prodigious appetite for human flesh, has long been the final resort of the joke-writer. When the mother-in-law joke, the plumber joke, and other time honored bases for alleged witticisms have been worked until even the editor of the average comic weekly refuses to buy any more of them, there was always the New Jersey mosquito, fertile in jokes most furiously funny. The proposed act of the New Jersey legislature will at one blow deprive the professional humorist of one of his most important tools of trade, one upon which he has relied for a large part of his income. To him, no doubt, the plan is nothing short of oppressive and cruel.

But if this tragic feature of it can be eliminated from consideration, the move is seen to be most wise and proper. There is just one thing the country at large would be more pleased to see the legislature of New Jersey do. That would be to redeem its state from the position it now occupies of traitor in the camp of the states; of betraying its sister states and their people, for the sake of a few paltry fees, into the hands of the large interests. New Jersey will, under present conditions, incorporate anything. She will incorporate a company projected to corner the business of highway robbery, providing she gets her incorporation fees out of it.

So long as people knew that there were folks in the country so conscienceless as to do what New Jersey has done, it has helped some to know that there was always the Jersey mosquito to plague them and revenge the public, in some measure, for their wrongs. If the plan of abolishing the mosquito is carried out, there will not even be that satisfaction.

WIVES ON WAGES.

A few days ago in Philadelphia a young husband of 23 shot his wife, a girl of 22, and then killed himself. The wife is dying. It was a horrible tragedy, so awful that it obscures, in some measure, the circumstances which led to it. These circumstances are common enough, though they seldom lead to such terrible consequences, and though prolific in mischief of other sorts there is nothing in them to warrant tragedy.

The husband, though young, was a skilled mechanic, and earned $4 a day in a locomotive works. This was ample to support himself and his wife and enable them to get ahead, but instead of starting a home they boarded, and the wife worked in a factory, earning $8 or $9 a week. It was this, apparently, that led to their trouble, the husband objecting to his wife's working. In the leisure given them at the boarding house, where no household cares took up the mind of either in the evening, there was ample time to quarrel over this and other matters that offered themselves as subjects.

This doleful tragedy, clearly, arose out of a condition that was unnatural and unwholesome. When a husband earns enough at his work to support a home, there can be no justification for the wife's going out into the world to work. She should have her mind and time employed, it is true, but the duties of the home, the natural occupation for them, should be hers, and not the labor of assisting to earn money or the plague of living idly in a boarding house. Either life is unnatural, unhealthy and a bar to content.

When the husband is stricken by illness or other misfortune, it is then noble and self-sacrificing for the wife, if she can, to get out and earn a living for both. Otherwise, it is his duty to support her and hers to make a pleasant home for him. She can do more useful work and work far more prolific in happiness to both by contenting herself with home duties than she can by seeking employment outside the home, even if her earnings add considerably to the income of the family.

Women who wish to avoid home-making, with all the pleasant possibilities that includes, should avoid marriage. Married life without a home is a strange anomaly that is seldom productive of happiness. The man that will force his wife to earn money when his earnings should suffice is unspeakably wrong. The man who resists his wife's desire to work for wages is right. While tragedy will not often grow out of such unnatural conditions, as it did in the Philadelphia case, discontent and unhappiness are sure to come, and come to stay.

A POSSIBLE BOON.

And now comes a story from the laboratory of a great inventor that leaves us poised between hope and fear—between a hope that it is all true and in good faith and a fear that it is partly a joke.

A visitor was looking over the laboratory of Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor. His eye was caught by a curious model. It looked like a cradle with some sort of a telephone attachment.

"What on earth is that?" demanded the visitor.

"I hope to make my fortune out of that invention," replied the wizard. "It is a motor to run by sound. You attach it to a cradle and the louder the baby cries the faster the cradle rocks."

Was he joking, or did he mean it? Clearly the visitor was not quite sure, because he left the issue in doubt in the minds of those who heard his story. If it is true, and his success is as great as it has been with many other important things he has set out upon, what a boon and a blessing it will be! Think of attaching it to the baby's cradle in the evening, and then turning in sure of a sound night's rest. If the baby wakes up and cries, as the habit of many babies is, it sets the cradle to rocking furiously, and presently the baby is rocked to sleep again. Meanwhile you have slept in peace, or if you have been awakened you remain quiet, knowing that the new invention will put the child to sleep again quicker and better than you could do it yourself.

But surely that would not be the end of its possibilities. A motor run by sound! How pregnant with possibilities! What is the matter with attaching it to the halls of congress, and by a system of transmission of power digging the Panama canal with the oratory unloosened in the legislative halls?

Attach one of them to each of the courtrooms, and the power generated by the lawyers' voices would operate a factory across the street.

Have one of them in the room when your wife proceeds to address you upon the inexhaustible subject of your shortcomings, and it will run the automatic dishwasher in the kitchen, operate the mangle in the laundry, split the kindlings in the basement or light the house from a private dynamo.

Put one of them on the fog whistle in the spring, and it will provide the power for the operation of the ferry bridge, if it is running by that time.

During campaigns the stump speaker could be made a creature of real use. By carrying a sound-motor with him he could rent out power enough to pay his traveling expenses and his salary. He could coin his glowing periods into cash, and make board money out of his soaring flights into the empyrean.

Its possibilities are enormous, unlimited, epoch-creating. It would revolutionize society and industry. Let's hope the wizard will be successful in perfecting this most momentous invention.

JEWS, NOT JEWELS.

Historical iconoclasts keep busily hammering away at popular idols, and no popular tale of history is too sacred to be safe from their attacks.

The latest story to be assailed is that popular one of Queen Isabella and her jewels which were said to have furnished the funds for that momentous voyage of Christopher Columbus which resulted in the discovery of America. The story ran that Ferdinand and Isabella were greatly interested in the theories and hopes of Columbus, but that the royal treasury was a little short of funds, and there was no way short of magic by which money enough could be coaxed out of it to outfit the little fleet which Columbus proposed to take with him in his search for China. So the queen sold her jewels and devoted the proceeds to getting the navigator started into the unknown West.

Historians now say that this is a pleasant little fable, but that there is absolutely no truth in it. Isabella, whose noble sacrifice has been best understood by women with a love for jewels, has been through all these centuries wearing laurels that did not belong to her.

Dr. Madison C. Peters, in his book "The Jews in America," says that "not jewels but Jews were the real financial basis of the first expedition of Columbus." He shows that two Marranos, or secret Jews, Luis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanches, the former the chancellor of the royal household and comptroller general in Aragon, the latter chief treasurer of Aragon, enormously rich merchants who enjoyed the favor of Ferdinand and Isabella, supplied the funds needed to fit out Columbus' caravels. Isabella did not sell her jewels, for the very good reason that she had none, having already pawned or sold them to defray the expenses of the wars then devasting the country. In the account book of Luis de Santangel and the treasurer, Francisco Pinelo, extending from 1491 to 1493, Santangel is credited with an item of 1,400,000 maravedis, which he gave to the bishop of Avila for Columbus' expedition.

The historical proof appears to be ample. There is no truth in the jewel story. Ferdinand and Isabella deserve credit for having helped discover us, but solely because they gave the favor of their countenance to the plans of Columbus. It was not jewels but Jews that furnished the money and made his voyage possible.

ROYAL Baking Powder

A Grape Cream of Tartar Powder
Absolutely Pure

Royal makes the most delicious and healthful hot-breads, biscuit and cake.

For safety sake, use only a baking powder whose label shows it is made with cream of tartar.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Alum baking powders are considered so injurious to health, and their promiscuous sale a source of such danger, that their use is universally condemned by physicians and health officers. In many States the law requires that they shall be branded to warn consumers that they contain alum.

In the District of Columbia, under the laws of Congress, the use of alum in bread, biscuit, cake and other food is a misdemeanor.

Alum baking powders may be known by their price. Powders sold from ten to twenty-five cents a pound, or twenty-five ounces for twenty-five cents, are not made of cream of tartar.

THE WEATHER

This was a day calculated to arouse people to enthusiasm in their descriptions of its beauties, and to exhaust their vocabularies of most of the adjectives fitting the situation. It was clear, bright, brilliant, mild, bracing and altogether delightful. Not a cloud specked the sky this morning, and not a blemish was there upon the perfection of this glorious winter day. The lowest temperature last night was 26 degrees above, and the highest yesterday was 38 degrees. The fair weather should continue tonight and tomorrow, according to the weather man, but it will be cooler tonight, when the temperature should get down to about 15 degrees above. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"No very decided atmospheric disturbances are apparent. An area of high barometric pressure continues about stationary over Wyoming, with slight depressions off the southern California and Virginia coasts, the Wyoming high pressure causing colder weather in Montana and the Western Dakotas. The Virginia coast disturbance has caused some rain or snow in South Atlantic states. Temperatures are generally quite moderate for the season of the year. Conditions favor a continuance of good weather tonight and Sunday, attended by a little lower temperature tonight."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: There would be no end to arguing if everybody was wrong.

The best way to make people like you is to make them think they make you like them.

Maybe women could know a lot more than they do, but they wouldn't have half as good a time.

When a woman says her husband has a fine disposition she means he doesn't want her to discharge the cook because his pipe won't draw.

The way a girl lets her lips get so close to a man's she must think he is one of those heroes in a novel who never does a thing just because it's the thing he wants to do.

Some Good Advice.

Chicago Tribune: Shut your mouth and open your eyes and soon you will be considered wise.

TART TRIFLES.

Cleveland Leader: Drowning Lady—Throw me a life belt, quick!

Polite Clerk—Certainly, madame. What is your waist measure, please?"

New York Sun: Knicker—So Jones holds two hero medals. What was the second one for?

Bocker—Accepting the first.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "When Benjamin Franklin was young he made tallow candles."

"But he reformed, of course."

"Reformed from what?"

"From his wick-ed ways."

Philadelphia Press: "This confinement," said the long-faced prison visitor, "must distress you greatly."

"Yes," replied the facetious convict, "I find the prison bars grating."

"Ah! life to you is a failure."

"Yes, it's nothing but a cell."

Brooklyn Life: Briggs—Bilter's daughter did very well in literature, didn't she?"

Griggs—Yes, indeed. I understand that she made money enough on her first novel to get herself an education.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Weary Wanderer—I see they're goin' in fer free alcohol fer th' arts an' sciences.

Limpy Lucas—That settles it. I'm goin' to be an artist.

Yonkers Statesman: He—I must be going.

She—But what's your hurry?

"I understand your father wears heavy boots."

"That is so; but you are the second caller I have had this evening, and you know father is not strong enough to eject two men in one night."

Chicago Tribune: "Rivers," said Brooks, "shall we pull straws to see which of us takes this upper berth?"

"No, Brooks," responded Rivers, crawling into the lower one. "That wouldn't be fair to you. The upper berth is yours by natural right. 'B' is higher up in the alphabet than 'R.'"

Chicago Tribune: Mrs. Chugwater—Josiah, what is a "surrender value" in life insurance?

Mr. Chugwater—It's the value of the stuff you surrender to the company for the officers to get rich on.

Washington Star: "Isn't this hazing something dreadful?"

"Well," said Farmer Corntossel, "you must consider that the boy that's at school standin' on his head or doin' exercises to expand his chest ain't plowin' eleven miles a day in the hot sun, nor gettin' blisters on his hands with a scythe."

Doc's Advice.

The doctor tells me I should be
More careful of my diet.
That I should shun excitement and Seek harmony and quiet;
He says unless I exercise
I'll get to be a chronic—
And I must throw away such things
As Buildem's pills and tonic.

He says I ought to rise at six
And walk a mile or two,
Then punch the bag and lift the weights
Till I am tired through;
Then after breakfast I may work
For, say, about an hour,
And after that repose and rest,
Recuperating power.

After luncheon I may go
And take an easy walk,
Or find some good congenial soul
With whom to have a talk;
And then, if careful, I may go
And work a trifle more—
But not too much—some easy task,
That will not make me sore.

At six I dine, then rest again;
When ready to retire,
He says to swing the clubs until
My arms begin to tire.
I'd like to follow Doc's advice,
But I can't see my way,
For how the deuce can I find time
In which to earn my pay?

Some Rules of Success.

Marshall Field: Never give a note. Never borrow. Never buy stocks on margin. Never place a mortgage. Concentrate on your work.

A Handicap.

Washington Post: It would be easier for most of us to like the new president of France if he did not bear such a striking facial and whisker resemblance to Governor Pennypacker.

Saturday Night Talk

Self-Reliance Versus Reliance on Another.

The amazing haste of many persons to enlist the sympathy and support of President Roosevelt in their respective undertakings, is one of the striking phenomena of recent days. If any set of men are in trouble, or have a grievance, or want to secure some special legislation, off they rush to Washington, in the expectation that the man who settled the strife between Russia and Japan will be able to apply his magic wand to any disturbed situation, and evoke order and peace. Candidates for office even for that of village constable are sure they stand a better chance if it can be whispered about that President Roosevelt privately hopes that they will win. And the most amusing recent development of this sort is the report that in a pending political contest in Great Britian, one aspirant for a seat in parliament claims that he is a man after Roosevelt's own heart, and that the principles of his party are indorsed by the American president.

All this must be very gratifying to Mr. Roosevelt, unless it is carried so far as to become wearisome. No doubt he is asked by persons impatient with the present social order to do a thousand things that would take him far beyond the limits of his constitutional authority. Moreover, even his fund of energy and persistence, is probably not exhaustless. Yet it is signified that in these days of rampant democracy, when the masses are being educated and elevated to be their own masters and guides, there should, nevertheless, be this almost unparalleled confidence in one man. It shows that the individual is still to play an important role in shaping the destinies of mankind, and that the heart of the people will ever yearn for the right sort of leadership. The man of vision, the man of nerve, the man of power will ever command the admiration, and arouse the enthusiasm of the populace. And if to great mental endowments be joined probity of character, and a genuine devotion to the public weal, he often becomes the hero of a nation or of the entire world.

But getting a great man on your side is not the same as getting on the side of a great man. Almost anyone might be glad to link with his own designs the name and endorsement of a trusted and powerful leader, but to ride into office on his reputation, without being heart and soul committed to his ideals, is despicable. The first thing for every worthy citizen to do is to get on his side in just the measure that he represents decency and the square deal. And when you come to take the right stand on those issues, you are relying not so much on an individual, noble as he may be, as you are on all the forces in this universe that make for righteousness. You are in league with the saints and heroes of all the ages. You are on the side of God himself.

And pushing the thought a little further you are thrown back upon yourself in a very wholesome fashion, for we are all too much inclined to lie down on stronger personalities in our homes and communities, or to wait for society in general to do the things for us that it was never meant to do, that we ought to be ashamed to ask anybody or any institution to do for us.

He who has fully committed himself to right courses of action does not need to hasten feverishly after some renowned leader, and implore his assistance. With Rhoderick Dhu, he can say:

"Come one, come all, this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

And the truly self-reliant man is a God-reliant man also.

THE PARSON.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken from the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1886.

J. E. Zeublin, general superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company, reached St. Paul yesterday afternoon for the purpose of entering into negotiations with a view to securing franchises in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, which will enable his company to extend its system to the Northwest.

The standing committees of the board of trade for the ensuing year have been announced as follows: Finance, Messrs. Spencer, Hooker and Adams; judiciary, Messrs. Munger, Hooker and Davis; rooms, Messrs. Van Brunt, Ferguson and McLeod; telegraph, Messrs. Fargusson, Van Brunt and Clarkson; transportation, Messrs. Adams, Spencer and McLeod; harbor, Messrs. Davis, Adams and Clarkson.

A wagon bridge from Connor's to Rice's Point is badly needed, and if arrangements can be made with the Omaha road to build one, both Duluth and Superior would be greatly benefited by it.

At the meeting of the village council last night, James Sullivan was granted a fireman's exempt certificate. The Superior Short Line railway question was discussed, and the matter was referred back to the committee, which was increased to five. The committee now consists of Alderman Kendall, Truelsen, Davis, Bunnell and Daugherty.

The snowshoe and toboggan movement goes on prosperously. Last evening Capt. Boggs drilled the snowshoe club at the Parlor rink. Most of the members have had military training and were quite expert at marching in twos or fours as well as in other evolutions. Among the members present last night were Capt. Boggs, Col. Graves, Messrs. Moore, Flynn, Myers, Marble, Weiss, Reynolds, Poirier, Gruber, Terry, Sinclair, Sharp, McLachlin, Johnson and Frank Burke. After the drill the members conferred regarding the progress of the club and the St. Paul arrangements.

The Ladies' Library association have in preparation an entertainment to be given at the Grand Opera house. It is called the "Cradle Songs of All Nations." Songs of babyhood will be rendered by Duluth ladies in costume. The German, French, Italian, Spanish, Swedish, Norwegian, Indian, Chinese, Arabian and other nations will be represented. An infant will be introduced into each scene.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Minnesota might be able to get some pointers on the drainage question from Missouri," said M. A. Shephard of Kansas City at the Lenox. "An important work, the reclamation of so-called swamp lands, is being carried on in Southwestern Missouri. Conditions down there are not unlike those existing in Northern Minnesota, if I rightly understand the situation. A considerable part of these lands are covered with a dense growth of valuable timber, and the soil is so thoroughly saturated with moisture that each succeeding rain leaves it covered with several inches of water.

"In the progress of clearing these lands of timber, in order to convert them into farms, as rich and productive as any in the state, it was found necessary to dig trenches at intervals to drain off the surplus water. This process gradually grew, until finally it has developed, in Stoddard county, into the construction of what is virtually one long drainage canal, extending from the north to the lower lands of the southern section. In the county directly to the south, however, complaint has been made by the people living there that all this superfluous water has been dumped on their lands, causing an extra heavy inundation. But as there appeared to be no remedy, the residents of the county concluded to adopt similar methods, and now plans have been made and contracts let to drain the entire inundated section of the country, and dump the surplus water into the St. Francis river.

"This drainage canal, when completed, will be more than forty miles in length, average sixty feet in width, and will be from eight to ten feet deep. In the timbered sections a clearing 100 feet in width is made. The excavating is done by means of a floating dredge, and the work is now progressing at the rate of one mile to the canal for each month's labor.

"As the construction proceeds, thousands of acres of timbered lands on either side of the canal are being cleared and converted into farms. The cost of the work is estimated at from $2 to $3 an acre, in some cases as high as $3.50, and is assessed pro rata as a tax on the property owners whose lands are directly or indirectly benefited. I don't know as the same system would work out in Northern Minnesota, on account of their being so much waste and government land up here. The timber lands now being drained in Missouri are held at from $6 to $15 an acre, while cleared lands adjoining them bring as high as $50 an acre."

"I am interested in a pecan farm down in Texas," said H. E. Crowley of Minneapolis at the St. Louis. "Brown county, Texas, probably produces more pecans than any other county in the United States, but this production is only a fraction of the quantity which it will produce when the immense profit from the cultivation of pecans is more widely known and appreciated.

"In seasons when the yield is especially good they ship from ninety to 100 car loads from the town of Brownwood. A carload will average 20,000 pounds, and as 6 cents a pound is an ordinary price, ninety carloads would bring to Brown county $108,000. At least that is the profits as they figure out on paper. They always look better on paper than they do anywhere else. I am not saying that they are not all O. K. in this case, for I believe they are, or nearly so. My interest down there is so comparatively recent that I haven't hardly had time to find out for myself whether I am going to get rich or not out of growing the nuts I have high hopes, however.

"They tell me that during no season within the last ten years has Brownwood shipped less than twenty-five carloads of pecans. The largest pecan orchard in the world is only two miles from Brownwood. It is the property of the Swinden Pecan Orchard company. The pecan orchard itself is only a part of an immense farm, which comprises 1,280 acres of land. There are about 400 acres in pecans, and 11,000 trees, if my memory serves me right. They yield from one to five bushels to the trees, and pecans sell from $3 to $4 a bushel, so you see a man's chances for making money at the business are quite good. On this basis, an acre of land in pecans will yield an average of $440, more paper profits which I intend to prove for myself in the course of a year or two.

"These pecans are cultivated. Sprouts from trees which yield the best nuts are grafted on trees which do not yield so good a nut, and in this way the whole crop is made uniform and what is called a commercial pecan is produced. By grafting, trees are brought into bearing when six years of age. Not all the trees in the big orchard of which I speak are in bearing. A sort of a combination deal is worked on the farm. On the same land with the trees from four to six tons of alfalfa are cut from an acre of ground every year, and hundreds of heads of hogs are pastured on the alfalfa growing in the orchard, so that the land not only grows pecans and alfalfa, but at the same time puts fat on hogs."

"If you want to do me a favor," said the man in the box office of the Lyceum theater, "please tell the people that 'Liberty Belles,' the attraction at the Lyceum Monday and Tuesday, is not a burlesque show. It is a comic opera, and we have reason to believe that it is a pretty good one. The name has such a burlesque sound to it that we are kept busy all day answering telephone calls from people who want to know whether it is burlesque or something else."

Carried Papa's Bottles.

Detroit Free Press: A little 8-year-old maid who is the joy and brightness of the home of a well known West side druggist innocently perpetrated a joke upon papa recently that, while it embarrassed the family for the time being, was too good to be kept secret, and he told it himself the other day to a visitor who dropped into his store.

It all came of the habit they have acquired in certain churches of having the Sunday school children earn the pennies that they give for missionary work, and the druggist's little girl came to Sunday school with her special collection and very happy.

In due time the collection was taken by the teacher of little bright eyes' class and first one scholar and then another told how they had earned their contributions.

"And how did this little girl earn her 5 cents?" inquired the teacher, beaming on the child.

"Oh, just as easy as could be," replied the little miss. "I earned it carrying beer bottles down cellar for papa."

The Good Pope.

The Watchman: Plus X. continues to make it evident that he proposes to pursue a policy of conciliation in shaping the attitude of the Roman Catholic church toward peoples and governments. In the very difficult position in which the church is placed in France by the abolition of the Concordat, and against the advice of some of the French cardinals, he commands the devising of measures which will avoid further complications with the French government. The same policy is indicated by the act of the organ of the Vatican in urging Roman Catholics in Italy to register and take an active part in the elections. The attitude of sullen aloofness to political matters in Italy which has been the policy of the head of the Roman church in the past is not to prevail under the present pope. In the same direction also is the advice of the Roman authorities to give laymen in Roman Catholic parishes in the United States a majority on boards of trustees. Hitherto the power of administering the church properties has been in the hands of the priests in charge. The new directions will give the people who erect the buildings and pay the expenses a controlling voice in the management. This conciliatory and reasonable attitude of the head of the Roman church will have a powerful effect in promoting peaceful and happy conditions throughout the world. There may have been pontiffs of greater intellectual ability at the head of the Roman church, but as far as outsiders are able to judge there has never been in all the history a pope of greater piety, sweetness of character and good sense.

Carey, the Kill-Joy.

If ye lver see Timothy Carey
Jisht trust to the speed o' yer heels,
Take warnin' from Mahachy Cleary—
That's me, an' I know how it feels.
If ye're blnt on revivin' yer nature
Wid innocent pleasure, me boy,
Get out o' the way o' this craythure—
His thrade is the killin' o' joy.

Now, wan day whin I sat at me dinner,
Wid hunger enough an' to spare,
In walks this same gloomy ould sinner
An' leans on the back o' me chair.
"Come an' jine me," says I; "I'd be hatin'
Mesel' fur the glutton I am
To deny ye this taste o' good atin'—
'Tis luscious biled cabbage an' ham!"

"Man alive! are ye crazy," says Carey,
An' frowns in his soberest way,
"Shure, an' have ye forgot, Mr. Cleary,
That this is a fasht-day, th'-day?"
Ah! wid that the ould joy-killin' sinner
Jisht turned on his heel an' wint out,
An' he left me me illigant dinner
Like ashes, stone cowld, in me mout'.

'Twas a sin o' me, bein' forgetful;
I should have remimbered the day,
But I couldn't help feelin' regretful
To see me feast fadin' away.
For 'twas not for me sowl's sake that Carey
Shpoke up, but 'twas jisht to annoy;
'Tis his nature that's mane an' contrary—
His thrade is the killin' o' joy.

Mark Twain on A. Ward.

Mark Twain's story about Artemus Ward is one of the funniest yarns. One day when Artemus Ward was traveling a man approached him in the train, sat down, and said:

"Did you hear the last thing on Horace Greeley?"

"Greeley? Greeley?" said Artemus; "Horace Greeley? Who is he?"

The man was quiet about five minutes. Pretty soon he said:

"George Francis Train is kicking up a good deal of row over in England. Do you think they will put him in a hastile?"

"Train? Train? George Francis Train?" said Artemus, solemnly. "I never heard of him."

This ignorance kept the man quiet fifteen minutes. Then he said:

"What do you think about Gen. Grant's chances for the presidency? Do you think they will run him?"

"Grant? Grant? Hang it, man," said Ward, "you appear to know more strangers than any man I ever saw."

The man was furious. He walked off, but at last came back and said:

"You confounded ignoramus, did you ever hear of Adam?"

Artemus looked up and said: "Adam? What was his other name?"

Highways and Byways of The Town.

Dora Snow was madly in love with Otto Thell, but even wise little Cupid could not succeed in blinding her eyes to the fact that Otto entertained no particular regard for her, and that her chances of winning out were not very good. This worried her a lot. When a girl is worried, or when she is in love, her first move, according to all the best authorities, is to go straightway to the dearest friend she has in the world and pour out her heart's woes to her.

Miss Snow, being both worried and in love, had double reason for making a confident of Nellie Heathaway, who, as Dora often found occasion to remark, was the sweetest thing in petticoats that ever walked Superior street. Those were not her words exactly, but the sum and substance of what she said in this connection amounted to the same thing, so they will answer the purpose nicely.

This being true, Nellie was told the circumstances of the case, and she proved to be a sympathetic listener. She frequently interrupted the one-sided conversation by saying, "You poor thing," "Yes, indeed," "Of course he is," "But you never can tell, you know," "You bet I will," "He certainly is handsome," etc.

"You will help me, then?" inquired the hopeful but disconsolate Dora of her dearest friend.

"I'll do just everything I can. You

"I intend to get Otto to propose to me."

do as I say and you'll have your apron strings around his neck before he knows where he is at." So spoke Miss Nellie, amateur matchmaker.

"Oh, do you really think so?" Miss Snow's eyes already sparkled with the light of conquest.

"No doubt about it at all," said Nellie.

"But I don't hardly see how you can do it; everybody knows Otto likes you a good deal better than he does me, and it is even said you could have him without half trying. I knew you didn't care a rap about him or I wouldn't have said anything about it."

"That's just it. My whole plan will work out on the supposition that he would marry me if he got the chance."

"I can't see just how you are going to do it," said Dora, a cloud of doubt darkening her pretty brow. "Why couldn't he have been taken with me in the first place, instead of you. That's just the way, though, the man you want you can't get, and the ones you don't want fairly tumble over themselves to find favor in your eyes. Why is it?"

"Merely this: In spite of all the good advice book writers have given on the subject, the average girl doesn't know enough to appear indifferent with the man whose attentions she really wants, while her indifference toward the others act as a magnet to draw them on. That's the trouble with you. You have shown your fondness for Otto, and it isn't in the nature of man to want anything he can get easily. See?"

"Perhaps you are right."

"Of course I'm right. Now, what I intend to do is to get Otto to propose to me."

"The very idea, you shall do nothing of the kind."

"So? Wait and see. Let me finish telling you about my plan before you offer objections."

"I've been so free in this that you've got to treat me fairly."

"Don't be a goose. Getting him to propose to me will be only a step toward getting him to propose to you."

"But I don't understand."

"I know it; that's why I want you to keep still a minute. He will ask me to marry him and I shall refuse, gently but firmly. He will be disappointed, very much so, or think he is, which amounts to the same thing. He is an excitable youth, and may even threaten suicide. Still, I don't believe he is that big a fool."

"He is just grand, and perfectly fine."

"I know, but even that kind are usually a little put out when the lady of their choice gives them the cold turndown."

"But he will pack up his things and get out of town right away and I may never see him or hear of him again. They always do that."

"Really, Dora, you make me tired. They do no such thing, outside of books. I haven't anything against Otto, and it may sound mean to say it, but he knows well enough that he is making about $50 a month more here than he would be anywhere else, without working a year or two at low wages first, and he is just fool enough to value that $600 a year extra more than the satisfaction he would get out of living up to all the standards set by disappointed lovers in the past in the minds of the romancer by leaving town and starting anew somewhere else. Sordid, isn't it? Just wait and see if I'm not right. He may figure for a day or two on leaving, but by the time his affairs are straightened out the practical side will appeal to him stronger than the other, or I miss my guess."

"Nellie, I believe you're actually conceited, thinking you know so much. However, granting what you say is true, what then?"

"He'll stick, at least until he has more cash on hand than is generally reputed he has at present. And while he is sticking he will get to thinking the matter over. It will make him sore to think that he has been turned down that way. He will imagine me feeling highly but sympathetically delighted over the situation, and will paint me in his mind as telling myself that he can love me and no other, and that he will never marry unless I consent to be the birdie in his nest.

"While figuring I feel sorry for him, he will conclude there is a certain pleasure in that sorrow, which is undoubtedly the case nine times out of ten. At first, if his love is really strong enough, he will get the joy of a martyr in allowing me the pleasure of thinking myself of enough importance in the world to chuck a man into the slough of despond for an indefinite period, until his clothes become so thoroughly soaked with the unpalateable water that it will take him a long time to appear his usual self before the world again.

"This will be well enough for a little while, maybe not more than a few hours, and maybe for several days, or possibly weeks, and then he will have a change of feeling. He will begin to realize that possibly he is making a fool of himself. From that it's only a short stage until he will become angry at the thought that I am getting a lot of fun out of the thing while he is miserable. This will strike him as being unfair and unreasonable, and he will decide to reverse the order, and put me on the unhappy list, while he will, to all appearances, be having the time of his life.

"Oh, yes, I forgot. Before all this happens he will be dissipating just dreadfully, knowing that is what is expected of him under the circumstances, and never for a moment thinking of violating an old, established rule. He will smoke and drink and gamble, and, when the turning point I have mentioned is reached, he will take up with some other girl, and appear in public with her where he thinks I will be. You can see why, can't you? Of course. He will push the case as fast as he can and marry the other girl just as quick as she will consent, and then he will send me one of the wedding cards. I think it's beautifully simple."

"It sounds reasonable, only I don't see where you learned so much about men. Are you sure you know what you are talking about?"

"Don't throw cold water on the thing right at the start. Of course I know. It might not work out in all cases, but I'm sure it will in this."

"But where do I come in?"

"That's the simplest part of it. You will be the girl selected. That's only natural, for you, besides being the first that will come into his mind in the hour of need, are my dearest friend, and he will lavish favors upon you, before and after mariage, just to make me repentant and possibly jealous."

"Nell, that's a delightfully lovely scheme. When shall we begin?"

"Right away." And they did.

Otto Thell was a tall, well-built, handsome chap, always well dressed and an interesting talker. His hair was brown and wavy, and his eyes were blue and twinkling. He had a frank, open face that attracted strangers to him right away. He appeared to be fond of the society of girls, and from the first had been strongly attracted by the pretty face and charming manner of Miss Nellie Heathaway, but she had not appeared to encourage him in the least. Now, however, the situation was changed, and it wasn't long before she was seen quite often in public with him. So apparent did the supposed attachment become that friends of the couple began to comment on it, and it was universally agreed that the match would be a highly suitable one. Particularly was this true so far as appearances went. It would have been hard to find a handsomer couple. Things ran along nicely in this fashion for several weeks, and Nellie occasionally had encouraging reports for the ears of her impatient friend.

"It seems to me you are taking altogether too long about it," complained Miss Snow one day.

"You don't expect a girl to make a man propose to her in a month's time, do you?" retorted Miss Heathaway with a certain warmth of tone.

"It has been done, lots of times, and then he was dead gone on you to begin with. Everybody could see that."

"If it's so easy, why didn't you do it yourself?"

"Come now, don't let's quarrel. I probably am unreasonable, but you can imagine my feelings."

"Now you are talking sense. Anyway, I don't think it will be more than a few more days before he proposes. He has reached the confessional stage. When a man begins to get sentimental he yearns to tell a girl about his past life, and the more naughty things there are to hint at the better he likes it. He confesses his own sins to her, and when he begins on those of his friends you know you have him cinched." The question will pop at the first favorable opportunity."

One Sunday afternoon two weeks after this conversation Miss Snow rushed with frantic haste to the home of her friend.

"Oh, Nellie," she grasped, too excited to even remember the usual preliminary kiss. "Have you read the morning paper?"

"No, nor I don't want to. It's an awful bother," said Nellie, and if she hadn't been so excited Dora would certainly have noticed something strange about her manner. She wasn't as effusive as usual, and there was something rather cold and distant about her. Her eyes had a feverish gleam in them, as if she had reached an exciting period, and didn't know exactly how the situation would develop.

"Newspapers generally are a bore," Dora rattled on, "but brother Ned called my attention to this. It's just the greatest piece of news. You never in the world would guess what."

"I don't want to try. Are you crazy?" Stop dancing around that way and sit down a minute. I have something I want to tell you. It's of greater importance to both of us than anything you could see in the paper."

"But this is about—"

"Never mind what it is about. I am sure you will be more interested in what I have to say than I would be in anything the paper has in it."

"Nellie, you don't mean to tell me that he has proposed?" said Miss Snow in horrified accents.

"Just that exactly." Miss Heathaway said this quietly, appearing as calm and undisturbed before her friend's excitement as a bowl of milk.

"The brute! The great, big ugly brute!" ejaculated Miss Snow collapsing in the depths of a big arm chair, and staring in a helpless, startled fashion at Nellie.

"I hope you will forgive me, Dora," said the latter, trying to speak in a sympathetic yet appealing tone of voice, "and that you will not suffer too much. What I want to say is that I accepted him. We are to be married next spring. I could not help it, Dora, he was so ——."

"You accepted him!" Horror and disgust were stamped on every line of Miss Snow's frightened countenance.

"Yes, dear. I didn't know until the very last that I loved him. It was too much for you to ask me to give him up after ——."

"But, Nellie, he is married—has been married twice—and both his wives are living, and he hasn't been divorced from either."

"Dora, you are crazy; you don't know what you are saying!"

"But I do; the paper tells all about it. That is the news I was going to tell you. A sheriff from Pennsylvania arrested him last night and started East with him today. He has confessed. Here is a full account of the affair, with his photograph. One wife lives in Philadelphia and the other in Trenton, N. J. He is a bigamist."

It took eight minutes for Dora and the house maid to bring Miss Heathaway out of her faint, but, fortunately enough, the services of the doctor were unnecessary.

COAL PRODUCTION OF UNITED STATES

In Last Year Showed an Increase of 15,163,966 Tons.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—The Black Diamond, the leading coal trade paper of the United States, today publishes statistics of the coal production of the country for the year 1905, showing that the total output was 367,474,393 tons, as compared with 352,310,427 tons in 1904, an increase of 15,163,966 tons. The probable tonnage capacity of the United States at this time is very close to 400,000,000 tons of coal, but, owing to the prolonged car shortage during October and November of last year, the output was materially reduced in practically every state.

Tht four states showing the greatest increase in production during the past year, in the order of their rank, were Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Colorado and Illinois. Many of the older producing states show a slight decrease, due to the interruption by the car shortage referred to. The table of statistics showing the production in 1904, compiled by the United States government, as compared with 1905, is as follows:

State.	1904. Short Tons.	1905. Short Tons.
Alabama	11,262,046	12,000,100
Arkansas	2,009,451	2,401,000
California and Alaska	79,582	85,791
Colorado	6,658,355	8,995,214
Georgia and North Carolina	390,191	385,600
Idaho	3,480	4,000
Illinois	36,475,069	37,183,374
Indiana	10,934,379	10,000,000
Indian Territory	2,046,539	2,850,546
Iowa	6,519,533	6,617,821
Kansas	6,333,307	6,301,917
Kentucky	7,596,482	7,598,000
Maryland	4,843,622	4,727,105
Michigan	1,282,840	901,000
Missouri	4,168,308	5,000,000
Montana	1,358,919	982,000
New Mexico	1,472,325	1,576,000
North Dakota	260,128	254,100
Ohio	24,434,812	18,000,000
Oregon	111,540	115,000
Pennsylvania	97,962,297	107,960,000
Tennessee	4,782,211	4,300,000
Texas	1,193,944	1,110,000
Utah	1,180,027	1,500,000
Virginia	3,583,914	4,225,000
Washington	3,137,681	2,370,000
West Virginia	22,602,819	28,000,000
Wyoming	5,178,556	5,200,000
	279,153,718	290,562,538
Anthracite	73,156,709	77,911,855
	352,310,427	367,474,393

According to this table, anthracite production shows an increase of practically 4,500,000 tons, haing been the heaviest in the history of the industry, exceeding 1903, when the production was 74,097,003 tons, by 3,304,787 tons.

PHYSICIANS RESPONSIBLE

For Growth of Cancer in Many Cases, Says Paper.

Vienna, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The leading medical paper in the German language, "Clinical Weekly," makes the astounding statement that the policy of delay and evasion practiced by many physicians is partly responsible for the growth of cancer.

The Weekly insists that cancer can be cured if the knife is resorted to at the proper moment, that is as long as the disease adheres to a certain spot—is "localized," as the technical expression has it. In a good many cases patients refuse to go under the knife until it is too late, says the Weekly, and if the doctor insists that advances the necessary arguments, that objection should be overcome. But doctors seem to prefer to dilly dally, to experiment in cases of cancer. This is sometimes done, no doubt, to make long bills for services, but again physicians often lack courage or proper insight into the disease.

"In view of this," says the Weekly, "we advise all sufferers from a non-healing sore to apply to a hospital or specialist, if their house physician does not advise the use of the knife. Those that follow our advice may probably save their lives."

APPENDICITIS

Is Said to be Caused by Cheap Cooking Utensils.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fact that so many high livers, habitually dining at first class hotels and restaurants, suffer from appendicitis, caused the medical authorities to make an investigation. It was found that, while the general cooking utensils in the high class hotels and restaurants are of the very best material, the spoons and forks used are not. The proprietors buy cheap spoons and forks, "as employes will not steal them," while they might be tempted to annex the better grade for home use. These forks and spoons are very light of weight, and particles of the dangerous metal easily come off, especially when used in hot pans or pots. These particles mix with the food and become a menace to the eater, as the cheap forks and spoons are made of tin, antimon, brass, lead, iron, nickel, or any kind of old material that will assimilate in the melting pots. Such metal particles are liable to cause deterioration in the intestines and bring on appendicitis. The worst feature of the case seems to be that utensils of the kind described cannot be prohibited by law.

HEMORRHAGES CURED

Mr. E. A. Karner's Life Wasn't Worth the Snuff of a Candle Until Cured of Consumption by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

"The Effect Was Like Magic. I Felt Better From the First Dose."

MR. E. A. KARNER, a Leading Citizen of St. Louis.

Like many a man and woman, Mr. Karner drifted into consumption through thinking he was too strong to doctor a mere cold. Only the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey savey his life. He says:

"Early last fall I caught cold, but being strong and rugged, had an idea I could wear it off. I kept getting worse all the time. The trouble went deeper into the throat and developd a bad case of catarrhal bronchitis. Medicine seemed to have no effect. The poison worked into my lungs, and by February the doctors gave me up to die of consumption. Hemorrhages impoverished my blood; I lost flesh and was completely prostrated.

"In despair I commenced taking Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. The effect was like magic. I felt better from the first dose. Hope crept into my heart, refreshing sleep came back, night sweats were not so frequent. I could take deep breaths with less pain, my digestion improved, and, thanks to your wonderful medicine, in six months I was completely cured; once more a strong, hearty, well-filled-out man, full of vim, vigor and ambition."—E. A. KARNER, 3523 N. 23d Street, St. Louis, Mo. July 19, 1904.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

DOES CURE ALL THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

It sweeps them clean out of the system and helps nature rebuild the weakened, wasted, broken down constitution. Mr. Karner tells the whole story, but we'll gladly send you free a booklet filled with photographs and voluntary letters from a few of the many thousands it has cured of consumption, pneumonia, pleurisy, grip, bronchitis, coughs, colds, indigestion, dyspepsia, malaria and low fevers. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey makes delicate women strong, sickly children well. It's the great promoter of health and old age; the sure preventitive of disease. Over 4,000,000 known cures in 59 years. No other medicine has such a record. You can get it at all druggists and grocers, and direct. Price $1 00 a bottle. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

"Duffy's is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine. It is absolutely pure, contains no fusel oil, and is sold in bottle only; never in flask or bulk. You will know the genuine by the "Old Chemist" trade-mark on the label. See that the strap over the cork is unbroken. Refuse substitutes and imitations sometimes offered by dishonest dealers. They are harmful and will not cure you.

A NOVEL ASSOCIATION.

Society for "Ennoblizing the Human Race" Started in Paris.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A "Society for Ennoblizing the Human Race" has been incorporated, under the name of "Elite."

All members must submit to medical and intellectual investigation as to their physical and mental fitness, and a committee of physicians decides whether a couple is allowed to marry or not. Members must be able to show by their family tree that they are without hereditary stain. Their life must be blameless. They must be interested in all that is good and beautiful, and must have no small vices. The society intends to establish branches all over the country, and help suitable couples to get married. The children will be cared for, and young mothers will be aided in every way. Only good-looking members are admitted. The founders think their plan highly original, but a similar institution is flourishing somewhere in the Caucasus, a Russian nobleman having appropriated $1,000,000 for the purpose of "establishing beautiful and harmonious human beings."

GERMANY IN EGYPT.

British Authorities Alarmed by Increase of German Capital.

Cairo, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The English authorities view with alarm the increasing preponderance of German capital. The German-Greek Orient bank, with headquarters in Athens, has established branches in Alexandria and Cairo, and German commerce is greatly benefited, particularly as for some time the North German Lloyd handled the bulk of the passenger business on its Naples-Alexandria line. The Lloyd does not employ very fast boats but, according to public report, gives better service than the English, French, Italian and Austrian lines. This winter the Hamburg-American line is also taking large crowds over the same route, having established a very fast service between Berlin, Naples and Alexandria.

A Jamaican Lady Speaks Highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mrs. Michael Hart, wife of the superintendent of cart service at Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies Islands, says that she has for some years used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, croup and whooping cough, and has found it very beneficial. She has implicit confidence in it and would not be without a bottle of it in her home. Sold by all leading druggists.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK.

At this time of the year our main efforts are, of course, directed towards the disposal of what remains of winter wearables. Truly radical reductions make our offerings in all departments so attractive that dull seasons are unknown at the good Columbia store.

Nor does the weather interfere with our continued activity. Some new Hats and Shoes have already arrived. The first shipment of Spring Clothes from the Stein-Bloch wholesale tailors has left the shops and will shortly arrive in Duluth. Even as we write this the Office Boy sees three large cases of Columbia $1 Shirts out on the sidewalk, which have just been sent up from the railroad sheds.

COLUMBIA $3.00 HATS.

You must see and handle them to find out the difference. Just enough better than any other $3 hat, to be found worthy of the name "Columbia $3 Hat." Made by the same people who broke through the old $5 limit of hat quality and turn out those clear neutria hats, worth and sold for $6.00 at this store exclusively. New $6 Hats are here, too.

COLUMBIA $3.50 SHOES.

Easy to advertise, because no other store gives as much style and quality for $3.50. Every wearer of Columbia $3.50 Shoes does a lot of free advertising for us. It's an all-the-year-around bargain and one of the best examples of how The Columbia benefits the people by basing retail prices on quantity-selling.

MUTINY IS NOT YET SUBDUED

Soldiers and Sailors Are Standing by Guns at Vladivostok.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 27.—Beyond the fact that the revolt at Vladivostok is not subdued, and that the mutinous sailors and soldiers are still standing by the guns at the Holy Innocents barrery, the war office had nothing to give out today regarding the situation at the fortress. The only further news available was a newspaper dispatch dated Jan. 26, stating that two squadrons of the Nertchinsk regiment of Cossacks had arrived and that many arrests had been made. The war office officials said that their own information practically duplicated yesterday's news dispatch. From the absence of news it is concluded that Gen. Mode, who is temporarily in command of the troops is awaiting the arrival of Lieutenant General Mischenko, who is expected at Vladivostok today, before venturing on serious measures against the mutineers.

The securing of arms by the mutineers Jan. 22, was a sequel of a street fight in which a number of sailors of the Siberian contingent were killed.

The public takes only a languid interest in the latest mutiny. The papers today merely print the news, which had no effect on the bourse, without comment.

LETTERS FROM CARTER ARE READ TO THE COURT.

Savannah, Ga., Jan. 27.—The letters to and from Capt. Carter, written in 1891, and relating to New Jersey Central works and the building of sewers in Orange and New York were read upon the resumption of the Greene-Gaynor case today. At about this time Carter, it is alleged, was desirous of embarking in a cash register enterprise, and a letter from him to A. M. Newton, New York, was read. This was alleged to show connection between Greene and Gaynor and Carter and Newton. Particular stress was laid upon the fact that the stock certificate book of the Empire Construction company was found in the possession of Carter. This was the company that secured the Orange contract, and Carter's possession of the certificate book was taken as indicative to the association of the alleged conspirators.

A PERPETUAL INJUNCTION

Recommended to Prevent Brokers From Scalping Tickets.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Master in Chancery James S. Hopkins today filed a report with Judge C. C. Kohlsaat of the United States court in which he recommended that a perpetual injunction be issued enjoining a number of ticket brokers from scalping tickets belonging to the Pennsylvania railroad company. The master held that the ticket brokers of the country are organized into a number of associations which act in concert. He further held that in transferring non-transferrable tickets bearing signatures, the defendants made use of fraudulent devices, for the reason that when a customer purchases from a broker a signature, non-transferrable ticket they are directed by the broker to sign an easily written name.

The master held that in law, the injunction should be broad enough to cover all ticket brokers, and prevent them from engaging in the business.

ARREST EXPECTED

As the Outcome of the Trial Involving Town Topics.

New York, Jan. 27.—Expectation of an arrest based on the evidence brought out in the Town Topics case, which ended yesterday, was aroused today by a conference of Robert J. Collier, publisher of Collier's Weekly, and James W. Osborne, counsel for the editor of that publication, with Acting District Attorney Nott. As a result of the conference a warran was issued on a charge of perjury for the arrest of one of the persons who testified in the Hapgood trial and it is expected that an arrest will be made this afternoon.

WILL MAKE BOYS HAPPY

Second Educational Contest for The Herald Newsies.

Awards Will be Memberships in Boys' Y. M. C. A.

A Duluth man who is greatelq interested in boys and their welfare, and in the work of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., last year offerel five memberships in the association to Evening Herald newsboys who would show the best record in an educational and business way during a period extending over two months, January and February, 1905. The plan was so popular and met with such favor and success that the same benevolent Duluthian again offers five memberships under practically the same conditions this year. Instead of running two months, however, the contest will be on during February only. All contestants must have their names filed by the first of the month.

In the first contest there really were seven memberships offered, two being given by a second person. But this time there will be only the five. The man in question refuses to permit the publication of his name in connection with the affair. He is not after notoriety. The race for membership last year was known as an educational contest, and the boys who entered, to the number of seventy-two, were marked on their standing at school and their business ability as displayed in their dealings with The Herald.

West Duluth and West end boys are eligible. West end boys may register their names with Herman Olson and West Duluth boys with Andrew Dunn. The only condition is that every boy who desires to enter must have his name registered before the first day of February, and that he be between the agse of 12 and 18. The five awards will be made to the five boys who show the best standing at school during the month and best attention to business during the same period. The number of papers a boy sells will have nothing to do with his markings. His business markings will be on the manner in which he attends to selling his papers. For every day that he fails to show up for duty at The Herald building he will be marked off ten points. In case of a tie at the end of a month the winner will be determined by the percentage that can be given him for general conduct and penmanship.

The winners in the first contest were Ray Lavell, Adams school, age 12, standing 97; William Nielsen, high school, age 12, standing 96 3-5; Eddie Fisher, Whittier school, age 12, standing 96; Henry Jensen, Irving school, age 13, standing 95¾; Bert Smith, Jackson school, age 13, standing 94¾; Henry Anderson, Adams school, age 13, standing 94 1-5.

Secretary MacLeod of the boys' department says that these seven boys were among his best members during the past year. They were regular in attendance and their work was excellent in all ways. He is very well pleased with the showing made, and says such contests result in much good.

The boys take great interest in the contest. Last year they worked faithfully and hard, and nineteen boys who contested came out with standings over 90, which is a pretty good average.

LEAVES AFTER LONG SERVICE

Father Kosmerl Resigns Pastorate of German Catholic Church.

Rev. Father Kosmerl, pastor of St. Anthony's German Catholic church, has resigned after a service of more than fifteen years, and will preach his farewell sermon at high mass tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Within a few days, he will go to Rochester to submit to an operation, and afterward will spend several months in rest and recuperation, his health demanding it. He has not fully decided where to go, but may go to California or possibly to Europe.

Father Kosmerl has been pastor of the church since it was organized and is held in strong affection by the congregation. His appointment was made November 5, 1890, and the first meeting of the church was held December 27, 1890. It was incorporated March 4 following, and dedicated May. 10, 1891.

Last evening a large delegation of the male members of the parish called upon Father Kosmerl and presented him with a handsome gold watch, much to his surprise and delight. The secretary of the parish, A. Luellwitz, spoke in English and E. Fiebiger, one of the consulters of the parish, spoke in German, and Father Kosmerl responded to both. Following this the evening was passed very happily.

WILL GO TO SUPERIOR.

Catholic Foresters to Attend Installation Across the Bay.

The several courts of the Catholic Order of Foresters in this city will be represented at the public installation of Allouez court, Superior, next Tuesday evening. A committee of members representing the local courts has made arrangements for a chartered car, which will leave the West end at 7:30 p. m., and go as far as Third avenue east, leaving there fifteen minutes later. A large number of the Foresters and their friends will make the trip across the bay and join in the ceremonies.

This is always an important event in Forestry at the Head of the Lakes, and the Duluth courts annually attend it. The delegation will return in its own chartered car at the close of the evening's entertainment, which will follow the installation ceremonies.

Brick Company Sues to Recover $31 From Joseph Lepier.

The Enterprise Brick company has started suit in district court to recover $31.35, which it claims to have overpaid Joseph Lepier on a contract for cordwood. In its complaint the company alleges that it contracted with Lepier for a certain quantity of cordwood for $529.35, and claimed that the full amount was paid to the latter in installments on his representations of the quantity of cordwood he had delivered. The company alleges that after the wood was all delivered it was found that it amounted in value only to $498, and that Lepier, having received the full contract price, was overpaid, and that he refused to return the money.

Are You Becoming Light Wise?

The question of artificial light in your home is worthy of serious consideration.

Do you realize, fully, what electric service means in the household—all that it bestows in the direction of health, comfort, convenience, conservation of eyesight and the added "TONE" to your home?

Do yo care to have your home as convenient and comfortable for you and yours as you can make it?

Electric service is available to the smallest as well as the largest user, So cheap is the service at our rates that it can be afforded in the smallest homes. In fact, it is in the smaller home that the utility and economies of electricity are most readily appreciated—that such blessings to the housewife as electric flatirons, electric cooking utensils, electric hair curlers, the electric heating pad (taking the place of the obsolete hot-water bag) an electrically operated sewing machine, or any other of a hundred other devices, become recognized as indispensable adjuncts, and TIME, HEALTH and MONEY savers in the household.

George Williamson of Superior, and Arthur Rosine of the West, are to meet in a wrestling match at Columbia hall, Tuesday evening.

E. W. Nettleton, manager of the recent curling bonspiel, has recovered from the threatened attack of pneumonia and has returned home after spending a few days in St. Mary's hospital.

The general land office has affirmed the decision of the Duluth land office in favor of the contestant in the land case of Adam Snyder vs. John Imbertson. The land involved in the contest was the east half of the northeast quarter and the east half of the southeast quarter of 30-6-20.

Full citizenship papers have been issued in the United States court to Otto Anderson of Norway, George Zotalis of Greece and Michael Connell of Ireland.

DRAINING OFF WATER.

January Thaw Is Turning Superior Street Into a Miniature Lake.

Draining surface water off the streets is not a task that often falls to the lot of the board of public works in January, but a force of men had to be put at work this afternoon to prevent the sidewalks and crossings along Superior street being flooded.

A gang of workmen under the direction of the board is at work digging ditches and opening up sewer manholes to allow the water to escape. The mild weather is rapidly turning Superior street into a miniature lake and a few hours would make it impassable if some prompt action of this kind were not taken.

MAKE NO MOVE.

Employers Say Striking Boilermakers Must Take the Initiative.

The boilermakers' strike is still unchanged. One of the employers declared that if the strikers are waiting for them to go up to the strikers' hall to arbitrate, they will wait a long time. The employers declare that the union must send a committee to the bosses, and that the bosses will not consider the idea of sending a committee to the strikers.

The National Iron Works of West Duluth claims that it is not materially affected by the strike, and that it is handling its work just as well as it ever did.

AMENDMENT IS PASSED

Washington, Jan. 27.—By a vote of 120 to 108 the house today waived the eight-hour law for alien labor on the Panama canal. The provision is contained as an amendment in the urgent deficiency appropriation bill which was passed.

Nineteen Republicans voted against waiving the eight-hour law and one Democrat (Mr. De Armond) voted for it.

The Republicans voting against it were Allen (N. J.); Bennett (Ky.); Brooks (Colo.); Campbell (Kan.); Cooper (Wis.); Dale, Dickinson (Ill.); Edwards, Goebel, Greene, Hogg, McCall, McGavin, McLachlan, Michalek, Rodenberg, Smith, (Pa.); Stafford and Townsend.

By special order the house began to clear its pension calendar there being 262 private pension bills to be acted upon.

The entire 262 pension bills were disposed of in sixty-five minutes and after reading Mr. Mann's omnibus bridge bill making it unfinished business for Monday the house adjourned at 2:03 o'clock.

VOTING PRACTICALLY OVER IN ENGLAND.

London, Jan. 27.—The voting is practically over. Only ten contests remain to be decided. The totals now are: Liberals, 371; Unionists, 157; Irish Nationalists, 82; Laborites, 30.

Verdict Directed.

In United States court yesterday afternoon Judge Morris directed a verdict for the defendant in the personal injury suit of Lucy Sims as administratrix of the estate of William F. Sims against the Northern Pacific railway.

After the plaintiff's side of the case was presented the defendant moved for a direction of verdict, but this was denied. Then the defense put in its testimony yesterday afternoon and after doing so again moved for direction of verdict. This time the motion was granted.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 27.—David S. Baker, twice Democratic candidate for governor and one of the most prominent attorneys in the state, died today.

Constantinople, Jan. 27.—Karatheodory Pasha died this morning after a long illness. He was the last survivor of the Ottoman envoys to the Berlin congress.

NEARLY ASPHYXIATED.

St. Paul Family Has a Narrow Escape From Death.

St. Paul, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Barney Regan, weighmaster for the Western Weighing association, and his family, were nearly suffocated by coal gas at their residence in South Park last night. Mrs. Regan is still in a precarious condition as a result of the asphyxiation.

Regan was awakened by a violent headache at 2 o'clock this morning. He discovered that the house was full of gas. When he tried to arouse his wife, he found that she was unconscious.

Carrying her into the yard Regan returned for his children. He found both of them, Harold, 12 years old, and Charles, 15 years old, conscious, but unable to move. He carried them from the house and then called for Dr. Campbell. The boys were easily revived, but Mrs. Regan did not recover for a long time.

Is Known in Duluth.

The Chicago Record-Herald in discussing the will of Marshall Field as an index to his character, says:

"As interesting legacies as there are in the will reminiscent of the days when Marshall Field was a young man are the two gifts of $20,000 each to Elizabeth D. Davis and Mary Davis Rockwell of Pittsfield, Mass. These legatees are the daughters of Henry Davis of Pittsfield, the first employer of Marshall Field. The old Massachusetts merchant is long since dead and the legacy is accordingly left to his children."

Elizabeth D. Davis is well known to many Duluth people, having visited here at times with the family of Thomas Dowse, for many years a Duluth resident. The two women mentioned were nieces of Mr. Dowse and Mr. Dowse was a clerk in the same store with Marshall Field at one time.

PRINCESS ENA

To be Demanded of King Edward for Alfonso's Bride.

Madrid, Jan. 27.—The queen dowager left this city for San Sebastian today, accompanied by high court officials. It is said, in well informed quarters, that the Marquis De La Mina, the chief equerry, is going to London, in behalf of King Alfonso, to demand Kink Edward's consent to the marriage of the Spanish king to Princess Ena of Battenberg. King Alfonso is expected to return here on Tuesday.

DR. MITCHELL

Is Making New Cures Every Day. Read About Them.

The treatment that Dr. Mitchell gives is strengthening, mild in action, beneficial in results; tones up the stomach, liver, kidneys and nerves, and restores the wornout, depleted condition to vigorous health and strength.

Mrs. E. Kabel, of Brookston, Minn., writes: "I went to Dr. Mitchell completely broken down. The doctors wanted to operate for a tumor of the kidney. Dr. Mitchell's treatment worked wonders for me. The tumor has disappeared, my health is very good and I recommend Dr. Mitchell's treatment to any one suffering from disease."

Mrs. John Engstrom, from Two Harbors, Minn., whose little boy was perfectly helpless, called in medical assistance, but no benefit was derived, and the child became paralyzed. In this condition he was taken to Dr. Mitchell. To make the child sit up he would have to be strapped to a bed or plank, for he would settle all in a heap and his little head would fall over. He had no power to raise his head or move any part of his body. On the advise of a friend Mrs. Engstrom took the child to Dr. Mitchell and after a few treatments the results are wonderful. The child can hold its head up and stand.

Miss M. Hadlin, 101 Lincoln avenue, Duluth, has been suffering from rheumatism since she was seven years old and had tried many doctors, but received no benefit, but grew worse right along. She got so bad in her hands and feet she could not get around to do anything. Her brother advised her to go to Dr. Mitchell, as he had been cured of some sickness by him. She is now restored to health and recommends Dr. Mitchell's treatment to all sufferers.

Mrs. L. W. Abbott, of Albion, Mich., writes: I recommend Dr. Mitchell's treatment. While with him I saw cases of paralysis, blindness, deafness and diseases of all kinds cured by him. You can be sure he will not take your case if he can do nothing for you. I will be glad to answer any inquiries.

Dr. Mitchell is the oldest drugless healer at the Head of the Lakes and thoroughly understands his business. If he cannot do you any good he will tell you so. He has treated most every disease flesh is heir to and cured them. His long experience makes him a master of his profession, and he is not to be classed with the many would-be magnetic healers who have no record to show that they have ever cured any one.

Those wishing Dr. Mitchell's advice can obtain it by calling at the corner of Fourth avenue west and First street. Zenith 'phone 579.

HEARS FROM A GERMAN HEIR

Peter Maus Cables Wishes in Matter of Gaspar Estate.

A petition from Johannes Grunow of St. Paul, German consul for this district, requesting that W. G. Joerns of this city, consular agent for Germany, be appointed general administrator of the estate of Charles Gaspar, deceased, of Fond du Lac, was presented at the probate court of St. Louis county this morning.

Probate Judge Middlecoff set the hearing for Monday morning, at which time he will determine whether the petition will be received. In the event that he receives it, the court will probably order publication of a hearing on the appointment of an administrator, to be held at some future date.

With the petition of the German consul is a copy of a cablegram from Peter Maus, of Heppenbach, Germany, one of the heirs of the Gaspar estate, requesting the German consul to act as his representative in the matter of the estate. The consul bases his claim to legal representation for Maus and all other German heirs on an article in the Consular Convention held between the United States and Germany Dec. 11, 1871, when the German consul was given the right of legal representation of all German heirs to estates in this country and in his absence of such heirs.

The consul is represented locally by Mr. Ross of Ross & McKnight.

Pending the appointment of the general administrator, Charles Peterson, who was appointed special administrator, about a week ago, is in charge of the estate, which comprises a hotel, some stores, houses and some acreage. The personal property is roughly estimated at from $3,000 to $5,000 and the real estate in about the same amount.

ACCEPTS HIS APPOINTMENTS

John Miller Takes Oath as Courthouse Commissioner.

John Miller of this city, one of the men appointed by the judges of the district court on the board of courthouse commissioners, filed his acceptance with the county auditor this morning and took the form of oath, required before one of the judges of district court.

Ex-Governor Miller is the first of the five appointees to file. Notices were sent to each of the commissioners named yesterday, and the prompt action taken by Mr. Miller in accepting the appointment and taking the oath is believed to be indicative of the desire of the board to get down to business as soon as possible. Two of the commissioners reside on the range and one other, Mr. Agnew, is on the range a great deal, so that these three will likely be the last to file their acceptances. Commissioner Patterson was expected to file his acceptance this afternoon or Monday. As soon as three members have accepted their appointments and have been sworn in they may send out a call for a meeting to the other two members.

EMPEROR WILLIAM CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Emperor William's birthday was celebrated today with the usual observances. The princely personages present in Berlin including the kings of Saxony and Wurtemberg and the grand dukes of Saxe-Coburg, and Gotha and Mecklenberg-Schwerin congratulated his majesty at 10 o'clock in the morning. Later religious services were held in the castle chapel, Dr. Dryander, the court chaplain preaching on the seriousness of the times. After the services, which were attended by the ambassadors and ministers from foreign countries, the latter tendered their congratulations. Ambassador Tower was present.

Emperor William was born Jan. 27, 1859 and became the German emperor Jan. 15, 1888.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by Mary L. Castonguay and D. Castonguay, her husband, mortgagors, to Herbert Norway May, mortgagee, bearing date, February eighth (8th), 1904, and which was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on May thirty-first (31st), 1904, at twelve o'clock and fifteen minutes (12:15) p. m., in book one hundred and sixty-four (164) of mortgages, on page five hundred ninety-six (596); such default consisting in the non-payment of the sum of seven hundred ($700.00) Dollars of the principal sum secured by said mortgage, with interest thereon at the rate of six (6) per cent per annum, from February eighth (8th), 1904.

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt, at the date of this notice, the sum of seven hundred eighty-two and 71-100 ($782.71) Dollars, principal and interest;

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form, which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows to-wit:

The southeast quarter of the northeast quarter (SE¼ of NE¼), and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter (NE¼ of SE¼), all in section seventeen (17), in township fifty (50) north, of range fifteen (15), west of the fourth principal meridian according to the government survey thereof; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Duluth, in said County and State on the 13th day of March, A. D. 1906, at ten (10) o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fee, stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated January 27, A. D., 1906.

DULUTH TO HAVE ONE

Summer School to Be Again Conducted in Normal School.

Superintendent Olson Makes the Announcement Here This Week.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Olson, visited the Normal school Wednesday. He has decided that a summer school will be held in Duluth this coming summer. The school will probably begin about June 20 and will last six weeks. The time of opening will, of course, depend on the closing of the schools in the county, so that all the teachers may be here for the beginning of the six weeks' term.

Summer schools are now held in the five state normal schools, and the immediate counties around the normal combine in one summer school. In this way there is an opportunity for better work, larger faculty and a six instead of a four weeks term of school. The following counties will unite in the one summer school in Duluth: Carleton, Lake, St. Louis and Cook. The school will be held in the Normal building as has been done for the last two years.

The summer school will have two lines of work, one called the credit work, and the other the review course. In the credit course, by reciting two times a day for six weeks, two normal credits can be earned. These credits for eighty or above for final standings, are accepted by the state superintendent instead of state examination in those subjects.

In the review course, no formal credits are given. Work will be offered in the common branches and in all subjects required in the examination for the first grade certificate. An outline of the work will soon be prepared and issued and notices will be sent to all those concerned.

Summer schools are provided for by arrangement with the state superintendent, who by virtue of his office has charge of the state summer school fund. It is not a regular part of normal school work. Any student, who wishes to enter the school and is qualified in work, and those who go to the normal school, can take advantage of the work offered. The faculty has not been decided upon as yet, but will be, later on.

The Freshmen had charge of the program in chapel this week. Monday President Bohannon spoke on current events, Tuesday Miss Maggard gave an instrumental solo, Wednesday Mr. Hubbard read an article on "Winter Sports," Thursday Miss Gertrude Ward sang and Friday Dr. Ryan gave a talk on "Vision."

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Olson who visited the school Wednesday addressed the pupils during the chorus period.

• • •

The Glee club had its weekly practise on Friday afternoon.

• • •

Mrs. Merry, supervisor of music in the Superior Normal school visited the school Monday.

The senior class entertained the faculty at a dinner party Friday evening. The dinner was served in the drawing room which was very prettily decorated with banners and flowers, the class color, maroon, being very prominent. The tables were beautifully decorated with shields and flowers, and at the head table the centerpiece was a large shield made of roses and studded with candles. The place cards were also shield shape, and were lettered in gold. A six course dinner was served at 6 o'clock. The guests were Dr. and Mrs. Washburn, President and Mrs. Bohannon, Mr. and Mrs. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, Dr. and Mrs. Kline; Misses Eaton, Mason, Bainbridge, Shoesmith, Carey, Post, Horne, Ely, Guilliard, Haywood, Ensign; Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. Brookes; Mr. Riley, and the members of the senior class.

Following the dinner toasts were given by the different members of the class and faculty. Miss Robinson, the class president, was toastmaster. The following toasts were given: Mr. Hubbard, "The Faculty's Spectacles;" Miss Post, "Class Spirit;" Miss Burbank, "The Pupil Teacher;" Miss Ely, "Occasional Visitors, the Bears."

Miss Robinson took this occasion to present the "rest room" to the school as a remembrance from the senior class. The "rest room" is the name applied to a large unfurnished room on the second floor. Last year a couch and several chairs and rugs were added to the room, to make it look a little more inviting. This room was used for students who became ill from overwork or too close attention to their work. The seniors have succeeded in transforming the room so that it is now really restful, not only in name but in fact. The windows have pretty curtains, the couch has been made over and covered. Rugs, chairs, chandliers, tables, pictures and other articles of furnishing have been added, and the room now presents a very attractive appearance. The trouble will arise, when such an inviting, restful place is so convenient, that many imaginary ills will spring up and applicants for the rest room will have great times in being accommodated. Mr. Bohannon accepted the "rest room," with a very appropriate speech. He complimented the senior class for its work in preparing the room, and hoped that the classes that follow would in their turn follow the example set by the senior class, and still more improve the "rest room."

NO AGREEMENT YET BETWEEN ATTORNEYS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—The attorneys in the packers' case did not reach an agreement today regarding the facts in the case. District Attorney Morrison declared that he had submitted to the attorneys for the packers a draft of his plea in the case, and had informed them that if they did not agree to that there would be no agreement.

It was admitted, however, by both sides that there is still a bare possibility of an agreement, although it is considered to be remote.

LAY STEEL ROADWAY

City Engineer Has Novel Plan for Improving Mesaba Avenue.

Suggests Laying Flat Steel Rails in Place of Pavement.

The plan to construct a steel track on Mesaba avenue for the use of teams entering and leaving the city, will be laid before the council at an early date, by the engineer's department.

For years the council has been receiving protests from farmers and merchants, regarding the condition of Mesaba avenue, which is the most convenient means of reaching the city from the country back of the hill. The road is in bad shape and only very light loads can be taken up it. The maximum load which a team of horses can draw up the hill, is from one-half to three-quarters of a ton.

The steel roadway would afford the best possible means of transportation, and would be far less expensive than the cheapest pavement which would answer the requirements of the street.

Flat steel rails five or six inches in width would be laid along one side of the road, to be used only by wagons going up the hill. They would be laid on the standard guage of a wagon, and the friction would thus be reduced to a minimum, without giving the slippery qualities of a smooth pavement.

The rails would outlast any pavement that could be laid, and aside from the action of the frost, they would be practically indestructible, and would remain smooth and level for an almost indefinite period.

While no estimate of the cost of such a roadway has been made, it is believed that the rails could be laid for about $1 per foot.

The engineer and his assistants have been figuring on the plan, and it will probably be formally laid before the council at an early date.

ANOTHER MIDDY IS DISMISSED

Chester Bloebaum of Missouri Discharged From the Navy.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The secretary of the navy has directed the dismissal of Midshipman Chester A. J. Bloebaum of Missouri in execution of the sentence imposed by courtmartial at Annapolis on conviction of hazing. The cases of Midshipman Meriwether and Miller are under consideration at the navy department. Midshipman Meriwether resigned before his trial on charges of hazing and that fact complicates his case.

Annapolis, Jan. 27.—The trial of Midshipman George H. Melvin of Geneseo, Ill., of the third class on six allegations of hazing, was continued today. Lieut. S. V. Graham, U. S. N., is acting as his counsel.

Judge Advocate Harrison stated that he was not prepared to contest the plea of the defense at this time and asked the court to adjourn until Monday morning.

DIES FROM AN OPERATION

Arthur J. Le Roy Passes Away at St. Mary's Hospital.

Arthur J. LeRoy of 8 East Fifth street, died yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's hospital, as the result of an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. LeRoy was 21 years of age, and had lived in Duluth nearly all of that time. He was employed in the offices of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad.

The news of his death will be received with deep regret by his many friends here. He was very well known and very popular among the young men in the city, having always taken a deep interest in outdoor sports such as rowing and sailing. He was a member of both the yacht club and the boat club, and rowed with the boat club crew two years ago.

He leaves three sisters, and his mother and father.

The funeral will be held from the Cathedral tomorrow at 2 p. m.

BISBEE STOCKS MORE ACTIVE

All But Calumet & Pittsburg Livelier Than They Were.

An awakening of some of the unlisted stocks which have been dormant for a time, was the feature of the copper stock market today. Among the listed stocks North Butte was fairly active, and steady, too. It opened at $87, fell to $86 and advanced to $87, at which price it sold until the close, which was $86 bid and $87 asked.

Of the Bisbee stocks, Calumet & Arizona was quite active at $120, closing at $118 bid and $120 asked. Calumet & Pittsburg was $36 bid and $37 asked and closed unchanged. Denn-Arizona closed at $29 asked. Junction sold at $27 and closed at $26 bid and $26.50 asked. Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $49 and closed at $48 bid and $49 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth sold at $25 bid and closed at $24.12½ bid and $25 asked.

Black Mountain was dull. It started off at $12 bid and $12.50 asked and closed unchanged. Keweenaw was quite active at $18.50 and closed at $18.50 bid. Copper Queen of Idaho at $3 asked and Sullivan at $2.50 asked.

PORTAGE IS THE LEADER

In the Close Race in the International Hockey League.

The American Soo Club is But One Game Behind.

STANDING OF CLUBS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Portage Lake	8	3	.727
American Soo	8	4	.667
Pittsburg	9	5	.633
Calumet	4	7	.363
Canadian Soo	1	11	.083

Hancock, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The close of another week's play in the International Hockey league finds the Houghton and Hancock team, playing under the name Portage Lake, still in the lead in the race for the pennant, but by such a narrow margin as to make the supporters of the seven less confident the championship will come to the hub of the Copper country. The American Soo aggregation of star exponents of the great Canadian sport is but one game behind—indeed, for one day this week it occupied the first position, the result of vanquishing Portage Lake, a defeat, however, retrieved by the Copper country team the following night—and with its coming series on its own ice, with Pittsburg, conceded to be the weaker of the two sevens, it is considered to have more than an even chance of again displacing the leaders.

While there is every reason to believe that the contest for the flag will continue to lie between Portage Lake and the American Soo, the present sensation of the league is the surprising reversal of form shown by Calumet, last season's champions, over that displayed earlier in the year. From being a team considered hopelessly outclassed, Calumet has improved sufficiently to hold the American Soo down to one score in a game that required extra time to complete, and now they have turned in and more than held their own with Pittsburg, led by the mighty Hod Stuart and considered to have more class in every way. This reversal of form makes less poignant the hopelessness of Manager Thompson's efforts to secure material with which to strengthen his team, concerning which his experience was interesting.

The Calumet manager was in Canada a few days since, and thought he had secured two good men, but they fell down at the last moment, and he has given up hope of enticing players from the Dominion. He says that while he was in Montreal he was watched every minute by the leaders in hockey affairs, and every pressure was brought to bear on the players approached by him to prevent their leaving. Mr. Thompson freely declares that his efforts boosted the income of "amateur" hockey players in Montreal amazingly. The Calumet team last year dealt hockey in Montreal several bad jolts when it secured the cream of the famous Wanderers, and the hockey magnates of the old French town do not want further interference with their plans. This has ben a great winter for hockey in Canada, and the so-called amateur players find that the game pays pretty well at home without the income being tainted with professionalism. Mr. Thompson says that in Ottawa no effort is made to hide the fact that the players on the Stanley cup championship team make a good living out of the game, even if the checks are not actually signed by the club management.

There is a prospect that the Wanderers will cross sticks with all three Michigan professional teams, all the players on which are Canadians, recruited during the past few years, and if they do some of the fastest games ever seen in the United States are assured. The Montreal team is cleaning up all its opponents this season, and apparently is the strongest aggregation in the Dominion, not excepting the famous Ottawas, holders of the championship cup, but there is confidence in International league circles that not only Portage Lake and the American Soo, but Calumet, are fast enough to take the Canadians into camp.

An amateur hockey association of international clubs is a possibility of the near future. The teams proposed to be included are the Tagonas and Marlboro of the Canadian Soo, the Grinders and Nationals of the American Soo and the junior teams of Houghton and Hancock. Games are already being played between these aggregations.

Spittal, formerly of Pittsburg, has resigned as captain of the Canadian Soo seven and has retired from the game for the balance of the season. Darcy Regan has been appointed in his stead.

In last night's game Calumet was defeated, Pittsburg taking two out of three.

There is evident intention of the fighting game to force an opening for itself in the Copper country, and the preliminary enthusiasm seems to have worked up to a climax. It started some two months ago with the annual Jimmy Duggan-Joe Ziehr negotiations, and the pot began to boil when the Kerry Kid of Duluth sent heralds into the enemy's country seeking one who would break a lance with him. Then came messages from Le Noir Faineant, otherwise Hank Griffin, colored, of Los Angeles, who picked up the castor which the Kerry Kid had shied into the lists. Soon a secret defi came from someone in Duluth who would fight the Copper country's own Jimmy Duggan, and then the French Kid shows up and wants to battle most anybody. Now comes William Wills of Red Jacket, who announces that he has arranged with W. A. Phelon of Chicago to bring a stable of fighters to the Copper country for a fistic tourney. Mr. Wills has on his card George Rice and Phil Barry for the curtain raiser, Buddy Glover and Maje King for the ollo and Kid Taylor and Paddy Nee for the main event. This card is expected to provide a good exhibition for lovers of the game of mitts.

The baseball situation in the upper peninsula is still something of a puzzle and the solution is hard of prediction. The Copper-Iron County league has elected its officers for the year, headed by Dr. G. W. Orr of Lake Linden as president, and franchises have been set aside for Calumet, Lake Linden, Hancock, Iron Mountain, Escanaba and Menominee, but it is by no means certain that the latter two cities will have reperesentation. Menominee has an idea of affiliating with the Wisconsin state league; the Escanaba people have as yet taken no steps to put a team in the field, and it would appear that if the present league organization is retained its scope would be limited to the three copper country teams and Iron Mountain. There is also a proposition of Calumet and Lake Linden joining the reorganized Northern league, along with Duluth and other towns in Minnesota, and as the fans at Hancock have so far manifested little interest in a financial way in the welfare of their team, it is not altogether impossible that this may be the outsome. On the whole there is much to perplex in the situation, although the league magnates have confidence matters will be worked out satisfactorily. It is hinted that Eastern men, interested in major tams, stand ready to give both Escanaba and Menominee fast agregations, and it is asserted to hold the American Soo people will yet come forward with the goods.

RAISED RATES ARBITRARILY

As Increased Business Was Diverting Traffic From Main Line.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—W. B. Hamblin, freight traffic manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, took the stand before the interstate commerce commission today to explain the rates maintained by the road on through shipments of cattle through Kankakee, Ill. It was yesterday charged by Shield & Co., cattle shippers of Kankakee, that nine railroads, of which the Burlington is one, have conspired to ruin their business by exorbitant rates. Counsel for Mr. Shield asked why the arbitrary advance of 5 cents did not apply through Peoria and Mr. Hamblin replied:

"Well, we do not want to raise the rate on that gateway." He was asked why the rate had been raised so that it affected Yankakee, and replied that the increase of business was diverting the traffic from the main line. He added that he did not know that Shield & Co. were doing the heavy shipping from Kankakee.

"Did you consult with your roads about raising the rate?"

"No," said Mr. Hamblin, "we told them what we were going to do and they could follow our example if they desired."

Mr. Hamblin then denied having written a letter to Mr. Shield advising him to remove his stockyards from Kankakee to Quincy.

Operators and Miners Fail to Get Together on Demands.

Indianapolis, Jan. 27.—The conference of the central competitive field with ninety-nine miners and operators, met in Tomlinson hall today. Vice President Lewis of the miners declared the run of mine basis, the miners demanded, was the only fair way of mining coal and putting it on the market and paying the miners for their work.

He said the miners stood firmly on that demand and that they were equally determined to obtain the 7 cents differential between pick and machine mining.

On a roll call on the adoption of the demands made by the miners, the motion was lost by a strict vote between the miners and operators.

President Mitchell said unless further discussion was desired, the proposition might as well go to the scale committee. F. T. Robbins for the operators, said that the operators had no proposition.

SENTIMENT IS BEARISH

Wheat Again Very Weak and Prices Sag All Morning.

Flax Also Lower, With Foreign Markets Off--- Offerings Light.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 27.—Wheat was again weak today and bearish sentiment prevailed. An estimate by Broomhall for world's shipments of 9,600,000 bus to be reported Monday with Australia showing a considerable increase, caused much of the bearish tone. Liverpool was ½d lower to ½d higher, Paris unchanged, Berlin ⅛c lower and Budapest unchanged. There was nothing much new in the situation, and the feeling seems to be quite general that prices must go to an export basis before there is much improvement, because stocks are steadily increasing.

The May option closed ⅝c lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, ¾c lower in Chicago, ⅛c lower in New York, 1-⅛c in St. Louis and ⅞c lower in Kansas City. Winnipeg was unchanged.

Corn was lower, the May option in Chicago falling ½c. Liverpool was unchanged to ½d lower.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 38 against 64 last year, and at Minneapolis 243 against 201 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 281 against 265 last year. Chicago receipts were 24 against 16 last year. Winnipeg received 88 against 102 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 496,000 bus.; last year 433,000 bus. Shipments, 176,000 bus., last year 244,000 bus. Clearance of wheat and flour aggregated 368,-000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 530,000 bus., last year 470,000 bus. Shipments 343,-000 bus., last year 207,000 bus. Clearances were 1,509,000 bus.

In the Duluth market wheat was dull and dragging. The May option opened ⅛c lower at 83⅜, fell to 83⅛-¼c at 11:30, rallied to 83¼c at 11:35, and then fell to 83c at 11:55. The close was at 83⅛c, a loss of ⅝c. There was no trading in July and it closed ⅝c lower at 84⅜c.

Cash wheat continues to sell on the basis of 2c under Minneapolis May for No. 1 northern.

Flax was heavy though there was more stubbornness on the decline today and offerings were not large. London was about ⅝c lower. Some export business was done from here. Country elevator lines report very small marketings and with the volume showing no sign of increasing. The May option opened unchanged at $1.17⅛, fell to $1.16¼, rallied to $1.17⅝ and then fell again, closing ¾c off at $1.16¾. The July option declined 1½c to $1.17¼ and then rallied, closing 1c off at $1.17¾. September closed 1c off at $1.16¾.

Oats on track fell ⅜c, and to arrive outs ⅝c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Reports of Increased Shipments Has Depressing Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Reports of increased shipments of wheat from Australia had a depressing effect today on the local wheat market. The demand was small, commisson houses being the chief buyers. May opened ⅜c to ¼c lower at 85⅝c to 85¾c. After selling at 85¼@85⅝c, the prices dropped to 85¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 305 cars against 454 cars last week and 281 cars a year ago.

The market became weak later on profit-taking by a number of longs. The low point for May was reached at 84½. There was a slight rally just before the close, but the general situation was weak at the end of the day, with May off ⅝c at 84⅞c.

Lower cables and clear weather caused selling of corn in considerable quantity by commission houses and cash interests. The market was inclined to weakness. May opened unchanged to a shade lower at 44¼@44⅜c to 44⅜c and sold off to 44¼c. Local receipts were 276 cars with 20 of contract grade.

The market continued weak all day. The low point for May was at 44c. The close was weak, with May down ¼c at 44¼c.

Profit taking by a number of leading longs and a general light demand caused weakness in the oats market. May opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 31¼c to 31¼c and sold off to 31c. Local receipts were 152 cars.

Provisions were firm because of a 5c advance in the price of live hogs. Local packers were moderate purchasers. May pork was up a shade at $14.05. Lard was 2½c higher at $7.55. Ribs were unchanged at $7.50.

Close: Wheat—May, 84⅞c; July, 83¼c. Corn—May, 44¼c; July, 44¼@44⅜c. Oats—May, 30⅝c; July, 29¼c. Pork—May, $14.05 @14.07½; July, $14.17½; January, $13.77½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Just for a moment today wheat prices touched within a small fraction of yesterday's close, holding firm for a time, subsequently giving way to extreme weakness, the market selling off sharply from yesterday's closing, with ⅜c rally, the net loss for the day being ¾c. It was evident that long wheat was coming on sale on every hard spot. The action of the market is discouraging; the limited buying power that comes in at times seems short covering. The Southwest today were active sellers in this market, while the buying was more or less for the Northwest. The feeling in conservative circles is that the market is destined to seek a lower level. Same conditions are prevailing, and have made some mighty good bears out of radical bulls.

Corn and oats were weak again today, the market having the same appearance, namely, liquidation by tired longs. The action of the wheat market contributed to the uneasiness of the bulls in this market. Stocks are large, and this feature of the trade is now claiming the attention of traders generally. It will indeed be surprising if this market holds up under existing sentiment.

Provisions made a slight gain and acted as if they would have done much better but for the heaviness of other pits. At best this is but a scalping market.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Flax—The market was weak on the opening and sold off a cent on lower foreign cables and reports of rain in India. We are inclined, at this time to discredit these reports, and do not believe they should have any noticeable effect on the market, for the crop has gone so long without rain, that it is a poor one now at the best. After the early weakness, the market firmed somewhat on reports of large sales to domestic crushers. The past two weeks have showed a falling off in flax of 12 cents, and the present low price may be a good place to make purchases.

* * *

O'Brien, Chicago: Jones' report on farmers' reserves in the Northwest is quite bullish. His figures on the three states is for 185,000,000 bushels, and he says that there is only 19 per cent left in farmers' hands, exclusive of seed requirements. The government makes wheat crop of the three states 192,000,000 bushels.

* * *

Dennis, Chicago: I consider that these Jones figures will prove to be a bull card sooner or later. First time you get some good bullish factors in the situation these will be brought out and made to do great service.

* * *

Chicago Record-Herald. St. Louis reported export nibbles for hard winter wheat. A bid for 100,000 bushels came within a small fraction of sellers price. One of the local exports figured that No. 2 hard winter wheat could be laid down at Liverpool ¾ cents per bushel lower than No. 1 northern Manitoba wheat sold for in that market on Thursday.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Immense Liquidation In Reading Weakened the Entire Market.

Prices Yielded All Around and Closing Was Weak.

New York, Jan. 27.—Opening dealings in the stock market were very active and carried prices above last night's level with but few exceptions amongst the important stocks. There were no marked features and the average of the gains was a small fraction. Great Northern preferred, Metropolitan Securities and International Pump rose a point and Atchison, Ontario & Western, Kansas City Southern, Locomotive, United States Steel preferred and American Car large fractions.

Successful efforts to put up Ontario & Western, Metropolitan Street Railway and Locomotive were interrupted by an immense volume of liquidation in Reading which weakened the entire market. Gains that had been established of 1 to 1½ were sacrificed and the Western railroads and important specialties fell a fraction below yesterday's closing. Reading yielded 3¼, Westinghouse Electric 3 and Denver & Rio Grande, Great Northern preferred, Colorado Fuel, Agricultural and United States Rubber preferred 1. The selling movement was severe but short and before 11 o'clock the market was recovering well but became dull. International Power rose 5⅜. Chicago Terminal preferred, Pacific Coast, Western Maryland and Corn Products preferred gained about 1½.

A rise of 1¼ in Amalgamated Copper and large buying of Baltimore & Ohio caused the list to harden. Selling was resumed after the appearance of the bank statement. Anaconda had risen 5, Biscuit 2½, American Express 2 and a number of others 1 to 1½. The selling movement carried down Union Pacific, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Southern Railway, Norfolk & Western, New York Central, Texas & Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Hide & Leather preferred and Allis-Chalmers preferred 1 to1½. St. Joseph & Grand Island second preferred fell 3. In the final dealings Reading broke 6¼, Colorado Fuel 5¼, Brooklyn Transit 2⅝ and Southern Pacific 1⅝. Prices yielded all around and the closing was decidedly weak and very active.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed lower and weak. In early dealings the tone throughout was strong, but the bank statement evidently was not to the liking of the street. The large loss in reserves was more than they looked for, and resulted in heavy selling pressure in the last half hour. Amalgamated Copper and B. & O. were the leaders in point of strength. Undoubtedly a desire to clean up over Sunday contributed in part to the selling. Stocks have been well distributed; public interest is greater than it has been and stocks are being bought on the setbacks with quite a little confidence, this better feeling being based on money conditions. We would avoid getting enthusiastic on the bulges. It is still a great market, well supported on declines and confidence of the big people seems in no way impaired.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Continued heavy and urgent liquidation of Reading unsettled the stock market today and extending to other stocks in the last hour, brought about a general break and a weak closing. The stocks which declined most rapidly were those in which there has recently been most plunging, such as Colorado, Canadian Pacific and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, but Reading was always the weakest feature and continued under pressure to the close. The market showed practically no rally at the closing. Early in the session a few stocks like Amalgamated and Baltimore & Ohio showed noteworthy strength, but they declined again with everything else at the closing. The bank statement was disappointing, showing a big increase in loans and a slight loss in surplus in spite of a moderate gain in cash. The action of the market was discouraging, the absence of support at the close being particularly noticeable.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market at opening was steady and inclined to be strong; later there was quite heavy selling of Reading and this had bad effect on the general list. Traders were selling and after the bank statement, which was not good, there was heavy liquidation. Prices sold off easily and there was little support. Fuel broke sharply and the whole list continued weak until the close. The market for next weeks seems likely to be a wild one.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $140,888,795; gold, $77,754,457; gold certificates, $31,342,500.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 27.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 5 to 9 points in response to higher cables and continued claims of a firm spot market, but there were heavy selling orders in the hands of wire and commission houses apparently for long account. Local bears were again aggressive and shortly after the opening prices were down to a new level for the movement, with March selling at 11.16. There was some irregularity around this level, but the market was very weak and unsettled. Cotton futures closed steady; closing bid: January, 11.05; February, 11.06; March, 11.19; April, 11.25; May, 11.32; June, 11.34; July, 11.40; August, 11.21; September, 10.67; October, 10.55. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.70; middling gulf, 11.95; sales, 672 bales.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market developed considerable weakness in New York stocks but effect on our market was to cause extreme dullness with very slight reactions. The floor traders tried hard to put up Franklin yesterday, but found today that they were not getting any following and at once turned around and sold out the stock as fast as possible. We would not be surprised to see a little reaction the first of next week.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Big run of horses. There is an increased attendance of buyers as compared with last week, and the commercial classes are moving actively at nominal prices. The demand is brisk for farm chunks, and buyers report a scarcity in the country. There is a noted improvement in drafters and loggers over last week. The bulk of today's sales were at the following prices:

Drafters, extra	$185@220
Drafters, choice	150@185
Drafters, common to good	135@150
Farm mares, extra	150@170

the hotel to play cards in a room on the second floor. About 2 o'clock there was a smell of smoke and when the door of the room was opened by some investigator there was a strong rush of smoke and heat into the room. It is due to the presence of mind of those in the room that the list of casualities was not greater. While one of the number went outside to give the alarm, the others ran through the corridors kicking at the doors and arousing the occupants of the various rooms. All the guests of the second and first floors were aroused, but when an attempt was made to reach the third and fourth floors the men were driven back by the smoke and flames.

All the persons on the first and second floors escaped without injury.

When the firemen arrived many persons on the third and fourth floors were hanging from the window ledges. Unfortunately the fire apparatus responding to the first alarm did not include enough aerial ladders to remove these persons from their precarious positions. A second alarm was sounded and when sufficient long ladders had reached the scene all of those visibly in peril were rescued.

Some of the persons who were hanging from the windows, however, had become exhausted before this time and had dropped into the life net that was spread below. Among this number was A. S. Anthony of New Bedford, who occupied a room on the fourth floor of the hotel. Mr. Anthony had hung by his hands from the window ledge for twelve minutes. His strength was rapidly giving out and fearing that the flames would reach him he dropped into the life net. He suffered no burns, but his face was badly cut by falling glass and he was somewhat injured by his fall.

Most of the people on the third and fourth floors who were not taken down by firemen managed to escape by the rope fire escapes. All left the hotel in their night clothes and they did not have an opportunity to save their personal effects.

The hotel was bought by Mr. Toban, the proprietor, two years ago, the purchase price being $60,000.

After the ruins had been searched it was announced that no more bodies had been found. The identity of the three bodies recovered practically was established. One of them proved to be that of a man named H. A. Harding of Somerville, Mass. The other two were those of Mrs. Christine Nelson of Boston, the hotel cook, and Miss Josephine Kenneston of Franklin Falls, N. H. Miss Kenneston was the attendant of A. S. Anthony, one of the injured, who was in ill health. His condition is critical. A traveling salesmen named Feldman of New York has not been accounted for.

WEEK A LIVELY ONE IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES

Several Important Transactions Are Closed and Many New Buildings and Other Improvements Announced, Which Give Every Indication of a Busy Building Year in Duluth.

The most important deal in Duluth real estate closed during the present week was the purchase by William L. Putnam, of the property on the lower side of West Michigan street, just east of the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company's block, with a 100-foot frontage, and running back to Railroad street.

The property was bought of the Small estate, represented locally by Mendenhall & Hoopes. The purchaser was represented by William M. Prindle & Company. The purchase price was $30,000 for the four lots. The location is considered one of the best on Michigan street and will undoubtedly be improved before long. The property is described as lots 7, 8, 9 and 10, block 9, Central division.

The sale by George Spencer of his handsome residence at 302 Sixteenth avenue east to J. H. McLean of Ironwood, Mich., this week, constituted the largest of recent sales in that class of property. The consideration is understood to be in the neighborhood of $25,000. Mr. McLean, it is expected, will soon come to Duluth to reside. He purchased the Spencer residence for a home. The property includes four lots on East Third street and five on East Fourth street, the grounds extending through from Third to Fourth streets and forming a fine residence site. Mr. Spencer has lived there for more than ten years and has greatly embellished the grounds with trees, shrubs and other appurtenances that go to make up a fine place.

* * *

Among the other sales of the week was the transfer of the unimproved property immediately east of the Totman livery barn at Second avenue east and Superior street, from J. T. Lucas to Samuel Nesbitt, for $5,000. The property has a 25-foot frontage on the lower side of Superior street and is described as lot 42, block 1, Central division.

The transfer of the two story brick property on Superior street, west of the Pastoret block, from J. W. Hoffman to William Prindle was recorded this week. The consideration was $18,000.

Announcement was made this week that the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict of the Roman Catholic church would build a handsome convent and headquarters for the order on an 80-acre tract just over the hill opposite Hunter's Park, the structure, when completed, to cost about $250,000. The entire convent which is planned to be 300 feet long and several stories high, will not be completed this year.

One section, costing about $50,000 will be first erected and the remainder will be built at a later date. The plans are being prepared by German & Lignell, architects, and the contract for furnishing the stone has been awarded to J. F. Fredin. The general contract will be let later.

The site selected for the new institution of learning is an admirable one. It will have ample grounds for gardens, walks and all other requisites for a school for girls. The size of the tract will insure the seclusion that an institution of the kind requires. The Order of St. Benedict is a strong one and owns many valuable properties in the Northwest. Among these is St. Mary's hospital in this city.

W. A. and G. T. McKay, owners of the McKay hotel, on the corner of Fifth avenue west and First street, will double the capacity of that popular hostelry this year by the erection of an addition on the east side that will cost about $30,000. Negotiations have been closed for the purchase by McKay Brothers of the unimproved 25-foot property adjoining the hotel building and will build an extension clear back to the alley, the same heighth of the present hotel building, which is three stories on First street and four stories in the rear.

The foundations will be heavy enough to support an additional four or five stories should the owners decide upon the improvement later on. The addition will, it is said, give the hotel about 120 more rooms. The construction will be thoroughly modern throughout and when completed it is expected that the McKay hotel will be one of the most up-to-date institutions of the kind in the city. Increasing business that has taxed the hotel's capacity is the reason for the building plans.

The McKay brothers have been in the hotel business here for the past ten years. They have been located on their present site for the past four years.

Mrs. W. D. Williams is building a $7,619 modern dwelling on Second street, between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues east.

The building projects that have already come to public notice since the first of the year give splendid promise of one of the heaviest building movements this year that Duluth has ever had. The largest project is the county courthouse, which will cost when completed about $400,000. Next in size will be the new convent for the Sisters of the Order of St. Benedict, at Hunter's Park, to cost eventually $250,000.

The improvement of the southwest corner of Superior street and Fourth avenue west, by the erection of a five-story building, has practically been announced by the Massachusetts Realty company.

The Lonsdale office building, at the corner of Superior street and Third avenue west, is to have three additional stories. The Lenox hotel is to have three additional stories, either this year or next. The McKay hotel will have a $20,000 addition. It is generally understood that the Freimuth store, at Lake avenue and Superior street, will have either two or three stories added at an early date. Two large schoolhouses have been planned, one on the hillside and the other at West Duluth, and the new Y. M. C. A. building will be erected at Second street and Third avenue west.

These are among the principal building projects that are generally known. There are numerous residence building plans that have been announced from time to time and a great many that are yet being kept under cover at the request of the owners. But on the face of present "returns," the season of 1906 is surely "elected" for a prosperous year along new building lines.

Plans for the three-story addition to the Lonsdale building are under way, but are not ready to be placed in the contractor's hands for figures. W. A. Hunt, architect, will have charge of the work.

* * *

The plans for the new school building at First avenue east and Seventh street are said to be about ready for the contractors to figure on. The plans were prepared by German & Lignell, architects.

* * *

F. L. Young & Co., architects, are getting out plans for a three-story brick lodge building at Eveleth for a fraternal organization of that city.

A Suburban Cottage for $3,700

CLYDE S. ADAMS—ARCHITECT

This beautiful suburban cottage is designed especially so that the interior will be comfortable, and with the pleasing effect of the facade, presents a house which cannot fail to please the most fastidious.

The first floor has five large rooms not including the pantry, arranged in a manner to insure comfort, cheerfulness, and gives a homelike feeling throughout. This floor is to be finished entirely in hard wood.

There are two stairways, the front stairs being built up entirely of oak, which adds much to the appearance of the hall room. The second floor has three large bed rooms, generously provided with closets, also bath and sewing rooms in addition, with a good sized hall leading to all rooms. This arrangement is without question most desirable, and permits of excellent ventilation. The house being thoroughly up-to-date in every respect, and on account of the extra large size, cannot be built for less than the total as shown below, which is given in separate items for your benefit:

FORTY-FOUR THOUSAND

Men Out of Work Are in Jail in Belgium.

Brussels, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Forty-four thousand men out of work are in jail in Belgium, as they have no other alternative to keep either from starving or stealing. The government must feed them and doesn't like the task. The minister of justice has now sent a secret circular to all judges and magistrates asking them to be lenient with tramps, those out of work and persons arrested for stealing food. The minister demands that sentences, "if deemed necessary," be very light. Belgium has 7,000,000 inhabitants.

TAWNEY GOES TO NEW YORK.

Beloit College Professor is Called to Columbia University.

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 27.—Prof. Guy L. Tawney, head of the department of logic of Beloit college, has been selected by Columbia university of New York city to conduct the department of metaphysics and logic in that school for the coming semester, during the absence of Prof. Fullerton of Columbia, who is away on a year's leave of absence. Beloit college has granted the request of the eastern school to have Prof. Tawney's services.

WANTS $750,000 FOR NEW NAVAL TRAINING STATION.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Estimates of improvements necessary at the naval training station on the great lakes have been received at the navy department in a report from Capt. Albert Ross, U. S. N., who is commandant of the new station. He suggests an appropriation of $750,000 for the next fiscal year, with authority to enter into contracts for work to cost $2,000,000. The general scheme provides for an administration building, four dormitories, mess hall, drill hall, instruction building, guard house and power house.

These will be the main buildings and in addition there are to be smaller structures and considerable work in the improvement of the grounds.

On Minnesota Iron Ranges

Finding of Ore in Section Thirty Near Ely Very Important—Steel Corporation's Extensive Plans on Western Mesaba.

A most important find of ore, which it is the belief of mining men will lead to the opening of another group of mines in the Ely district of the Vermilion range, was that made recently on the famous Section 30 property, in 63-11—famous hitherto because of the long and costly litigation necessary before the title of the present fee owners was confirmed by the highest tribunal in the land, and now apparently on the threshold of still greater fame as one of the richest iron mines on the continent.

The ore was encountered at a depth of 114 feet in the shaft being put down to prove the mineral worth of the tract, and there is reason for the belief that the deposit is of very large extent. The mineral is strikingly similar to that mined at the Steel corporation's Chandler, Savoy and Zenith properties, some miles distant—and there is no better ore on the globe than that dug from the ground in the vicinity of Ely. It is believed that Section 30 ore will average 65 per cent in metallic iron, and it may assay higher. The shaft at present is twenty-five feet into the ore, with every indication that the deposit extends to considerable depth. As is well known, the tract is being opened by the Shagawa Iron company. A. M. Chisholm is president and Edward Lynch of Duluth is secretary and treasurer. It has long been surmised, and during the past few years has become a definitely known fact that there was ore in Section 30, but there has been a conflict of opinion as to the extent of the deposit, and in some quarters there has been a disposition to question the assertion of one of the fee owners that it would run more than 10,000,000 tons.

The history of the tract is interesting. The section is owned in fee by George J. Lonstorf of Milwaukee and Messrs. Merritt, Eaton and Fagan of Duluth, but it was not until after more than twenty years of litigation that their title was made clear. The United States land department repeatedly ruled against the fee owners, and its decisions were upheld by William F. Vilas of Milwaukee when he was secretary of the interior under President Cleveland. Then the matter was taken to the courts, where, after the customary delays, it finally reached the supreme tribunal at Washington. Here the rulings of Secretary Vilas were reversed, and in accordance with the contentions of the fee owners the Sioux half-breed scrip issued June 16 1882, on which the whole case hinged, was declared valid. Two years ago last season exploratory work prosecuted by F. H. Clergue, then identified with the management of the present Lake Superior corporation steel interests at the Sault, showed the probability of considerable ore; in fact, mineral was cut in three or four diamond drill holes. As shown by this work, there was a length of formation of 2,000 feet. The dip of the ore body was discovered to be very steep, and that drill exploration was not feasible, the formation being such that to properly test the ground it would be necesary to sink shafts and drive crosscuts. This fact, combined with the financial troubles of the Clergue companies, led to the abandonment of the option. Later, drilling operations were resumed by Mr. Lonstorf, one of the fee owners, whose work tended to further show the mineral wealth of the tract, and last fall the option was taken over by Messrs. Chisholm and Lynch, presumably in behalf of the Great Northern, and shaft-sinking was started. A peculiar feature of the strike just made is that at the location where sinking is proceeding a drill had cut the ore at a depth of about 140 feet, while in the shaft the mineral-bearing ground was tapped at a depth of 114 feet. However, owing to the granular character of the deposit it was impossible to get solid cores from which to make reliable estimates, reaffirming the history of Vermilion mines in that comparatively little ore has ever been proven by diamond drilling. The ores of the Vermilion run deep, and Samuel Hoar, superintendent, an old Marquette range

Good Record of the Butte Mines

Another Company Added to the Already Long List—Prospects of the East Butte Discussed—Berlin Mine Closed Down.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 27.—The mining record in the Butte district during the last week has been a good one. All of the companies have been busy and many thousands of tons of good ore have been extracted and sent to the various reduction plants for treatment. The week has been productive of one more mining company, which has in contemplation the development of the Greendale placer, located just north of the property of the Pittsburg & Montana Mining company, and between the property of the North Butte and the Greenleaf quartz property, owned by the Boston & Montana company. The new corporation is known as the Butte & London company and is organized under the laws of Arizona with a capitalization of $5,000,000 in shares having a par value of $5 each. Although called "placer," the ground under the control of the company is quartz and is supposed to contain veins that traverse the North Butte property. It is 3,000 feet in size north and south, 2,000 east and west and contains about 113 acres. It is the intention of the company to equip it with new machinery and sink a shaft 1,200 or 1,500 feet.

In all probability Butte will have another company within a few days, but information concerning the progress of those who are working it up is rather dim at present. It is known, however that men are now engaged in securing bonds and options on a number of claims near the entrance to Park and Horse canyons, possibly some distance up the latter, with a view of organizing a company and developing the ground. The surface indications there are good, and while it is not known that any ore has been taken from the claims which it is said are to comprise the assets of the proposed new company, principally because it is not generally known what claims they are, it is a fact that a lot of good ore has been mined from the claims in that section of the Butte district.

• • •

The list of companies now operating in the Butte district, or which intend to operate, is as follows:

Amalgamated with its six sub-companies, the Anaconda, Boston & Montana Parrott, Butte & Boston, Trenton and Washoe.
United Copper with its various branches, including the Montana Ore Purchasing company, Hypocka company, Guardian Copper, Johnstown, La France Copper, Cora-Rock Island and Securities.
Pittsburg & Montana Copper.
North Butte Copper.
Columbus-Butte company.
Reins Copper company.
Coram Syndicate or American Copper.
East Butte Copper company.
McC. White-Largey syndicate, which has lassoed a lot of ground in the southern part of the city.
Butte & London company, which intends to work the Greendale placer ground for quartz.

In addition several more smaller companies are working ground. There are several more coming up, one of which will be organized by Patsy Clark. This will be one of the substantial corporations and will be heard from later on. It has good ground and considerable of it, and it will be worked in a substantial manner. The details of this proposed corporation are not yet rounded out, but things are working all right and it will be only a short time before the launching of it will take place.

The East Butte Mining company has purchased from ex-Senator Lee Mantle a tract of ground adjoining the Dutton mine, which was not included in the original group taken over by the company. A recent attack on East Butte is based evidently on mistaken information. The company, prior to the first week in January, did not own any of the mines, merely having options on them, and therefore never produced a ton of ore or a pound of copper. The mines, however, under other companies and leasers have been continuous producers for a number of years and have paid big profits to the operators. Leasers will continue to work some of the mines, and the royalties will pay for extensive developments the company will make through the Dutton and for new machinery.

The East Butte ground is four times as extensive as that of the Minnie Healy mine, valued at $10,000,000, and is twice as large as Heinze's Rarus mine ,the principal property of United Copper. James W. Neill, an eminent mining engineer, and Thomas Bastian of Calumet, Mich., who experted the mines for Michigan stockholders, both report that East Butte mines are among the most promising in the district. Heinze never worked in the East Butte ground, but mined i nthe Glengary, adjoining the East Butte, and his leasers are still at work in the Glengary and mining good ore. The Glengary vein, 25 feet wide, runs through East Butte ground.

Both the Washoe and Pittsmont smelters have made bids for the East Butte output. John Gillie, manager of the Amalgamated, says the Washoe is in the business of treating ores and wants the East Butte product and will treat it on terms as favorable as given any other company.

Engineer Neill says there are twenty-one veins in the East Butte ground, all large enough to mine, averaging above the 300-foot level, more than four feet in width and 450 feet long. With the present equipment 300 tons of ore can be hoisted daily, he says, and with the improvements being made the output can easily be increased to 500 tons a day.

The leasers have been taken out of the Dutton and no ore is being hoisted from that mine, the shaft of which is being deepened and enlarged. Owing to a strike of ore haulers and the fact that storage bins were all filled with ore the other mines were also closed for ten days. Before the shut down the leasers were shipping about 150 tons of ore a day, and were mining only the richest streaks in the veins. Under the company management however, the second class ore as well as the first class must be taken out.

The Raven Mining company has begun making a new crosscut from the 1,500 foot station of the Snoozer mine, and expects to cut the main vein in about forty-five days. A little ore is being mined on the 1,200 foot level in the course of development work, and one car was shipped to the smelter. The ore was the run of the vein, but averaged better than 3 per cent copper and netted about $6 a ton.

Some Amalgamated officials and other Butte men have become interested in the Ajax mines, located on the main range between Montana and Idaho. The Ajax properties are gold producers, and it is the intention of the owners to Little Change at the Tamarack Mine—Keweenaw Company to Push Exploratory Work as Fast as Possible.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—There has been practically no change in the conditions at the Tamarack mine during the past two weeks. Owing to the fact that 3 men were caught underground at the time of the fire, the management kept the shafts open for several days in the hope that these men might be enabled to escape, but when it became apparent that there was no further prospect of the release of the unfortunate miners, the three shafts affected were sealed over with heavy timbers and the cracks in the timbers tamped with earth and clay. The shafts have been sealed for nearly two weeks, but gas is still escaping through the cracks in the sealing, and in such quantities that men working in the shafthouses have been overcome on several occasions by carbon monoxide fumes coming from the underground openings. There have been so many and such serious fires during the past twenty years in this district that a considerable fund of experience has been accumulated, and a regular plan of fighting such fires is now followed. In the earlier fires at the Calumet & Hecla, nearly twenty years ago, attempts were made, with partial success, to drown the flames by means of carbonic acid gas, which was manufactured in large quantities in immense steel boilers, by treating crushed marble and limestone with dilute sulphuric acid, pipes from the boilers being connected with the mouths of the shafts, and the resulting carbonic acid gas, which is heavier than atmospheric air, being allowed to drop by its own weight to the bottom of the mine, and stifle the flames by cutting off all oxygen required for their sustenance. Further experience has shown, however, that the most successful plan of dealing with a fire in a deep mine is to seal over all shafts connecting with the flames, and thus starve the fire from lack of oxygen required to maintain it.

There is no longer any hope that the three men caught underground in the Tamarack have escaped, although there have been some remarkable instances of similar escapes in the past, one of the most unusual having occurred in this same mine some seven years ago, when two Finnish miners, a father and son named Hendrickson, were caught underground and sustained life for some days by tapping the compressed air pipes, and washing out the foul gases from the end of the drift in which they were lying by using a jet of compressed air. The older man died within a week after his escape, from pneumonia caught by inhaling the intensely cold air coming from the pipe, but the younger escaped with comparatively little injury

It is difficult to estimate the damage that may have been done at the Tam-

Michigan Iron Mines

Cleveland-Cliffs Officials in Europe Study Charcoal Furnace Methods — Caving System at Tobin Mine.

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—William G. Mather, president of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company; Thomas H. Noble, superintendent of the timber operations of the Pioneer Furnace company, subsidiary to the Cleveland Cliffs, and J C. Holt, of Grand Rapids, secretary of the Superior Charcoal Furnace association, have sailed from New York, enroute to Europe, where they will spend two months inspecting charcoal furnaces in Sweden, Norway, Austro-Hungary and Germany. The purposes of the trip are purely industrial. The party will study the methods in use at the principal furnace plants in the countries mentioned, gathering information regarding the manufacture of iron by the different processes. This is the second time that Mr. Mather has visited Europe for this purpose within three years, although his former trip was largely for the purpose of studying mining methods. James Jopling, mining engineer engineer of the Cleveland Cliffs, is now in Europe and will meet the party in Germany. Mr. Jopling has been on the continent since last September, and during that time has visited mines in may different districts. During the years the Cleveland Cliffs company's furnaces in Upper Michigan have been in operation, many foreign furnace men have visited the plants for the purpose of studying American methods and industrial conditions, and they have gained much valuable information, as do Americans who make similar missions abroad.

The New York Sun recently published the following: "Plans are in progress for the building of two large pig iron furnaces at Marquette, Mich. The builders are responsible men who have found by study of the subject that it is possible to fetch fuel from Pennsylvania and put ore into the furnaces under conditions which assure the ability of the proposed plants to compete on fair terms with iron from the Pittsburg district. The recent and rapid growth in population in the territory tributary to the trade of Marquette will, it is believed, furnish a good market for the products of the projected furnaces by means of low cost of rail and water transportation."

This story is apparently news to Marquette. Nothing is known there of the reported project. There are already two furnaces manufacturing pig iron at Marquette, but "the rapid growth in population in tributary territory" has not been rapid enough to give the plants a home market. It is true that the plants are operated profitable, but practically every pound of iron turned out is shipped to Lake Eric and other distant markets. They do not use fuel from Pennsylvania, but charcoal made from hardwood cut in nearby forests.

Pickands, Mather & Co. have a force of men at work at the stockpile at the old Magnetic mine, located about eight miles northwest of Republic, Marquette range. In the neighborhood of 1,000 ton of the ore, which is of low grade, will be removed, transported by team to Republic and shipped from there by rail to Escanaba, where it will be held for lake shipment until the arrival of the first boats in the spring. The consignment will be used to make a trial furnace run of the ore, presumably with a view to the purchase of the Smaller Output at Bisbee

This Month Owing to Coke Shortage at the Smelters—Shattuck Delayed in Ore Shipments—Manhattan Exercises Options on Mines.

Bisbee, Ariz., Jan. 27.—The January production of the district will be less than expected, owing to trouble at the smelters of both the big companies. This was due at the Copper Queen to the coke shortage, which made it necessary that two or three of the large furnaces be banked for a large part of the month. At the Calumet & Arizona there was a shortage of coke, more anticipated than real, but it was considered wise to run slack. In addition to this was the change resulting from a new smelter superintendent, which has had its effect. Coke is now coming in, and the new smeltermen are getting acquainted with the ores they must handle, so that there will probably be little delay the rest of the month. In addition to New Mexican & Colorado coke the companies are getting train loads from Pennsylvania and Ohio.

In the Calumet & Arizona mine developments underground are as favorable as ever, and a large tonnage of ore is constantly being shown up. This is far in advance of the mining, and the tonnage is increased about twice as fast each year as the miners take it out. This is true of the Mag part of the property, while at the Oliver portion there has been proved an enormous mine, and nothing has yet been mined therefrom. During last week a drift was started from the Buckeye claim, on the 805-foot level, to prospect the Hope and Wagner claims, which lie between the Duluth and Shattuck mines. It is 830 feet from the breast of this drift to the east side line of the Hope, and it will take some time to drive that distance. The drift will prospect Duluth ground at a higher level than most of the work done there, and may be of importance to that property. It has been felt by some that the work done in the Duluth was a little too deep to catch part of the ore existing there.

Lake Superior, in its 1,000-foot drift north, has again cut some rich ore, and is in fifty-six feet in ore running about thirty-five per cent copper, while its other workings there are in and out of copper from time to time. The progress of this drifting on the north end of the mine is in ground from which much was expected, and the fine results are not surprising.

• • •

A magnificent record was made at the Hoatson shaft of the Pittsburg mine last week, when that shaft was dropped 62.5 feet in seven days. This is far ahead of the record-beating work of December, 162 feet for the thirty-one days. In the past ninety days this shaft has been sunk 439 feet, a monthly average of 146.5 feet, and this is supposed to be the record for any work of the kind anywhere in the world. The shaft is now down about 950 feet. The winze from the 910-foot level is now down 190 feet and is getting water, showing that the drainage of the surrounding ground has reached that near the bottom of the Briggs shaft. This winze has been in ore once or twice, and is now pyritiferous copper ore. The drift from the Junction shaft to Pittsburg ground is now 180 feet inside the side line of Ormond claim, and is in copper-bearing ground, not mineralized. The rapid sinking in Hoatson shaft has been made possible by the fact that the character of rock there has changed, becoming softer and more likely ground for mineral.

• • •

The Calumet & Arizona smelter's run of hard luck with reference to shipments of structural material delayed on the road has not abated. During last week two more cars of structural material were caught in wrecks in different parts of the country and put out of commission, making much effort go for naught that had been exercised to hurry the materials through the factories and on to the final destination at Douglas. As a result of the three weeks in transit, a crew of bridge men waiting for materials at the smelter have been idle ten days while some other construction men held at the smelter by non-arrival of materials have been idle for two weeks.

• • •

On the sidetrack at Lowell were put seven cars of machinery from the Nordberg company at Milwaukee, for the Junction company. This train of material comprises the new rapid hoist that is to be installed at Junction shaft. The machinery attracted much attention on the siding and was subject to general admiration. It is a fine lot of material. Hauling of it from the siding to the mine has commenced.

• • •

Shattuck is being delayed some in commencement of shipment of ore from its dump by reason of the fact that the Copper Queen has right of way to the road and is using it to get the stock of ore on hand at the old Uncle Sam dump out for the smelter. The road is narrow and the passage of a double equipment of teams over it is not practical. Shattuck will have the right of way some time during the next month and from that time will likely be a steady shipper. Meantime more ore is coming onto the dump from ground being opened under conditions attendant of highly satisfactory kind, inasmuch as they show steadily increasing ore bodies in the property. Purchase of a large rapid Nordberg hoist for the shaft is now being closed.

The Dunn shaft is now in lime, at the depth of 840 feet, and has been sinking in this material for the past few days. There is little water. This shaft is several hundred feet away from the drillhole upon the results of which its sinking was determined, and in that hole the lime was cut at 855 feet.

At the Copper Queen's mines the Sacramento has shut down for a short time, while a new and larger hoist and shaft house is being put up. The Cuprite is drifting and is getting some copper stains. The Lowell is working on the three lower levels in the 1,200 and is hoisting a large amount of excellent ore. The mines of the company are shipping daily about 1,400 tons of ore to its smelters at Douglas and would have increased this quantity but for the lack of coke.

Last week in Globe the first payment was made by Hoval A. Smith et al., to the officers of the Globe and Boston Copper company, and the holdings of that company passed into Michigan hands. The purchase price was reported at $135,000 and Mr. Smith assumed a mortgage of $30,000 due the original owners. According to the terms of the sale one-half of the purchase price is to be paid within six months and the final payment of $27,500 is due Jan. 15, 1907. The culmination of this deal is not the only one which these same interests have in view in the Globe district. Another group bought by this association of Michigan and Minnesota capitalists is known as the Taylor group, consisting of sixteen claims in close proximity to the Old Dominion workings. The purchase price of this group was $200,000 with a cash payment down of 10 per cent. This first payment was concluded at Globe on the 15th inst. The remainder of these payments are distributed over a period of eighteen months.

Other groups that are under option to Hoval A. Smith, et al., are the claims owned by Stevenson, Wint House and Henry Shoap. The claims secured practically encircle the Old Dominion holdings and is an evidence

The Rush to Manhattan

About Thirty Properties Opening Up Rich Ore—Deep Snow Does Not Keep Back Goldseekers.

Goldfield, Nev., Jan. 27.—Interest in Nevada during the week has been divided between the rush to the new Manhattan district and the boom on the Goldfield mining stock exchange.

The stampede to Manhattan continues unabated. Men who have been on the ground say that already about thirty properties are opening up rich ore. It is estimated that there are over 5,000 persons in the district at present. The cold weather and deep snow have not kept back the goldseekers. It is no unusual sight to see a stage start out loaded with fifteen persons, when its normal capacity is about eight. Some of the richest gold ore ever seen is being taken from the Manhattan-Dexter property, owned by George Wingfield, T. L. Oddie and others.

On the mining stock exchange there has been continued excitement, with prices jumping. In the leading instances, the increase in price has been caused by conditions at the mines, although manipulation has figured with some stocks and all have felt the general stimulus. Red Top has been a leader. This property has been known in the past as a low grade proposition, the ore running $10 to $30 a ton and requiring a mill for successful treatment of the ore. The stock sold as low as 4 cents not long ago. Then a strike of rich ore was made. During the past week the stock has sold around $2. The declaration is made that the mine has ore in sight worth $2,000,000. Jumbo, neighbor of the Red Top, was selling a short time ago at 70 cents. In spite of internal and external troubles, the stock doubled in value. Kendal went from 14 cents to over 80 cents; Sandstorm from 45 cents to $1.40 and over; Diamondfield, from 24 cents to 60 cents, and many others in similar proportions.

T. R. Jones of Salt Lake, ore buyer for Refining company, has been spending some time in Tonopah, Goldfield and the adjacent camps. He is looking for future business for his company, to keep pace with the proposed enlargements. Mr. Jones says he has been greatly surprised with the conditions at both Tonopa and Goldfield. He had been inclined not to believe the many reports of rich and extensive ore bodies. He now admits himself a convert to belief in the magnitudo of both camps and their future possibilities.

Work has begun on the old Blair Mine at Silver Peak, which was recently sold by M. L. Effinger, under option from the Blair estate, to a Pennsylvania syndicate, said to be headed by Charles M. Schwab. The property, formerly known as the Drinkwater, produced many millions some years ago, but it has been tied up by litigation.

Ore shipments over the Tonopah railroad for the week ending January 13 were as follows: Tonopah Mining company, 564 tons; Montana, 190 tons; Tonopah Extension, 266 tons; Belmont, 165 tons; North Star, 32 tons; Western Ore Purchasing company, 107 tons; Tripp & Richards, 6 tons.

The output of Goldfield for 1905 is estimated by experts at $2,500,000. The Florence was the banner mine, yielding $650,000. Following this came the Combination with $525,000, the Sandstrom with $300,000, Quartzite and Black Butte with $200,000 each, Kendall, $100,000; January, $125,000; Red Top, $180,000. The oher mines, including Daisy, Jumbo, Extension, Virmal, St. Ives and others made up $150,000.

The strike at the Red Top mine was on the 100-foot level, where a large the United States Mining, Smelting & chamber of ore has been opened

Inspect Bingham Mines

Probable Preliminary Step to Talked-of Combine—Plans Are Kept Secret.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 27.—Samuel Newhouse, who represents the Boston Consolidated and Ohio Copper company of Bingham and the Newhouse Mines & Smelter company of Newhouse, Utah, in the negotiations for the proposed new copper combine being engineered by the Guggenheims, has returned from New York. Mr. Newhouse declines to make a statement for publication as to the progress of the deal, but it is regarded as significant that a thorough examination of the properties involved has been undertaken. A. Chester Beatty, chief engineer on the staff of John Hays Hammond, consulting engineer for the Guggenheims, has a corps of men at work on the Boston Consolidated, and it is understood that they may do some work on the Cactus, which is the Newhouse company's mine. An examination of this property was made not long ago, however, by Guggenheim experts.

An official denial has come to the rumor that the Tintic Mining and Development company's Yampa mine might go into the combination. The story now is that the Bingham Consolidated is to be the sixth company in the consolidation, others being the Boston, Ohio, Utah, Copper, Newhouse and Fortuna companies. Although the proposed merger is primarily one of properties containing large bodies of low grade porphyries requiring concentration, and the Bingham has none of this class of ore, there are a number of reasons in favor of taking it in. The biggest reason is that it would eliminate a competitive smelter. Although the Bingham has not cut an especially wide swath in the custof smelting business, it is nevertheless in the market for certain kinds of ore.

The American Smelting and Refining company stopped any competition that might prove unpleasant by taking a large chunk of the Bingham company's bond issue. Since then has come the death of P. L. Kimberly of Sharon, Pa., a powerful factor in the Bingham company, and the liquidation of the estate's holdings and those of Mr. Kimmerly's lifelong partner, F. H. Buhl of Sharon. It is understood that the American company has absorbed a great deal of this stock, tightening its grip on Bingham. The smelting company's controlling spirits, the Guggenheims, have decided to put the company into the new merger, according to report.

In the East it is given out that the new company will have a capitalization of $65,000,000. Local opinion is that, even though the original capital may be at the lower figure, the corporation within a short time will place the par value of the stock at $100,000,000 or more.

The strike in the Little Bell of Park City, in which the Daly-West company is part owner, has reached proportions which convince mining men that its future as a rich property is assured. The contact vein has been tapped on the 700-foot level, and while there has been no time for exploration at this point, the body appears to be large, and the ore is of the same character as that found above. The assays above went over $100 to the ton.

The annual meeting of the Silver King Mining company was held in Park City on Jan. 15. Officers were re-elected. No report was given out as to the finances of the company or its physical condition. The property paid $1,200,000 in dividends last year.

Refining of Ontario Nickel

Home Smelting of the Cobalt Ores is Proposed by the Whitney Government.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A move of great importance to new Ontario, the consummation of which has been treated as impossible by the Liberal government—the refining of Ontario nickel in Ontario, instead of the United States—is to be forced by the Whitney regime. The adoption of the policy has been urged ever since the discovery of nickel at Sudbury. Announcement is made by Minister of Mines Cochrane that at the coming session of the legislature he will introduce legislation proposing that all the nickel mined in the province must not only be washed here, but converted into its marketable state as well.

From only two regions of the earth does nickel come in any great quantity. One of these is Canada, which supplies 60 per cent of the total output of the world, although its product is sold as United States nickel. The Canadian supply, so far as the Lake Superior district is concerned, is largely in the hands of he International Nickel company, the so-called nickel trust, which through itself and its various subsidiary corporations has a monopoly of the business on this continent. At present the ores obtained in the Georgian Bay region are smelted and converted into matte at Copper Cliff. Something like 200,000 tons of matte annually are sent to Constable Hook, N. J., where it is subjected to a further treatment and transformed into the nickel of commerce. It is this latter part of the process which, it is contended, should be performed in Canada, it being declared that the Dominion ought not to be a mere purveyor of raw material, but should take advantage of its vast mineral deposits to bring about the establishment of the manufacturing plants necessary for the production of metals in finished form. As it is now, in the case of nickel, consumers of the metal are compelled to make their purchases in the United States, despite that it is Canada whence the mineral comes. A project for the home smelting of the cobalt ores also is being worked out by the government.

What is asserted to be a phenomenal find of copper ore has been made near Dean lake, ten miles from Blind River. Samples of the ore show it to average 12 per cent in mineral, the richest yet found in Canada. Two veins have at present been located, and traced for a distance of three-quarters of a mile. They vary in width at the surface from five and one-half to twelve feet, and apparently follow the course of a great volcanic dyke. Metallurgists who have examined the samples say that the vein matter carries certain elements which will permit of the ore being smelted without preliminary concentration. The manner of the discovery of the deposits is interesting. While logs were being skidded, one of the timbers turned up what was supposed to be a piece of brass. Cursory examination disclosed an outcrop of mineral, and later investigation by means of pick and shovel developed the existence of the copper-bearing vein. O. B. Jury, a well-known prospector and mining man of the Sault was interested in the find and made further exploration with satisfactory results. A syndicate was organized and the mineral rights of the lands in the vicinity of the discovery were secured. Since then test-pitting has been in progress with the result that claims are made the find is the most valuable ever made in the province. The lands are within two miles of the Soo branch of the Canadian Pacific railroad and a direct line three miles from Georgian bay. The formation is said to be a counterpart of that at the Massey mine, except that the ground is materially richer. The Massey, located within three miles of Massey station, has been extensively and profitably operated during late years by a close corporation. The syndicate which has secured control of the Blind River properties has been reorganized as the Northern Ontario Mining company, headed by Dr. W. E. Gimby, mayor of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and will proceed actively with the development of the tract. The company is a close corporation, with all the stock in the possession of three men.

The Tip-Top copper mine, eighty miles west of Port Arthur and owned by Col. Ray of Port Arthur and Folger Bros. of Kingston, has been taken over under option by an American syndicate. In case the deal for the transfer of the property is closed, $150,000 will be paid for the mine and $40,000 for the ore in the dump. The mine is close to Kashaboine, on the Canadian Northern railroad, and outside of those on the north shore of Lake Huron it is the best-known copper property in the province.

COLORED INK

The most brilliant affair of the month was the Elks' charity ball, which took place Wednesday evening at the Spalding. The gaiety of an Elk affair is always apparent, and the dance Wednesday evening was an unusually happy affair. The hall was beautifully decorated. Ground pine was gracefully festooned from the chandeliers to the sides of the room and magnolia wreaths to which were attached long loops of purple and white ribbon, were hung at intervals. Back of a low screen of green Flaaten's orchestra was stationed, and about the sides of the room quantities of graceful green foliage were used with good effect. A delightful program of music was played and several hundred guests enjoyed the evening. The following floor and reception committees of members looked after the pleasure of the guests:

Floor—F. M. Anderson, J. H. McFadzen, M. A. Ryan, O. N. Lundberg, I. W. Farmer, Charles Beuglet, H. L. Gooch, J. T. Black, J. W. Kreitter, A. V. Oulette, G. H. Young, C. W. Benson, E. A. Tessman, H. B. Knudsen, F. J. Patton, Edward Hazen, C. H. Dorrance, F. G. Bradbury, M. J. Seabrook.

Reception—J. T. Armstead, H. W. Andridge, J. L. Fuller, Cook Ely, W. S. McCormick, A. H. Kreiger, W. H. Alexander, J. B. Cotton, George H Crosby, Jesse R. Sharp, John Cox, Fred Reynolds, P. B. McTague, A. H. Smith, A. E. McManus, Charles Goodrich, Alexander Marshall, R. R. Wells, W. A. Eden, Rev. R. J. Mooney, H. F. Williamson, Jr., B. G. Segog, W. H. Wilson, C. H. Bagley, W. M. Burgess, John Panton, C. W. Ericson, E. G. Hibbard, G. A. Eaton, L. D. Burgh, D. R. Black, S. F. McLeod, J. G. Harris, J. C. Fisher, H. F. Davis.

The affair was the sixth annual ball of the organization and a large sum was realized for the charities of the organization during the coming months.

An interesting account of the wedding of Miss Bernice Stebbins of Riverside, Cal., and Norton Henry Edwards, formerly of this city but of Riverside during the last three years, has been received in the city. Mr. Edwards is the son of Mrs. Alice Edwards of this city and Mrs. Edwards and the groom's grandfather, H. M. Bradley of this city, were among the guests at the wedding, as was also Master William Quayle of this city. A Riverside paper has the following account of the wedding:

"Rev. Alex. Eakin, pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian church, solemnized the marriage. Mrs. George T. Frost, an aunt of the bride, acted as matron of honor, while Miss Pearl Adler of Redlands was bridesmaid. The best man was William Henderson. Norbert Stebbins, a brother of the bride, acted as groomsman, and little William Quayle, a nephew of the groom, was ring bearer.

"The bride was attired in a beautiful princess gown made of panels of cream liberty satin ribbon with accordion pleated crepe chiffon between. It was over white taffeta. The panels were edged with fluffy ruchings, and the yoke of the bodice was of embroidered chiffon, bordered with narrow ruching. A cloudy veil of white tulle was worn by the bride, and her jewels were pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white hyacinths and maidenhair ferns. The groom's gift was a pearl and diamond ring.

"Mrs. Frost, the matron of honor, wore a gown of white chiffon taffeta with handsome trimmings of lace appliqué. The bridesmaid, Miss Alder, wore an attractive gown of pink tissue and cream lace, and both the matron of honor and bridesmaid carried shower bouquets of pink sweet peas and ferns.

"The wedding music was played by Mrs. Robert Henderson. The entrance of the bridal party was announced by the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus, and as the hush of the solemn service fell over the company the Flower Song was softly played.

"The bride's going-away gown was of green broadcloth, trimmed with tucked silk and velvet. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Edwards left on a wedding trip, their destination being a carefully-guarded secret. Upon their return they will make their home in a cottage on Eleventh street, between Orange and Lemon, which has been beautifully furnished by the groom. They will be at home after Feb. 1."

His Sister's Letters

Wherein "Sister," Living With Her Parents in Duluth, Airs Her Views About a Number of Things, for the Benefit of Her Brother, "Bill," Who is "Shacking It" Just Outside of Eveleth

Letter No. 1,

in Which She Has Something to Say About Dancing.

Dear Bill:

I'm not going to say anything about how soon the mortgage is going to be paid off, how many times Bob has been up to see what particular form of foolishness the younger members of the family have been indulging in, and all the other things that I usually write about, for I see that the very newest thing in letters is a very impersonal discussion of anything that will fill about a column. Your replies, I'd like to give you notice, should inspire me for next week's letter. For instance, if I discuss dancing in its many phases this week you ought to write back, or else I can pretend that you write back, which will do just as good, and write you some more interesting platitudes.

It's very decent of you to take such an interest in the Austrian dances, so kind of socialistic and Jack Londonish and all that sort of thing, but really, Billyum, you can't expect me to say yes, I'll go. Of course, I know you haven't asked me, but some of the features you speak of have knocked all that idea out of my head. For instance, the free and easy familiarity that exists may be awfully good form, but then I couldn't think of giving up the grace, which girls ought to stand for above everything, and there's not a single mention of a minuet to be danced.

Then there's another thing you fellows should stand for, or at least stand off, and that is your partner's feet. What in the world you can see, of ease of attitude or grace of motion, nor how you can persist so in a custom which at once brands it as absolutely lacking in the other person's feelings is beyond me. The next time you notice a picture of a foreign court ball, notice where the men's feet are, and you will invariably see that they are on the floor. Of course, it is all very well, to say the girls don't mind, but honestly, Billy, you just ask them, and if you get an honest opinion you will find that nine out of every ten girls would much prefer not to have her feet stepped on.

And there is the question of partners. Don't dance with more than one at a time. This silly custom has nothing to commend it and is a silly innovation that the Best People are all frowning upon.

There is another thing I would like to speak to you about, and it remains for you men to correct at your dances, and that is the habit of some girls to rest their chins on your shoulder while dancing. Of course, I know that you are not directly responsible, but I've got to blame you for something, and, to say nothing of the goo-goo look of the attitude to the onlooker, think of the danger there is in for a girl if she should happen to have her tongue between her teeth as you histed your shoulder to assist you in guiding her through the intricate mazes. The end of her principal speaking organ might be clipped right off, and you can imagine the difficulty of hunting on a dancing floor for the end of a lady's tongue, when one has such difficulty in finding a handkerchief, a fan, a bunch of flowers and a few yards of lace which have been ripped off her pettiskirt.

This letter is rather long and rambling and doesn't mean much of anything, but it's the very newest thing in letters, so even if you have never learned to dance, don't mind. So with love from all the folks and a request for you to kiss yourself for me, in a languorously languid manner, or abruptly, on the eyes, the hair or the lips—anyway you choose, they seem all to be good literary form and I don't care, being 100 miles away. I really will stop. Write soon to your affectionate,

"SIS."

When Jan Kubelik, the celebrated Bohemian virtuoso, comes for his recital at the Lyceum next Wednesday evening, he will bring with him his three famous violins, one Stradivarius and two Amati. These instruments are known to connoisseurs the world over and Kubelik's possession of them is the envy of every great violinist of the present day. The Stradivarius once was the property of Ole Bull and is perhaps the finest and most costly specimen of its make in existence. It has further value in Kubelik's eyes through having been given to him by Emperor Franz Josef of Austria. The two Amati are scarcely less historic and valuable than the "Strad." Kubelik uses the instruments in public on alternate days, though when he has a particularly difficult program of Paganini's compositions he always uses the "Strad," as its tone and action lend themselves particularly well to productions of pyrotechnic effects latent in the Italian wizard's works. When playing Bethoven, Bach, Mozart or the other classics Kubelik wants his Amati. They have the depth, the purity of tone and the sonority demanded by the works of the old masters. Sometimes Kubelik uses all three violins in the same recital. The precious instruments have a special keeper—a faithful Hindoo who has been with the violinist for years, and who can be depended upon to guard his charges at risk of his life if necessary. The servant looks upon his trust as sacred with all the fanaticism of his race. He stands near the entrance to the stage when Kubelik is playing and takes the violin from the latter's hands the moment he leaves sight of the audience, and holds it until Kubelik is ready to tune it for his next number.

The program which will be presented at the Lyceum Wednesday evening by Kubelik is as follows:

Concerto, G minor .....Bruch
Kubelik.

Prelude, Op. 28, No. 17 .....Chopin
Mazurka, Op. 68, No. 1 .....Chopin

One of the branches of work undertaken by the Women's Council is civic improvement and has occupied the attention of this body from its organization. The civic improvement committee remains the permanent committee of the club. The following account of the work as taken up by the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs will be of much interest to the local club women interested in this work:

"The first work undertaken by the civic improvement committee of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs was to establish civic improvement committees in every club and to place civic improvement topics upon every program. Of the 210 federated clubs in Ohio, more than 150 have now their committees and topics. Each club has been urged to become a member of the American Civic association. It is not federated clubs alone that are appointing these committees. In Ripley, a town of 2,500 inhabitants, on the Ohio river, nearly all the church societies have followed the example of the club. The results are clean streets, drinking fountains, trash receptacles, schoolhouses repainted and yards cleaned up, and pictures in the schools. In Troy, another small town, there is not a shanty left—all have been replaced by neat cottages.

"Cincinnati, through the civic improvement department of her Woman's Club, started the first playground in Ohio. Last year the club did good work against expectoration in the street sand cars, and this year its members are devoting their whole energy to the suppression of the smoke nuisance. In publishing the "Toledo Club Woman," Toledo has given an impetus to the work all over the state. Admirable work in establishing school gardens has also been done in that city. Cleveland clubs have taken a most active interest in home gardening, school gardens and playgrounds. Now they are especially devoting themselves to attacking pernicious advertising and much good has been accomplished in the way of abolition of the smoke nuisance. Smoke consumers are now in successful operation in two hundred boilers of the American Steel and Wire company.

"The Woman's club of Columbus has accomplished much, first by 'agitation' and then by co-operation with the Board of Trade. They have organized junior civic leagues, established playgrounds, cut down weeds and obtained new street signs. A cleaning up day was observed last April. More debris was collected than the city could take care of, so bonfires were in requisition. The smoke nuisance is also receiving much attention and smoke consumers have been placed upon some manufactories and have given great satisfaction. Zanesville and many other towns have started junior civic leagues. Dayton is famous for school gardens and other civic work. At the Zanesville convention a full report of work was given by the chairman, followed by discussion on 'How to arouse an interest in Civic Improvement.' Resolutions were adopted concerning the impending destruction of Niagara. Mrs. Agnes McGiffert Pound, of Ashtabula, is chairman of the Civic Improvement committee, Ohio Federation Women's Clubs."

The Forward Guild of the First Presbyterian church will be entertained next Saturday afternoon by Mrs. A. M. Marshall of Twenty-sixth avenue East.

The committee of the Women's council in charge of the Mid-winter breakfast have been busy planning for this affair which promises to be probably the most successful ever held in the city. The function is planned primarily for the club women who have not yet given their approval to clubs, in the work that is possible by women thus organized. The breakfast will be given at the Spalding hotel, Monday, Feb. 12. Governor and Mrs. John A. Johnson have been invited to be the guests of honor at the affair, and their gracious acceptance was received by the committee this morning.

The list of toasts is a most attractive one. Mrs. J. L. Washburn will preside as toast mistress and the following responses will be given:

"The Point and How to Reach It," Mrs. John McLeod; "The Hills," Mrs. J. H. Crowley; "The New Element," Mrs. William S. Woodbridge; "Commercial Spirit," Rev. John W. Powell; "Altruistic Spirit," Mrs. Alexander Milne; "Our Young People," Mrs. I. L. Lenroot of Superior.

The tickets for the luncheon are now on sale at the library and the club women are urged to get theirs at once, as the sale will be open to all women after Feb. 5.

• • •

The board of directors of the Matinee Musicale have finished arrangements for the third and last artist's recital of the year. The soloist will be Herbert Witherspoon, basso, who will appear in a concert here, Friday evening, March 2.

• • •

The Unity club will meet Monday evening at the Unitarian church. The subject of the evening's discussion is "Federal Control of Railroad and Rate-Making." E. M. Fergus.n who was to have been one of the speakers of the evening is absent from the city and his place will be filled by W. G. Joerns. The other speaker of the evening will be W. W. Walker The public is invited to attend the meeting.

WHEN MAN WILLS.

By E. S. Midgley.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A silver-haired woman, with sadness in her comely, care-worn face sewed, and an old man with fine, benevolent features, smoked, in a vine-covered porch. A passing spring thunder storm had spent its fast fury. The lightning's staccato knife slashed the low, black colulds that hung on the summits of the distant hills. The thunder's diapason had died to an indistinct rumble that groped lazily and uncertainly through the air.

Taking his pipe from his mouth, the man watched the smoke drift away through the fresh, cleansed air. Then his gaze wandered to where the sun was casting long shadows upon the furrows of a freshly plowed, wet field, on across a sunlit meadow and through a shadowed green valley to where a faint, white line of smoke hung in the air which, with a far away locomotive whistle, indicated the passing of a railway train. "Mother, how long is it since Ruth left?"

"Nine months, the fourteenth of this month," was the reply, in a tremulous tone.

Neither spoke again. Their thoughts had traveled over the many weary miles intervening between that lonely New England home and the great city by the lake, which held their only child—their one ewe lamb.

In the city there was no spring balminess of air. The fringe of winter was still trailing over the city. All day, oblique sheets of rain, thickly interspersed with sullen snowflakes, had cut through the air, transforming the streets into rivers of slush and ooze. A gray granite building stood near the lake shore, just where the winds shrieked hercest and the waves lashed angriest. It mattered little to those winds and waves that within those walls lay the sick and dying.

Upon a little white bed in a small, clean room, high up in a corner of the hospital, lay a blue-eyed girl, white and

The most brilliant affair of the month was the Elks' charity ball, which took place Wednesday evening at the Spalding. The galety of an Elk affair is always apparent, and the dance Wednesday evening was an unusually happy affair. The hall was beautifully decorated. Ground pine was gracefully festooned from the chandeliers to the sides of the room and magnolia wreaths to which were attached long loops of purple and white ribbon, were hung at intervals. Back of a low screen of green Flaaten's orchestra was stationed, and about the sides of the room quantities of graceful green foliage were used with good effect. A delightful program of music was played and several hundred guests enjoyed the evening. The following floor and reception committees of members looked after the pleasure of the guests:

Floor—F. M. Anderson, J. H. McFadzen, M. A. Ryan, O. N. Lundberg, I. W. Farmer, Charles Beuglet, H. L. Gooch, J. T. Black, J. W. Kreitter, A. V. Oulette, G. H. Young, C. W. Benson, E. A. Tessman, H. B. Knudsen, F. J. Patton, Edward Hazen, C. H. Dorrance, F. G. Bradbury, M. J. Seabrook.

Reception—J. T. Armstead, H. W. Andridge, J. L. Fuller, Cook Ely, W. S. McCormick, A. H. Kreiger, W. H. Alexander, J. B. Cotton, George H Crosby, Jesse R. Sharp, John Cox, Fred Reynolds, P. B. An interesting account of the wedding of Miss Bernice Stebbins of Riverside, Cal., and Norton Henry Edwards, formerly of this city but of Riverside during the last three years, has been received in the city. Mr. Edwards is the son of Mrs. Alice Edwards of this city and Mrs. Edwards and the groom's grandfather, H. M. Bradley of this city, were among the guests at the wedding, as was also Master William Quayle of this city. A Riverside paper has the following account of the wedding:

"Rtev. Alex. Eakin, pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian church, solemnized the marriage. Mrs. George T. Frost, an aunt of the bride, acted as matron of honor, while Miss Pearl Adler of Redlands was bridesmaid. The best man was William Henderson. Norbert Stebbins, a brother of the bride, acted as groomsman, and little William Quayle, a nephew of the groom, was ring bearer.

"The bride was attired in a beautiful princess gown made of panels of cream liberty satin ribbon with accordion pleated crepe chiffon between. It was over white taffeta. The panels were edged with fluffy ruchings, and the yoke of the bodice was of embroidered chiffon, bordered with narrow ruching. A cloudy veil of white tulle was worn by the bride, and her jewels were pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white hyacinths and maidenhair ferns. The groom's gift was a pearl and diamond ring.

"Mrs. Frost, the matron of honor, wore a gown of white chiffon taffeta with handsome trimmings of lace applique. The bridesmaid, Miss Alder, wore an attractive gown of pink tissue and cream lace, and both the matron of honor and bridesmaid carried shower bouquets of pink sweet peas and ferns.

"The wedding music was played by Mrs. Robert Henderson. The entrance of the bridal party was announced by the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus, and as the hush of the solemn service fell over the company the Flower Song was softly played.

"The bride's going-away gown was of green broadcloth, trimmed with tucked silk and velvet. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Edwards left on a wedding trip, their destination being a carefully-guarded secret. Upon their return they will make their home in a cottage on Eleventh street, between Orange and Lemon, which has been beautifully furnished by the groom. They will be at home after Feb. 1."

When Jan Kubelik, the celebrated Bohemian virtuose, comes for his recital at the Lyceum next Wednesday evening, he will bring with him his three famous violins, one Stradivarius and two Amati. These instruments are known to connoisseurs the world over and Kubelik's possession of them is the envy of every great violinist of the present day. The Stradivarius once was the property of Ole Bull and is perhaps the finest and most costly specimen of its make in existence. It has further value in Kubelik's eyes through having been given to him by Emperor Franz Josef of Austria. The two Amati are scarcely less historic and valuable than the "Strad." Kubelik uses the instruments in public on alternate days, though when he has a particularly difficult program of Paganini's compositions he always uses the "Strad," as its tone and action lend themselves particularly well to productions of pyrotechnic effects latent in the Italian wizard's works. When playing Bethoven, Bach, Mozart or the other classics Kubelik wants his Amati. They have the depth, the purity of tone and the sonority demanded by the works of the old masters. Sometimes Kubelik uses all three violins in the same recital. The precious instruments have a special keeper—a faithful Hindoo who has been with the violinist for years, and who can be depended upon to guard his charges at risk of his life if necessary. The servant looks upon his trust as sacred with all the fanaticism of his race. He stands near the entrance to the stage when Kubelik is playing and takes the violin from the latter's hands the moment he leaves sight of the audience, and holds it until Kubelik is ready to tune it for his next number.

The program which will be presented at the Lyceum Wednesday evening by Kubelik is as follows:

Concerto, G minor .....Bruch
Kubelik.

Prelude, Op. 28, No. 17 .....Chopin
Mazurka, Op. 68, No. 1 .....Chopin

One of the branches of work undertaken by the Women's Council is civic improvement and has occupied the attention of this body from its organization. The civic improvement committee remains the permanent committee of the club. The following account of the work as taken up by the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs will be of much interest to the local club women interested in this work:

"The first work undertaken by the civic improvement committee of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs was to establish civic improvement committees in every club and to place civic improvement topics upon every program. Of the 210 federated clubs in Ohio, more than 150 have now their committees and topics. Each club has been urged to become a member of the American Civic association. It is not federated clubs alone that are appointing these committees. In Ripley, a town of 2,500 inhabitants, on the Ohio river, nearly all the church societies have followed the example of the club. The results are clean streets, drinking fountains, trash receptacles, schoolhouses repainted and yards cleaned up, and pictures in the schools. In Troy, another small town, there is not a shanty left—all have been replaced by neat cottages.

"Cincinnati, through the civic improvement department of her Woman's Club, started the first playground in Ohio. Last year the club did good work against expectoration in the street sand cars, and this year its members are devoting their whole energy to the suppression of the smoke nuisance. In publishing the 'Toledo Club Woman,' Toledo has given an impetus to the work all over the state. Admirable work in establishing school gardens has also been done in that city. Cleveland clubs have taken a most active interest in home gardening, school gardens and playgrounds. Now they are especially devoting themselves to attacking pernicious advertising and much good has been accomplished in the way of abolition of the smoke nuisance. Smoke consumers are now in successful operation in two hundred boilers of the American Steel and Wire company.

"The Woman's club of Columbus has accomplished much, first by 'agitation' and then by co-operation with the Board of Trade. They have organized junior civic leagues, established playgrounds, cut down weeds and obtained new street signs. A cleaning up day was observed last April. More debris was collected than the city could take care of, so bonfires were in requisition. The smoke nuisance is also receiving much attention and smoke consumers have been placed upon some manufactories and have given great satisfaction. Zanesville and many other towns have started junior civic leagues. Dayton is famous for school gardens and other civic work. At the Zanesville convention a full report of work was given by the chairman, followed by discussion on 'How to arouse an interest in Civic Improvement.' Resolutions were adopted concerning the impending destruction of Niagara. Mrs. Agnes McGiffert Pound, of Ashtabula, is chairman of the Civic Improvement committee, Ohio Federation Women's Clubs."

The Forward Guild of the First Presbyterian church will be entertained next Saturday afternoon by Mrs. A. M. Marshall of Twenty-sixth avenue East.

The committee of the Women's council in charge of the Mid-winter breakfast have been busy planning for this affair which promises to be probably the most successful ever held in the city. The function is planned primarily for the club women who have not yet given their approval to clubs, in the work that is possible by women thus organized. The breakfast will be given at the Spalding hotel, Monday, Feb. 12. Governor and Mrs. John A. Johnson have been invited to be the guests of honor at the affair, and their gracious acceptance was received by the committee this morning.

The list of toasts is a most attractive one. Mrs. J. L. Washburn will preside as toast mistress and the following responses will be given:

"The Point and How to Reach It," Mrs. John McLeod; "The Hills," Mrs. J. H. Crowley; "The New Element," Mrs. William S. Woodbridge; "Commercial Spirit," Rev. John W. Powell; "Altruistic Spirit," Mrs. Alexander Milne; "Our Young People," Mrs. I. L. Lenroot of Superior.

The tickets for the luncheon are now on sale at the library and the club women are urged to get theirs at once, as the sale will be open to all women after Feb. 5.

• • •

The board of directors of the Matinee Musicale have finished arrangements for the third and last artist's recital of the year. The soloist will be Herbert Witherspoon, basso, who will appear in a concert here, Friday evening, March 2.

• • •

The Unity club will meet Monday evening at the Unitarian church. The subject of the evening's discussion is "Federal Control of Railroad and Rate-Making." E. M. Ferguson who was to have been one of the speakers of the evening is absent from the city and his place will be filled by W. G. Joerns. The other speaker of the evening will be W. W. Walker. The public is invited to attend the meeting.

His Sister's Letters

Wherein "Sister," Living With Her Parents in Duluth, Airs Her Views About a Number of Things, for the Benefit of Her Brother, "Bill," Who is "Shacking It" Just Outside of Eveleth

Letter No. 1,

in Which She Has Something to Say About Dancing.

Dear Bill:

I'm not going to say anything about how soon the mortgage is going to be paid off, how many times Bob has been up to see what particular form of foolishness the younger members of the family have been indulging in, and all the other things that I usually write about, for I see that the very newest thing in letters is a very impersonal discussion of anything that will fill about a column. Your replies, I'd like to give you notice, should inspire me for next week's letter. For instance, if I discuss dancing in its many phases this week you ought to write back, or else I can pretend that you write back, which will do just as good, and write you some more interesting platitudes.

It's very decent of you to take such an interest in the Austrian dances, at kind of socialistic and Jack Londonish and all that sort of thing, but really, Billyum, you can't expect me to say yes, I'll go. Of course, I know you haven't asked me, but some of the features you speak of have knocked all that idea out of my head. For instance, the free and easy familiarity that exists may be awfully good form, but then I couldn't think of giving up the grace, which girls ought to stand for above everything, and there's not a single mention of a minuet to be danced.

Then there's another thing you fellows should stand for, or at least stand off, and that is your partner's feet. What in the world you can see, of ease of attitude, or grace of motion, nor how you can persist so in a custom which at once brands it as absolutely lacking in the other person's feelings is beyond me. The next time you notice a picture of a foreign court ball, notice where the men's feet are, and you will invariably see that they are on the floor. Of course, it is all very well, to say the girls don't mind, but honestly, Billy, you just ask them, and if you get an honest opinion you will find that nine out of every ten girls would much prefer not to have her feet stepped on.

And there is the question of partners. Don't dance with more than one at a time. This silly custom has nothing to commend it and is a silly innovation that the Best People are all frowning upon.

There is another thing I would like to speak to you about, and it remains for you men to correct at your dances, and that is the habit of some girls to rest their chins on your shoulder while dancing. Of course, I know that you are not directly responsible, but I've got to blame you for something, and, to say nothing of the goo-goo look of the attitude to the onlooker, think of the danger there is in for a girl if she should happen to have her tongue between her teeth as you histed your shoulder to assist you in guiding her through the intricate mazes. The end of her principal speaking organ might be clipped right off, and you can imagine the difficulty of hunting on a dancing floor for the end of a lady's tongue, when one has such difficulty in finding a handkerchief, a fan, a bunch of flowers and a few yards of lace which have been ripped off her pettiskirt.

This letter is rather long and rambling and doesn't mean much of anything, but it's the very newest thing in letters, so even if you have never learned to dance, don't mind. So with love from all the folks and a request for you to kiss yourself for me, in a languorously languid manner, or abruptly, on the eyes, the hair or the lips—anyway you choose, they seem all to be good literary form and I don't care, being 100 miles away. I really will stop. Write soon to your affectionate,

"SIS."

Evening Story

H C Hobart

WHEN MAN WILLS.

By E. S. Midgley.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

A silver-haired woman, with sadness in her comely, care-worn face sewed, and an old man with fine, benevolent features, smoked, in a vine-covered porch. A passing spring thunder storm had spent its fast fury. The lightning's staccato knife slashed the low, black coluds that hung on the summits of the distant hills. The thunder's diapason had died to an indistinct rumble that groped lazily and uncertainly through the air.

Taking his pipe from his mouth, the man watched the smoke drift away through the fresh, cleansed air. Then his gaze wandered to where the sun was casting long shadows upon the furrows of a freshly plowed, wet field, on across a sunlit meadow and through a shadowed green valley to where a faint, white line of smoke hung in the air which, with a far away locomotive whistle, indicated the passing of a railway train. "Mother, how long is it since Ruth left?"

"Nine months, the fourteenth of this month," was the reply, in a tremulous tone.

Neither spoke again. Their thoughts had traveled over the many weary miles intervening between that lonely New England home and the great city by the lake, which held their only child—their one ewe lamb.

• • •

In the city there was no spring balminess of air. The fringe of winter was still trafling over the city. All day, oblique sheets of rain, thickly interspersed with sullen snowflakes, had cut through the air, transforming the streets into rivers of slush and ooze. A gray granite building stood near the lake shore, just where the winds shrieked fiercest and the waves lashed angriest. It mattered little to those winds and waves that within those walls lay the sick and dying small.

Upon a little white bed in a small, clean room, high up in a corner of the hospital, lay a blue-eyed girl, white and

THOSE smart and clever little finishing touches, those seemingly inconsequent things that tell for, oh! so much in the finished result, are going to be more important than ever in the new scheme of things.

The neckwear counters are simply teeming with new and novel conceits of all sorts and shapes and sizes. The first thing that strikes the observant eye is that collar shapes are distinctly higher and closer than they have been for many a season past. Not that those will prove in the least bit uncomfortable, for the materials of which they are fashioned are as light and sheer, as soft and supple as well may be, and there will be no undue tightness, no constriction of the throat in their wearing. Added to which, they are all of them either of transparent or semitransparent materials, or else they display an amount of openwork in their adornment that will go far towards allowing the free circulation of air which the health of the skin demands.

Although Dame Fashion has declared uncompromisingly for the high and tight collar, the modish follower of her behests need not fear that the dire results that followed the last high-collar season will again ensue. There is not a shadow of a doubt but that high collars, closely constricted, do work havoc with even the most beautiful throat, but, as already noted, these new shapes are totally different in construction as well as in material from their predecessors of several seasons ago.

The softest and sheerest of linen, lace, silk or embroidery is what is chosen nowadays, and the requisite supports are added in the shape of little rods of featherbone, judiciously applied. There is quite a knack in the application of this indispensable little item, and somehow not even all of the professional neckwear makers—and they be a goodly army in themselves nowadays—have caught on to this knack.

To begin with, there are distinct limitations in the size, shape and boning of collars intended for different individuals. The size and shape of the face, the contour of the features, the length of the throat must all be taken into consideration ere the collar is cut. The girl with a round, plump face will find that the collar with a deep point in the center front, and a long, narrow tab continuation will add an oval line to the contour of the face which will prove vastly becoming.

On the other hand, the girl with a classical oval face will do well to adhere to the collar that clasps the throat closely; and especially if her chin be as pointed as some of those classical ones are, then a plain, rounded collar, with no continuation whatsoever, will prove the most fitting choice for her. If her head be small, then the collar that presents those two upstanding little tubs at the back—they are really like long silvers of the material inserted in the upper edge, and rest prettily against the hair—will bring out this good point to perfection. If the line of the jaw be at all sharp, the upward little lift of the collar shape under the ear will soften it wonderfully.

Those collar frames that are displayed in quantity at any up-to-date notion or neckwear counter—different shops have them at the one or the other—will prove a boon to those who are in any quandary as to what size, shape and style of collar to adopt. Just take a bunch of them, well assorted, and try the effect of each before a mirror. Take time enough to the task, for there is nothing whatsoever that will make or mar one's appearance to such a degree as will a well-chosen or an ill-selected collar. View the result from the full face, and then in profile; and judge the collar according. Having decided upon such as prove undeniably becoming, stick to those as long as that style lasts.

With the shops displaying all of the new laces and embroideries, the fashioning of collars, chemisettes and cuff sets for present and future wear becomes a fascinating occupation. Those featherboned frames are really inspirations, so far as collars are concerned; and a wrinkle that will be new to many a clever needlewoman is the use of the tiny featherbone cording along the edges to hold them in shape, while keeping them absolutely flexible. On cuffs this is absolutely indispensable, especially where the handwrought and embroidered linen ones are concerned. When the edges are scalloped, as they are more often than not, then the cording is whipped along the edge, and the buttonholing worked over it. This not only makes a firmer edge, but likewise makes the stitches stand out with far better effect, a point that the worker will hail with joy.

The influence of the Directoire period is plainly visible in the latest neck dressings. High collars and jabots that begin with an elaborated strap for shirtwaist wear, and wind up with an elaboration of ruffling and lacing and pleating, to be worn with dressy blouses and smart house toilettes. Indeed, the collar of today is no longer content to be a mere neck dressing only—it expects to spread itself well over the front of the corsage, besides.

All of the new bodices are being fashioned with an open throat where they do not present a full, square gulmpe opening. Chemisettes and gulmpes are the fad of the moment for home and hand work, and the exclusive specialty shops are displaying exquisite creations in French embroideries, in real laces, that are fairylike to look upon.

Little bags made of the material of the costume, with a most elaborate framework in old Dutch silver, where price does not count, or in some imitation of it, when cost has to be considered, are among the latest showings. They are to be carried loosely over the arm, quite after the old-time fashion, and are supposed to add that touch of quaintness to the costume which the rondaines of today so much affect.

Embroidered buttons are being used in quantity by the great makers of the mode, both here and abroad. The linen gowns that are on view for Southern wear are amply embellished with several sizes of these, and both silk and linen threads—to say nothing whatsoever of gold and silver—are used to their adornment. Velvet frocks lean to the same fashion; and as for the gowns in drap d'ete, henrietta, voile and kindred weaves, the self-covered button, with some sort of hand embroidery, is an absolute necessity to its success.

Evening hoods, to be drawn on or over the coiffure, are another fascinating item that admits of home construction. In England and upon the Continent a hat is not supposed to be worn after dark, and the fashion of elaborate evening chapeaux that finds favor here is utterly unknown in Paris or London. There a hood of some sort, a lace scarf or one of those exquisite Indian affairs is supposed to be thrown over the head when such protection is needed. Lace, silk, satin, chiffon or gauze are most favored, and goodly bows and tiestring of ribbon make a dainty finish.

The Novel Elbow Muff.

The vogue of the short sleeve has induced the smart furrier to bring out a muff that will supply all the deficiencies that such a sleeve presents, when the cold winds of winter do blow. In the illustration it is seen in conjunction with a chapeau and scarf of the same beautiful Russian sable. The hat is one of those closely fitting turban shapes that, however, follows the prevailing fad of a tilt at the left side. Here such trimming as is used is massed. The scarf is one of those simple but clever designs that makes use of the entire sable skin to the best advantage, and that without cutting into the pelt either. The muff, already referred to, is made with a bias seam in the center, which lifts the ends so that they accommodate the wrists and forearm readily, and little turnover cuff effects on either side add much to the charm of this novel design. There is a long fringe of the lower half of the skins, each with its little tail and paws complete, and the entire set shows the absence of the heads that formerly were supposed to be indispensable from a fashion point of view.

The Smart Little Caraco Coat.

The vogue of the short and conspicuously loose coat is one that prevails to a large extent in France, and, to a somewhat lesser degree, over here. A charming example is in a pale yellow broadcloth, with a heavy guipure trimming and some gold brocade bridging the contrast between the cloth and the collar, and vest effect in brown velvet. The coat is of such circular cut that it assumes almost a cape outline below the shoulders, hanging in full godet folds from there down. Deep plaits in the shoulder seams are concealed by the lace and embroidered appliques, that serve to broaden the line at this point, an epaulette effect standing well out over the stiffened sleeve top. The sleeve itself is a full puff, with a cleverly shaped cuff—or, rather, a succession of cuffs—coming from wrist to elbow. The velvet is of the panne variety, and the touch of gold brocade lights up the coat most successfully. Hand-embroidered buttons posed down either side of the front and on the cuff add much to the rich effect.

Narrow black velvet ribbon, either tied in a small flat bow in front or else in the center of the back, is much worn about the neck as a collar finish, the ribbon being placed just below the ruche at the collar top.

Items of Interest to Madame.

The use of gaiters, or spats, as they are also known, is one that grows apace, and now the best tailors are furnishing them to match each and every costume turned out. One sees them along the avenue of an afternoon in even the large plaids that are slowly, but very surely, coming into a distinct vogue for walking costumes. The shoe is usually a thick-soled black coltskin or enameled leather, made with a somewhat pointed toe and a heel that is perceptibly higher than that of last season.

Some quaintly sounding names are applied to the new colorings that Paris advocates. Blotting paper pink; is not altogether the violent, vivid tint that we associate with a pink blotting paper, but rather a softer and much toned down edition of that same coloring. Copybook blue is another title that sounds odd to our Western ears, but it is one that the French man or woman will recognize in an instant. The official school copybooks there all have a cover of a dull blue paper, somewhat like the familiar coloring of Wedgwood china. Sealing-wax red is another familiar coloring, and the list could be prolonged indefinitely. It seems that it is the familiar things of daily life that are used to identify these new and novel colorings, and vague and oftentimes unmeaning descriptions, such as elephant's breath, poet's green, and the like, are to be things of the past, so far as color titles go, anyhow.

There is a sudden revival of the liking for copper—royal copper, as it is termed, which has some gold or ormolu in its composition—for the furnishings of the writing and toilet tables. Some exquisite sets are displayed at a leading jeweler's. One is in the plain burnished copper, while the other has a tracery of silver all over. The latter is effective in the extreme, the dull, soft gray of the silver toning the brilliancy of the copper with a most delightful result.

Large photograph frames are in velvet, with a binding of dull and tarnished gold lace or braid. The velvet is gauffered into floral or foliage designs, and the parts so raised by gauffering are painted in soft colorings. One exquisite example of this work shows a frame of a dull brown velvet, a somewhat tawny tint, upon which a large peacock appears at one corner, the tail spreading all along the bottom and stray feathers scattered over the other side. The opening for the photograph is in the upper left-hand corner, and each and every feather of the brilliant bird is gauffered and painted after the natural colorings. The result is a beautiful and an unusual one, and the price of $25 demanded does not seem at all out of proportion with the beauty, originality and delicacy of the work.

Some exquisite pieces of brocade—they looked like mill samples—were eagerly purchased by a young woman the other day; and on completion of the purchase she explained that they were intended for book covers. The fad for book-binding is one that is taking hold of a number of society women, and it is quite the thing nowadays to follow this or some other such fad. At a recent wedding the bride had a book bound in the white moire of which her wedding gown was made, a beautifully illuminated page in the front of the book for the marriage certificate, and blank pages following, upon which the guests inscribed their autographs. The volume was the work of the maid of honor, and the illuminating was done by one of the bridesmaids, who took a special course in this exquisite work when finishing her education abroad. Another bridesmaid had taken up miniature painting as a fad, and she contributed miniatures of the bride, groom and attendants—one on each page of the book, and a special place outlined for the autograph beneath.

Modes of the Empire Period

Trying Fashions That Are Struggling Hard for Favor—Only the Youthfully Erect and Slender Can Wear Them With Becoming Effect.

Those much-heralded modes of the First Empire are struggling hard for fashionable recognition; and in spite of what self-elected prophets proclaim, truth to tell, they are being worsted in the effort for recognition.

The one thing that those prophets who advocate this style and type of dress seemingly forget is that the present generation of girls is totally and distinctly different in make and construction physically as well as mentally from what their mothers and grandmothers were.

When last those modes of the Empire period were in vogue, the fair femininity of that day were of extremely frail physique, compared to their descendants of today. Then an 18-inch waist was quite the thing, and anything over 20 inches at the best was looked upon as deplorably large, and tending even to vulgarity. It was the Lydia Languish, faint-away, die-away type of girl that novelists depicted, and that womanhood in general strove to follow. The girl who did not faint, burst into tears at the very slightest occasion or opportunity; and to be delicate and sensitive was considered a mark of breeding, and a frame of mind and body to be acquired at almost any cost.

How delightfully different things are managed today! Now the girl who faints or bursts into tears without genuine cause is looked upon as a candidate, and a fit one, too, for sanitarium treatment. And the girl who boasts of an 18-inch belt is regarded as unwholesomely frail, made to partake liberally of codliver oil and strengthening foods, and forbidden to wear corsets until her physique shall have assumed more natural proportions.

This is really and truly, after all, an era of common sense. Good, sound sense in dress, deportment, manner and mode of life. We have our fads, it is true, and they do not all of them accord with the common sense boasted of. But then they are but fads, and recognized as such, and their rise, adopting and waning are but oftentimes a matter of weeks or months at best.

Those really trying modes of the Empire time are adapted for the belles of today only when they are tall and straight and slender. The well-developed girl, as she is termed nowadays, can carry them fairly well, but the matron who has passed her first youth is apt to look somewhat bizarre, especially if she lean to the superabundance of flesh that marks the American woman of some 30-odd years.

At a recent millionaire wedding in one of the fashionable churches in New York the matron of honor, the maid of honor and the 10 bridesmaids were all gowned alike in dresses of the true Empire style. The matron of honor was garbed in rose-colored chiffon velvet, with silver lace and embroideries, the maid of honor in rose-colored chiffon and the bridesmaids in lace over rose-colored taffetas. They were one and all made with the conspicuously short body, elaborate bolero and skimp, scanty skirts that belong to the true type of this mode. The skirts in each and every instance came only to the ankles, and satin slippers with silken hose to match were of rose color also.

The contrast offered by those skimp and scanty skirts of the Empire mode to the extremely full, and circular skirts that prevail upon other costumes is one not at all calculated to bring the former into general favor. When cleverly cut the full skirt is an extremely becoming mode, and with the current tendency to stiffen it for some inches above the hem with a very flexible princess haircloth, it is bound to prove even more generally becoming still.

But there are several old-fashioned notions that belong to the period which are gaining ground almost daily. One of those is the use of the huge granny muffs, which need not necessarily be of fur to prove acceptable. More than one youthful opera goer viewing the performance from a parterre box has carried one of those big muffs, and chiffon and lace, artificial flowers and velvet ribbons are the usual concomitants. They are great, big, round or square effects, with a haircloth foundation, the usual down filling omitted, for these are not at all for warmth; their mission is one of ornament solely.

The fashion of a low-cut neck to gowns for daytime wear is another revival from the days of yore, to which the younger section of society incline somewhat. We have had the collarless blouse with us for sometime, and now this is cut down still a little more, and the low-neck frock for everyday and allday wear is supposed to be the latest thing.

On the other hand, one of the latest fads in blouse and corsage making demands that the waist and the collar be cut in one. It demands a very clever couturiere to fashion this acceptably, so one more often sees it in gulmpe and chemisette form than in an entire waist of one material. Since the size of the collar is of extreme importance, there is little doubt of this fad straying to the ready-mades, so those who follow it may rest assured that the one-piece yoke and collar will long be the distinguishing mark of the made-to-order blouse or gown.

Pets at Skibo Castle

London, Jan. 19.—Margaret Carnegie, the demure and retiring daughter of the millionaire philanthropist, seems to take after her mother. Like the latter she is reticent and bashful. She has the silent manner of an English child when in the presence of elders. Thus far she has not developed the characteristic aggressiveness of her father, and does not dominate the household, after the fashion of American children of a certain set.

She seems to be more at home among her pets than anywhere else. Perhaps her shy and retiring disposition accounts for this. Chief among her dumb friends is an enormous Persian cat, with tiger eyes and Dundreary whiskers. The cat is so large that it looks like a stunted tiger. It has a superb coat of fur, which gives the little animal a wealth of comfort, much needed in the cold climate of Northern Scotland. Its paws are powerful and armed as they are with sharp claws of defense and of offense, the cat would be no mean enemy. Its ferocious eyes and punishing claws are not for Margaret. More likely would they be used to protect the young mistresss of millions than be turned in attack upon her, for the fierce looks leaves its eyes, and the well set paws become velvety, when Margaret is near.

The chief duty of this cat is not to kill mice and rats, nor to chase tomtits or cockrobins, but to play with its mistress. And it must be admitted that they make more racket than might be expected from the retiring child of Skibo castle. They rush through drawing room and library and hall, they jump over chairs and upon tables, they make a bee line for the billiard room and upon the middle of the biggest table they fight to a finish their rough and tumble tournament.

The most exciting race of ... big tomcat and its shy little mistress takes place up the spacious staircase of Skibo castle. Indeed, this staircase is used more by the cat and Margaret than by all the other members of the Carnegie household combined. For the electric shift, which gives such a touch of modernity to this typical Scotch castle, is very much in demand. When Margaret and her cat have tired each other out, they find repose in the slumber of the weary.

The two pets which give the heiress of Skibo castle the best air and sunstinct for the feathered tribe. She loves pigeons. Their billing and cooing take her fancy. The curve of their breasts is a thing of beauty. Little Margaret is known to have shown her artistic temperament by comparing the beautifully rounded breast of the ring-dove with the curves formed by the driven snow. The late John Ruskin wrote that there is nothing so beautiful in nature as these curves. When the wings of her doves droop or when the pigeons give any other indication of illness, Miss Carnegie at once turns nurse. It is fitting that the daughter of the philanthropist, who has already given away $130,000,000 should be a lover of animals. Her humane spirit is inherited and one is not surprised to learn that, young as she is, Miss Carnegie has her pet charities.

A rooster likewise numbers among this young girl's pets and the rooster looks as though it is capable of going into the cockpit and of coming out victoriously. Something of the energy of the father has descended to the daughter. While reposeful in manner her preference is for the strong in animal life.

Little girls like rabbits. They hate the quills of the fretful porcupine, but the soft fur of the rabbit soothes them. Miss Carnegie is no exception and in spite of her inherited energy, she is as feminine as she can be. The gentle touch of the silken rabbit pleases her. Her bunnies are the most tenderly cared for in the whole world.

As peacemaker among her pets Miss Carnegie is peerless. Her dog lives in peace with her rabbits and her Persian cat will not incur her displeasure by making war on her pigeons. Here again heredity shows itself. For Margaret is the daughter of the man who will build the Temple of Peace at The Hague.

When little Margaret gets to her amusements, then there is another story to tell. She can play "puff billiards" successfully against big, black-bearded men. The game seems to be a favorite one at Skibo, partly because it is quite exhilarating and partly because no long and laborious practice is needed to play it. Nor is the game of puff billiards Miss Margaret's only physical accomplishment. The little heiress is a perfect water nymph. The marvelous marble bathing basin in the grounds of Skibo castle has done its work. Here in this salt-sea foam, heated to a comfortable temperature, she splashes and swims siren-like.

MARGARET CARNEGIE AND HER LAMB.

light and exercise are a pet lamb and a shaggy Shetland pony. The former is not a little lamb, like Mary's. I think Margaret Carnegie does not like tiny animals as pets. In the days when she had dolls, none of them were small. Furthermore, it is on record that she fancied an elephant, and her father bought it for her and then she presented the trunky beast to Central park, New York. Her cat is the biggest of the Persian species, and her pony the largest of the Shetland breed.

Margaret and her big lamb romp together on the green sward around Skibo castle. It is a picure of pretty innocence and rural simplicity to see Margaret Carnegie with her tiny arms around the great lamb's neck. Racing out of doors with the lamb on fine days takes the place of indoor dashes with the cat when the weather is not so propitious. There is yet another difference between Margaret of Scotland and her big lamb and Mary of the legend and her little lamb. The big lamb does not go to every place that Margaret goes.

Miss Carnegie rides well. The indications are that she will be a Diana. But no Amazonian astride for this fair huntress. She sits her pony after the fashion of the pluckiest fox hunting ladies of England. The late Cardinal Manning, an excellent type of the ascetic Englishman, used to say that an English gentleman should be able to read Horace and ride after hounds. On a similiar principle, an English or a Scotch or an American lady should be able to speak French and ride across country. Margaret Carnegie will be able to do both.

Miss Carnegie has the prettiest setter in all Scotland. Its big brown mournful eyes look out upon her with limitless affection. This dog is her faithful companion in her walks and in her rides. The young girl likes this beautiful animal with the glossy hair and bushy tail. Her liking is not misplaced. Her confidence in man's faithful companion has not been abused. One of the few clean books of Ouida is "The Dog of Flanders." The book is known in the Carnegie household and Margaret is conversant with its teaching on the fidelity of the dog.

Miss Carnegie has the feminine in-

Among The Plants

Inquiries begin to come in about seed sowing but in my opinion it is much too early for the amateur to try it, for the ordinary dwelling house is not the ideal place for plant growing, and the month of March is soon enough, for most things want to be grown along without a check, especially vegetable plants. Take celery, for instance. Should it become dry or its growth be retarded by poor soil, etc., it will nearly always run to seed; even a dry spell after it is planted out will either send it to seed or make it pithy. I speak of the vegetables first, because I know some of our boys are planning to have a good garden this year and hope they will.

With flowers it is somewhat different. The check that would make the celery run to flower would in their case be a benefit, for it is flowers we are after, and flowers always come before seeds. But some are wanting to grow some flowers, such as pansies, etc., and to such we will try and give a few directions and tell how the florist does it, for he is always sowing something.

First, do not use an earthen pot; it dries out too quickly; use a box; ours are made of lath entirely; this makes a flat two inches deep, for the earth is used for sides and ends, and the bottom laths are, if dry, left about the thickness of a cent apart, so as to insure good drainage, and to let the water come up into the earth from the bottom, for you cannot water a lot of tiny seedlings overhead without doing damage. Of course, any other thin wood can be made up into flats, but be sure not to make it water tight.

Now ...e soil, which is the most important part of all, must have special care in the early months, or you will have your plants "damp off," as we call it. That is, they rot off and fall over before they are large enough to transplant, and the soil must be sterilized. The best way to do this is to bake it in the oven, for 180 deg. of heat kills the germ that causes the "damping," so we get a clean start. Unsanitary conditions may form a new colony of fungoid growths afterwards, but let us start aright.

The soil should be of light texture, and after it is well baked a little of the finest may be sifted out through a piece of wire window screening and set aside dry for covering the seeds after they are sown. The remainder, being as dry as dust, must have a good watering, and then be left until it is in good working condition, that is thoroughly moist, but not sticky and wet. Then fil your flat, forming it evenly with your hands; then smooth off with a piece of board and it is ready for the tiny seeds, and when you open your packets of flower seeds and find only a little stuff that looks like dust don't try to sow it with your fingers, but take a tablespoonful of your dry covering earth in a saucer and mix your dust like seeds with it thoroughly, then scatter the whole evenly over your flat, and you will find your seedlings will come up evenly and not in bunches. Do not sow too thickly, i r plenty of air circulating among the little plants is a nec..ssity. Now press the earth down evenly with some smooth article, then scatter a little of your fine dry earth over the whole surface and again press it down gently, then water it a little just enough to moisten the covering materia.. The best way to do this is with a saucer of water and a whisk broom, but be sure and do not put on enough to wash or displace the seeds. Then lay a couple of small sticks across the flat and lay a pane of glass over it. The sticks are to prevent the glass from touching the soil, and generally no more attention is needed until the seedlings are up, and then the glass must be immediately removed.

Nearly all seeds sown early require a night temperature of 60 deg., but as soon as they are well up we change them to the full sunshine and a temperature of 50 deg. at night, to 75 deg. in the sunshine. Cover very fine seeds very lightly; some need scarcely any covering where a pane of glass is used.

If the flat dries out too quickly, hold it in the washtub a minute and let the water soak in from the bottom, and as soon as the plants are large enough to handle, transplant into other flats, but give all the air and sunshine to the young plants you possibly can. And now good luck to your new garden for 1906; may it be prettier than ever.

School Children's Letters

Duluth Youngsters State What They Would Rather be If They Were Not Themselves.

The publication in The Herald last Saturday of the adventures of a lone reporter in a Duluth school house has resulted in the contribution, by an A fourth grade teacher, of some of the compositions written by the youngsters under her charge. Most of them are very interesting.

The topic assigned to the children was, "Who would you rather be if you were not yourselves?" This was an interesting topic, and the pupils gave all sorts of reasons for their preferences.

Most of the little girls declared that they would like to be Alice Roosevelt, because she was the president's daughter and was about to be married. The president himself was quite a favorite among the boys, who remembered that he was once a plainsman and headed the Rough Riders during the war with Spain.

One little fellow wanted to be Paul Revere, because he could ride through the country and spread the alarm, and "be booted and spurred with a heavy stride."

Following are some of the compositions:

"If I wasn't myself I would like to be Alice Rooosevelt, because her father is President of the U. S. But at the same time I would not be her because she is going to get married with a man that is about 36 or 37 yrs. and she is only a young girl."

* * *

"I would like to be Paul Revere, because I could ride through the country and spread the alarm. And climb the tower of the North church. And row to the Charles town shore. And ride on a horse. And be booted and spurred with a heavy stride."

* * *

"I would like to be a giant. Cause I could take a big step over a house and wouldn't have to go around it. And be strong and big."

* * *

"I like to be president Roosevelt because I can rule the U. S. and can have lots of money. When he was not a president he was a cow boy. And he would ride a Indian poney. And run all over the plains."

* * *

This little girl is well up on current events, as are most of the pupils. Her contribution is interesting, even if she does have President Roosevelt accompanying his daughter on her trip to the Far East. She says:

"If I were not myself I would rather be Alice Roosevelt. Because she can travel all over. I read in the paper that she was traveling on water all over with Mr. Roosevelt. And because she is the presidents daughter. Once there was a Chinese woman who invited her to visit her. I do not know if it was the queen or not."

This little fellow evidently admires his nation's heroes, because he would rather be George Washington, than anyone else except himself. His spelling is a little off but his heart is in the right place. He says:

"If I were not myself I would like to be Greoge Washington. Why I'd like to be Greoge Washington because he was brave and true."

This little boy would like to be young Theodore Roosevelt, but confesses that he likes to be himself all right:

"I wish I was Ted. Roosevelt and have a horse and everything I wanted. Then I could be all through with high high school and in college. I would be riding my horse all the time. I would get of good saddle and have lots of fun. I would like to be myself best."

Here is an admirer of the hero of Manila Bay:

"If I was not my self. I would like to be Dewey and go to war. To fight for America."

* * *

This is a young humorist's contribution:

"If I wasn't myself. I would like to be Jahn Steward's teacher, so I could wake him up, when he went to sleep, and give he a whiping when he played hookey."

* * *

Another little Miss envies Miss Roosevelt:

"If I was not my self I would like to be Alice Rosevelt. Because she is goin to be marrid to an rich man and her wedding gown is goin to be satin and lace and large valle over her face. Her wedding is goin to be in the white house in the east room. And all her friends are goin to be there and some of her friends to be her bridsmaids."

* * *

This was written by a coming mechanical expert:

"I would like to be Mr. Rion because he makes lots of things. He is a mechest. He makes boylers and reparis meshery. I like to make things."

* * *

This little girl has learned early the ways of the world. She gives away family secrets in this manner:

"I was not myself I would want to be a married lady and then I would not have to get up in the morning until I wanted too, like mama. I would not get up til noon then I would go down town shopping."

Letter From China

Written by Mrs. Burton St. John, Formerly of Duluth, Contains Much of Interest.

Many Duluth people and especially those who are interested in missions watch with interest the life of Mr. and Mrs. Burton St. John who are at Tientsen under the direction of the Methodist board of missions. Mrs. St. John was Miss Jo Barnes of this city and after her wedding here in August, 1902, left with her husband for China. Their original intentions were for a five years' mission but since settling there they have decided to remain for two years more, so it will be at least three years longer before they return to this country for their vacation. Mrs. St. John in September of last year took charge of the Anglo-Chinese Girls' school at Tientsin, which is under the direction of the Methodist board. The school is for the education of Chinese women, the wives and daughters of the high officials in the English language. A Christian influence is back of the school, of course, but the first object is the teaching of English that these women may have the benefit of foreign education as the men are coming to have more and more.

Some extracts from letters of recent date will be of interest to many here:

"Alice Roosevelt was here last week. We went to the train when she came in. A great and picturesquely international crowd was there to meet her. The viceroy sent his band, which played the 'Star Spangled Banner,' and also sent his private carriage for her, with a mounted body guard. Extra police kept the road clear all the way through the Russian concession in which the railway station is situated. That evening the viceroy gave a great reception in her honor, and for the first time in history his wife received in public with him. He also showed her other honors, which have never yet been shown to any of the visiting nobility of Europe. Her visit was rather spectacular, and she apparently enjoyed it. Our viceroy is about the strongest man in China.

"Mrs. St. John recently showed some wealthy Chinese ladies, from Peking, through the foreign stores here, and the British Park. When she arrived there she found that she would not be permitted to take them through. Chinese and dogs are not permitted. She went to the office of the chief of police and got permission to show them the park or gardens as they are known here. One of the ladies is from the palace of Prince Wang."

Of special interest is Mrs. St. John's account of the effort being made in China to raise the indemnity among the people of the country. The idea is a new one to people in this country who have kept in touch with this matter and the following article by Mrs. St. John will be read with interest and profit:

"Among the many incidents of the last six months which show that changes are the order of the day in China, is one which really comes from the people. If its propogators are able to accomplish what they wish, it will be an 'all China' movement, and one which will foster a patriotic national consciousness. This movement is the result of a proposition for the people to repay to the government the amount of the indemnity now being paid by China to the foreign powers.

"The originators of this idea are two Chinese gentlemen of Peking. One of these men, the one who is the real leader, is the editor of the Peking Vernacular Gazette, the only newspaper in North China published in the ordinary language of the people. This paper has been the chief organ of the propoganda. Day by day it publishes the list of gifts from various sources, generally with the names of the givers.

"In brief, the plan is to secure from every man, woman and child, as far as possible a gift or a subscription to the government until an amount equal to the total of the Boxer indemnity is raised. Gifts are to be repaid if the entire amount is not raised. The money is not to be turned over to the government until the entire sum is in hand. Until that time, private citizens with proper guarantees, or commercial banks are to be trustees of the fund. No external pressure is to be brought on any man to secure a gift or subscription. Every man is to give as a free will offering to his country, and to give as he is able. The smallest gifts receive as much notice as the larger ones.

"This scheme is urged, first as an economical plan, and second as a demonstration of patriotism. It is economical because it will save China the interest on the unpaid portion of the indemnity during the next thirty years. It will also save the cost of collecting of the necessary indemnity taxes during this time. This is no small item, for if we are to believe current report, the existing plan for the collection of taxes yields itself to excessive 'squeezing' on the part of the numerous officials through whose hands it passes. In fact, it is claimed by some that fully 50 per cent of the taxes never reach the central government. Whether this be true or not, it is fully credited by many of the people. The increase in the cost of living in North China, and perhaps in other parts of China as well, is put chiefly at the door of this excessive indemnity taxation. The propogators of this plan to raise the indemnity by popular subscription believe the payment in cash would at once result in the lowering of prices generally. This would indeed be a great boon to the many poor of China.

"But the real root of the idea lies in the patriotic sentiment, which is increasing daily in China. This is not so much a matter of loyalty to the existing government, as it is a development of love for country as such. This plan is believed to be one in which all China can wisely unite. It is not one to which any one province or race or class is especially interestd, as it affects every home in China. Carrying this plan to a successful issue would do much towards developing the national consciousness.

"The great difficulty in raising so vast a sum of money from the 400,000,000 people of China arises chiefly in bringing the mass of people to appreciate the value of doing such a thing. Probably not more than 200,000 of those people ever see any newspaper. More than half could not read it if they should see one. It therefore rests upo nthe more favored people to thoroughly proclaim by word of mouth the desirability of practicability of the scheme. And it is those who are most interested. The progressive political party, the students and the members of the Christian church are those who have supported the plan and who are now honestly endeavoring to make it a success.

"That the Christians should enter heartily into this patriotic movement is a matter of surprise to the non-Christian Chinese. It has been a favorite complaint against Christians that they are followers of foreigners and hence do not love their country. To see them now among the first to sacrifice for their country's good is teaching their fellow countrymen a lesson in practical Christianity which will be of great value to the kingdom of God in China."

WHEN MAN WILLS.

weak. Except for her faint breathing, one might have thought her dead. Occasionally, a soft-stepping nurse, white capped and sympathetic of face, stole silently into the room, felt the patient's pulse for a minute, looked compassionately at the pallid, girlish face, marked upon the chart over the bed and tip-toed out again. Later, a group of doctors entered the room, bringing with them a little whiff of anaesthetics and the ever present antiseptic. The gray-haired doctor looked sharply at the patient a moment, shook his head gravely and said slowly:

"She will not live till morning. The strength of the patient has been exhausted in conquering the disease."

Two of the three young men with him, nodded their heads in grave silence. The third drew a quick breath and pressed his lips tightly together. It was a way Dr. Dubois had when he felt intensely. Before the group turned a corner in the long corridor, the girl heard the old doctor say:

"If she could be aroused, there might be some hope. This deadly lethargy—"

During the afternoon, Dr. Dubois had frequently snatched a moment from his other duties to ascertain her condition. He had taken a deep interest—how deep he had not realized until now—in this brilliantly gifted, courageous little girl, who had left home and friends to pursue her art studies. The indomitable perseverance, ambition and industry which had already won her extraordinary recognition in her art had, at first, excited his admiration. Later, when he came to know the sweetness of her character, her lovableness and sincerity, his regard had deepened. And now she was dying.

It was nearly midnight—the hour fraught with such dire peril to the desperately ill—when Doctor Dubois, after whispering to the nurse that he would watch beside the patient until morning, softly entered the dimly lighted room and sat down by her bedside. Even in that indistinct light Roger Dubois would have impressed any one as being a not ordinary man. Tall, athletic, with a magnificent head, keen, intelligent, gray eyes and fine, strong face, in which, although he was still young, his hard work already had left its imprint, he was eminently good to look upon. He understood, perfectly, the crisis at hand for this young girl—that the chances were that she would give up the battle with death from sheer exhaustion, weariness and langour. He had conquered the disease, but the fatal weakness remained to combat. The dogged determination in his eyes, the tense lines around his mouth and the quick-drawn breath meant that Doctor Dubois had resolved to help his patient fight the desperate battle. He bent over her taking her white, weak, little hand in his own ample palm, which pulsed with life and vigor. Her pulse was now a mere flutter and with closed eyes she lay white and still as though she were already entering the "Valley of the Shadow." He divined that she was still conscious and, looking straight into her face, with eyes that shone with an indomitable will-power, he bent still nearer and said very softly but distinctly:

"Ruth." Her white face showed not the slightest sign of recognition—yet she had heard.

"Ruth," he continued in a low, intense tone, "you are not going to die! For the sake of the loving, white-haired couple at home, whose all-in-all you are, you will live! Look! Can't you see the peaceful home of which you have told me—the white, vine-embowered cottage, with its little garden so carefully tended by loving hands because it is Ruth's garden? And your own little room, can't you see it, kept with loving care just as you left it? Don't you know that the dear ones at home are anxiously counting the hours until your return? It you die, little girl, they, too, will die like the flowers in the little garden."

The small face on the pillow, which had always reminded him of a sweet briar rose, and was still pretty, despite its deathly pallor, showed no sign of having heard. The breathing seemed to grow fainter and fainter.

"You are going to live for me, little one! Do you hear me, Ruth? I love you—I need you! You are not going to leave me, darling one. You are going to live for me—for me! You must—you shall live! I will it so!"

He seemed concentrating all of the power and energy of his forceful, vigorous young mind and nature in a tremendous struggle to throttle death—vanquish him. Hour after hour he sat thus, with white, tense face, determined, compelling eyes and chin set in desperate, stubborn resolve and grim as granite.

During the small hours of the morning, when human vitality reaches its lowest ebb—when so many souls take their flight—he experienced all of the agony of failure. The sweet face on the pillow had become more ghastly. The pulse scarcely fluttered. The agonized man bending over her noted these ominous symptoms, but they merely spurred him to greater endeavor. Every atom of reserve power and strength, mental and physical, was poured out in his frenzied effort to drag from the awful abyss over which she hung, this precious, tender little flower of womanhood. By sheer force of will he strove to infuse into her apparently lifeless, comatose little body a portion of his own great vigor and strength. Heavens! If he could but sap his heart of its life blood and transmit it to hers!

His nerves and feelings were wrought up to the highest possible tension. In his excited imagination, he seemed to see, across the narrow bed from him, the leering, gloating, ghoulish figure of death, already encircling, with his awful arms, the precious little form, and gleefully dragging it from him forever!

Then, just when the despairing, heart-sickening realization of impotency came to him—like a knife thrust in and turned—there came a change, so slight that only the skilled, professional eye would have noted it. But the man, upon whose brow great drops of perspiration stood, drew a sharp breath of relief and exultation. He had won.

When the cold rays of morning lighted up the still angry waves of the lake and stole in at the window of the little white room, he was still there. The girl lay in the first natural sleep she had known in many weary days and nights. The man's face was almost as pallid as her own. His head was bent low and his eyes closed from sheer exhaustion. But he still clung to the wan little hands as though he feared that, were he to release them, his victory would prove but a truce.

In the porch of a white, vine-embowered cottage, bathed in the warm rays of the afternoon sun, sat a white-haired woman and a benevolent-faced old man. A patriarch Balm of Gilead tree, which stood a few feet away, was jubilantly pouring a libation of perfumed incense into the warm summer air. A kingly pine seemed softly singing a paean of praise.

The old man took his pipe from his mouth and said:

"Mother, how many hours, now, before the children come—Ruth and her doctor?"

"Three—and twenty-three minutes, now," she replied with a beaming face. Then they both smiled at nothing at all.

A Back Yard Chicken Farm

How Miss Pitchlynn, the Choctaw Princess, Raises 500 Pullets Every Season at Washington.

New York, Jan. 27.—That the Choctaw princess who exhibited at the recent poultry show in Madison Square garden can raise with profit 400 chickens a season in a city backyard is a wonderful discovery, especially to suburbanites who have met with nothing but failure in far more roomy coops and runs. That the young woman, Miss Sophia Pitchlynn, also treats her chickens as chums and holds conversations with them is also interesting, but not so much so as the business side of the occupation to many who have the desire to keep poultry.

Miss Pitchlynn lives with her brother, Lee Pitchlynn, who assists her in the work, at No. 1104 Sixth street, N. W., Washington, D. C. Her poultry plant is in the rear of the 40x20 foot yard, between two brick buildings, in which every inch of space is utilized. There is a paved floor, the coops being aligned along the side walls, which are whitewashed, and the space is covered with a glass roof and white awnings. There are incubator and brooder sheds, several breeding pens, a coop for ailing fowl and the coops for the thriving flock, and a 6x10 foot run where the pullets scratch. Cockerels are not kept by Miss Pitchlynn, as they are too noisy, and she sells them as chicks.

Running the incubator is no more trouble than managing an automobile, and the regulation of the heat and egg shelves no harder to learn, says Miss Pitchlynn, and her healthy yards of cocks and hens supply the eggs needed. When the eggs pop out—or blossom, as a child said at the show—Miss Pitchlynn does not touch them for twenty-four hours. They drop to the bottoms of the incubators and get lively, pecking meanwhile at the shreds of shell. A hen does not move with her brood the first day nor do the chicks eat, for the last thing each does before breaking the shell is to eat the white, or albuminous part of the egg. The best an incubator mother can do, as Miss Pitchlynn has learned by experience, is to let the little fluffs hustle for themselves for a spell. She proves what Lord Dundreary used to deny that birds without a feather can "f-f-flock t-t-together."

Next to the brooders are runs of light and shaded ends and of different degrees of temperature, so that the chilly chicks may gather around the club fire and lusty ones seek outdoor exercise, as it were. The chicks are now taught to scratch for their first food, for Miss Pitchlynn does not believe in raising her broods on silver spoons. The food is carefully prepared. One receipt is of one pint of cornmeal, one teacupful of bran and one tablespoonful of chopped raw meat, all kneaded together. Then a raw egg, half a teaspoonful of baking powder and a teacup of cold water mixed up in a separate dish. The two messes and three teaspoonfuls of ground bone are made into a cake and baked in a deep pan for two hours.

These cakes may be cooked before the incubators are disgorging the chicks, and various changes may be made in the diet. When ten days old Miss Pitchlynn weans over the chicks to wheat, oats and corn, and ground oyster shells, charcoal and bone are kept before them in separate dishes. Stale bread and milk is also a good first food. Her chicks get no water to drink for ten days, but all the skimmed milk they want.

Chopped onions and boiled potatoes give variety, and help to get the chicks to the six weeks age, the most critical period, and after that they may begin scratching for grits and small grain in assorted flocks. Good housing, cleanliness and plenty of pure water are the preventives of disease in poultry, and all these Miss Pitchlynn takes good care to provide. Sick birds are isolated and especial care taken to guard against colds. If the weather changes over night, Miss Pitchlyn is up to open or shut the windows, and if she hears a pullet complaining when it should be asleep, or a commotion caused by a bird with the nightmare knocking another from the perch, the owner is always awake and ready to comfort the sufferers and restore peace to the coop.

Miss Pitchlynn's greatest discovery is to spread sheets of paper on the coop floors night and morning, which by such frequent changing does away with sweeping, and keeps the boards as white and spotless as a dairy floor. An occasional fumigation of a coop with sulphur fumes is a help to cleanliness and the parches are kept moist with kerosene. Whitewash is a right bower with Miss Pitchlynn in her poultry game, and she puts an ounce of carbolic acid in each pailful.

The run and the coop bottoms are strewn with chaff and fodder, in which the grain is strewn, and the pullets get plenty of exercise scratching for it. Chopped clover hay and other green food are added, also sunflower and millet seed to give gloss to the feathers.

Miss Pitchlynn has been a fancier for four years. She began with Plymouth Rocks, but they were too indolent to scratch, and from lack of exercise became too fat to lay eggs. They were lusty, though, and after the first year Miss Pitchlynn sold off 500 pullets and began with single comb brown Leghorns. She finds them an active breed, great layers and fine as a table fowl. Confinement keeps poultry tender, and Miss Pitchlynn's birds are in demand by epicures, while, with forty pullets laying, she has gathered up 540 eggs in one month.

"Between eggs, sales of birds and of show birds," Miss Pitchlynn remarked when in New York, "my brother and I make our plant pay a profit. But we are amateurs, and would keep poultry whether we made any money or not. He had the fancy first, and I took hold to please him, but now I have the fever, too. My aim is to raise the ideal single comb brown Leghorn, and I am going up a step each year on the ladder of success. None of my pullets has won here, but it was the best class ever seen at New York. Yet I might have won had not my winning pullet of the Rockhill and Hagerstown pairs taken sick and died. I had refused $150 for it. Once a person begins raising blue ribbon winners there is money in poultry, you see, and with 3,000 to 5,000 birds at every big city show a good many seem to have found this out. This is my first city show, and I'll bring better pullets next year. I raise 400 to 500 Leghorns each season.

"Symmetry, harmony of plumage, especially in hackle and wings, and general character are the important points of the standard of perfection, and what I have always in mind. Here, at this show, a man offered me the choice of his cockerels at a fair price and I wanted a certain one.

"'No, you can't have that one,' said he, 'I've just bought that to breed to my home birds, but you can take any one of the others at your price.'

"'In other words,' said I, 'you want to sell me birds you can't breed from yourself. Now, I'll tell you why. All of your birds carry their tails too high, instead of having them at the proper angle from the wings. You are buying fresh stock to breed away from that defect and would like to pass it along to me, but no, thank you.'

"That fancier looked pretty cheap, I tell you. It is the sort of thing one is always up against, but you must study the points and then drive a sharp bargain. That's why I do better at buying than my brother, for he is so good-natured he believes every word these men tell him."

Miss Pitchlynn puts on a smock of striped linen when handling her birds at a show, but after the first visit of the morning she is to be seen only in fashionable clothes, that match her belaced hat, which earlier had looked somewhat odd over the smock.

"This is my pet," said Miss Pitchlynn, taking out a pullet and stroking it. Then asked the fowl if it liked New York and the show. The pullet clucked to her, and as Miss Pitchlynn smoothed the feathers it cackled softly as a cat purrs when fondled the same way. "I know every pullet by sight and have a name for it. Most of them will come when I call them, and all will speak when I question them. When I go into the coop the pullets flock about me and sit on my shoulders as I am told pigeons do with one they love. The poultry vocabulary is limited, but expressive, and I know by the noises of the pullets in the night whether they are calling for me or not. If they need me, I tend to them and a fancier must be willing to work at night as well as all day long to make a success of poultry in a backyard. No lazy person may make such a plant a success."

Peter Pitchlynn, the father of Miss Sophia and Lee, was a Choctaw chief who for 25 years represented the tribe at Washington, where he married and set up the house his children now own, and they have also tribal lands in the Indian Territory. It may be that Miss Pitchlynn's eye for the good points of a chicken is an inheritance from the chief, a utilization in handling and judging as a peaceful chicken fancier of the woodcraft known for generations in the Choctaw tribe. This handiness with domestic animals is a familiar trait among halfbreeds, and it is often dubbed an outcrop of the old mastery of the wild possessed by the Indian warriors. A halfbreed on Rancho del Paso, in California, could pick out and name any horse or mare running in a herd of 400 or 500 thoroughbreds, and there are many similar instances on record. But the energy and industry that Miss Pitchlynn puts into the care of her poultry, say the gossips, is an inheritance from her white mother.

"The Menace of Privilege," a new work on current economic conditions in the United States, by Henry George, Jr., a striking picture of modern times, and it shows the author to be a worthy son of his late father the gifted author of "Progress and Poverty."

The title gives a comprehensive hint at the contents of the volume. It pictures the growth of corruptive wealth, founded upon special privileges, details the evils that it works, and shows how the accumulation of enormous fortunes in the hands of a few leads to the impoverishment and deterioration of the many. It gives the author's opinion of the cause of these conditions, and his remedy for them. It is full of staggering facts, facts that will be revelations even to those who deem themselves familiar with conditions. It is well written, clearly thought out and logically laid down. It is a book whose striking interest will compel attention, and it will be read closely, even by many who will not agree with the author's economic theories.

Mr. George's idea is that the forms of special privilege that have been most potent in their production of economic inequalities are the land monopoly, the protective system, franchise grants, taxation of production and its fruits, the power of incorporation, and various sorts of immunities in the courts. The people, flushed with content and prosperity, have unthinkingly passed over to a designing few the control of the land, the basis of all wealth, and have turned the stream of wealth into a few channels that flow into overfed reservoirs while the people go thirsty.

His remedies include the abolishment of the private ownership of natural opportunities; the abolishment of the tariff and other taxation on production and its fruits; the abolishment of special government grants, such as public service charters; and the abolishment of grants under general laws and immunities in the courts, such as the New Jersey corporations and the insurance corporations.

Even though one may be inclined to disagree with Mr. George's theories, the book is worth reading for the striking picture it draws of the conditions and tendencies in the United States. It is published by the MacMillan company, New York.

In his new novel "A Maker of History" E. Phillips Oppenheim tells the story of a young Englishman who accidentally becomes the possessor of a portion of a secret agreement between Russia and Germany, and thereby lays up for himself a world of trouble. For some time all the ingenuity of the secret police of three countries is taxed to obtain possession of that one paper and the hero. The plot is one of tense power, and the reader is carried at breathless pace through a maze of incident, plot, and counterplot. A pleasing love element relieves the heavier interest of the story, which is altogether one of the best the author of "The Master Mummer," "Mysterious Mr. Sabin," etc., has written. The book is illustrated by Fred Pegram and is published by Little, Brown & Company, Boston.

In "The Ranche on the Oxhide," a new edition of which is just published by The Macmillan Company, Col. Henry Inman tells a story of the life of a family of two boys and two girls on a ranch in the far West before the railway stretched into Kansas. In those days every settler was likely at any time to receive a sudden visit from an Indian tribe, to meet a mountain lion as a fellow huntsman on the trail of a deer, or to clamber into the lair of a wolf while hunting small game. Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and Gen. Custer are characters in the story.

"Boyville," by John E. Gunckel, president of the National Newsboys' association of America, is an interesting story of newsboys' life which incidentally gives a good idea of the noble work that is being done by the author in furthering the interests of the newsboys. It shows on intimate acquaintance with the lives, habits, temptations and opportunities of the little fellows who are familiar figures on the streets of every city, and is calculated to create great interest in the work that is being done for them. Mr. Gunckel is forming newsboys' associations in the different cities of the United tates as fast as possible, and ultimately expects to have a branch in every city in the country. The need of such work must be clear to everybody who is at all familiar with the lives of the brave little merchants who are getting such an early experience in business,and,sad to say, in many other things not so beneficial to them or to society at large. The book is an interesting study of that most interesting specimen of manhood in embryo, the newsboy, and it cannot fail to compel the attention of its readers and give them a greater concern in the uplifting of these boys who will become men and citizens. The proceeds of the sale of the volume, which sells at 75 cents at all bookstores, go into the treasury of the Newsboys' association. It is published by the Toledo Newsboys' association, Toledo Ohio.

Delightful short stories, articles of vital interest, and pictures by the best artists in color, tint, or black and white, characterize the February number of Harper's. Mr. Deland's novel, "The Awakening," enters its second instalment, and from page to page piques the reader's curiosity as to what manner of woman Helena Ritchie is. The frontispiece of this number is a striking piece of colorwork by Lucius W. Hitchcock. One of Edwin A. Abbey's illustrations for "Julius Caesar," is also reproduced in color most effectively, while his remaining two drawings are in black and white. Besides these there are nine pictures in tint. Mr. Nevinson concludes his narrative of the African Slave-Trade by one of the most interesting articles of the series; and Prof. Pickering, who occupies the chair of Astronomy at Harvard, throws much light on the nature and phenomena of comets. W. M. Flinders-Petrie, professor of Egyptology, University College, London, tells the story of his recent discoveries in Sinai which illuminate a past so remote as to be well-nigh incredible.

Lippincott's Magazine for February opens with a novelette by Jennette Lee called "One Way of Love." This is a clever interpretation of a man's life, and possesses a singularly clinging charm. The lucid directness of style fits well its sincere characterization of New England people whose inheritance is that of brains, not money. When the man meets with a disappointment at the outset of his career, the scales dip so far, weighted by his grief, that it seems as if he must go under. But an older man's experience and advice save him. The real action of this absorbing story is placed in Chicago, where the man adopts newspaper work, and there he finds the woman who becomes his inspiration. Leading the shorter fiction of the month is "In the Strong Man's Borders," by Frank Saville. It is a thrilling romance of the rescue of a girl from a fate worse than death. The story of a plucky newsboy is told by Walt Makee under the title, "The Initiative of Pokes."

The February Century is called the midwinter fiction number—it is also an issue of distinctive Keats interest, and a number beautiful in its color and tint pages, including as it does another of Anna Whelan Betts quaintly charming pictures of life fifty years ago, "The Guitar;" the fourth of Ivanowski's beautiful sketches of the seasons, "Winter;" in tint, the "standard portrait" of Keats by Joseph Severn, an illustration by Harrison Fisher; and most notable of all, another of Timothy Cole's engravings of old Spanish Masters, St. Agnes, by Alonzo Cano. Madame de Pastourelle, promising to prove one of the most appealing and charming characters Mrs. Ward has drawn, is the dominant figure in the February chapters of "Fenwick's Career." There will be keen interest, too, in the first chapters of the new novel by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, "A Diplomatic Adventure," which opens in Paris with a mystery and promise of a duel which may or may not unravel the mystery. Elliott Flower, whose stories have a happy way of dealing with questions of the day, has a specially lively and timely tale in "The Bribe That Went Astray," in which the denouement is quite as much of a surprise to the characters as to the reader. There are half a dozen other short stories, including "The Intellectual Miss Lamb," by Florence Morse Kingsley, author of "The Transfiguration of Miss Philura," "The Singular Miss Smith," and "Titus."

Joseph Jefferson, one of the best loved American actors, is the subject of the leading paper in the February number of Scribner's Magazine by Francis Wilson, the well-known actor, who knew him for years. These reminiscences are full of anecdote and story, giving Mr. Jefferson's opinions about the arts of acting and painting, and his own recollections of distinguished men in many vocations. The article in this number deals particularly with Rip Van Winkle—its origin and development as a play, with amusing anecdotes about Mr. Jefferson and his experiences while playing it. There are also pleasant glimpses of Jefferson as a painter, and his views and preferences for various artists. The amazing success of "The House of Mirth" still continues, and the readers of it will be interested in Edith Wharton's story in this number entitled "The Hermit and the Wild Woman"—a charming phantasy with a deep significance. George Moore's reminiscences of the group of Impressionist painters who in his student days used to frequent a Parisian cafe tell of the opinions and characteristics of Manet, Degas, Monet, and others who afterwards came to be looked upon as the leaders in a new movement in art.

There is always something in The Reader to interest the thinking man or woman—something that goes beyond the passing interest aroused by fiction and that teaches the real inner consciousness of the one who reads. The February Reader has two such articles. One is the conclusion of Dr. Hale's two-installment paper on "Tuberculosis, Climate and the Great Southwest;" the other is Talcott Williams' analytical discussion of last November's elections, which appears under the title "The Municipal Revolution: Was It Social or Political?" One treats of the ills of the body physical; the other of the ills of the body politic. There is food for thought in both of these articles. Besides the serious discussions in the February Reader there is a story by Gouverneur Morris, entitled "Provident Children" illustrated in color. The second installment of the new Susan Clegg story, "The Wolf at Susan's Door," is as entertaining as any one could wish.

Variety is again a marked characteristic of The World Today for February. This ten-cent magazine always gives a large choice of subjects, with an abundance of fine illustrations. An appreciation of President William Rainey Harper, by E. Benjamin Andrews, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, is a notable feature. The remarkable social changes effected by the development of trolley transportation are interestingly set forth by Karl Edwin Harriman. C. H. Quinn writes of the importance of the Erie canal in lessening freight rates, while the valuable work of irrigation undertaken by the government in the Western deserts is described by Hamilton Wright, under the caption, "The Government as a Homemaker." "The Kansas Land Fraud Investigation" is the subject of an article by Sheffield Cowdrick, who shows the government engaged in another capacity, the defense of its public lands from unscrupulous cattlemen.

True stories of important movements and of good, healthy combat are the dominant traits of McClure's for February. Even after the peep behind the curtains afforded by the sessions of the interstate commerce commission, and of the legislative insurance investigation, and by the upheavals of last fall's political campaign, there are disclosures in this number concerning railroad abuses, life insurance juggling, and political trickery which will take hard hold of every citizen. There is the case of Everett Colby. "The Gentleman from Essex," by Lincoln Steffens, which is full of the sturdy effort of honesty and youth. Ray Stannard Baker, continuing his series, "The Railroads on Trial," tells the astonishing story of how Armour, through his private car line, monopolized the fruit transportation business of America, practically told the railroads that they might as well burn their own refrigerator-cars, and, turning to the shipper reaped a golden harvest by daring and open methods. Then he writes of the revolt of honest shippers against Armour. An editorial under the title "Manufacturing Public Opinion," lets in a little light on the shadows of the publicity making machine which has grafted the rotten structures of the life insurance companies, and of the get-rich-and-get-rich-at-any-cost corporations. "The Day of Precious Pearlities" for the precocious Pettison twins by Marion Hill; "Old Bernstein and de great Fiddle" by Ernest Poole; "The Praying Skipper" by Ralph D. Paine; the second story of the "Arizona Nights" series by Stewart Edward White; and "Wild Waters" by Lloyd Osbourne furnish strong interest for fiction lovers.

Indoor gardening is exhaustively treated in the February Number of the Garden Magazine and there are many valuable hints given to professionals and amateurs who have hotbeds for raising extra early crops. The issue is full of over-early suggestions and forerunners of real spring which tantalize us into believing that there is actually some chance of seeing fresh green foliage and gay flowers out-of-doors again. Under the head of "March Flowers Without a Greenhouse," Laura French Mordaunt and Gertrude L. Whitlock tell how to make the blossoming shrubs and trees gain six weeks on the lagging season by cutting branches and forcing them indoors in the window. E. L. Fullerton describes the construction of an inexpensive yet substantial hotbed that will save a salad bill for a large family, and bring fresh crisp vegetables to the table long before the outdoor crop is available.

The camera of Julian A. Dimock has again broken all records, and his twenty-one tarpon pictures in the February Country Life in America, will make photograph history for ten years to come. This, and fifteen other profusely illustrated articles go to make up an unusually interesting and beautiful magazine. The leading feature of the magazine. "After Tarpon with a Camera" by Julian A. Dimock and illustrated by twenty-one of his remarkable photographs, tells of the thrilling sport of photographing a tarpon while he is making a leap of from nine to twelve feet. "The Boston Terrier," by Sherwin Hawley, tells us of a distinctly American breed that has reached a high standard of perfection—his cost and his points of character. In "More Winter Flowers," by J. N. Gerard, we hear of plants that bloom out doors in the Northern states from December to March without any protection whatever.

The Forum for January-March leads off with Harry Litchfield West's comprehensive review of "American Politics," treating of the opening of the Fifty-ninth congress, and such impending issues as tariff revision, the regulation of railroad rates, the admission of new states, one-man power in the house of representatives, the congressional campaign of next fall, the question of contributions to political funds, and the recent wave of reform that has swept over municipalities and public offices generally. "Foreign Affairs" in the first lustrum of the twentieth century, just completed, are dealt with by A. Maurice Low in his customary lucid and picturesque manner. "Finance," by Alexander D. Noyes, sums up the ruling conditions in the world's markets at the year-end.

Wood Craft for January has profusely illustrated articles on a modern furniture factory, tool chests, the pattern shop and storage, chair design, early associations of woodworkers, glass working with wooden machinery, handy turning tools, etc. The magazine will gratify the patternmaker, cabinetmaker and other practical woodworkers. (The Gardner Publishing Co., Cleveland, Ohio.)

In the World's Work for February, "What Shall Hayti's Future Be?" by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., who has recently returned from the island not only explains the interest of Hayti but also the American interests in Hayti. "Marvels of Photography," with many illustrations, shows that photography has become one of the great economic and educational discoveries of the century. It is by Henry W. Lainer. "Frank Damrosch, and a Great School of Music" by E. N. Vallandigham gives a good picture of an interesting character. "The Diplomatic Masters of Europe," illustrated, contains some illuminating facts about Lord Lansdowne, Prince von Bulow and MM. Delcasse and Rouvier. "A City's Fight for Beauty" by Henry Schott is a well illustrated story of a significant struggle in Kansas City. Under the title "The Senate of Special Interests," Henry Beach Needham points by name what corporations and interests various senators represent and why they vote the way they do.

One of the most important and interesting discussions of the time appears in the February number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine under the general caption "Are Great Fortunes Great Dangers?" Both the conservative and the radical view is maintained by such men as President Eliot of Harvard; John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia millionaire; Edward Atkinson, the venerable and distinguished social reformer, who died while his contribution was being printed; Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, the eminent economist; Ernest Crosby, who is in the difficult position of being a millionaire and yet a a radical; Henry Clews, the great banker; Dr. David Starr Jordan, the president of Stanford University, California; Dr. Washington Gladden, the well-known divine, whose recent arraignment of the Standard Oil company attracted national attention; Jack London, novelist and revolutionist, and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the supreme court. The whole discussion was arranged, conducted and edited with comments by Frederick Upham Adams, the novelist and writer on social conditions.

The North American Review for January is a number of sterling and varied interest. Wayne Mac Veagh discusses the recent elections in which the bosses and the machines were successfully challenged in so many places, describing the result as "A Great Victory for Honest Politics." Under the title "New York: Social Notes," Henry James publishes the first part of an extremely suggestive study of the Empire City. Simon Newcomb advocates The Organization of Scientific Research." The president of the United States of Colombia pays a high tribute to "Mexico's Great Finance Minister." Frances Campbell Sparhawk denounces the reservation system as "The Indian's Yoke." W. P. Reeves, high commissioner of New Zealand in England, describes the operation of "State Insurance in New Zealand." Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, U. S. N., makes "A Plea for an Engineer Corps in the Navy." J. B. Sessions affirms the constitutionality of "Congressional Rate-Making by Commission." Archibald R. Colquhoun writes instructively about "The Chinese Press of Today."

The Atlantic Monthly begins the year 1906 wit han uncommonly striking number in both the importance and the freshness of interest of its articles. Especially notable is a group of three papers upon questions of international politics. Judge Francis C. Lowell of the United States coreuit court writes upon "American Diplomacy;" John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state, upon "The Chinese Boycott," Herbert H. D. Peirce, third assistant secretary of state, upon "The Mujik and the New Regime in Russia." Among the variety of other interesting papers, special attention should be called to "Of Our Anxious Morality," by Maurice Maeterlinck, the great Belgian mystic and moralist, a curiously vivid record of "Impressions from Chicago Faces," by Loren B. Knox, and a very incisive and plain-spoken paper upon "The University Presidency," by Andrew S. Draper.

"Kindness Day," a little sermon by Charles Battell Loomis, which opens the February number of Smith's Magazine, is something that every one ought to read twice. In the same number a novel by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon, "Step by Step," starts as a serial. This should attract a great deal of attention. Mrs. Sheldon has not written anything in some time. The thousands who have been waiting another novel from her pen will welcome the February Smith's with open arms. In the same number appear interesting short stories by Frank N. Stratton and William Hamilton Osborne, a series of splendid art studies of beautiful women, an up-to-date article, "Wanted, A Parcels Post," and a fashion department that should delight every woman.

For daring, independence and originality, To-Morrow's editorials for January stand out by far the most telling utterances of the month, its treatment of "The Gun as a Plaything," referring to the death of Marshall Field, Jr., and "The Christmas Turkey Graft," indicating that this publication is without fear of power or tradition. The editor's "The Epic of Love," preceding the frontispiece, and the revolutionary philosophy expressed in "Thirty-three Different Kinds of Tyranny," and the "Prize Contest" are a direct challenge to thinkers and reactionaries.

"The Story of Steel," illustrated with some wonderful flash-light photographs taken in the interior of a great steel mill, is the leader in the Technical World Magazine for February. G. P. Blackiston, the author, is a prominent iron and steel expert. Without being technical, the article gives a correct and graphic picture of the processes by which iron is transformed into steel. Few great industries are so important or so little understood. A most fascinating and little-known part of the world is described by Fritz Morris in "The Water-Forest of the Spree." The illustrations are from photographs which show the quaint costumes and strange manner of living of a unique and picturesque people. It will be news to the majority to learn that tea can be successfully grown in the United States and, particularly, that in North Carolina a private tea plantation has proved, commercially, extremely profitable. With pen and camera Freeman Tilden tells the story of the pioneer tea farm.

The January issue of the Burr McIntosh Monthly is a remarkable example of "pictorial perfection." It is the only publication of the kind extant and the publishers as well as the public are to be congratulated in being able to obtain such exquisite pictures so attractively presented. The portrait form of the January number contains such eminent stage people as the late Sir Henry Irving, Sarah Bernhardt, Emma Eames, Viola Allen, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Edna May, Fritzi Scheff and Julia Marlowe. The charming holiday story by the well-known writer, Zona Gale, is beautifully illustrated. A liberal space is given to the portraits and brief biographies of such famous people as Thomas A. Edison, Secretary of War Taft, Sir Henry Irving and Chas. E. Hughes, who has been directing the insurance investigation in New York City.

An exquisite portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer is the frontispiece of the February Smart Set. This new feature of the magazine has met with universal appreciation, and the publishers announce that future issues will contain equally fine portraits of beautiful and prominent women. "News and the Man," a novel of love, journalism and intrigue, by Jesse Lynch Williams, is the leading piece of fiction. It is safe to say that no more realistic picture of the exciting life of Park Row has ever been drawn. The story is dramatic to a degree, and of the final scene in the newspaper office particularly, Mr. Williams writes vividly and with brilliance. Richard Le Gallienne and Irma Perry have collaborated in an essay which they call "The Laurel of Gossip," wherein they discuss, with unusual cleverness, the little scandalmongers who infest every society.

The current issue of Suggestion, a magazine of the new psychology for thinkers, discusses health without drugs, auto-suggestion, the law of mental suggestion, mind power, suggestive therapeutics and allied subjects; it tells how to live without drugs and without grumbling; how to break undesirable habits and how to form good ones, and how to be happy, successful and prosperous. The magazine is optimistic, and teaches that man has sufficient inherent power to overcome all obstacles.

Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Cap'n Eri," who is regarded in this country very much the way W. W. Jacobs is in England, is well represented in the February Ainslee's, having therein not only a delightfully humorous story—"The Mark on the Door"—but a full-page poem as well. A very charming story is "A Bit of Crown Derby," by Ashton Hilliers, who many people believe will develop into another Kipling. Edith Macvane's "Sister Suz" and Robert E. MacAlarney's "The Girl of Neighborhood House" are also very striking stories, and there are half a dozen more worthy of especial mention, did space permit. There are, besides, a fine complete novel, "Palms and Petticoats," by Elizabeth Duer, two notable essays by Julien Gordon and Mary Manners, a chat on theatrical matters by Channing Pollock, a department of book reviews, and some excellent poetry. The cover design is by Henry Hutt.

Among the hundreds of periodicals competing for the public's favor today, there is one whose material prosperity has been as marked as its literary success. Only a little more than two years old, The Popular Magazine has already rolled up a circulation of 300,000, and has taken its place among the foremost publishing propositions of the country. The February number, now on sale, in itself sufficient explanation of this extraordinary success. In it are five serials, a complete novel, and a wide assortment of short stories. Among the authors represented are Cutcliffe Hyne, Louis Tracy, Louis Joseph Vance, Richard Marsh, George Gibb, T. Jenkins Hains, B. M. Bower, Walter E. Grogan, and George Bronson-Howard.

The January number of the new magazine, Interior Decoration, is especially interesting. "The Work of the Swedish Cottagers," "Mission Furniture and Its Environment," "The Ideal Kitchen," "The Treatment of the Floor," "Comfortable Furniture," and "The Modern Library," are a few of the many articles, all well illustrated, in this issue.

The January Arena is a superb issue full of articles that are at once interesting to the general reader and specially valuable to all persons in sympathy with the various progressive movements in the fields of politics, economics, art, science and literature. In this issue the well-known dramatic critic, Kenyon West, contributes a critical paper on Richard Mansfield and his art, which is profusely illustrated with fine portraits of Mr. Mansfield in various roles. A paper of special interest to lovers of art appears from the pen of Mrs. F. Bowdoin Noble, entitled, "The Principles of the Decorative Art-Spirit of Japan in Comparison with Those of Western Countries." Another exceedingly popular paper is "Uncle Sam's Romance with Science and the Soil," dealing with the splendid work that is being carried forward by the United States government in reclaiming desert land through irrigation.

The contents of Recreation for January include: "The Great South Bay," by Capt. Will Graham; "Sport on Long Island," by Charles A. Bramble; "Her First Moose," by Mrs. John F. Van Saun; "When the Indian Passes," by Anna C. Ruddy. All these articles are illustrated.

The January number of Talent, a monthly magazine of the lyceum, contains an illustrated article on Helen Potter, who was, a few years ago, the foremost reader and impersonator on the American platform; some reminiscences contributed by Miss Potter herself, and the fourth of Walter Dill Scott's articles on "The Psychology of Public Speaking." Mark Twain's explanation of how he "beat the doctor and the hangman for seventy years," gives a few new ideas in "Squarin' Up," is an amusing skit, hitting off a too common situation.

For the woman of fashion, the February Delineator, with its display of spring styles, is a most attractive number. Beside the fashions there is much of interest for the general reader, and the departments concerning the practical householder have been abundantly contributed to. There are short stories in Zona Gale and Margaret Beauchamp, with an interesting travel sketch entitled "In Cairo with a Camera," by Horace Wyndham. Miss Winslow's story of club life "The President of Quex" is continued gaining much in interest. The "Collector's Manual" is concluded with an article on "Old Time Lights."

The January number of the Pacific Monthly creates a new era in magazine publishing on the Pacific coast. Nothing of the kind has ever been attempted before. The halftones were the finest possible, and were reproduced on the finest paper. The articles were by leading men, such as William Winter, dramatic editor of the New York Tribune; Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, and Julian Hawthorne.

Among the notable features of the Argonaut for Jan. 20, are "The Corporal's Private Jag," a story of army life, by Petrol," a vivacious account by "H. C." of the inside of a French boarding house; "Modjeska's Farewell," by Josephine Hart Phelps; and "Comedy in Disguise," by Porter Garnett. Some of Rose Eytinger's memories of a long theatrical career are given, as well as all the usual departments.

The February American Magazine is an automobile number. The leading article, "The Heart of the Automobile," by Leroy Scott, is a most entertaining account of what has happened in the automobile world since English law obliged a man with a red flag to walk before every motor allowed loose in a public place. He also contains a complete illustrated description of every 1906 pleasure car—all facts and figures. Among the other articles is Henry Kitchell Webster's "The Square Deal with Children," an account of the work of Judge Mack and the Chicago juvenile court—a story of intense human interest.

S. WEIR MITCHELL.

The face of no American writer, perhaps, is better known to the American public than that of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, practicing his profession in Philadelphia and writing in his spare time with all the enthusiasm of twenty—and yet he will be 76 in February. This is one of the more unfamiliar portraits of this "dean of American novelists," the first chapter of whose latest novel, "A Diplomatic Adventure," appears in the February Century.

Superstitions Yet the Rule

All Kinds of Notions Move Persons Who Are Supposed to be Right up to Date —Old Beliefs Still Held.

New York, Jan. 27.—When a few weeks ago the statue of a former New York mayor fell while being raised to its niche on the new Hall of Records and was smashed to bits on the sidewalk, some persons familiar with the statue's history immediately declared that the thing has been pursued by a hoodoo from the start. They pointed out how from the mixing of the first handful of clay disappointments, hindrances and setbacks of all sorts had been the sculptor's lot.

Most of the people to whom the tale of the hoodoo was told accepted it as a reasonable explanation of the mishap to the statue; which proves, as an unimaginative lawyer pointed out, that even in the first city of practical, modern America and at this highly advanced stage of civilization, people are about as superstitious as they were in the Middle Ages.

"Perhaps we don't believe in witches any more," said the lawyer, "but I should not be afraid to wager that it would be mighty hard work to find a man or a woman in New York who does not harbor some one superstition by which he or she is more or less influenced."

"Are you influenced by any one superstition?" the lawyer was asked.

"Yes. Truth compels me to confess I carry a rabbit's foot. The rabbit was caught in a graveyard at the full of the moon, and were I to lose my rabbit's foot I would feel mighty blue. At any rate, I should certainly try to replace it, for the reason that I have had no bad luck since I carried the thing in my trousers pocket."

"And before then?"

"Before then I had no end of bad luck," and the lawyer laughed a trifle shamefacedly.

"But surely——"

"I know exactly what you are going to say. I have heard it all before from persons who don't possess a rabbit's foot, and I can't for the life of me give an answer which doesn't sound foolish. Nevertheless, I hold on to my lucky piece, as I call it.

"My wife used to guy me unmercifully until in a lucky moment I discovered that she herself had a particular superstition, which is this: Under no circumstances will she cross the street in front of or between carriages of a funeral procession. Since then I haven't been jollied so much at home about my rabbit's foot.

"In my opinion artists and professional men are quite as superstitious, but no more so, than the rest of folks.

"It is a hopeless task almost to reason with the average man or woman who believes that when a dog bites a person the dog must immediately be killed in order to prevent hydrophobia from developing in the person bitten," said Dr. Edward Wallace Lee, apropos of the superstitions of matter-of-fact New Yorkers. "There are thousands of persons who believe that very thing.

"To explain that killing the dog has no effect one way or the other on the development or prevention of hydrophobia is a waste of breath. As well try to persuade some residents of the South that will-o'-the-wisp is not of supernatural origin and an omen of good or ill.

"And that other foolish superstition about a dog or dogs howling just before a death in the neighborhood; there is no use in trying to explain that phenomenon by natural causes either. Persons who believe in this superstition always fail to observe that dogs often practice nocturnal howlings when no one is at the point of death, but just as soon as anyone is taken very ill and the dogs yelp the connection to their minds is obvious.

"Why, there are lots of superstitions left in scientific medicine even, and, take them as a class, physicians are not above superstitions themselves. One day I was walking with a young doctor on his way to see a very sick patient, when a hearse hove into view.

"'A bad omen, doctor,' he said, with a doleful shake of his head.

"Yes, he found his patient dying. Since then I have heard of many doctors who acknowledge that it depresses them to meet a hearse when on their way to see a very sick patient or to perform an operation.

"Speaking of operations, I have never had a patient who was willing to have one performed on a Friday. No matter how great the need, the operation must be put off till Saturday if the patient has his way. This is particularly the case with women.

"Doctors, of course, bump up against all sorts of superstitions when making the rounds of their patients. For instance there are men who believe, as they believe the Gospels, the wearing of a common iron ring on the second finger of either hand will make them immune to certain ills. Every third day they carefully wipe from the inside of this ring a rusty deposit, which they imagine the ring has drawn from their body.

"Other persons never fail to carry a horse chestnut about with them as a preventive of certain other ills. I have met people who would use only cranberry poultices for inflammation of the bowels, laying the stress not on the heat of the poultice, but on the color of it.

"Another superstition, less prevalent now than it was a few years ago, is that the skin of a black cat laid on the bowels is almost a sure cure for inflammation. Like the recipe for hare soup, you must first catch your cat, kill it—preferably at midnight—skin it immediately and apply the skin warm to the patient.

"And it is almost folly, even in these days, to tell most women that a frog or a lizard absolutely cannot live in the human stomach. No wise doctor attempts to convince a patient of that fact. He simply goes to work to remove the tenant, which his patient knows is there.

"Most modern superstitions are merely a survival of old ideas, and the reason they still flourish is that few persons are sufficiently well educated and intelligent to throw them off. No intelligent and well-educated person will entertain a superstition. An intelligent person who is not well educated may do so, or a well educated person who is not particularly intelligent; but not a person who is both intelligent and well educated."

President Hunter of the Normal college does not agree with this view.

"I am inclined to think," said he, "that the most superstitious classes are the highly educated and the very ignorant, and that the most superstitious persons are those who do solitary work in lonely places, like sailors, fishermen, miners, etc.

"Men of profound learning, men of brilliant mind and intelligence, have been notoriously superstitious. Dr. Samuel Johnson, for instance, who never was able to pass a railing without touching every spike. Not to touch every spike meant ill luck for him, he thought. And the great Napoleon was one of the most superstitious of men.

"Bringing superstition up to date, take the baseball players, one-third of whom at least are college men. I can think of no class of men more superstitious.

"Invariably each team has a mascot, and when ill luck befalls their play someone among the onlookers has hoodooed them, they say.

"I am acquainted with a woman who is at the head of a flourishing New York school—a woman of sound education and fine intelligence—who is superstitious to an extent which makes her relatives lose patience with her sometimes. She can't be persuaded to start a journey on a Friday, not even to a week-end party at Lakewood or some other nearby place. She will start on Thursday or Saturday, or not at all.

"Other well-educated women I have met. If, when starting on an unaccustomed route she meets a red-headed woman her pleasure is spoiled, because, to her mind, meeting a red-headed woman when starting on a journey portends disaster. If possible she will turn back and postpone her journey till the next day.

"The trouble she takes to steer clear of the number 13 is almost laughable. family, or by the falling of a portrait known were made quite miserable by the breaking of a mirror by one of their in the country, there are few persons, I from the wall.

"Even in large cities where superstitions are less likely to be fostered than spectacl ulp-mbionfi bm bm bm bmbmm think, who have not at some time in their lives entertained a superstition of some sort. The reason for it? Who can tell?"

At the Lyceum

"The Liberty Belles" on Monday and Tuesday—Kubelik, the Violinist, on Wednesday—"The College Widow" on Friday and Saturday.

George Ade's much-talked of comedy, "The College Widow," is to be seen at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon. The playgoers of Duluth have been waiting longingly for this attraction, so much has been said and written about it. The play has been meeting with great success in the principal cities of the West and comes to Duluth with practically the original cast.

So many people have seen this play during its remarkable runs in New York and Chicago that its fame has spread very rapidly throughout the country with the result that the verdict of the two cities mentioned has been indorsed by capacity audiences everywhere. To explain the great vogue of this play one has only to look into the heart of the average American. We all love to see portrayed upon the stage the scenes and the characters that typify us and, unlike those of other countries, we are broad enough to not object to a dash of satire.

The characters in "The College Widow" are men and women of flesh and blood, boys and girls of the kind we have known and loved—warm-blooded American personages that we understand and that move in scenes and situations that are familiar.

The movement of Mr. Ade's comedy takes place in a little college town, situated perhaps in the Middle West. There is located Atwater university and in a neighboring town is Bingham college. These two institutions are rivals in athletics and the annual Thanksgiving football game is the principal matter of moment to the students of both. At Atwater, it has been learned that Bingham is about to add to its team a famous halfback, Billy Bolton by name, whose father, a railroad magnate, has richly endowed that institution, and at whose behest Billy is to take a special course there. The students decide that something heroic must be done, and "the college widow," in this case the comely daughter of the president of Atwater, is called upon to exercise her wiles. Billy stops over at Atwater and the scheme works to perfection. Instead of entering Bingham, he remains to be near "the widow" and eventually wins the football match. But "the widow," intending only to maintain the supremacy of Atwater, loses her heart at the same time.

It is a simple story, but so deliciously told, so well acted and so adequately produced by Henry W. Savage, that it appeals strongly to all classes of playgoers. In the cast, which will appear here, are included Dorothy Tennant, Frederick Truesdell, Walter Walker, Katherine Nugent, George Ober, Laurence Wheat, Lida McMillan, Adeline Dunlap, Raymond Chase, Edgar Halstead, Mildred St. Pierre, Otis Turner, George Cross, Dan Baker, Neil Morah, Ernest B. Carr, Virginia Milton, Etta Payne and a score of others. It is the same splendid company which appeared at the Steudebaker theater, Chicago, for eight of the hottest weeks of last summer, and without exception to the utmost capacity of the house.

"THE LIBERTY BELLES."

Musical Comedy to Hold Sway Monday and Tuesday.

"The Liberty Belles" with its pony ballet, pink pajama girl and twenty-five of the prettiest young girls ever seen on our local stage. This attraction will be seen at the Lyceum Monday and Tuesday evenings, Jan. 29 and 30. A number of comedians, dancers and singers prominent in the profession are amongst the list of names in the cast.

This production has won fame in being one of the most extraordinary, unique and original musical comedies on the American stage, and from the fact of its having the most exquisite display of feminine loveliness of any of the recent popular "beauty shows." With this object in view Mr. Berger descended upon some of the musical and opera organizations noted for their beautiful girls and from them selected the prettiest. "San Toy," "Foxy Quiller," "The Sleeping Beauty," "The Chaperones," "The Strollers," "The Belle of New York," "Mr. Bluebeard" girls will be found among "The Liberty Belles."

The novelty of the theme of the play and its treatment is manifested on the very rise of the curtain where is displayed the pretty scene in the dormitory of a girls' seminary. It is a bit of school life which is not down on the curriculum and which is forbidden to every masculine eye. Here Miss Pink Pajamas and her night-robed friends hold sway. A confusion of night-gowned, skylarking girls in a midnight school revel. That is the picture. It is indeed a marvel of stage management.

One least touch of suggestiveness would spoil it, but instead, throughout it all, is permeated the fragrance of innocent girlhood, the bubbling spirit of girlish fun. It is a scene the like of which has never been portrayed on the stage and intertwined in this beauty feast are graceful dancers, tuneful songs, mimicry and clever specialties.

In the company are Virginia Lavick, Catherin Hays, Leonora Warner, William Maussey, Herbert Carter, William H. Conley and over thirty others. Scenery, costumes and stage settings are the same as were used with this attraction at the Madison Square theater, New York, during its long run in that city. The pony ballet is an additional feature which has only lately been added.

KUBELIK COMES WEDNESDAY

Famous Bohemian Violinist Will Give Recital at the Lyceum.

When Jan Kubelik, the great Bohemian violinist, appears in this city Jan. 31, at the Lyceum, our music lovers will have a treat of virtuosity and musicianship the like of which was never known upon the bow and strings, else all indications are palpably wrong.

If the usually cynical New York critics, some of whom, like H. E. Krehbiel of the Tribune and W. J. Henderson of the Sun are among the recognized music authorities in America, are to be believed, no other violinist who ever visited these shores is so remarkably equipped technically and temperamentally. For beauty absolute—in quality of tone, in symmetry of phrase, in sustained grace, in authority and in command of the most difficult technicalities of his instrument, Kubelik's present performances are pronounced by these critics impeccable. Of really more consequence to the music-loving public is the tremendous enthusiasm Kubelik's playing provokes among his hearers. His first audiences in New York this season were aroused to a veritable frenzy of acclaim.

Coming to Duluth.

Among the attractions coming to the Lyceum in the near future are the musical comedy, "Buster Brown," which opens a two days' engagement election day, Feb. 6; Pauline Hall in "Dorcas," Feb. 9 and 10; the W. T. Carlton Opera company in "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," Feb. 12; "The Serio-Comic Governess," Feb. 13 and 14; "Du Barry," Feb. 15; the big musical comedy, "Piff Paff Pouf," Feb. 16 and 17; Grace George in "The Marriage of William Ashe," Feb. 19 and 20; Joseph Murphy's "Kerry Gow," Feb. 21 and 23, and Louis James and a splendid company in three plays, Feb 23 and 24.

"The Duke of Duluth" has finally selected dates for the Duluth Lyceum, and will be played in the city after which it was named, March 7 and 8. the cast will include Nat Wills and other members of the original company.

Col. Henry W. Savage will send to Duluth early in March his big English Grand Opera company with a cast of 200 people, the orchestra alone numbering fifty musicians. The company is enroute from San Francisco and its appearance at Duluth will undoubtedly be the greatest musical event in the history of this city. A long list of artists is included in the cast and several cars of scenic production for the various operas. Two rows of seats will have to be taken from the Lyceum parquet during the grand opera engagement to accommodate the orchestra. Undoubtedly this will be the greatest engagement in the history of Duluth and will be equal in importance to the first appearance of Ben Hur in this city.

The Metropolitan

"The High School Girls" Will be the Attraction the Coming Week.

In the realm of German dialect comedy, the name of Fields is as well known as that of Armour is when one speaks of South Chicago or that of Hill is when one speaks of railroads. Two brothers of the famous Law Fields, the star of "It Happened in Nordland," which had such a run at Lew Fields' theater in New York, and formerly a partner of Joe Weber in the fun firm of Weber & Fields, are coming to the Metropolitan next week with the High School Girls. They have the principal comedy roles in "Hotel Stars and Stripes," the musical comedy which the Girls give in addition to their excellent olio. Their names are Nat and Sol Fields and they are said to be not far behind their illustrious brother when it comes to handing out the twisted English.

The High School Girls will open their engagement at the "Met" Monday evening and will remain all the week, giving matinees on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Thursday afternoon and evening performances will be particularly for ladies and handsome souvenirs will be given away.

Among those who contribute acts to the olio and participate in the merry farce are Billy Hart and Emma Weston, Hughes and Hazelton, Gillman, Francis and Gillman and the Six Flying Banvards, the great acrobats who were featured so prominently with the Great Norris and Rowe circus all last summer. As for the High School Girls themselves, they are said to be the prettiest bunch that ever made fudge or read Bertha M. Clay's novels.

The New Bijou

The Lucados in Gymnastic Feats and Other First Class Vaudeville Artists.

The attractions booked at the Bijou next week include a number of headline vaudeville artists. The Lucados accomplish some balancing and gymnastic feats which are said to be out of the ordinary and very difficult to perform. The Rizleys, comedy acrobats, will present a very laughable acrobatic stunt. The three Hylands, high class comedy and musical entertainers, have an act that is full of good singing, dancing and comedy, including a brass band finish, which introduces Baby Hyland, one of the smallest drum majors in the world. Sinclair and Carlisle introduce a clever slack and tight wire act which will be sure to please, and McCauley and Donovan will be the fun makers of the program offering new songs and stories. As a special attraction, Conser's Trained Canine Circus will have a place on the bill at each performance.

Harry Wilmott will sing the beautiful ballad, "Would You Care?" illustrated with beautiful colored views. The moving pictures for the week will be "Flags of All Nations" and Edison's latest subject, "Robbers of Children."

Matinees will be given daily at 2:45 and the evening performances will begin at 8 and 9:30. A special school children's matinee will be given Saturday afternoon.

Gossip of the Rialto.

Sothern and Julia Marlowe to be Under Shubert's Management—Richard Harding Davis to Novelize "The Galloper."

New York, Jan. 27.—By an arrangement announced this week, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe will appear next season under the direction of Sam S. and Lee Shubert. They will open early in autumn at one of the local independent theaters in a repertoire which will include three Shakespearean works and two new plays. The latter are "Jean of Arc," a drama by Justin Huntley McCarthy, which Mr. Sothern has had ready for production for several months, and a piece as yet unnamed from the pen of Percy Mackay. Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe will also revive Sudermann's allegorical comedy, "The Sunken Bell."

Richard Harding Davis is nothing if not original. It is no uncommon thing to dramatize a novel, but it is rather unusual to novelize a drama; and this is what Mr. Davis proposes to do with his new play, "The Galloper," with which Raymond Hitchcock has been right successful on the road.

Mme. Fremsted, the famous prima donna, is certain that she has solved the servant question. She has a valet, who she declares is an expert in woman's clothes, whose taste is perfect and who is an artist in the combination of colors. The singer declared recently: "I wouldn't think of going back to maids again. He never appears with a headache when I am particularly rushed, and when I am nervous his placidity is most soothing. He is not forever thinking of his best young man, and I can always depend upon him. He has mastered the art of serving, and saves me an enormous amount of bother and worry.

Pixley and Luders' dainty comic opera describing the denizens of the forest and aptly named "Woodland," is in Denver this week proceeding to San Francisco and the larger cities of the Pacific Slope. Recently Harry Bulger, comedian of the company, made an excursion to North Platte, Neb., to the home of Colonel Cody, "Buffalo Bill," where he was entertained by the people in charge. An old Indian chief, who had been an attache of the Wild West show, had seen Bulger's performance in this piece and hailed him with "Heap funny man with fire-water nose." This apt illustration of Bulger will be appreciated by lovers of comedy, as the comedian makes up his nasal appendage into a large bulbous and ruddy nose.

Next week the company presenting George Ade and Gustav Luders' Korean comic opera, "The Sho-Gun," will begin a limited run at the Studebaker theater, Chicago, with its well-balanced cast, headed by John E. Henshaw, W. C. Weedon, Agnes Cain Brown and other singers of repute.

The following retort courteous is accredited to Jess Dandy, with the company playing Pixley and Luders' "Prince of Pilsen," now in Chicago. While playing in the Northwest the company arrived in a certain town very late at night. The theater was rather cold and the curtain was raised after schedule time. A large audience was present, but the chill that prevailed throughout the house was especially felt on the stage by the people in light garments and tights. Coming before the curtain Mr. Dandy apologized for the lateness of the company's arrival, and addressing himself to the ladies in sealskins and gentlemen in fur coats in front, remarked that if they were not satisfied with the performance he would have return checks given them in exchange for which they could go out into the next yard and gather a load of wood to take home as souvenirs.

This season critics everywhere have vied with each other in sounding the praises of the trio of great tenors, Joseph F. Sheehan, William Wegener and Francis Macleinnan, with Henry W. Savage's English Grand Opera company. It is a remarkable fact when one stops to consider that in 100,000,00 people in the civilized world, good tenor voices produced during a generation could be counted on two fingers. The rarity of a heroic tenor voice is really remarkable.

Viola Allen last week declined with thanks the offer to be a part of the star festival in Shakespeare revivals which is being discussed for Chicago next spring. Miss Allen's time in "The Toast of the Town," a comedy by Clyde Fitch, has been booked solidly until June 9, and even if she were inclined to accept the Chicago proposition this booking would make it impossible.

The supreme court of New York last week granted Elizabeth Bluestein an absolute divorce from her husband, Levi Bluestein, on the charge that he had been guilty of improper conduct with a woman not publicly named in the wife's petition. The Bluesteins are known on the stage as Ed and Libby Blondell, and have appeared in "The Katzenjammer Kids" on several occasions. They separated about two years ago and have been working in vaudeville since.

The big production of George Edwardes' musical comedy, "Veronique," which was originally brought to this country by Klaw and Erlanger and their associates, and which is nearing the end of its run in Boston, will, it is reported, pass into the hands of the Shuberts. The latter intend to secure an American company for the pretty piece and materially localize it before sending it on tour.

Maude Adams is to remain at the Empire, in New York, an indefinite period. Her success in "Peter Pan" is so pronounced that she will likely remain for the season. Her time on the road has been filled up by a switch in the routes of William Collier and W. H. Crane. The two stars will play the greater part of the outside time held for Miss Adams this season. Lawrence D'Orsay will take up some of Collier's time.

Thompson and Dundy have hit upon one outlet for their great productions at the New York Hippodrome. They have completed plans for an early presentation of "A Yankee Circus on Mars" at the Boston theater, Boston. This is one of the largest houses in the country, and will afford ample room for the introduction of the Hippidrome's first great success, minus the aquatic features of "The Raiders."

So the Bernhardt tent tour has been exploded. Through the demand of Richard Mansfield it turns out that Bernhardt has never been refused time in the big theaters for the very good reason that her tour was booked in halls and special houses outside of the syndicate. The idea that she was to play in tents through Texas seems to have grown out of this and made interesting reading. Incidentally it was but another illustration of the undignified manner in which the Bernhardt tour has been exploited this season.

James J. Corbett, in the Shaw play, "Cashel Byron's Profession," despite the unfavorable reception of the play in New York by the critics, has begun to show healthy signs of picking up in favor. On this account the brief engagement booked at Daly's theater there has been extended to the Majestic theater, where Corbett will be seen in further performances of this peculiar play by the brilliant Irish satirist.

With a record of over 150 performances in New York to her credit Margaret Anglin last Saturday night closed her season here in "Zira," an emotional play, which ran for this length of time at the Princess theater. Miss Anglin took to the road this week, beginning her tour in Utica, N. Y. It is notable that since "Mrs. Dane's Defense" this finely equipped emotional actress has been forced to await further recognition until this season, when her independent venture was apparently doomed to failure in advance. She has, however, when it was least expected, made the hit of her career to date, and it looks as if "Zira" will serve the purpose of firmly establishing Miss Anglin as a star.

Otis Skinner has closed his tour in "His Grace DeGrammont" and is headed for New York, where he will soon take up rehearsals of the new play, "The Duel," which is to be brought out in the East by him in the immediate future. Mr. Skinner last week remained on tour in order to open the new Henry Boyle theater in Fond Du Lac, Wis., which has been built by enterprising citizens of that city.

A big company is being organized for Hattie Williams' support in her new musical comedy wrich is to be brought out soon. Harry Kelly is a recent addition. Kelly had formed a vaudeville partnership with Charles Guyer, but it seems that this was abandoned in order for Kelly to join the Frohman company now forming for Miss Williams' support. Several English players in Edna May's company will not sail back to England this month, but will remain here to join the Williams company.

Frank Rushworth, tenor of the Fantana company, slipped on the icy pavement near the Shubert theater in Brooklyn last week and suffered a fracture of the right kneecap. I guess it's what is coming to me for playing Brooklyn."

"Veronique," the English musical play, which recently ended a long engagement at the Broadway theater in New York, has been bought from George Edwardes of London by the Shubert Brothers. At the conclusion of the present Boston engagement, the English company, headed by Miss Ruth Vincent, will sail for home, and the play will pass under the new management. The Shubert Brothers will send it over their circuit of theaters later in the season. They have not selected the cast.

Mlle. Carlier, one of the leading actresses of Paris, finds herself endowed with a $2,500 sable cloak for which she did not pay one penny, and also with the title of "the most delicious child in the civilized world." The title was not included in a verdict at law awarding her the coat and the costs, but thanks to the publicity of the evidence, the name promises to stick to her so as to outlast the coat. The furrier Max recently opened a new establishment on the Place de la Bourse, and it occurred to him that nothing would advance his interests so much as some advertising with a photograph of Carlier, generally considered the prettiest actress in Paris, and she graciously consented to pose as an advertisement in a photograph to be published in the fashion pages and posted up in the theaters and music halls, representing her in a gorgeous sable cloak falling to her feet. Max himself was so delighted that he sent one of the first copies to Carlier, bearing in his august hand the following remarkable inscription: "Happy that a small part of his house should surround Mlle. Madeleine Carlier, the most delicious child of the civilized world. Max presents to her the first copy of these designs." Madeleine Carlier received the photograph and the inscription with a pleasant smile, which changed to a scowl, however, some days later when a bill came in to her for 12,895 francs for a sable cloak supplied to her. "I paid for it in advertising," answered Carlier. "I had only lent it and you failed to return it," retorted Max. So they went to law. Max could not disclaim his autograph with the phrase that he was "Happy that a part of his house should surround her," whatever that might mean, and the case was decided against him. He appealed, and now, for the second time, the coat has been awarded to Carlier as a legitimate reward for her advertising. Max tried to wriggle by saying that there was a difference between a dress and a $2,500 fur coat. But Carlier's answer silenced him: "The advertisement made the reputation of your firm. It was not a cloak I wore, but a five-story house!"

Tyrone Power has been specially engaged by A. E. Braden for his forthcoming production of "The Trancoso Trail," a drama by Frances Hastings and Henry Fitch Taylor. Mr. Power will play the role of Dexter, a strong and unique character part. Henry Jewett is to be featured in the play. Another engagement of importance made for this cast is that of Miss Dorothy Grimston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, who has been appearing in Miss Nethersole's company. Miss Mary Shaw will also have an important part in "The Trancoso Trail," Miss Hastings is the wife of Mr. Jewett.

William Collier is said to have scored a personal hit at the Hollis Street theater, Boston, in the first American presentation of Louis Artus' four-act French comedy, "The Heart of a Sparrow," which has been adapted with doubtful success for Charles Frohman by Cosmo Gordon Lenox. In the leading role of Claude Letellier, Mr. Collier is said to have been interesting as a hero weak on pretty faces, in a plot of complications caused by the hero's sudden infatuations. Ida Conquest, who plays Ethel Henchester, who becomes the wife of Claude, scored in the love scenes. The Boston papers have little praise for the play—so little, in fact, that it seems the unlucky Collier has picked another bad one to add to his long list of failures.

Olga Nethersole is expected to join fortunes with Forbes Robertson for a London production of "The Labyrinth," Paul Hervieu's Comedie Francaise success, in the spring, in which Miss Nethersole is now touring in America. Miss Nethersole will appear as Marianne de Pogis, while Mr. Robertson will play the role of Max de Pogis, played in this country by Hamilton Revelle. Gertrude Elliott, sister of Maxine Elliott and the wife of Forbes Robertson, will be seen in the same company, playing the role of Paulette.

Musicales Come High

Most Famous and Expensive Singers at Social Functions in New York.

New York, Jan. 27.—Music plays an increasingly important part in New York society. It is not enough to sit in the parterre three times a week and hear the great singers, one must have artists to entertain in one's own house. Nothing is smarter than a musicale with the most famous and high priced singers.

The engagement of the great instrumentalists is now incomprehensible, since soirees so rarely goes to Carnegie hall. So Kubelik, Pugno and Gerardy are more novel to artists than the artists from the opera house. But these are always musicales at which these artists sing, and the more they cost the more brilliant the party is likely to be.

There are various ways in which to arrange a musicale. Usually the hostess allows the principal singer to put on the program the numbers she wants. Then the other artists borrow. In such cases the pianist who is engaged as accompanist usually arranges the program. Some hostesses write Mr. Conreid that they have a lump sum to spend and want, say, $3,000 worth of singers.

One young man in New York society is frequently called in by hostesses who want to arrange a musicale attractively. A very successful drawing room impresario who has made a fortune in giving private concerts is sometimes engaged to arrange the entire program.

There are some hostesses who take delight in looking after every detail themselves, but they are not numerous.

So in the majority of cases the woman giving a musicale merely decides on the prima donna she wants. Often this personage is merely with the list of guests, the supper and other more material details of the affair. Hostesses have been known to allow a prima donna to sing what she wants when intimating as strongly as they dare to such an important personage the color of the gown she should wear.

"Tell her to sing that thing out of 'Traviata,'" the hostess will say to the pianist who may be attending to the musical part of the evening. "You know the one I mean. That one that goes up high and has lots of trills in it."

One hostess who wanted a high soprano to sing "Oh, Promise Me," and was furious because she refused, then suggested "The Rosary" as a substitute. When the singer balked at that the hostess was so indignant that she wanted to call the party off altogether. The prima donna, who had been very patient up to that point, then told her it was a humiliation for any artist to sing in her house. But she took the $250 after the concert, however.

The hostess has to be polite to the singer, even if she is to be so well paid for her work. She must meet the prima donna with smiles and escort her to the dressing room. Then she must see that she is properly entertained at supper. Throughout the evening she must be careful of her comfort and attentive to her. When the matter of payment must be delicately handled. A check is usually sent to the singer or her husband if she be engaged outright. Otherwise it is forwarded to her manager, or if the artiste are engaged from the opera, to Mr. Conried.

It was not a great many years ago that a very rich heiress failed to acquaint herself with the right way of paying an Italian prima donna. She had the butler hand the young woman a check on a silver waiter just as she was preparing to leave the room.

There was a metallic sound, a flash of hand through the rose colored gloom of the drawing room, a flutter of white paper through the air, and the sharp sound of a silver waiter striking an exposed surface of the polished floor. Then the indignant singer, with a flush of fire at her hostess, swept out of the room. There was great astonishment on the faces of all that witnessed the scene, and that hostess never gave another musicale so long as she lived in New York.

As if it were not enough to pay the singers more than they receive in the opera house, some hostesses buy them handsome presents in addition to their fees. One prima donna last year got a gold purse costing $500 in addition to $2,500 for singing less than half an hour.

All of the singers charge a large advance for singing in private houses over what they receive at the opera. Thus Mme. Sembrich and Signor Caruso demand $2,500 for singing at a musicale, although they do not get that much from Mr. Conried for a whole evening's work. Yet, in spite of all the inducements to sing in private houses, the singers hate to do it.

They, above all, hate to have any part in an evening entertainment at which they are not the principal feature. When they come in to sing for a lot of guests after dinner, they would all charge double prices if they could.

One soprano who was not an operatic celebrity, but had a great vogue at one time here, guaranteed to sing three songs for $200 after a dinner. She was to go on to another party afterward. The guests applauded so enthusiastically that the singer was compelled to sing six instead of three songs. This delay made it impossible for her to keep all of her engagements at the other houses. She demanded an extra $200 for the second three songs. The hostess refused to pay on the ground that she had not told her to sing any more and that she need not have done it. The singer brought suit on the ground that the hostess had also applauded and had thereby indorsed what her guests did. The suit was settled out of court, but the soprano got her money.

Another suit grew out of the engagement of a very high class quartette to play at a house in New York. They were engaged to arrive at a certain hour. The guests were still at dinner. It was evident that they were likely to remain at the table for some time. So the host sent out word for them to play in the butler's pantry or in the hall, where they could be heard well at the dinner table.

It would have taken a brass band to drown the laughing and the chatter at that table. The host added that he didn't care for any classical music that evening, but would prefer the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" or something from "Faust." As the repertoire of the quartette consists chiefly of Beethoven, Mozart and Brahms, the consternation of the distinguished players was great. They discussed the question of their treatment and went home.

They could not recover their bill until they brought suit. They got the money then, as the quartette was too dignified an institution for the man to treat in such a way without making himself ridiculous.

There are several houses in New York in which there are regular concerts during the winter. Some of these are subscription affairs at which all the guests pay. Others are invitations and the hearers are invited guests.

It has naturally come about that New Yorkers who can afford the luxury have added music rooms to their houses. Three well-known such houses belong to J. Henry Smith, Mrs. W. D. Sloane and Miss Callender and Miss de Forest.

Mr. Smith's house was built by the late William C. Whitney, who ordered his architects to make it as fine a specimen of Italian renaissance as they could. The cost was for the first floor alone more than $1,000,000. Mr. Whitney said after it was completed that he would never have given such a commission had he realized what the cost was to be.

The music room was an exception to the prevailing style of the house and is a fine specimen of Louis XVI. French decoration. The walls were brought from France and put up here. The woodwork is dark brown, trimmed with gold, and the hangings are maroon. At one end of the room stands a pipe organ, which was put there for Herman Hanz Wezer, who used to look after Mr. Whitney's music for him.

"Nobody was ever so princely in his musical entertainments as Mr. Whitney," said a manager the other day, "and he never haggled over the price, or seemed to think of it at all. He said: 'I want Padereswski tomorrow night,' or 'I want Sembrich,' or 'I want Ternina.' Then Mr. Wetzzler had only to notify the artist. There was never any suspicion of bargaining. The artists were always glad to accept, and the result of such liberality was a most brilliant season of musicales. They always took place on Sundays and were usually gotten up only a few days in advance of the date."

J. Henry Smith had Signor Caruso sing in his music room this year, and Mme. Nordica took part in one of his musicales. He is to give another this season. His guests were more numerous last season than Mr. Whitney's used to be.

The big music room that belongs to Miss Callender and Miss de Forest is on the corner of the Tiffany building, at Seventy-second street and Madison avenue. They have occupied this apartment ever since the building was completed. This is more genuinely a music room than many others of greater magnificence. Here all of the great singers who are intimate friends of Miss Callender and Miss de Forest come to visit them.

Miss Callender and Miss de Forest give every Sunday for two months of the year informal musicales to which their friends are invited. Here the hostesses usually present the younger American singers and musicians.

It was in this room that Miss Callender gave a benefit for Emma Eames when that young singer had just begun her career at the Metropolitan. Here Mmes. Sembrich and Nordica and Jean de Reszke have been frequent visitors. Miss Callender and Miss de Forest have always been known as especially intimate friends of Mme. Eames, who spent one winter in their house. Several portraits of her hang in this music room—all of them painted by Julian Story, the husband of the singer.

Here are signed photographs with affectionate messages from Lilli Lehmann, Christine Nilsen and the great singers of an earlier day.

Mrs. Sloane's musicales are remarkable for their elegance and for the high quality of the music heard there. Few guests, in view of the size of the room srmfwyp seems room for as many more as are there. These musicales are always planned by a young man in society who has so much taste and information on the subject that he is in constant demand for such duties. Mrs. Sloane usually gives two musicales every winter. The programs last winter are characteristic of the style in which they are planned. At the first of the two Mme. Sembrich sang, Josef Hoffman played the piano and Fritz Kreisler played the violin. The three united in a rendering of Mozart's "Il Re Pastore."

At the second concert Mme. Eames and Josef Hoffman were the soloists, and Victor Herbert conducted a string orchestra. Mme. Eames sang with the orchestra the third act aria from "Tosca." Such musicales are aristocratic in their personnel and arrangement. They require, of course, unlimited means by which to get the best singers and a visiting list worthy of such artists, and a beautiful room.

The Melodramatic Episode of "Bedford's Hope" Includes an Auto—Other Plays in Which Autos Appear.

New York, Jan. 27.—Bedford is a good man who owns the Old Pard mine, from which all pay ore seems to have been dug out, and a sheriff is going to sell the apparently worthless hole in the ground. Hooker is a bad man who has sent Bedford hatefully to bankruptcy. There is a woman in the car , but no matter about her. The still more precious thing, commercially, a big deposit of copper, silver and gold that has been overlooked in the mine. The two men learn of it simultaneously. They are half the length of Montana away from the Old Pard. Hooker starts in a locomotive to buy it. Bedford is in despair. His daughter obtains a court order to stop the sale, but, oh, how to serve it on the sheriff in time? But, ah! here comes her brother in an automobile. They set out to outrun Hooker's locomotive through the Bad lands. We see Hooker choo-choo away in a long lead; then the Bedford honk-honk off in pursuit; next the two vehicles are shown racing side by side and for awhile it is nip and tuck; but, while the locomotive can nip the rails sixty miles an hour, the automobile can tuck 100 behind itself in the same time. It is a noisy affair of whistle and horn, of whirling wheels that don't move ahead but panoramic pictures that are speedy, and it makes the melodramatic episode for "Bedford's Hope" this week at one of our low-price theaters.

The local German Dramatic company that we brag of is sportive in "The Road Burner," in which the main man is an autoist on a tour of Europe, and sentimental absurdities arise from motor car mishaps. Effie Shannon is coming this way with "The Lightning Conductor" as an automobile traveler with Herbert Kelcey for a loving amateur chauffeur. Bernard Shaw's party of tourists in "Man and Superman" are still getting into and out of a motor car, and the other night it wouldn't stand still to do its dramatic duty, but ran its front wheels off the stage and had to be jacked back.

Over in Brooklyn the girl grabber in "The Chauffeur's Crime" t'rows th' nice gel into his autymobily, see? De grabber has a gel put in red wot he don't take 'is honest woman of—same as always, an' she has it in fer him good an' hard, when she sees him gittin' away wid de nice gel in white. He runs der autywagon over her on purpose, but she's dese ez tough ez he is an' she gits up an' after him wid a gun. She cuts across de grass, while he skids around de road corners; so she gits de tunnel in de park while he's yit a comin', see? She cocks her shooter an' fades into a shadder.

But dere's a masher wot's a smasher in dis piece—a chapple az is sure right 'n' ready t' go ahead—an' he gits onto de swipin' of de nice gel; an' he yanks a strip of long green, he's Johnny on de spot all right—over de end of the tunnel wot de autywagon's t' come out of d'ye git de stitwation? De auty's two glims show up; den it stops, 'n' de grabber starts in t' kiss'n' de nice gel—but de chapple hangs himself from de railin' over de tunnel by his feet, takes a grip on de gel wid his han's an' lifts her out of trouble. Den de grabber's real gal—den one—he won't make 'n honest woman of—don't shoot 'im. Not on yer life. She fires into de auty's gasserline tank, 'n' chunks of de gel-grabber has a mixup wid de fireworks. An' all fer ten' t' twent' an' ten higher.

It is into Broadway itself this week that the automobile makes its big break. The belief has settled down upon the manager's minds that extravaganza is on its chorus girls' last legs; that beauty shows have palled from sameness; that other than sensuous things are requisite to save the hop-and-skip entertainments from abolition; that they must be based on something like real plays and contain real novelties. Now, while automobile accidents have been made stage fun of a great deal, there hasn't been a musical comedy or farce with an auto-motif for the theme—not until now, when "The Vanderbilt Cup" takes up the Vanderbilt race of last autumn at Mineola. As in many a turf drama a jockey is bribed to quit the favorite horse's saddle and an amateur takes his place, so in this play a hired chauffeur abandons his seat in the likeliest motor car and an unprofessional volunteer drives the machine to victory. Flam are resorted to. The trip of some of the characters from New York to Mineola in an automobile is shown, with a break down, of course; and if we had never seen any motion photographs, what a wonder these illustrations would be to us. Although they lack the value of novelty, they are amusingly well done.

Reality begins with the representation of the race. The genuine Barney Oldfield is in it with his genuine Green Dragon. The man grips the levers hard, strains his body forward and stares ahead pop-eyed, while we see the wheels of the machine go round at a half-minute whiz; and the car that is in dramatic competition is operated similarly; but there is not quite the illusion of speedy progress that has been obtained with horses running on treadmills—a device which Nell Burgess patented for "The County Fair" and licensed to "Ben Hur." Oldfield contrived the apparatus that he uses and began to show it in vaudeville, but its utility for "The Vanderbilt Cup" has transferred him and it to the regular stage. Although the Green Dragon hasn't the struggling activity of Abdgall Prue's mare, Cold Molasses, at the Yankee fair, nor of Ben Hur's four-horse chariot team in the Roman arena, a rapid rush of roadway scenery tricks your eyes—if you wisely try to let it, instead of taking an oh-pshaw view of it—and you get a vivid idea of how the Vanderbilt cup race excited those who saw it.

Elsie Janis is the star exhibit in "The Vanderbilt cup." I don't call Elsie the star actress, because strictly speaking she isn't any kind of an actress, but a mimic as clever as Cecilia Loftus; and like most imitative impersonators, while able to reproduce the acting of others in brief passages, she can't sustain a character throughout a play. Nat Goodwin was a mimic before he became a comedian and so was Tim Murphy. Georgia Cayvan was a platform reciter before she passed up to dramatic acting. Elise is struggling with her first legitimate role and she hasn't got the better of it yet. She has much to say and do as the country niece of a wealthy New Yorker who brings her to town. It is he who owns the automobile that the chauffeur abandons on the day of the race, endangering wagers amounting to $150,000, and it is she who multiplies his money by getting an amateur to take the vacant seat and win. The volunteer is one of her lovers and the plotter is another.

* *

This novice at play-acting is surrounded by such old stagers as Henry V. Donnelly, Otis Harlan, Jacques Kruger, Aubrey Boucicault and Charles Dickson, and maybe those five comedians have had crowning talks over this snip of a girl, not yet 18 and only out of a roof garden since last summer, being put forward beyond them. But it was Elsie whom the opening audience went to see, for her suppression by the Gerry society till she was 16, her debut then into instant favoritism as a mimic and her exploitation now as the leader of a Liebler company excited much expectation. The usual "ovation," so dear to the player's heart, was given to her in hearty sincerity, and, although she didn't reveal herself as much of a talking comedienne she danced, sang and mimicked with Tenderloin nerve of prettiness and vim of polity.

* * *

Stage trivialities, if they are good ones, are as hard to make as substantialities. "Coming Through the Rye" has been changed with new things to bring into Broadway, and among them is a burlesque of "The Squaw Man," the current drama presenting the social problem of an Englishman's duty to the squaw whom he married because she is the mother and he the father of the same little boy. I don't think it is a good thing for a serious play to be burlesqued, especially one with a theme like that. The white man's red wife is apathetic creature, stoical by nature, almost dumb through ignorance of English, graceless physically, yet with a mute love of her child to render her pathetic and to make an audience grieve at her suicide when the youngster is taken away from her. Of course, it is theatric to have her walk slowly, silently through the scene at various pertinent times, accompanied always by Indian music played plaintively low; yet the sight of her thus parading her sorrow would remain in my memory of pitiful characters—if I hadn't seen Alice Fischer in the burlesque, with six feet of stature instead of the other's five, stiff and grandiose instead of limp and woful, stalk across the stage to the same tune played for a noisy march.

* * *

Miss Fischer's main task in it is to enlarge and merrity the quick-rich Mrs Malaprop who is breaking into Newport society with a solid gold jimmy set with diamonds. At first the audience settles in its seats, with a defiance to the actress to make it laugh with a Malapropper vocabulary. But there is novelty in the woman's employment of a former circus press agent to talk with and about her in poster words of many syllables, and there is a new humor in the actress' utterance of grammatical Malapropricties so laughter breaks out at this draught from "The Rivals"—and Sheridan's more than a hundred years away.

The Countess Kinsky, with her title made in Germany and stamped genuine, is in her debut week in vaudeville. She has been a frequent guest of Astors and Vanderbilts and at the same time an actress named Ilka Palmay in our German stock company. It is a small portion of our population that ever reads anything about New York theaters devoted to foreign tongues, but a very large portion studies the fashion news line by line. So why not bring out the countess in English vaudeville as a mere transfer from the smart set to the stage?

Ilka has the individuality for the double role—a high-bred bearing for the outset of her act in a fashionable sumptuous evening gown worn as though she were accustomed to it, and an abundance of skill for the rest of the performance. Now, we have a wide range of variety houses with different audiences. The one where Virginia Earle locates her debut is in and of the Tenderloin, but the one where Ilka Palmay introduces herself is supported by people who look like church congregators—that is, intelligent, and they are respectable, but not sophisticated in theatrical affairs of a rakish sort. I watched them while they watched Ilka. The show here is censored and nothing impolite is done; yet, although nudities are never permitted to be pernicious, acrobats are of course in their usual togs, even when women, and dancers are allowed to be short enough of skirt to show how their legs work. But Countess Kinsky, a charged her trailing society gown for the knee-high one of a French saucybrette, to sing flirtation ballads in character, there was a stir of surprise; and when she next came on in the neck-to-toe skin-tight garb of a fanciful soldier, to give a martial song, there was real excitement. I wondered if they thought the smart set women undressed like that when convivial.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

GOING TO ASHLAND

Duluth Ski Jumpers Will Attend Tournament in That City.

Jump at Woodland Will be Lowered to Accommodate All.

The team which will represent the Duluth Ski club at the Ashland tournament, will be composed of Captain John Mangseth, Olaf Larson, Gustave Bye, Elling Disen and Ole Fefring.

The tournament will be held on Jan. 31, and the five runners mentioned, will go from Duluth to take part in the jumps.

The Duluth club is also planning to send representatives to the tournaments to be held at Bovey, St. Paul and Ishpeming. The Bovey tournament will be held on Feb. 10, the St. Paul tournament on Feb. 8 and the Ishpeming tournament, which will be the national meet, on Feb. 22.

The members will have excellent practice at the small club tournaments, for the national meet, and by that time they should be in the best possible condition.

Arrangements are also being made for another tournament in Duluth before the national meet at Ishpeming. It will be confined to club members only, and boys under fifteen years of age.

The officers of the club are planning to lower the jump at Woodland. At the present time it is so high that none but the most expert among the jumpers dare attempt it, and it bars the great majority of the members from the most exciting feature of the sport. By moving the jump forward on the hill and lowering it a trifle, nearly the same distance can be made on the jumps, and they will be far less dangerous for the less experienced ski runners.

The move will be a popular one among the great majority of the members who use the hill.

The directors are looking up designs for a uniform for the Duluth members. It is the desire to have some distinctive uniform so that when Duluth jumpers attend outside tournaments, they may be easily recognized. It will aid in advertising the city, and will probably assist greatly in landing the national tournament for Duluth in 1907, as it will give an indication of the great interest that is being taken in the sport here this winter.

After paying all the expenses of the visiting jumpers, the club has come out a little ahead on the tournament held here recently, and from a financial standpoint at least, it proved very satisfactory.

The jumpers who took part have explained the difficulty they all had in keeping their feet. With the exception of the it next to impossible to keep the skis before entering the tournament, hoping to get greater speed. With the wet and slippery condition of the snow it made t t next to impossible to keep the skis from slipping when taking the jump, and but few standing jumps were made.

RANKIN IS THE VICTOR

Defeats Carl Alroth of Superior in One Mile Race.

Winner Claims Skating Championship of Head of the Lakes.

By defeating Carl Alroth of Superior at the Central ice rink last evening, Charles Rankin captured the championship of the Head of the Lakes, which has been held by Alroth for the last nine years.

Before Rankin has a clear claim to the title, however, he must also defeat Eddie Smith, who claims the Duluth championship, and the two men have been matched for next Friday night at the Central rink.

The race last evening consisted of three one-mile heats. The first heat was rather slow. Neither man seemed to let himself out, and Rankin was a rather easy winner, being nearly a quarter of a lap ahead of his rival when they crossed the line.

The second heat was much faster. Rankin struck the barrel in rounding one of the corners, and fell to his hands, losing his swing. This cost him several yards, and Alroth won the heat by about the same distance that Rankin had won the first.

The third and final heat was by far the most interesting of the three.

Rankin jumped into the lead at the start, but Alroth pulled up on the third lap, and was a few feet ahead until the sixth lap, when Rankin overcame his lost ground, and for one lap they skated a dead heat. Rankin lengthened his stroke, and drew slowly ahead on the next lap, which gave him a lead of about four feet. Alroth pulled down part of this lead, but Rankin finished a scant two feet ahead of his opponent.

It is the first time Alroth has been beaten since Norval Baptie accomplished the feat, and the victory stamps Rankin as a coming skater.

A BASEBALL CONFERENCE

An Important One to be Held Next Month.

Circuit Talk is Again the Chief Topic Under Discussion.

The gathering of the Northern league magnates in the city on Feb. 5 will be one of the historic meetings of the league.

The old vexed question of the circuit will come up at that time for a discussion, and this year promises to see a radical change in the make-up of the league.

Superior and Crookston will be dropped. That much is pretty well established. For two years the league has carried these two clubs along during the latter part of the season, and profits made during the surly part of the year were thrown in to help the clubs finish out the schedule. The managements of the other four clubs are weary of this, and it is practically certain that these two cities will be dropped from the list, leaving Winnipeg, Grand Forks, Fargo and Duluth. All four of these cities can support a ball team on the salary basis of last year, or even higher, and can make money on the investment.

The question of filling up the vacancies in the circuit is the chief subject under discussion by the different clubs at present, and the eyes of the magnates are once more turning toward the Copper country.

While in Duluth attending the bonspiel, Manager Lamb of the Winnipeg club took a flying trip to the Copper country and interviewed some of the prominent baseball men there. He stated on his return that they seemed favorably inclined toward the plan of joining forces with the Northern league, and this is now the plan which is given the most consideration.

Calumet is one of the best ball towns in this part of the country, and last year supported a ball team with a much higher salary limit than the Duluth club paid. Lake Linden is a much smaller city, but it allows Sunday ball, and drew big crowds from adjoining cities last season. Both clubs are backed by wealthy men, and if they started the season they would finish it, if they played to empty seats.

The South Shore road has always proved a warm friend to anything in the sporting line, and very favorable rates could doubtless be secured for the long jumps to the Upper Peninsula and back.

Delegates from these two cities will attend the league meeting on Feb. 5, and some definite action is likely to be taken at that time.

Matrimony recently committed, and the land business are engaging all the attention of President Kent, and he will not be connected with baseball this year. His successor is a very doubtful quantity as yet.

Meanwhile the Duluth club is laying low, and until after the league meeting, nothing will be done with the plans for next season.

EASTERN RACING GOSSIP.

Re-Election of Jockey Club Stewards Caused No Surprise.

New York, Jan. 27.—The Jockey club is a conservative body. Hence there is no cause for surprise that the four stewards whose terms expired this year were re-elected, and that August Belmont has been re-elected chairman of the stewards.

Mr. Belmont makes a satisfactory chairman on the whole and there was no particular reason apparent why he should not have been re-elected.

The officials appointed at the business session of the stewards are: Judges, Clarence McDowell and C. H. Pettingill; clerk of the scales, H. G. Crickmore; handicapper, W. S. Vosburg; timer, W. B. Baretto; starting judge, H. N. Homan; starter, Mars Cassidy; assistant clerk of the scales, William Kane.

No mention was made of the appointment of a second starter, and it appears probable that Cassidy will handle the flag throughout the season, as he did last year. Two years ago Cassidy alternated with C. J. Fitzgerald, who is now general manager of the Brighton Beach Racing association. It was believed in some quarters that one of the Western starters would be named t oalternate with Cassidy, on the ground that the duties are too onerous for one man to fill satisfactorily, workin~ day after d..y from April to December.

As a matter of fact, it is not improbable that such action will yet be taken.

There seemed to be no sign of abatement in the violence of the Western turf war. The fight of dates will be continued at Hot Springs and other points. This may be fun for Condon and Corrigan, but there is plenty of room for doubt as to whether or not the racing business will not suffer. Arkansas is not very far from Missouri and Tennessee, the population of those states does not differ widely and the feeling which has resulted in legislation against racing in the latter named states may easily spread to the former. It would not need many more states in the Middle West to join in the anti-racing crusade to put both the Western racing bodies out of commission entirely.

James R. Keene has five horses, two 3-year-olds—Kuroki and Bohemian—and three matured runners—Delhi, Sysonby and Von Tromp—to pick a Brooklyn candidate from; four—Bohemian, Kuroki, Sysonby and Von Tromp—from which to select a Suburban representative, and five—Bohemian, Delhi, Kuroki, Sysonby and Von Tromp—from which to select a color bearer in the Brighton. It is not generally believed that the vice chairman of the Jockey club will make an effort to get Sysonby ready for the Brooklyn, although the Melto colt will run in one of the handicaps. The great mile and a quarter handicaps are the great American races. Winning one of them does more to advertise a horse destined for general stud service than taking half a dozen Realizations or Annual Champions.

Three stallions that either now or at one time belonged to King Edward are represented in H. P. Whitney's entries to the Matron Stakes of 1908. They are Persimmons, Diamond Jubilee and Sandringham, and all are full brothers by St. Simon-Perdita. Persimmon still is in the King's stud, Diamond Jubilee was recently sold to go to Argentine Republic, while Sandringham was brought to this country several years ago.

PLAYERS TO THE FRONT

Schedules of Major Baseball Leagues Will Soon Be Ready.

More Trades Made During the Present Winter Than Usual.

Boston, Jan. 27.—In another month the schedules of the major leagues will be out for the season of 1906, and the great army of ball players will be making arrangements to start for their spring training quarters. The politics of the game will then be passed up for one more year, and the players have the right of way.

There have been more trades this winter than usual, and time alone will prove who got the small end of the deals. Clubs will discover that men they figured on as sound were let go for reasons not named when the trade was made. Lame arms, bad knees, habits not in accord with team work, "knockers" and men demanding more salary for themselves, and other members of the team were cut off by trades.

I think the National league has strengthened all around, while the American league is a stand-off, with every club having a show. With the Athletics weakened by the loss of Lave Cross, I look for Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, Detroit and New York to head off the Quakers for the honors next season. Only at times, however, as Connie Mack's pitchers will keep his team in a good position until he has developed a new third baseman. But he will hardly find another Lave Cross when it comes to all that goes to make up a winner and a great all-round favorite with the baseball public.

Boston is sure to take a brace again the coming season under Jimmie Collins, who will be given full charge of the team from first to last, and make a supreme effort to put the ex-champions in their old position.

Boston has picked up enough of young talent to fill in with, and all that is needed to make a winner is to have the old players start the season in first-class condition and go out for the grand prize in earnest. Last year it was a loaf after two strenuous seasons, and nothing but hustling will go this season with Collins. The cut in salary suggested to the players was not necessarily the figures the club expected to pay the boys outside of two or three cases, and the Boston boys will work this season with more spunk than ever, if I am any kind of a prophet.

Clark Griffith will have a tough time in whipping that New York bunch into winning form. He has some good ball players, and many that are only of ordinary calibre. It doesn't look like a brainy bunch of stayers, and being located in New York will still handicap their progress. Players get injured too easily at the Highland ball park, and Clark Griffith is too fond of making changes, until his team is not near as strong as it was one year ago.

The Athletics will feel the setback given them by the Giants in that meeting for the king row, and will prove much tamer next season than when led by the veteran Lave Cross.

Washington will play more consistent ball next season, and prove a difficult proposition to all teams visiting that city. Cross will be a great help to Manager Jake Stahl, and, with a good corps of pitchers, the senators will hold their own.

Cleveland is likely to show great speed, as usual, for a part of the season, but will have trouble in keeping up with the bandwagon, as too much depends on Larry Lajoie, and even the great Larry can have his off seasons. Detroit should prove a tough proposition, as they leave the mark next spring, judging from the way they went down the home stretch last fall. No one, however, will pick Coughlin's men for pennant winners, and they are more than likely to make their best showing before July 4.

I look for Comiskey's Chicago boys to start off gingerly. The setback they met at the hands of Charley Murphy's men no doubt took much of the confidence away from the boys. Being a lot of natural inside players, however, just a little more stick work will make them a hard club to beat, and "Commy" has this in mind. St. Louis will be the same old experimental school with the principal aim to keep out of the last hole.

In the National league, Pittsburg looks stronger than last season, and will be the club to give the giants battle for first honors. I can't see how the giants can be stopped this season. Pitisburg has a fighting chance, and will slip in should anything happen to Mathewson.

Philadelphia and Chicago are pretty sure to fight it out for third place. The Quakers are not as strong on paper, but will show better staying powers. The several changes in Chicago may help out for a while in the spring, but the long summer days will tell on the new talent, and Mr. Murphy will have a heap of trouble in keeping his boys keyed up for a drive after July Fourth.

Cincinnati has a shade on the second division clubs—Boston, Brooklyn and St. Louis—and Ned Hanlon will have to sit up nights to figure a way to keep the red birds before the public as a future pennant possibility. Any one of the other three second division clubs has an even break with Hanlon if managed well. I think Hanlon a stronger all-around man to handle players, and now being in a position where he must make good the public will have faith in Edward until the cards show that he has failed. For the sake of Cincinnati and the generous Garry Herrmann, the fans unite in rooting hard for the red birds this season. The club looks weakest in battery work and at third base.

I look for the race of a lifetime among St. Louis, Brooklyn and Boston, with Pat Donovan first choice. Donovan is hungry for baseball work, and will leave no stone unturned to beat out St. Louis. Boston will have a shade better team than last season—at least they are likely to put more life into their playing. I believe they will receive more encouragement at the South end grounds than for several years.

There are so many youngsters lined up for places in the tail-end teams that one cannot properly gauge the strength of the clubs, except to figure that not one in ten of the youngsters will make good the first year out in fast company.

Donovan, Tenney and McCluskey are all clever baseball generals and good trainers of young talent, while not so good when handling the more seasoned players.

Sporting Comment

One day this week the kid inveigled his mother and older sister into consenting to a trip down on the bobs.

It was great fun—for the kid.

There was a wicked gleam in the kid's eye before they started, and a person of Ma's age and discretion ought to have known better, but it was a beautiful, clear night, and the young blood stirred foolishly in her veins.

The kid escorted them to the top of one of the avenues in the East end, and in a masterly manner, directed operations. Ma was placed on the extreme rear end of the sleigh, and sitting down with her feet braced straight out in front of her, she grasped the board firmly and closed her lips grimly.

"Sis" reclined in a graceful, side position, and the kid sprawled out in front, with the rope in his hands, and his feet rubbing sister's nose.

"Whoop-ee, we're off," yelled the kid, and Ma gasped as she felt the hill begin to slip under her.

They shot past Third street like an arrow, and Second street also whisked by in safety. At the corner of First street there was a deep gutter and a snow bank estimated at various depths.

In some unaccountable manner the kid rolled off the front of the sleigh just as it was crossing First street, and the bobs veered into the snow bank. Ma described a parabola and descended head first into the snow bank.

Sister's graceful position was ruthlessly disturbed, and she shot from the end of the bob like a bullet from a gun.

The kid pulled them out by the heels and gravely explained that he "slipped."

And that sort of thing is happening right along in this peaceful city of ours, right under the eyes of the best police force in the world.

If you have a kid in your family who wants to take you out riding down hill, remember the advice Punch gave to those contemplating matrimony—"don't."

The idea of adding Calumet and Lake Linden to the Northern league looks like a good one.

The copper country cities are the warmest little sporting towns this side of Reno, Nev., and they stand ready to support anything from a pinochle contest for the championship of the corner cigar store to a "battle royal" similar to the one pulled off in Superior recently, when six negroes were turned loose in a ring and allowed to fight it out, three on a side.

A Sunday crowd at Lake Linden, when the warm boys from Calumet have to migrate, should pay salaries of a team for a week or two, and with these two cities in the circuit, the Northern league would be stronger than ever before, in spite of the seemingly long railroad jumps from the copper country to Winnipeg.

The Canadians seem determined to get a winning team this year if they have to pawn the Canadian Pacific railroad.

"I'd rather face our directors with a $5,000 deficit after winning the pennant than show a surplus after losing it," said Manager Lamb of the Maroons when in the city recently.

The football conference for the reform of the playing rules for next year is in session today, and it promises to result in as picturesque battle as the annual election of president of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Between the stand-patters, the rabid reformers and the luke-warm agitators for changes in the rules, it looks as if there would be an opportunity for the president to step in and urge less brutality in football conferences.

LULL AFTER BONSPIEL

But Few Games Are Played for Curling Club Trophies.

Drawings for Manley-McLennan Trophy Are Announced.

Play has progressed very slowly during the last week in the various club trophy events at the Duluth Curling club.

Most of the curlers had sport enough during the bonspiel week to last them for some time to come, and but very few games have been played since Monday night.

The St. Louis and Herald trophies are well under way and a week would suffice to finish both of them up if the games were run off promptly. Nine rinks are still left in the St. Louis trophy event, and the winner of one of the squads in the Herald trophy is known, the Myron rink having won all of its games. In the other three squads several games remain to be played before the winner is known.

Several games are scheduled for this evening, and next week should see the St. Louis event out of the way, and the Herald event down to the final round, between the four squad winners.

Play will be commenced next week for the Manley-McLennan agency trophy. Twenty-two rinks are entered in the event, being divided into four squads, in the same manner as the Herald event. The four squad winners will play off in the final round. The following is the drawing:

SQUAD 1.	SQUAD 2.
R. J. MacLeod,	C. A. Duncan,
S. L. Reichert,	A. W. Frick,
A. H. Smith,	W. E. Magner,
Ron Smith,	J. C. Myron,
W. L. McLennan.	Alex Macrae.
SQUAD 3.	SQUAD 4.
A. S. Haig,	P. S. Anneke,
W. C. Harris,	W. B. Dunlop,
H. W. Hargreaves,	Frank Green,
J. M. Oldham,	William Kennedy,
W. M. Prindle,	J. C. Milne,
George Stillman.	T. F. McGilvray.

No announcement has yet been made of the date of the meeting to discuss the plan of making Duluth the permanent bonspiel city of the Northwestern Curling association, and the matter may be left until the annual meeting in the spring.

FISTIC DOPE FROM 'FRISCO

Gans is Ready to Box Battling Nelson or Jimmy Britt.

Jim Coffroth is to Be Director General of Fisticuffs.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—A twenty-round fight between Joe Gans, the negro, of Baltimore, conqueror last week of Mike (Twin) Sullivan of Boston, and either Jimmy Britt of Frisco, or Battling Nelson, the champion light weight of the world of Hegewisch, Ill., is likely to be the next really big fight pulled off in this city.

Gans, who has left this city for a short trip to Baltimore, issued a broad challenge to Britt before leaving, and has empowered Selig, his new manager, to post a $2,500 forfeit and to sign articles for him. Gans wants to fight in February if possible. The negro's defi is aimed first at Britt, but if the local man will not come to the scratch, it is open to Nelson. Although a fight next month would please Gans he will not demand that the contest take place then, but will let his opponent name the day.

All that the negro will insist on is that the fight will be for twenty rounds or more and that the weight be made 133 pounds at 6 o'clock. The Baltimorean has become the hero of the hour in Frisco through his wonderful battle with the Boston twin. His next fight will draw a record house, and for that reason, if for no other, Britt may decide to take a chance with him.

While little jealousies have delayed progress in the formation of the boxing combine mentioned in last week's letter, I have the satisfaction of knowing that I outlined the situation correctly. Jim Coffroth will practically be director-general of fisticuffs in this city during the year and Morris Levy will be associated with him. Permits will be issued to one organization which, in all probability, will be known as the Associated Athletic clubs.

Levy, it is said, while quite willing to pool the profits of the boxing industry, doesn't like to lose his individuality as a promoter, and for that reason may insist on handling his pro-rata of the monthly dates himself. But, whether Coffroth supervises nine of the fights and Levy three, or Coffroth becomes general manager of the year's operations, the fact remains that there is to be but one "club" and one balance sheet. This means that only one annual license of $1,200 will be paid into the city treasury.

The Marvin Hart-Tommy Ryan combination, comprising two world's champions—count 'em—is nearing San Francisco, and then we will know what Mr. Ryan proposes. While on tour Tommy's name was linked with so many prospective goes, many of which were to take place about the same time at places thousands of miles apart, that it looked as though Ryan was hunting matches with a brass band. In a letter to Coffroth, the secretary of the All-Champion aggregation of price ring wonders, says Ryan will be pleased to meet Jack O'Brien for the middle weight championship in San Francisco at an early date. The weight named is 158 pounds, ringside, and O'Brien, as an additional incentive to trade with the "big store" of which Ryan is the head, is promised a heavy weight championship mill with Marvin Hart two moths later.

Ryan doesn't stop to figure what horrible complications may arise if Ryan beats O'Brien for the middle weight title and O'Brien defeats Hart for the heavy weight honors. Coffroth has cleared the situation for the time being by writing Ryan that O'Brien, when here, said 158 pounds at 3 o'clock was the lowest weight he would make for any man. Coffroth informed Ryan that he is willing to give him a date with Jack ("Twin") Sullivan at Mechanics' pavilion next month and that as Sullivan can do the weight stipulated by Ryan, the event can be advertised as a middle weight championship. Coffroth adds a rider to the effect that if Ryan and O'Brien can agree upon the weight subject he will place the April date at their disposal. Incidentally Coffroth has informed Ryan that a heavy forfeit will be required from the pugilists, no matter which match is arranged. Until Ryan is heard the February program for San Francisco will not be made up. It is believed Ryan will grab the Sullivan offer, as in all his letters to this point—and a great number more received in which he expresses his willingness to box the heaviest of the Boston twins. If the match should fall through, it is just possible that Jimmy Britt will be offered a match with Willie Fitzgerald.

"Young Corbett" is making a strong plea for a contest with Britt in the month named, but the match makers are afraid that the Denver boy would not be a very strong attraction so soon after his defeat by Herrera. However, there's no telling what a few days may bring forth.

* * *

Mike Shreck is thoroughly disgusted over the falling through of his match with John Willie. According to Billy Roche of the Colma club all arrangements were completed, and railroad transportation was forwarded to Willie at the latter's request. When the railroad office in Chicago informed Willie that his "round trip ticket" awaited him at the office, he replied that he had "changed his mind."

The Colma club is trying to arrange a match between Harry Tenny and Jimmy Walsh of Boston to take the place of the Willie-Schreck go. As matters stand the only affair the Colma people have in sight for this month is a contest between Joe Thomas and George Herberts, a couple of local middleweights. Thomas, who was a star amateur a little while ago, dealt out rough usage to Al Neil, at Vallejo, recently, it being the occasion of Neil's first fight since his return from Australia. Herbert is a smashing fighter, and as Thomas' style is more strenuous than dainty, it is felt that there will be exciting moments when the two locals get together down in the cow pastures.

The mention of Jack Palmer's name has caused Jack (Twin) Sullivan to prick up his ears. "I see where Palmer has won both the middle and heavyweight titles in England, and wants to fight in this country," said Sullivan. "I crossed the pond over a year ago and fought Palmer fifteen rounds to a draw. If it hadn't been for the clean break rule I would have beaten him decisively. I was afraid to take chances of being disqualified, but at that I got a draw with him in his own country, which I guess speaks for itself. I think I can beat him, and I'd like to meet him again, either in this country or in England."

Jack Curley of the Ryan-Hart combination, in a letter to the writer, says: "We will soon be in San Francisco, and when you see Ryan you will be astonished at the change in him. He weighs close to 170 pounds in his street clothes, and that's more than he ever weighed. Moreover, he looks the picture of health. He says he can fight better than he ever could, but will not meet anyone outside the middleweight limit. If 'Twin' Sullivan is a good enough card he will have no trouble in getting rid of $500 he offers for Ryan to get into the ring with him. Ryan has matched Marvin with Tommy Burns at catch weights, and they will box at Los Angeles, Feb. 28. Hart is much faster than when he fought on the coast. Ryan is putting him hrough a great course of training."

SECOND RACE IN THE SERIES

Good Sport Promised on the Ice Track in Harbor.

Races for three different classes of horses, will be held on the ice track at the foot of Twenty-first avenue west, this afternoon.

The second race in the series for the free-for-all and limited classes, which was scheduled for last Saturday, will be run today, and in addition a new prize will be offered, for horses with a mark of 2:40 or slower.

Only two horses are entered in the free-for-all. They are Captain S and Beulah Smith.

In the 2:25 class, there are four entries as follows: John, owned by Richard Sellwood; Lochinvar owned by James Glasser; Teddy owned by C. R. Rust; and the bay gelding owned by C. B. Woodruff.

The entry list for the 2:40 class will be open until 2 o'clock this afternoon, and the names of the horses entered will not all be known until the race begins.

The ice is in the best of condition, having been thoroughly cleaned and scraped during the week.

ACTORS' SYNDICATE

Would Purchase the National League Club at Boston.

New York, Jan. 27.—George "Honey Boy" Evans has organized a syndicate of theatrical players to purchase the Boston national league club franchise, players and real estate. He and forty others of his profession offer $255,000 for the property.

Since Frank Dunn, also a theatrical man, fell down on his proposed purchase of the club it has been on the market.

A. H. Soden and W. B. Conant, the owners of the club, recently refused an offer of $250,000 for their holdings, tendered by a syndicate of wealthy Boston enthusiasts headed by Michael J. Regan, a well-known fan of that city.

Frank Dunn deposited $5,000 last spring and was given an option on the club which was to be closed on Oct. 31. Since the deal has been called off Dunn has threatened to sue Soden and Conant for $50,000 damages.

Among the millions of baseball fans that follow the fortunes of the American and National as well as the minor league teams in all parts of the country none are more enthusiastic and faithful to the profession than the members of the theaters.

FAST WORK

By a Two-Year-Old Which is Probably for Sale.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 27.—The most sensational two-year-old at the Kentucky Association track, and one which is regarded by local turfmen as being without an equal, is the black colt by King Eric, out of Lady Nutter, by imp. Wagner, in the public stable of Charles K. Strader. This youngster recently worked a quarter in 0:24 2-5 with 126 pounds on his back, the work-out being at the time the colt was under the care of a veterinarian while sickness prevailed generally among the horses at the track. Vera N. the dam of Lady Nutter, was by Chance, out of Slipper, by Planet, and she was the dam of eight good winners. The owner of this phenomenal youngster recently refused a cash offer of $5,000 for him, and immediately after the negotiations were called off the turfman who made the offer said if the colt was his he would not consider an offer of less than $10,000 for him.

POLICEMAN ENDS LIFE

Rather Than Answer to Charges Made by Police Board.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—Instead of appearing before the board of police commissions yesterday to answer to a charge of misconduct, John F. Scollard, a policeman of the Broadway guard, went into a livery stable an hour before the board meeting and shot himself. He was picked up unconscious and in a dying condition.

Scollard was married to Miss Grace A. Letson Wednesday. He had been summoned before the police board yesterday afternoon to answer to the charges of having improperly lived at the home of the woman he married.

When the tidings reached the police board, President Stewart announced the dismissal of the charge against Scollard.

DECIDE THAT FOOTBALL OUGHT NOT TO BE KILLED

Judges in Debate Given at High School Decide That Game Ought Not to be Abolished by Schools and Colleges—Defeated Ones Say Judges Were Prejudiced.

The Public Speaking club held its regular meeting Monday, and the postponed debate on football was given. Ecklund and Fossum, for McFadden's camp, attempted to prove that football should be abolished in the schools and colleges of the country, while Boerner and Helam took the opposite side of the argument.

According to the judges, Professors Ferguson, Neal and Phillips, the affirmative failed to show that the disadvantages of the game were great enough to warrant its abolition. McFadden's followers declare that the judges were all football enthusiasts, and, therefore, prejudiced. This debate makes the score 2 to 0 in favor of Ober's camp.

Henry Becker read the report on the current events of the last two weeks, touching upon the Russian situation, the Venezuelan disturbances the Franco-German troubles, and the English elections.

The club has several offers for debates with outside schools, and is seriously considering forming a team. The next meeting will begin a series of preliminary debates, partaken in by those who wish to try for the team, and it is thought that this will largely stimulate interest in the club, the membership of which is thought to be far below what it ought to be.

Some of the questions which have been suggested as topics for debate are the direct primary, socialism, the division of St. Louis county, railroad rate regulation and football reform.

TRACK AFFAIRS QUIET.

No Action Will be Taken Until Early Part of March.

No action will be taken regarding meets for the track team until the early part of March. Manager Frink is considering arranging for a meet with the range towns here before the team goes to Ashland for the big meet in order to give the men practice and also to help out the association treasury.

It is thought that such a meet, combined with the regular inter class field day, should draw quite a crowd. If the plans which were made last year are carried out, Duluth will meet Ironwood Ashland and Bessemer at Ashland before the close of school. No definite action has been taken regarding a track team coach, but it is known that it will be one of the faculty.

JUNIORS WELL HEELED.

Class is in Good Financial Condition, According to Report.

The report of Treasurer Ely, at the Junior class meeting, Wednesday, showed that the class was in better condition financially to give an elaborate Junior-Senior reception than any of the classes in the past few years. There is at present in the treasury the sum of $59.45, which will assist materially in the xpenses.

The Junior mid-year, which will follow very soon after the Freshman skating party and hockey game, was considered, and a committee, consisting of Harriet Stryker, Susan Stryker, Gertrude Hoopes, Elmer McDevitt, Arthur Traphagen, Fred Bradley and Albert Hubbell, was appointed to arrange for the affair.

Elmer McDevitt suggested that the present yell of the '07 class was very poor, and a committee was appointed to devise a new one. The committee comprises Elmer McDevitt, Ralph Ely and Laird Goodman.

President Bradley asked that the boys get out and try for the class basket ball team, so that they could get into shape for a game with the Seniors, to be played in the near future, and Elmer McDevitt, in his report as chairman of the pin committee, said that the pins will cost $1.35.

EXAMINATION DAYS.

High School Students Were Very Busy Thursday and Friday.

Examinations and the changing of programs for the coming semester have occupied the most important place in high school affairs this week There was no chapel Tuesday and the time was given over the readjustment of programs and the fifth period Wednesday was also largely curtailed for this purpose.

Examinations came and those of the students who succeeded in getting out of one or more by having an average of over 90 for the term enjoyed a well-earned vacation. Those of the senior class who take French and Vergil put in a strenuous day Thursday as three of their hardest examinations, French, Vergil and English, came on that day and they were required to be in the building from 9 until 4 o'clock.

High School Notes.

Zenith copy is beginning to pour in on the board and a cover design has been selected for the book. It will be black, in imitation seal leather, with a red band about an inch and a half wide running from the upper edge of the binding to the lower corner and bearing the word Zenith in black. In the lower triangle will be the letters D. C. H. S. and the class numerals, '06, will be placed above. The board will hold a meeting Tuesday.

* * *

The Freshman Sophomore hockey game will probably be played on the evening of Friday, Feb. 9, and the Freshman skating party will take place immediately after the contest.

* * *

The Senior basketball team has been practicing faithfully and is getting into fine shape for the Junior-Senior game, which will be played in the near future.

* * *

Report cards, which have been delayed by the examinations, will be issued Friday.

ON MINNESOTA IRON RANGES

mining man, is of the belief that indications at Section 20 all point to the strike being a big one.

There is great interest now in the question as to what effect the Section 30 discovery will have in connection with the policy of the Great Northern railroad. It has been hinted that in consequence of the Steel corporation's invasion of the Western Mesaba with its Duluth, Mesaba & Northern road, territory that had generally been classed as Great Northern, the latter had some idea of branching out to the Vermilion, and it has even been stated that the decision would in all probability rest on the outcome of the Section 30 work. The latter to date has been entirely satisfactory, and should the showing continue promising, definitely determining the prospective great mineral worth of the property, it will be no surprise to close observers were railroad survey operations started, particularly as exploration on the Vermilion is becoming increasingly active and there is a probability more "independent" ore tonnage will be available for traffic. Superintendent D. M. Philbin of the Great Northern, has within the past few days inspected the showing at Section 30 and incidentally has looked over the territory in the vicinity of Ely. It is expected that this year the Great Northern will haul probably as much as 7,000,000 tons of Mesaba ore, against the 5,418,000 tons transported last season. A new shipper over the line will be Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s St. Paul mine, a property now being opened up southwest of Hibbing. The St. Paul will send out about 150,000 tons the first year, which also will be the approximate shipment from the Alexandria, another new mine, which last season forwarded 30,000 tons. The Commodore, which sent out 145,000 tons in 1905, will be good for 300,000 tons this season, as will the Monroe. last year a shipper in a small way. Another shipper over the Great Northern is Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s big Stevenson property, which holds rank in the million-ton class.

Despite reports to the contrary, it can be stated that Joseph Sellwood of Duluth, acting in conjunction with Pickands, Mather & Co., has taken over a property in Section 30, 59-11 on the Mesaba, explored by Senator E. B. Hawkins, O. B. Kinney and associates, and is making arrangements to begin the development of the tract on or about Feb. 1. The property contains a considerable deposit of ore of good grade. The overburden is too heavy to strip profitably, and the mine will be operated as an underground proposition. The property lies two miles west of Mesabi station and three miles to the east of the Stephens mine. It will be served by the Duluth & Iron Range road. In the territory between the Stevenson mine and Nashwauk, M. A. Hanna & Co., of Cleveland, have taken the lease of a property adjoining the Forest mine on the basis of what is said to be the highest royalty agreement ever made on the Mesaba. The figure stated is 75 cents a ton. The tract has been partially explored by the Pillsbury-Bennett-Lonsyear interests. The ore is of good quality and there is said to be a considerable deposit.

An ore body of great extent is being opened at the Susquehanna mine, in the Hibbing district, by the Buffalo & Susquehanna Iron company, the mining branch of Rogers, Brown & Co., Buffalo furnace men and iron and steel makers. The property will be added to the shipping list this season, and it is believed it will be in position to make a considerable output. The underground system of mining is in vogue, the mine showing the deepest overburden yet found on the Mesaba. The ore body lies 180 feet below the surface, and to add to the difficulty of operation there is a heavy strata of quicksand, by reason of which the first shaft attempted was lost. This was when S. Dessau, importer of black diamonds of New York, controlled the property in 1889-1900. A shaft was later successfully put down for the present operator under the superintendency of H. B. Sturdevent. The Buffalo & Susquehanna people also are operating the Iroquois mine, an open-cut property at Mountain Iron, on the Mesaba, and they lately have acquired a number of promising mineral tracts in Iron county, Menominee range. The company is operating the Munro mine, in the Norway district, and it has mineral holdings in the Michigamme district of the Marquette range.

Stripping operations have been suspended for the winter at the Biwabik mine, and no further work will be done until shipping is resumed next April. For its new Holman mine, on the Western Mesaba, the Steel corporation has ordered an extensive mining and stripping plant for delivery this season. The equipment will be installed as soon as it is possible to get it to the property over the railroad extension now building. The Diamond property, also in the territory between the townsites of Snowball and Bovey, and the Canisteo mines, in the latter field, likewise are new propositions being opened by the corporation, and hand in hand with the development work exploratory operations are proceeding with great activity. The corporation has a large number of drills in commission on the Western Mesaba, and the corporation's mining operations in this Western field have been planned on a very extensive scale is shown by official estimates submitted to the board of education that a school building at Bovey and another at Coleraine, half a mile distant, each costing between $40,000 and $50,000, will be necessary at a comparatively early date for the accommodation of children of school age, who will be available.

arack by the fire, and this can be determined only by a careful examination of the mine after the flames have been subdued. The present indications are that the fire is nearly out, and in all likelihood it will be possible to open the shafts and make a thorough examination of the mine during the coming year.

The underground openings of the Allouez continue to show some of the richest ground ever opened in any amygdaloid mine of the Lake Superior district. It is scarcely reasonable to expect that the Allouez will continue permanently to give such a remarkably high average of copper as is the case in its present openings, but even allowing a most liberal margin for depreciation, the Allouez bids fair to make another and a larger Wolverine. The Ahmeek, which adjoins the Allouez, is also making an excellent showing, although its average to date is not equal to that of the Allouez. Both the Allouez and the Ahmeek are being developed on a large scale, and both have reached a stage where it is certain that they must take rank, within the next few years, with the best amygaloid mines of the district.

The Calumet & Hecla is continuing exploratory work on the old Delaware mine, and the showing remains of a most promising nature. The Keweenaw Copper company, which is the owner of upwards of 10,000 acres of mineral lands in the vicinity of the Delaware, is banking quite largely on the favorable showing being made upon the Montreal river lode by the Calumet & Hecla, and it is expected that the eastern extension of this lode can be cut on the Resolute property next spring. Exploratory work will be pushed as rapidly as possible by the Keweenaw company, when the snow leaves, and work can be done to better advantage. The season is proving exceptionally mild, and is permitting out-of-door work that ordinarily would be suspended during the winter months.

Operations at the Challenge property, of the St. Mary's Mineral Land company, are being continued upon a considerable scale. The management is disinclined to talk, but the results secured are highly satisfactory. At present the Challenge is pushing a crosscut and the plans of the management call for steady development.

Affairs at the Adventure show little change during the past few months, but development work is being continued along the same lines as planned by Mr. Brady nearly two years ago. The reserves of the mine are being increased, while production is maintained at about double the figure that was secured two years ago. The present high price of copper is proving of great assistance to the Adventure, and to other mines in somewhat similar circumstances.

The branch vein of the Michigan continues to yield a very large amount of mass copper, in addition to a fine quality of stamp rock. The Calico lode, which furnished about two-thirds of the rock treated by the Michigan, yields about one-half of the net production, indicating that the branch vein is about twice as rich in the middle as the Calico.

that these men have faith in the outlying ground and are willing to put up their money for development.

It is stated on good authority that the claims at present under option will be held by a close company and development work instituted at once, the expenses of which will be assessed pro rata among the members of this holding company. The option on the ground was secured by Hoval A. Smith more than six months ago, and the claims and geological conditions, etc., have received careful examination at the hands of such men as Engineer Clements and Engineer Probert. They advised the purchase of the ground and after their favorable report Hoval A. Smith and H. B. Hoviand both made a personal examination of the property.

The latest field found for the diamond drill in the camp is on Warren and American Development ground, where, announcement was recently made, exploration by this means is immediately to be commenced in advance of the sinking of shafts. This work is looked forward to with greatest interest in the camp, as to a degree it will make record for territory that yet remains to be brought into the proven area as an actuality, though there is the strongest feeling that the ground may be properly considered now as from every theoretical standpoint to be within the proven district. The findings of the diamond drill holes, however, will leave no further room for question.

Wolverine during the week was reported to have struck ore, but inquiry at the time failed to develop truth in this statement. During the last couple of months the reports has become one of almost weekly occurance. The drifts are both in exceedingly good looking ground, it being as good in ledge matter as possible without ore being also on hand. This fact has led to the strikes made they false reports of strikes made they false reports of strikes made they are continually on the point of encountering from over enthusiasm in each case on the part of men working in the drifts. Wolverine still has between 100 and 150 feet to go before expectation of ore may be reasonably entertained, thouh there may be showing in the lower drift before that distance is attained. About the prospects at the property the men employed there are the most enthusiastic. Such of them as can, are buying the stock and during the first week a couple are known to have made real estate sacrifices in order to add to their holdings in the company.

Very good time is being made in widening and retimbering the old shaft of the Cochise, of which one hundred and ten feet have been completed. The ground is well mineralized, and some small bunches of ore running as high as six per cent copper have been encountered. Thirty days more will allow of the shaft being completed to the three hundred level, when drifting will be commenced.

The news sent from the Chricahua district by the development company of that name is not satisfactory. Mr. Kaufman of Marquette, Mich., who is head of the company, has been at the camp for several days. He confirms the report that diamond drills are to be installed soon, and says that no ore of importance has been found, though they did have some low grade at about 500 feet. The Chircahua was the most ambitious effort in the district, but seems to have been distanced, so far as ore discoveries are concerned, by several prospects. The camp is as yet an unproved section, but the indications are that a number of its prospects are excellent, notably the Cochise, Manhattan, Sullivan and Savage.

The Reider and Smith groups of claims, bonded a year or more ago by the Manhattan Development company in the Chiricahua Mountains, have now been paid for, and the deeds recorded. The price for these was something over $100,000. The news is of the utmost importance to the whole Chiricahua district. These people would not have bought these claims, ahead of the expiration of their option, if they had not the utmost assurance of values there The whole Chiricahua district is now under from six inches to two feet of snow and ice, and prospecting is impossible. The mountains are practically impassable.

which runs from $900 to $1,000 a ton in gold. The output of the mine ranges from $3,000 to $4,000 a day.

One of he famous lost mines of the Nevada desert, for which hundreds have searched and many lost their lives, is the Breyfogle. This is now thought to have been found in the Clifford mine at Tonapah, the ore from which is identical with the specimens from the old Breyfogle. A deserter from Fort Independence originally found the mine and he gave some specimens of the ore to Breyfogle, with a chart and description of the mine. The country described bears a close resemblance to the district where the Clifford is located.

A ledge of silver bearing ore has been found in the heart of the Goldfield mineral belt. It was found on the Talmage Mining company's property. The ore gave returns of seventy-three ounces in silver and one-half ounce in gold. The ledge is two feet wide and is encased in a huge porphyry dike at a depth of 12 feet. The discovery has puzzled all the mining experts, as according to all geological laws no silver bearing ore should have been found there.

The Midawy min at Tonopah is now producing ore that assays $225 to the ton.

A phenomenal ledge has been struck in one of the claims of the Olinghouse

The Colorado Mines.

The Miser's Dream Again Producing—Seven-Foot Vein Opened in the Specie Payment Mine.

Colorado Springs, Jan. 27.—The Miser's Dream, one of the oldest Colorado mines, after thirty years of idleness is again producing. The ore bodies recently opened up by William Bloomer of Denver while low grade, are large. The cyanide process is suited to their treatment.

A seven foot vein has been opened up in the Specie Payment mine through the Two Brothers tunnel, Idaho Springs district. Five feet of the vein is high grade. A solid streak on the hanging wall shows $80 to $200, with $100 average values. The ore is copper-iron and carries from two to six ounces gold, thirty ounces silver, and 20 per cent copper. The main tunnel will be driven ahead fifty feet and drifting on the vein each way will follow. The tunnel reached the vein at a distance of 2,491 feet from the portal and 1,000 feet depth from the surface and 1,400 feet on the dip of the vein. The strike was made 700 feet below the bottom of the Specie Payment shaft and 800 feet eastward. The mine was sold three years ago to a Providence, R. I., syndicate by Edward Williams for $350,000. An additional $80,000 has been spent on the tunnel.

The Lincoln Mining, Milling and Investment company has cut a new body of high grade ore by the tunnel entering Sugar Loaf mountain. The tunnel has followed a vein of low grade ore for some distance. Stringers of high grade ore recently encountered indicate much higher average values. A compressor and drills will be installed.

The Isabella Mines company will soon begin shipments from the Empire State shaft. During the past year the shaft was sunk 800 feet, from 350 feet depth, exposing several streaks of bonanza ore. A large body of low grade ore is found in the Isabella workings also. The mill grade ore is averaging close to $28 a ton.

Strikes are reported in several Cripple Creek mines, also in various mines in all parts of Colorado. Ore production generally waits on mill and smelter company for treatment. This year will witness important developments in old mines, with much new territory added to the known producing area.

William Bloomer of Denver, who recently purchased the old Boston fifty stamp mill, will remodel it into a cyanide plant to treat low grade ores from the Miser's Dream and other mines between Puzler and Ward. A large roaster will be installed. Mills are being constructed at Myrtle and Red Lion. As a result the Ward district is becoming active.

The Chamberlain-Dillingham stamps at Idaho Springs treated ore from 105 mines during 1905. Favorable rates have been given an impetus to mining throughout the district. Some of the ore treated returned as high as $1,000 a ton; much of it ranged above $300 a ton. Most of the ore carries values of two-thirds gold and one-third silver, copper and lead.

The new mill on the Enterprise mine, Taylor Park, near Aspen, has just completed a satisfactory test run. The dump contains 5,000 tons of ore. Large reserves are in the mine.

The Damascus Mining company is building a mill in Leadville and will install an electric separator using the Blake-Mezier process. Besides its own ore the company will treat tailings from the A. Y. and Minnie mills.

The Sunnyside group of mines, near Silverton, has been sold to a Pittsburg, Pa., syndicate for $2,000,000. The mine has produced $1,000,000. Vast ore reserves are in sight.

MICHIGAN IRON MINES.

Operated on the caving system, the Tobin mine, a member of the Corrigan-McKinney group, is one of the most interesting properties of the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range. It was the first mine in the field to observe the caving plan from surface, and in consequence of the mining method followed there has been created an open pit with almost perpendicular sides, the settled area plainly marking the ground given attention underneath. The ore deposit is being sliced from the top, and the surface follows nicely. The Hemepin shaft, 600 feet in depth, has been the producing shaft, but is to give way to the Tobin shaft, its life being threatened by the caving. The Tobin shaft, enlarged to four compartments, two for the ore skips and the others for the ladders and pipes. It has been newly equipped with a hoistnig engine having straight double drums, to be operated in balance or independently, each 7-foot face and 7-foot diameter, and each capable of winding 1,400 feet of cable in one layer. The skips, operating in balance, have a capacity of three and one-half tons, making, with the weight of the skip itself and the rope, a load of seven and one-half tons. There are, in addition, a 30-drill air compressor and an electrical generator, the entire equipment being very compact and complete. A two-stage cage for handling men and timber is operated by an independent engine.

As soon as the weather conditions will permit the construction of a number of new buildings is to be undertaken at the No. 5 shaft of the Steel corporation's Aragon mine at Norway, Menominee range. The group will embrace an office and warehouse, machine shop, blacksmith shop and carpenter shop. In the Crystal Falls district, where last season they erected many new dwellings, the mining companies have planned the construction of thirty-five houses for miners just as soon as the material can be secured. Ten and fifteen, respectively, will be built at Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Armenia and Dunn mines, and ten at Ogdebay, Norton & Co.'s Bristol property, those at the latter to be double dwellings. Additional houses will be erected later at Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Great Western location. This company has recently added to its holdings in the field by the purchase of the Crerar-Clinch property.

The Isabela mine, in the Iron River district, which was acquired a number of years ago by the Steel corporation, is to be unwatered at an early date. The property has never been a shipper, and has never been thoroughly examined by its present owner. It is said to contain a large body of low grade ore, and it is for the purpose of establishing the fact that the old workings are to be free of the water. The Buffalo & Susquehanna company is unwatering the Hiawatha mine, in the same field, and on four other tracts recently acquired is conducting exporatory work either by churn drills or test pits.

The Sand Portage rapids, Menominee river, have been sold by the Menominee River Lumber company to the Cambria Steel's Penn Iron Mining company. The consideration is not stated, but the Sand Portage water power is valuable. It is four miles south of Steurgeon falls, where the Penn company is now installing a big water power and electrical generating plant, and may be used in connection with the latter project. It is also possible that the company has other and more pretentious plans.

GOOD RECORD OF THE BUTTE MINES.

build a tramway in the spring from the mines to the mill and work the mines more economically than in the past. The vein has been developed for a distance of 1,200 feet by tunnels.

Operations were suspended on the Berlin group of claims north of the city last week, and it is not likely that any more work will be done from the surface for quite a while, if ever. The Berlin company formerly owned the ground, but a few weeks ago it made a transfer to the North Butte, and the latter, not desiring to work the property in that manner, decided to stop operations. The only work in progress was the sinking of a shaft, which is down nearly 400 feet. The North Butte will work the ground, but it will cut into it from below, the same as it did the Jessie. This is much easier and less expensive than sinking a new shaft 1,200 or 1,500 feet. There were about twenty-five men employed in the work of development, with Charles Shoemaker as foreman.

The Columbus-Butte Mining company, composed of Columbus, Ohio, men and residents of Butte, made an important strike of high-grade gold and silver ore in the Jennie Dell claim last week and its stockholders are well pleased over it. The strike was made at a depth of about 358 feet, the vein being cut in a raise east of the bottom of the incline shaft. The company is capitalized for $2,500,000 in shares having a par value of $1 each. There is no stock on the market, with the exception of a few shares that were sold when the company first began operations, and no more is being issued. When the organization was perfected it was the intention of the company to go after copper ore, and the chances are that it will yet get what it originally had in contemplation. The ore of the present strike carries from a half to 1 per cent copper in addition to the gold and silver, and in several places large bunches of copper-silver ore have been found in the prosecution of the work of development. This ore, says Mr. Higgins, is identical with that found in the Lexington, which is a pretty good indication that the vein in the Jennie Dell and the vein in the Lexington are the same. This has always been the prevailing opinion among mining men, and the fact that copper is being found in spots serves to prove the correctness of the theory.

The mines of the Pittsburg & Montana Copper company are now yielding 250 tons of ore a day, which is an increase over a month ago. This is a greater quantity than can be treated in the smelter, but the company has plenty of bin capacity, and the ore not thrown directly into the blast furnace will find a resting place in the bins until such time as it can be treated.

* * *

The Amalgamated company has equipped the J. I. C. mine with a new hoist and engine, and work has been started in developing the iron ore bodies of the upper levels, it having recently been demonstrated that there is a lot of rich copper ore in the J. I. C. ground.

Idaho Mines

Boise, Jan. 27.—During the past few days heavy snowstorms have raged in the mountains, insuring a splendid season for the placer miners.

Rich free gold quartz is still coming out of the mines on Hay Fork, near Idaho City. Although enough discovered less than a year ago, it is the opinion of mining men who have visited the district that the mines will pay dividends as soon as the mills are running.

The quartz camps of Elk City in Idaho county are making great headway. The Buster is i nthe lead. A survey shows $1,000,000 worth of ore in sight. The American Eagle mine has a tunnel 1,500 feet, which has cut a blind ledge which is producing rich ore.

Late news from Loon Creek is that on the Lost Packer the vein is from ten to twenty feet wide, and the low grade of it will mill from $5 to $7 a ton in gold and from 2 to 4 per cent copper.

Fifty teams are kept busy hauling ore from the Seven Devils mine to the smelter at Sumpter, and the number will be increased to seventy-five or one hundred as soon as they can be secured.

A miner who arrived here from Thunder Mountain a few days ago says that a good deal of development work is going on in the mines of Central Idaho, and that many of them are proving valuable properties. There is no excitement and the work is being done on the merits of the mines. It is his opinion that many mines will be added to the dividend paying list during the year. The ledges are large, but the ore is low grade.

Mining in New Mexico

Albuquerque, Jan. 27.—Considerable interest is at present being shown in the Magdalena mining district, Socorro county, N. M., which bids fair to become an important zinc and lead producing camp. The mines are located at Kelly, three miles from Magdalena, on the Santa Fe railroad, which has a branch connection from Magdalena to Kelly.

The discovery of this district was made by Col. J. S. Hutcheson, better known as "Old Hutch." In 1895, the first claim located being the Juanita, which is today producing high grade ore. About three weeks after locating the Juanita Hutcheson located the Graphic mine, which has been a heavy producer. This mine is at present owned by the Sherwin Williams Paint company, who purchased it in 1904. Under their management the mine has produced since its purchase over $1,000,000, principally in a high grade zinc carbonate ore, averaging over 40 per cent. A very large vein of copper ore was opened in the Graphic last fall and carload shipments have been netting the company some $1,500 a car. One strange fact about the Kelly camp ores is that they are all shipped without sorting. The Graphic company is at present driving a main working tunnel to tap the ore bodies at depth. This tunnel opened up an entirely unknown vein some 200 feet from the portal, which measures an average of 25 per cent zinc, 15 per cent lead, 15 per cent copper, 2 to 10 ounces silver and 49-100 gold, the balance being splendid milling ore. A large production is being made by the Graphic.

An equally important mine is the Kelly, which also was located by "Hutch," and up to 1904, when it was sold to the Tri-Bullion Mining company of Chicago, had produced $5,000,000, principally in lead carbonates. A large production of zinc ore is now being made from the Kelly, which nets the company at the mine $15 a ton for 35 per cent ore, with $1 per unit a ton variation. As the bulk of the ore averages around 40 per cent and the cost of mining is around $1 a ton, the company is earning handsome profits.

These mines were originally worked for lead, underlying which are the zinc ores. These latter until 1903 were unrecognized by the miners and were thrown out as waste. An examination of the district made about that time by the late Prof. Herrick brought about a change.

The bulk of the zinc ores is in the form of a lime replacement and but for its weight would be passed upon by the average engineer as merely a lime. Prof. Herrick demonstrated the fact that this then so-called "country rock" contained better than 35 per cent zinc carbonate on the average, and the camp took on a new lease of life, the mines having been supposed to be worked out as lead producers.

The camp is now having a boom. Help is scarce and miners are being brought in from outside camps. The difficulty is to house all those who are entering the camp, and every barn and outhouse is being utilized for sleeping quarters.

Among the other heavy producers are the Juanita South, Cavern, Imperial, Young America, Hardscrabble, Enterprise and Ambrosia.

Gold has been found in paying quantities and carload lots from the Young America have returned in gold over one ounce to the ton in addition to the lead and silver. Of late a good deal of "float" containing picture values in gold has been found in the south end of the camp.

The mineral belt is an extensive one, and the ore bodies large, an evidence of which is the fact that from one stope in the Kelly mine sufficient lead ore was extracted to keep a hundred ton smelter running daily for two years.

Alaska Mines

Seattle, Wasch., Jan. 27.—The mines engaged in the new placers on Lake Creek, Upper Yentna, have been coming out for supplies since the recent heavy fall of snow. They report great activity along the creeks and benches for a distance of forty miles, and the conditions are such as prevailed along the Klondike in its most prosperous days. The gold is abundant, and about 200 men are engaged in mining this winter, regardless of extremely cold weather. Those who came out for provisions are getting enough to meet their wants till the early spring clean up.

The weather at Forty-Mile for the past month has been exceedingly cold, suspending mining operations. Ed Webster, known at Seattle and Tacoma, had both legs frozen to an extent requiring amputation.

At St. Michael arrangements are now being made to place twenty-five first-class river steamers on the Yukon between St. Michael and Dawson for freight, particularly.

Mining in Cleary and Fairbanks districts have continued despite the fact that the thermometer has been down to 40 and 60 below zero a great deal of the time. The district made a record of $6,000,000 for the year. The gold dust was sent under the care of armed men to the government assay office at Seattle, arriving there on Saturday night. It come out from Fairbanks to Valdese by horse sled and was constantly under care of the guards for a distance of nearly 400 miles. It was estimated that the output of Cleary and Fairbanks with a little extra effort could readily be swelled to $8,000,000. Instead, the owners concluded to make their largest record this year. They say there is no doubt that these districts will lead the Klondike proccession.

One of the most encouraging discoveries in the Tolanika River district, one of the new ones, is a large body of semi-anthracite coal, which is helping the miners out, enabling them to work all winter. This coal is credited with being the best in the territory, and there is enough in sight and to mine by open cut to supply an immense mining region. The river cuts through vast ranges, leaving ledges of clean anthracite exposed.

On Dome Creek the miners report that bed rock is over 300 feet thicker than on Cleary, but it is extremely rich and pays handsomely. It has been one of the chief contributors to he riches of this camp.

Mining in California

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—The storm which has raged for five days and which has been attended by unusually heavy snowfalls in the Sierra Nevadas has relieved all fear of stoppage of mining operations. Water is now abundant, and mining stamp mills as well as power companies, which were compelled to shut down because of the long drought, have resumed work. One result of this experience will be the enlarging of storage reservoirs so that the costly stoppage of all activity may not be repeated.

The new electric trolley line at the North Star mine near Nevada City, Nevada county, is in operation. The line is two and a half miles long and connects every department of the Central and North Star mines. It is estimated that several hundred dollars a month will be saved by it in handling ore.

The Paulsen gravel mines on the Trinity river, in Trinity county, were sold last week to Boston capitalists, but the price was not made public. One property is Union Hill mine, which includes 306 acres of gold bearing gravel, supposed to be the old bed of the Trinity river. The bank averages 100 feet in depth, and it carries gold from the surface to bedrock. The gravel pays from $25,000 to $30,000 an acre. The leasers of the claim of Charles Taylor, near Mountain House, Moro county, have struck it rich, the ore assaying $150 to the ton, 25 per cent being copper and the remainder gold and silver.

Mining in the Black Hills

Custer, S. D., Jan. 27.—Reports from the Clara Bell mine are encouraging. This property is about nine miles northwest of the city. The shaft is 250 feet deep and the ore body holds out well. Two loads of picked rock brought $34.50 a ton. A cyanide annex will be built in connection with the mill in order to obtain all the values, some of which are now lost in the free milling process.

Work on the bullion mill at Keystone is being done thoroughly and carefully. As the plans for the mills have been enlarged the grade survey has necessarily been altered. This has caused delay in the completion of the ground work, but this will be well in hand by the end of the month. The tunnel is being straightened and enlarged. The mill will have a capacity of 200 tons.

Active work has been resumed at the Gerty tin mine at Hill City.

Deadwood, S. D., Jan. 27.—The Clover Leaf Mining company has sent out a report on its property preparatory to placing on sale a bond issue of $300,000 with which to pay off the floating indebtedness, drain the mine and resume operations. This is the property formerly known as the Uncle Sam mine and has always been considered as having one of the richest ore bodies in the Hills. The great difficulty of the mine has been the problem of the water, which has never been handled satisfactorily. The company owns fifty-seven claims in the Roubaix district, and has a sixty-stamp mill. Since the flooding of the mine last June the property has been idle. The average flow of surface and other water into the mine is about 629 gallons a minute. The pumps can handle this as soon as the mine is drained out, as the flooding resulted from an accident. The company will also sink a new shaft which it will connect with the old one by means of a tunnel. It is estimated that it will take about thirty days and about $10,000 to drain the mine.

Edward Major of Central City has taken a lease on the old Esmerelda property and also on the Columbus mill which is situated at the mouth of Blacktail Gulch. The plant has a capacity of seventy-five tons a day and the ore from the Esmerelda, located only about a mile up the gulch, can easily be brought to the mill for treatment. This property has produced many thousands of dollars worth of bullon. It is owned by Emil Faust of Lead.

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES.

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Duluth People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking-down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. Duluth cures are the proof.

L. P. Schneider, butcher at McAuley's Washington Market, and living at 210 West Fourteenth avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "A statement I made in 1898, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and which has been published in the local papers, very mildly expresses my opinion of that remedy. After suffering for a long time with pain through the back and loins, which made it almost impossible for me to stoop or lift anything without torture, and after using various medicines and treatments without effect, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and the lapse of six years has proved that the cure has been permanent. I am sure that I suffered the worst tortures of kidney trouble. Often the pain felt as if a sharp knife was piercing me. At night, although I tired out, I could not rest or lie in one position without getting sore all over. The kidney secretions were irregular and contained a heavy sediment. Since I found this cure I have time after time advised others to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and I never miss an opportunity to speak well of them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Lawson's Hammer

Thomas Lawson, the great, went to
Kansas of late.
He made a terrible clamor.
He dug into Rockefeller, Eckels and Ryan
And eulogized greatly the great Billy
Bryan—
For Lawson is out with his hammer.

A few years ago, in the very same state,
They frightened saloonkeepers at a terrible rate.
They chopped up the furniture, spilled whisky galore,
And dug into everything until they couldn't do more—
For Carrie was out with her hammer.

There have been calamity howlers
from the beginning of time,
And of course the soreheads must get into line.
They drink whisky the same in old
Kansas state
And when Lawson is out they will still speculate—
Though Lawson is out with his hammer.

Now Lawson's whole scheme seems to be very thin.
Not a tissue of good fabric is woven within.
It's the men, not the principle, he seems to attack
And pats the dead heroes right square on the back—
For Lawson is out with his hammer.

Did Moses not say, while making the laws,
The man who robbed graves was guilty, because
It was only for Jesus to bring dead ones to life?
But Lawson's whole scheme is to stir up a strife—
For Lawson is out with his hammer.

The buffoon of the platform in a pessimist state
Wants to tear things down at a terrible rate,
While Rockefeller gives labor to thousands of men
Tom Lawson produces not even a pen
But howls about financiers being made over night.
If positions are offered our men are in sight—
Still Lawson is out with his hammer.

Away back in old Canada lived a man named Spark,
He had a large bull which was cross
after dark.
He stood on the railroad, bent his head
to attack,
But the engine hit him a terrible whack
And knocked Mr. Bull twenty feet off the track—
And he fell in a heap with his hammer.

Now Lawson to the bull does fully compare;
His courage is good but his judgment is poor.
He makes the mon out of the very same stocks
And now he gets bested commences to knock.
He ought to be skinned out of his socks,—
For Lawson is out with his hammer.

Hanibal thought his mission in life
Was to batter down the walls of old
Rome.
Now Lawson, of course, thinks his mission in life
Is to batter a Wall nearer home.
He tells us about the inflation in stocks,
But they are going higher in spite of his knocks—
Still Lawson is out with his hammmer.

Don't you think, Mr. Lawson, you better depart,
Go back to old Boston, to the town of Delsarte?
Who ever heard of a man of common sense
Reforming the world by shillings and pence,
Advising the sale of all bonds and stocks
And there are still suckers born at every tick of the clock?
Still Lawson is out with his hammer.

There is room for reformers, we all do admit,
But you can never do it by attacking the pit.
You better join the Populist or Socialist squad
Or start a Coxey army and trample on the sod.
The best way to reform the world is through the ballot box,
So settle down to business and give up bonds and stocks.

Yates; assistant cashier, G. E. O'Connor.

A special meeting of the common council was held Monday evening to give attention to some matters which could not well wait until the next regular session. Among the matters discussed was the ice rink proposed by William G. Mather. The council found favorably disposed toward the enterprise and readily agreed to furnish the water needed for flooding and to make provision for the maintenance of the rink.

A meeting of local musicians was held Wednesday night in the Kirkwood block and an organization to be known as the Negaunee orchestra was perfected. It is really a reorganization of the Miller orchestra, most of the members having belonged to the latter organization, and so far as efficiency is concerned it will be fully the equal of the old. The membership is as follows: Ray A. Brotherton, first violin; Thomas P. Kirkwood, second violin; Ollie Simmonds, cornet; Jacob Salo, clarinet; A. F. Willman, drums; Miss Julia McAuliffe, piano.

Pellow, Perkins and F. Pellow; Japs—Williamson, Pascoe and Nelson.

Congressman Young has settled the question of postmaster in four towns in the upper peninsula, by recommending the president the appointment of Thomas Connors, Negaunee; Alfred Cruce, Iron Mountain; Robert G. Elliott, Munising, and Otto H. Mueller, Rockland. In each case the men named are holdovers. Their names were sent to the senate for confirmation by the president Thursday. In none of the towns named were there any contests, except at Munising, where Postmaster Elliott was opposed by William Dougherty, an employe in the freight department of the Munising railway, and the contest was somewhat spirited. It is expected that the president will send to the senate the names of other Upper Peninsula postmasters during the present month. Among the more important offices to be filled this month are Hancock and Marquette. Ishpeming Mrs. Krogman and Mr. Newett are contestants for the office.

The Florence Mining company will install a new double hoist at its No. 1 shaft, replacing the old machinery now in use, and will also install a Gates No. 9 gyratory crusher. The hoists will be 10-foot drum and the latest model made by the Lake Shore Engine works. The company will also install a new surface tram system, and will replace the wooden head frame at the No. 7 shaft with a new one of the same material. Important discoveries of new ore bodies have been made at the mines the past year.

The Kimball mine at Crystal Falls is now being unwatered, preparatory to placing the property in the list of shippers on the Menominee range. Ever since August preparations for the resumption of operations have been going on. Everything was thoroughly done and the equipment that has been installed is serviceable and permanent. A fine large engine house was erected, as well as a boiler house.

Lowyear & Hodge, the contractors, have placed a larger drill in operation at the Saginaw property at Norway, the smaller one being unable to do the work. The drill is located on the bottom level, 240 feet from the surface. With the smaller drill a hole 129 feet in depth was secured and it was in ore of a Bessemer grade for the entire distance. With the new drill in operation this hole will be continued until a depth of 1,000 feet is secured.

The 1905 shipments of the Florence mine were 203,371 tons of ore. The output was about 220,000 tons. Nineteen hundred and five was a record year in every way for the Florence, both its output and shipments having been the largest in the history of the mine. It is quite probable that this year's shipments will be materially larger. The present force employed at the mine, 180 or 190 men, will be retained through the winter, and both mining and exploratory work will be prosecuted with vigor. During the year not only will the company explore its own lands, but a number of other properties will be included in the list, options upon which have recently been secured.

The work of installing the machines for operating the new railroad electric signal system to be used between here and Eagle Mills was started Monday, under supervision of a representative of the Union Switch & Signal Company of Swissvale, Pa., which manufactures the apparatus. The machine at this end of the line will occupy a small space in one corner of the South Shore office, and the job of setting up and connecting it will be finished shortly. Besides insuring safety in the movement of trains, the system will obviate an immense amount of telegraphing, especially during the ore rush of the summer season.

On the Menominee range the Penn company is preparing for a season of activity at the Norway mine. A new find of ore is reported at the West Vulcan. An encouraging lense of high-grade ore has been encountered at the Loretto mine.

Americans are a scarce article in this North country, at least as far as mine workers are concerned. Facts gleaned from the records of the office of the Chapin mine at Iron Mountain, the giant producer of the Menominee iron range, make an interesting showing. At a recent date there were employed a total of 985 men, and of these the nationality of but three was given as American. The others were apportioned as follows: Italians, 314; Scandinavians, 291; Englishmen, 154; Austrians, 79; Germans, 78; French Canadians, 24; Finns, 19; Irish, 15; Poles, 14; Scotchmen, 2; Belgians, 2.

About 400 of the new books ordered for the Negaunee public library have been received and most of them have been catalogued and placed on the shelves, ready for circulation. With few exceptions they are books of fiction, and include all the latest popular novels, besides the successful books of the past year or two which have often been inquired for.

A pleasant time was had Wednesday evening on the conclusion of the installation of the officers elected to serve in the Lady Maccabee society. The officers introduced to their duties by installing officer Ellen McDonald were: Past commander, Carrie Shea; commander, Hattie Eddy; lieutenant commander, May Wellman; record keeper, Lizzie Wedlake; finance keeper, Emma Rowe; chaplain, Esther Eddy; sergeant, Lillie Carlblic; sentinel, Mary Laveille; picket, Sine Anderson; mistress-at-arms, Celia Symonds.

The Lackawanna Steel company and Pickands, Mather & Co. will have nineteen shipping mines in the Lake Superior region the coming year. This is far in excess of any number they have ever had, and their total business will be correspondingly increased. Most of these mines, however, will be comparatively small shippers this season.

Exploratory operations will also be actively prosecuted on the Gogebic range during the coming season, and on the Marquette range they will be pushed on a scale almost as great, but much more work of this kind will be carried on in the Menominee country, centering in Iron county, Mich., at the Western limits of the field, than has ever been done there before.

Returns from all the counties in the state showing the total number of deer hunters' licenses issued in 1905 indicates that the number is over 7,000 less than in 1904. The total for the past year was 14,578 resident and 104 non-resident licenses, for which the state received $22,317. In 1903 the number of resident licenses issued was 19,121; non-resident, 45. In 1904 there were 21,099 resident and 51 non-resident licenses. The state derived the largest revenue last year it ever received from this source, and the falling off in the number issued is attributed to the increase in the price of the license.

Miss Clara O'Leary was united in marriage to Edward McCormick at St. Paul's Catholic church here at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The bride was ushered into the church by her father, to the strains of the Svedsen Wedding March, and was met by the groom at the chancel, where the simple marriage ceremony preceding the celebration of the mass was performed by Rev. Lamett. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Margaret and Austin O'Leary, the sister and brother of the bride. Following the marriage a reception was held at the bride's home, and the couple departed by the evening train for an extended trip through the West and as far as the coast. They will be at home after March 1 at Avico, Mex.

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

WALKER

Walker, Jan. 27.—(Special to the Herald.)—The outline of Walker's horizon shows signs of a saw mill. Parties from Michigan are expected here in a few days to look over the grounds. They have declared their intentions of locating here and the mill will undoubtedly be built during the coming months. The proprietors will also build houses near the site for their families. The mill will employ about fifty men per day.

Rev. George Michael has brought a sixty acre tract of land and will engage in fruit raising this coming season. Mr. Michael has been experimenting considerably in the fruit industry and is convinced that good hardy apples, grapes, strawberries and other fruit can be raised here with marked success.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Brumund went to Brainerd Monday, returning the following day.

The Cass County Mutual Telephone company has got its wiring done as far as Motley. Morrison county, and the system is growing in wording order. It is proving a great boon to the south county farmers.

Miss Dora Edenloff returned from Chicago this week where she had been for a number of days purchasing millinery stock.

Mrs. L. Hallock has disposed of her bowling alley and boat livery to George Reynolds of Bemidji. She will make her home in Minneapolis with her sister.

A Chicago firm has bought an eighty acre tract of land near Smiley, and has given out the information that it is going to build a silk factory in this county. It asserts that the manufacture of silk can be done much cheaper outside the larger cities.

The Mahlin Lumber company has purchased a large tract of timber at Cullen lake near Smiley, and expect to erect a mill that will employ from twenty to thirty men.

The Great Northern drawbridge near Kabekona bay has been ballasted with rock, the workmen being at work at that point this week.

C. L. Hasmer made a business trip to Bena this week. He reports the north part of the county as being a great agricultural section and that there will be a general rush for land there when the settler learns of land values in that section.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. A. Lindeke of this place.

Mr. Toombs of LaPorte is in the Walker hospital, having been operated upon a few days ago for appendicitis. The operation was a success and Mr. Toombs is on the road to recovery.

Mrs. H. Brumund has been enjoying a visit from her mother as has also Mrs. P. Wilcox.

The children of the Indian school were given a treat last week, by being invited to attend the entertainment, Rip-Van Winkle, given at the opera house by a traveling troupe. The little ones, about sixty in number and ranging in age from six to fourteen years, attended the show in a body accompanied by their teachers, the gallery being reserved for them. The instructed had spent a part of the three days previous reading Irving's Rip Van Winkle, and the pupils were perfectly capable of appreciating the performance. To a greater portion of the children it was their initial experience in show tending. In fact some of them had never seen electric lights before, and as to a stage and the impersonation of characters, this was entirely new. They enjoyed the treat immensely.

Geo. E. Andrews and Nellie B. Smith both of Cass county, were married at the Hotel Spencer Tuesday by Court Commissioner Oliver. The couple left on the morning train for the south.

H. A. Whitney and wife, formerly of Walker, but lately of St. Cloud, were in Walker one day this week en route to Der River, where Mr. Whitney has accepted a new position.

M. Martin, who is working on the school house at LaPorte, fell from the roof one day this week, a distance of 24 feet. Although he was bruised considerable, he suffered no internal injuries. Mr. Martin lives at Stony Brook, this county.

Judge Ely Wright is making an extended visit in the East, and will be absent about six weeks. He will go as far south as St. Louis, and spend a greater part of his time in Chicago with a daughter.

The Walker postoffice has advanced from the fourth class to third class and the postmaster is now on a salaried basis instead of a commission, based on cancellation, as formerly. The salary is $1,000 annually.

He was fifty-eight years of age, and had made Eveleth his home for the past eleven years, and had been employed the past few years by Drake & Stratton. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon and the Odd Fellows' lodge took charge of the arrangements.

Louis Wilson of International Falls is here on a visit to his brother and friends.

The Afternoon Euchre club met yesterday with Mrs. P. E. Dowling.

The Eveleth firemen generously contributed $20 to the fund presented to Mrs. John Berwin, the widow of the fireman who was killed in the rescue work at the West hotel in Minneapolis.

Mrs. W. E. Harwood will go to Minneapolis next Thursday to visit for a week with Mrs. J. P. Sedgwick, who formerly lived here.

One of the saddest accidents that has ever occurred here was that of Wednesday evening, when, after having been missing since noon, Hjalmer Hill, a young man, a Finlander miner, was discovered at the bottom of a seventy-foot pit at the Fayal almost frozen to death and with his skull fractured and shoulder dislocated. He had apparently been on his way home to his noon meal when he must have stumbled and fallen into the pit, and putting his arm out to save himself had dislocated his shoulder. His fellow boarders did not become alarmed when he failed to appear at dinner, but when supper time came without any tidings of him, they started out to search for him. He was not discovered until about 9 o'clock and the searchers were led to the place by the sound of slight groans. They lowered one of their number into the pit, who discovered Hill's condition, and he was pressed until the hospital, where everything was done for him. But one of his arms was frozen as solid as an icicle to the shoulder, and with his head injured the physicians hold out no hope of saving his life.

Miss Olive Colbrath and Miss Eaton, Hibbing school teachers, spent Saturday here. Miss Colbrath is taking the place of her father, W. C. Colbrath of Duluth, on the Mesaba range route during the time he has been confined to the house suffering from injuries received in a runaway accident several weeks ago.

The Crescent Literary society gave its first program last evening at the High school auditorium, and the following were the numbers and were much enjoyed by those present:

Music—"Bells of Seville"...Girls' Glee Club

Miss Agnes Long was hostess for the Young People's Cribbage club last Saturday evening. Miss Sara Bowers and Frank Webb were the prize wingers and there were also present Miss Alice Bowers, Miss Whitesides, Miss Boulson, Miss Carrie Barrett, Miss Fern Marsell, Miss Iren, Miss Mae Trezona, Messrs. Mason Burt, Merton Kingston, O. V. Green, William Doell, Edward Hatch, G. H. Dormer, Ross and Orton.

Miss Rohrer, one of the teachers, is visiting the schools in Duluth this week.

Mrs. W. E. Harwood, Mrs. Neil McInnis, Mrs. G. A. Whitman and Mrs. W. J. Smith went last night to Virginia Thursday to attend the reception given that afternoon by Mrs. Marcus Fay and her daughter, Mrs. Schultz, for Mrs. George Fay.

The billiard and whist tournaments were started this week at the Fayal club rooms and promise to be very interesting. The following are in the billiard contest: Messrs. J. A. Robb, W. J. Smith, Frank Webb, Mason Burt, C. V. Green, Merton Kingston, R. R. Trezona, A. G. Kingston, Dr. W. E. Harwood, W. H. Plummer, Hall Harvey, F. Orton and R. Ross. The following are scheduled for the whist tournament and three tables played Thursday evening: Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. B. Arnold, Mrs. L. A. Marsell, Mrs. Neil McInnis, Mrs. J. C. Poole, Mrs. W. J. Smith, Messrs. B. O. Greening, Mr. Orton, Mr. Ross and Mrs. W. E. Harwood.

There have been three cases of diphtheria here recently, two resulting in death, but by a strict quarantine it is hoped to stamp it out in the near future.

The Young Men's club held their annual election last evening at their rooms which they have rented from the Methodist church. The following were elected officers: Leo Shapiro, president; Edward Hatch, vice president; Jack Pasternackl, secretary; Gus Peterson, treasurer; A. Anderson, chairman of the gymnasium committee; Oscar Hill, president of the senate; Cyril Williams, chairman of the social committee. It was decided to give a supper next Friday evening at the club rooms.

Miss Irene McKeehan visited the Biwabik schools the first of this week.

"Red Sunday" Observed.

Independence, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Red Sunday" was celebrated Saturday night under the auspices of the Socialist Labor party at J. J. Brindo's place, by the Socialists here and their friends. E. S. Eriksson advocated the cause of the Russian revolutionists, who, like the American revolutionists, were struggling for an equal chance for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A collection for arms and ammunition was taken up to be sent to the comrades in Russia to aid the working class to speedily end the conflict there. The piano and fiddle were then set in motion and after the dance the ladies of the present revolution served a grand supper.

Dangers of a Cold and How to Avoid Them.

More fatalities have their origin in or result from a a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful, as there is no danger whatever from a cold when it is properly treated in the beginning. For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been recognized as the most prompt and effectual medicine in use for this disease. It acts on nature's plan, loosens the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Sold by all leading druggists.

BURIED UNDER EARTH.

Miners Meet Death at the Spruce and Commodore Mines.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 27.—Frank Klune, a miner, 24 years of age, was killed by a fall of ground in Spruce No. 3 workings Thursday evening.

The accident happened shortly after the men went to work on the night shift. Frank Klune, with his partner, Andrew Klune, working in the sub-level just above the bottom level. Frank had struck his pick into the ore in the side of a drift only a few times, intending to make room for a set of timbers, when seven cars of material caved in on him, breaking his neck and one leg.

Klune was a native of Crinia, Austria, and had been in this country three years. He has a brother, Joseph Klune, who works at the Troy mine. The funeral will probably be held Sunday from the Holy Family church and Rev. Father Biliban will officiate.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 27.—An avalanche succeeding a blast at the Commodore mine yesterday, carried Jacob Valdar, a miner, to his death and was nearly fatal to Jack Ketola, his partner. Ketola, partly covered by dirt, was rescued by fellow miners. He was almost smothered by the debris and sustained severe bruises. The men were at work near the wall of the mine picking ore when the ground under them caved in without warning. The earth was loosened by a blast a few minutes before the slide.

There is no element of speculation in the quality of

PARIS CRIMINAL JUDGE

Wrote Out Sentence of Prisoner Before He Heard Defense.

Paris, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—"The prisoners advocate need not bother about setting up a defense," said Recorder Hillry of the criminal court, when the trial of a bookmaker was about to begin. The lawyer was dumbfounded and demanded the state's attorney to hand him the papers in the case. As he looked them over, he came upon the sentence for his client, all written out, signed and stamped by the judge. It condemned the prisoner to undergo six months in jail.

The lawyer put the document in his pocket and immediately moved for a change of venue, and when the judge was obstreperous, walked out of court and directly to the bar association, where he stated the case. The president of the bar association appealed to the civil chambers, which peremptorily ordered a change of venue and suspended the recorder.

The minister of justice has been asked to relieve the judge of his duties and commence impeachment proceedings "as he had sentence all cut and dried before the trial and apparently did not intend to pay any attention to the defense."

The judge is said to have offered to the minister the following explanation: "I studied the case conscientiously from the written statements, and according to the opinion of the prosecuting attorney, and concluded that the man was guilty. At the same time I intended to let him off with the lowest punishment, six months."

A story of a similar case is told. A lawyer found just such a ready-made sentence among the court papers, and observing a little space between the sentence and the judge's signature, added: "In consideration of extenuating circumstances the sentence is ordered suspended." He handed the amplified sentence to the judge and said, in a stage whisper: "We waive trial and accept your sentence penned last night with the amendment added a few minutes ago." The guilty judge had not the courage to object, and so one of the greatest rascals that ever came before the Paris bar got off scot free, for the lawyer admitted that his client was guilty of the charge.

FRECKLED SHABBY DAN

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Dan was redheaded, freckled-faced and shabbily dressed. Dan's parents were poor and he had only the absolute necessities of life provided for him. At school he stood high in his classes, and no one could say aught against his character; but owing to the fact of his poverty, his plain appearance and awkwardness, Dan was held at arm's length by his more fortunate classmates.

Near the town where Dan lived was a lake which afforded the finest skating for the schoolchildren in winter, as it was only a few hundred feet from the schoolhouse. To this skating ground the boys would go from school each evening for an hour's sport before running to their homes. But Dan was never invited to bear them company.

Christmas had brought as present to Dan a nice pair of skates, and as he felt he was not welcome on the big lake—where the crowds assembled—he had sought out a nice little arm of this body of water that lay round a sharp curve of hill land; thus, the place was hidden from the view of those who enjoyed the main body of water. This bit of frozen lake was all Dan's own, and thither he would go after school to enjoy the only present Santa Claus had brought him. Near the point where he skated the lake was fed by a swiftly flowing little river that was full of treacherous whirlpools, caused by subterranean channels under a bed of cavern-like strata of rock. Over these whirlpools the ice was never thickly frozen, the water being too active to allow of such a process to any great extent. Of this Dan was perfectly familiar, having studied the lake and its tributary thoroughly during the summer days, when he was abroad in search for botanical and geological information.

Here, in the protection of this cove, Dan skated to his heart's content, becoming an expert in swiftness and fancy figure cutting. One evening, as he was enjoying himself by cutting his name on the ice and framing it with fantastic figures, he heard the sounds of shouts and laughter drawing near. He skated out to the bend in the lake, where he could command a view of the big body of ice, and saw coming towards him half a dozen boys in an excited race. They were his classmates at school, but boys who had turned on him the "cold shoulder." The gay band was led by Frank Andrews, the most-sought-after boy in his class, being a handsome, well dressed fellow, and son to a wealthy banker. He was an expert on skates and was leaving his comrades behind by an alarming rate of speed.

Round the curve leading into Dan's skating pond they came, each bending every muscle in an endeavor to lead in the mad race. Then towards the river they flew on the little steel cutters that sparkled and gleamed as the feet wearing them were thrown out behind.

In an instant Dan understood the danger that lay ahead of the thoughtless boys, who were ignorant of the nature of the ice on the river some feet from its entrance into the lake. He did not stop to consider the cool manner in which Frank had always met him in the classroom, nor did he think of the many ways in which the same haughty fellow had used his influence against him with regard to other boys, who had at times shown signs of friendly footing. The truth is, Dan had attached little importance to the conduct of the vain, overbearing boys in his grade, for his parents were very sensible and had always told him that merit of conduct did not lie in fine clothes and social prestige, but in the true worth of one's character and achievements. So it was that Dan had been very happy in the love of his father and mother, the esteem of his teachers and the friendship of several worthy boys of his own age, and, like himself, poor, in spite of the coldness of his fellow-students who were led by Frank Andrews. His only thought as the merry crowd flew past him, taking in the curve at a swing, was of the danger that lay hidden before them. Bending himself with all his strength, he started in pursuit of the racers, skating right into their midst—for he was more than the equal of any boy there when it came to swiftness—and called out at the top of his voice in warning: "Don't go on the river; the ice is not strong enough to bear your weight!"

All the boys save Frank slackened their speed as quickly as they could, but Frank, not hearing the warning over his own shouts as he flew to victory, kept right on towards the spot that Dan had warned the others from approaching. Seeing that not one of the skaters intended to hurry after their leader—so careful were they to look out for their own safety—Dan hurried on after Frank, doubling his speed.

Then began the race to save a life. Frank, all unmindful of the suspense that held those who watched speechless, flew on and on, turning into the river and thus becoming hidden from view by a sharp bank several feet higher than his head. And on, on Dan sped, like a bird on the wing. His teeth were held tightly together, his nostrils dilated like those of a running horse, his eyes gleamed forth determination to reach the flying figure in front of him before it was too late.

Just as Frank was within a few feet of death Dan gained his side, speechless from the exertion. But speech would have been of no avail had he possessed the power. It was action—quick and strong—that was required, and Dan was equal to the emergency. Reaching forth his right hand he caught Frank's left arm and jerked him almost off his feet. But Dan had calculated on the vigor of the sudden shock, and with masterful strength and agility he whirled Frank around and skated with him towards the bank. When they had reached the edge of the ice, and Frank had recovered from the surprise of the moment, he drew himself to a standstill, and throwing up his head indignantly, he looked into Dan's excited face, demanding, silently, an explanation of such extraordinary conduct.

Dan's face became fire-red as he said in explanation: "That place right there is dangerous; it wouldn't hold your weight." And he pointed to a spot right in the center of the stream that he knew was covered by a very thin layer of ice.

"Why do you say that?" questioned Frank coolly, showing doubt of Dan's words.

"I say it because I know," answered Dan, growing as suddenly white as he had grown crimson, for his pride was cut deeply by the manner of the boy whose life he had doubtless saved.

"Oh, I see," insinuated Frank, his lip curling. "I guess you got the others too much scared to follow me, and laid this plan to make yourself a hero. I don't like such service."

For a moment Dan's blood was up and he felt the strongest desire to slap the insulting fellow in the face. But, remembering his mother's training, he simply said in a tone forced to be calm: "Very well; I've done all that duty requires of me. If you wish to skate across the river—knowing that I say it is unsafe—why, it is your privilege to do so."

As he said this Dan turned to skate away just as the other boys came cautiously round the bend in the river. They approached their leader and came to a stop. "Well, so you didn't get drowned after all!" cried one of them, laughing, and addressing the remark to Frank.

"Well, so far as I'm concerned, I don't believe that ice is any thinner on the river than it is on the lake. Why should it be?—it isn't so deep. But some people have a queer way of making themselves officious—a way that doesn't appeal to me." And Frank frowned his displeasure as he spoke with biting sarcasm.

"You may think what you please regarding my act, which you call officiousness," said Dan in a calm voice. "But I do know that the ice on that particular part of the river—owing to the whirlpools beneath—doesn't freeze to a great thickness, and while it might bear up the weight of one person, possibly two, it would go through with such a crowd as is here. But as I have no way of proving what I say, I must, in consequence, suffer your condemnation and wrong interpretation of my motive." Then turning abruptly away, Dan skated round the curve and gained his own little possession, a place he felt to belong to himself, because no others ever came there to skate. Sensibly driving all thought of the recent occurrence from his mind, he began his fancy skating again.

As soon as Dan had left the boys on the river, Frank said with a sneer: "He just wanted to butt in and win some sort of recognition from our crowd. I'm not afraid of the ice further up, and I'm going on just to prove that fellow lied."

Although several of his companions advised against it, Frank turned and headed for the place, a few feet distant, that Dan had saved him from a few minutes before. His comrades watched eagerly for the outcome, for while they had never associated with Dan in a social way, they had had the greatest respect for his integrity, and in their hearts knew that he was sincere in anything he did. They knew he must have good reasons for warning them against that particular place, and not one of them would have been so fool-hardy as Frank.

In another minute Frank had boldly dashed upon the ice that was the cause of so much disagreement. He had got about half way across the place that Dan had designated as weak, when a loud, cracking noise was heard, and the ice under his rapidly moving feet gave way, breaking into a hundred fragments. Frank went under the water to appear again near a mass of frozen driftwood. Desperately he caught hold of the end of a projecting tree limb and held on for life, the floating cakes of broken ice dashing against him and threatening to tear his hands loose from their hold. His companions seemed to lose all sense of assistance and set up a frantic cry for help, while they jumped about in a wildly excited manner as near to the boy in peril as their own safety would allow.

Dan, hearing the cries for help, went as rapidly as his skates could carry him to the scene of accident. Jerking off his skates and divesting himself of his coat he called on the other boys to do likewise and come to his aid. Taking the coats, which the boys hurriedly gave him, Dan tied the sleeves tightly together to secure length. Then, lying down on his stomach, he crept as near to the half-frozen Frank, whose benumbed hands were about to lose their hold on the limb, and throwing one end of the string of coats to him, told him to grasp it firmly and allow himself to be carefully drawn to safety. Two other boys were bidden to lie prone on their faces and hold tightly to Dan's feet in the event of the ice giving way where he lay. Then, cautiously and with perfect knowledge of what he was doing, Dan hauled the fool-hardy Frank to safety. Dripping with ice-water the shivering Frank was helped to the bank while Dan gave orders which no one for an instant thought of disobeying. "One of you fellows go as fast as you can to town and get a sleigh and robes while the others build two brush fires for Frank to sit between. Here, let's have another overcoat to wrap him in," he added as he put his own old, shabby topcoat round the shoulders of the half-frozen Frank. Quick hands gathered up bark, dead leaves and sticks and soon two little fires were blazing on the bank, Frank, his teeth chattering, crouching between them. As soon as he could command his tongue, however, he turned to Dan and in a truly penitent voice, said: "Dan, you are made of the finest metal I ever come in contact with. I've been a thankless fool, a vain, self-conceited one at that. You are a boy worth knowing, but it took a hard lesson for me to find it out. Right here before all these boys I want to humble myself before you and ask your forgiveness for my past contemptible conduct. Can you forgive as mean a cad as I've been?"

And Frank held out his hand to Dan, who was just the sort that could take it in a generous, forgiving spirit. "And I want to thank you in every way I can for the great service you have done me today," Frank went on, "but I can't find decent words to do it, for I've always been such a thankless, ungrateful chap that such expression is new to me. But I feel it right here," and he touched his heart. "In here I thank you fully."

"Oh, as for what I've done," answered Dan, "it amounts to just this: 'Do unto others as you would be done by.' Duty directed my action. I am not a hero, and I do not aspire to be thought one."

"You are a hero in spite of yourself," cried the enthusiastic Frank. "You are a born one—not a self-made article. And I shall make it my duty to tell every one of your heroic act today. My father and mother will feel that they owe you a debt of gratitude that can never be paid."

"That's right," cried several of the boys who had secretly admired Dan for a long time. "If there was ever a brave generous, forgiving boy on earth it is Dan Masters who makes us all appear, in comparison with himself, very small potatoes," exclaimed one sturdy fellow slapping Dan on the back.

Just at this minute the boy who had been dispatched to town for a conveyance in which to carry Frank home came up in a bobsled, having met a farmer coming from town. He had told his story and the driver had willingly lent his assistance to the boy in distress. Soon Frank huddled in straw and wrapped in warm blankets and a bearskin, was snugly settled in the bottom of the big bobsled with Dan beside him, for he insisted that he would not get in unless his rescuer joined him. "I've a lot to talk to you about," he insisted. "You saved my life, now you've got to help me make myself worthy of it. Come, you are to be my example—my hero, whether you want to or not. My character is in as much need of your help as I was physically in need half an hour ago."

Then the driver cracked his whip and the old horses leaped into a quick trot toward town, carrying the two boys who were destined to become the warmest friends in the future.

And throwing one end of the string of coats to him, told him to grasp it firmly.

"Mazen Grace."

The following story is told by a little girl whose home is in the South.

"Down at my home in Alabama is a dear Aunt Bettie, an old colored woman, who was my nurse when I was an infant. As papa and mamma delayed so long in the matter of naming me, old Aunt Bettie became much concerned about it, and each morning she would ask my mother: 'Misses Mason, honey, has you done picked out a name fo' dis li'le chile? Kase it's mos' time she had a han'le, sho it is.'

"But each morning my mother would have to plead guilty to not yet having found a name which she thought suited me, her only daughter. Then Aunt Bettie would become indignant, and, walking off with her head in the air, would say something about 'pussins what didn't have 'nough respec' fo' their blessed offspring to give it a handle didn't deserve no offspring.'

"But at last, on one Sunday morning, Aunt Bettie would brook delay in the matter of naming me no longer. After my mother and father went to church she dressed me in my best robe, and, putting me in my cab, started out, ostensibly for a ramble in the beautiful park that lay near our house, and where she took me on fine days for the air.

"My parents returned from church before Aunt Bettie put in her appearance with her little charge, and they were anxiously waiting on the porch for us when we came in through the gate. My mother held her arms for me and said: 'Come baby mine,' whereupon Aunt Bettie drew herself up proudly and looking mamma defiantly in the eyes said:

"'Misses Mason, honey, dis chile has done got a han'le dis bressed Sabbath mo'nin', sho' 'nough it did. I done toted dis precious li'le nameless chile to our church an' our preacher done babtizen a name onto its helpless head.'"

"For a minute mamma and papa were too much shocked to say a word, and Aunt Bettie continued: 'Yes'm, I had our brack preacher do de job, an' he done it as good as a white preacher could a-done it. He done babtizen a name on dis chile what has been so long without a decent han'le.'

"Then as Aunt Betty lifted me from my cab she asked with a smile, turning her face towards my speechless parents: 'Don't you all want to ascertain de name of yo' offspring?'

"'Of course, Aunt Bettie,' said mamma in a weak voice. 'What is it?'

"'It is de purtiest name in de bressed Bible, it is Mazen Grace,' informed Aunt Bettie, handing me into mamma's arms. 'You all knows how dat name figgers in de holy song—Mazen Grace, how sweet it soun's.'

"Of course mamma and papa could not scold dear old Aunt Bettie, for she had rendered me the greatest service—she thought—in having me named. And that is how I became christened later on the name we have grown to be so fond of—Mazie Grace. But Aunt Bettie insists to this day on calling me 'Mazen Grace.'"

"Don't you all want to ascertain de name of yo' offspring?"

Conundrums

Who was the tallest poet?
Longfellow.
Why is a beggar's purse like electricity?
Both are light.
When is a chair not a chair?
When it is a rocker.
When is a towel like a mailed letter?
When stamped.
Why does a shrewish woman scold from morning till night?
Because she sleeps from night till morning.

The Furniture's Frolic.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

Little Fanny had gone to visit her grandmamma in the country soon after New Year, and her pretty room was left without an occupant. As the days wore on the furniture became very lonely, and time hung heavily, owing to the enforced idleness.

One evening the white iron bed said to the pillows: "My dear ones, why don't you jump down and have a bit of fun. You must be very stiff inside those starched slips." Whereupon one of the pillows smiled and replied: "Why, my dear Mrs. Bed, we are already down. What did you take us for—chicken feathers?"

But before Mrs. Bed could grasp the joke one of the warm covers that tucked her about said, in a languid, sleepy voice: "My dear, pay no attention to those frivolous pillows; let me be your comforter." Then she hugged Mrs. Bed very tightly about the sides.

But their conversation had roused a pretty chair that began to get restless and danced about the floor on all fours, hitting against a chiffonier and striking the sofa with great force. "Oh, out with you!" cried the chiffonier, leaning against the wall for support. "You struck me such a blow in the chest that I lost my breath, and you've gone and knocked a lot of paint off my drawers. For shame on such a giddy chair!"

"Yes; and he well-nigh broke my arm," declared the sofa, whose weak back was covered with cushions.

"And he frightened me so that I've a stitch in my side," groaned a drawn-thread tidy that covered a nearby table.

"What a shame," declared a palm pot, smiling on the tidy. "Who could be so cruel as to frighten you that are so neat and tidy? I'm quite drawn to you, dontcher know?"

At this smart speech a needle-book raised slowly up in the workbasket and two needles turned their eyes on the palm pot, one of them winking gaily and saying: "As a flatterer you carry off the palm, Mr. Pot."

Then a lot of snickering followed from various corners of the room. "Say, friends and fellow-furniture," said a match, "what's the matter with having some light on the subject?" And the striking fellow scratched his head.

"Here, my dear Match," exclaimed the gas jet, "let me give you a tip." And immediately the match tripped over and lent him a light. "Do you smoke?" the match asked, blowing himself out with pride. "Oh, a little," flickered the gas jet, throwing a few rays around on his associates.

"Oh, how horrid of you to make a light," cried a small clock on the mantel. "You make me tired with your noises." And she put both her hands over her face.

"Ah, my dear, no wonder you are tired," remarked the wastebasket, addressing the clock, "you never for one minute stop running. Why don't you join a union and strike for shorter hours?"

"You are wasting your advice on her," barked a firedog, bending from the grate so as to see the basket. "She is French and cannot understand American ways."

"French your granny's nightcap!" sneered the little clock, ticking excitedly. "I'm nothing of the sort—I'm Swiss."

"Swiss?" screamed a flimsy, dotted sash curtain, waving to and fro from her brass rod. "Well, I'm Swiss, but I'll leave it to the others if you and I resemble in any way. Why, I'm considered the finest quality of Swiss to be found in the shops, I am." Then she "hemmed" with great gusto.

"Oh, you've had the smallpox," said the window-shade, shaking his silken fringe at the dotted Swiss curtain. "See the spots all over you."

"Say, your especial kind of wit gives me a pain," dryly spoke the window, addressing the shade.

"That's all right," answered the shade, proudly turning round on his roller. "I can lay you in the shade whenever I wish to. Besides, you are the sort that anybody can see through."

Just then a large book on the table fluttered her leaves coquettishly and said: "If everyone will be quiet and give me undivided attention I'll read a story."

"I have no attention to give away to anyone," declared the poker, standing up very stiffly in his corner by the grate. "Besides, you are too full of fairy tales to be entertaining."

"How do you like my tail?" asked a bronze dog that lay on top a cabinet. "It isn't a fairy one."

"But it lacks flesh and blood," asserted a footstool. "Therefore it can possess no interest."

"It doesn't lack metal," vociferated the bronze dog, "and metal is quite necessary in all things."

"Why doesn't someone ask me to sing?" inquired the little tenkettle that swung herself over a spirit lamp.

"No, indeed, my dear Madam," said the telephone. "You are always accompanied by that spirit lamp, and we all know how full he is of alcohol. We believe in temperance and will not put up with one addicted to such strong liquor."

"Oh, oh, ho!" cried the teakettle. "Listen to that old gossip, will you?" Whereupon the telephone rung off and put a stop to further altercation.

At that moment a great silence fell, but nothing was hit by it, therefore no harm was done. And when, on the following day, little Fanny returned to her home and ran to her room everything was as she had left it. Even the giddy chair had resumed his place by the side of the white iron bed, whereon the dainty pillows, instead of lying down, stood up against Mrs. Bed's head.

And no living being ever knew of the frolic the furniture had on that night when their fun turned to sarcastic words and ugly dispute.

But their conversation had roused a pretty chair.

Can You Punctuate This Stanza Correctly?

The following is a correct statement, though as it reads one would doubt this fact.
See if you can punctuate it so that it reads correctly; but do not change a line or word.

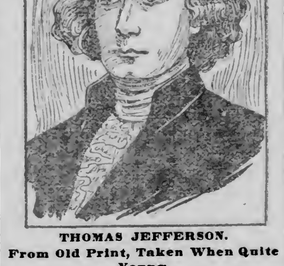

"Every lady in this land
Has twenty nails upon each hand
Five and twenty on hands and feet
Which is true beyond deceit."

Little Biographies of Big Men.

Our first intimate acquaintance with Thomas Jefferson begins in the seventeenth year of his age, when, in 1760, he went from his home, in Western Virginia, to Williamsburg to become a student in the College of William and Mary. The description given of him at that time is not very prepossessing. He was tall, raw-boned, freckled, redheaded, with high cheek bones and long chin. His hands and feet are described as being "abnormally large and awkward, seeming to be much in the gaunt youth's way." But aside from these unsightly characteristics he possessed the natural grace of a stalwart, sinewy body that had been trained in the saddle and made agile by long pedestrian hunting expeditions over his native mountains, which gave him a certain easy grace of stride and poise that was wholly charming. And the clear, deep gray eyes that looked so frankly out from under the "sandy forelock" won the confidence and admiration of all who came in personal contact with him.

It was in the bosom of the most industrious and wholesome environment that little "Tommy" Jefferson was reared, a family which consisted of a father who was a power of physical as well as mental strength, a mother most tender and alive to her responsibilities, two loving and helpful older sisters, four jolly, companionable younger sisters and one younger brother. And this family—with their slaves—was a little world unto themselves, living on an estate of 1,000 acres 150 miles northwestward from Williamsburg, in the picturesque mountains of Western Central Virginia. Near to their home the Rivanna River flowed into the beautiful James.

Their abode was a plain farmhouse, consisting of four rooms and an entry on the ground floor and several half-story chambers on the second floor. In the great living-room, with its wide, hospitable fireplace, the Jefferson family was wont to assemble on winter nights, the father, Jeter Jefferson, reading aloud from his beloved Shakespeare, Swift or the Spectator, while the mother and older sisters plied the knitting needles or sewed on the "homespun" garments. The youngsters, of course ("Tommy" included) whispered softly to each other near a chimney corner, telling riddles and playing such little games as can be participated in without noise.

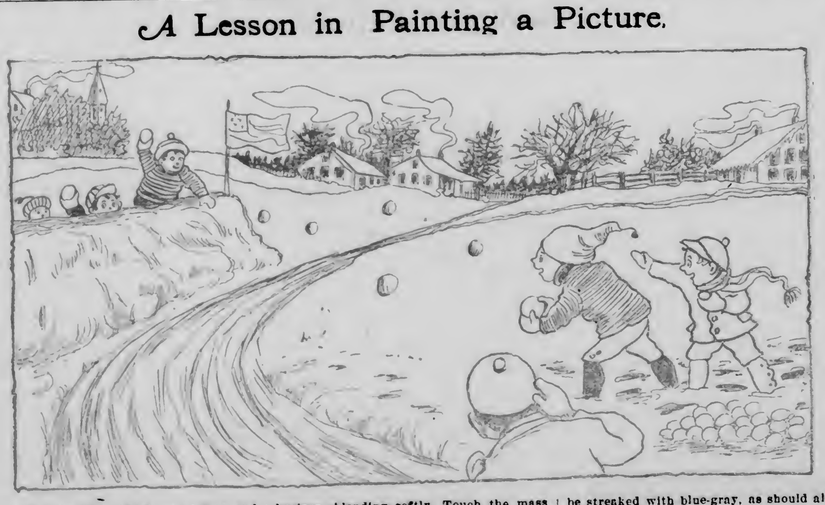

THOMAS JEFFERSON.
From Old Print, Taken When Quite Young.

At college Thomas Jefferson was counted one of the most conscientious and brilliant students attending at that time. Indeed, he seems to have applied himself so closely to the labor of learning that he found no time for anything else.

He was counted quite a clever musician also, playing on the violin with great credit. Between the ages of 10 and 15 it is said that he devoted three hours each day to practice on this greatest of musical instruments. His oldest sister, Jane, was a very fine singer and Thomas played her accompaniments. In fact, music seems to have been Thomas Jefferson's "divine passion," for he tells us that in his childhood and youth "the passion of his soul was music." He was also devoted to mathematics and architecture.

MARY GRAHAM.

Cut out carefully the above picture and paste smoothly on a bit of pasteboard. When thoroughly dry take water colors and paint it according to the following instructions:

Tint the sky a delicate blue, with the slightest suggestion of purple toward the horizon, blending softly. Touch the mass of trees with umber, a little green and blue mixed. Leave the house roofs white and paint the two houses on the left—one pale yellow and the other brick red. Paint the window shutters on the house to right bright green. The roadway should be streaked with blue-gray, as should also the shaded spots on the snow fort. Paint boys' caps red, brown and striped, to suit your taste. Also paint their clothing to give natural effect. When dry, press and paste on dark green mat and hang in your "den."

The Sweater Brigade.

Down the street they do come,
A strange, jolly crew;
In sweaters and leggings,
Some old and some new.

They're the sweater brigade,
From all parts of the town;
And each little sweater
Clothes one of renown.

Of RENOWN did I say?
Well, the statement is true,
For th' brigades' many mothers
Each will tell this to you;

That HER boy is the brightest,
The dearest and best
Who has ever appeared
In a gay sweater dressed.

And that if he but lives
To reach man's estate
He will certainly be
A person most GREAT.

So, you see this brigade,
Dressed in sweaters so gay,
Holds the brains and the brawn
That will rule us some day.
